MOSCOW, U. S. S. R. (By Mail).—Considerable attention was given the situation in Great Britain by the Plenum of the Executive Committee of the Communist International meeting here. In fact it was one of the three big questions before this gathering of the representatives of the Communist Parties from a multitude of countries. The other two questions were the War Danger and the Chinese Situation.

After calling for the setting up of Councils of Action as instruments of struggle, the concluding paragraph of the resolution on the British situation declares:

"The Plenum believes that the Communist Party of Great Britian, in this difficult hour which the British and world proletariat is now experiencing, will be able to mobilize the masses for a real active struggle against the reactionary government, which is now launchiug an attack on the British workers, the Chinese people and preparing new and terrible wars directed firstly against the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics."

It is because the situation in Great Britain is considerably linked up with the problems facing the workers of the United States, that this resolution should carry extreme interest to the western shores of the Atlantic.

The war on the minority movement by the labor bureaucracy in Great Britain now parallels the attack in the United States of the American Federation of Labor officialdom against the left wing and progressive elements; the anti-trade union bill contains many of the vicious restrictions embodied in the American "criminal syndicalist" laws recently declared constitutional by the United States Supreme Court; in both countries the same desperate attack against the Soviet Union develops; both American and British imperialisms are in the forefront of the attack on the Chinese revolution; both countries face a crisis in the coal industry, in both countries

1,000 Capmakers to Go on Strike Here This Coming Tues.

About 1,000 capmakers employed by contracting shops are expected to go on strike next Tuesday morning to enforce the 40-hour week that was agreed upon one year ago.

At the time of the "agreement" between the bosses and the union signed July 1926, the manufacturers were given until July of this year to put the 40-hour week into effect.

The right wing at that time said that a year's delay was necessary to allow the bosses to adapt themselves to the new methods. The left wing warned that by waiting 12 months the bosses would have time to prepare to fight against the shortening of hours.

That the left wing stated the question correctly is proven by what has taken place since then. Last month the capmaker bosses of the nation formed a national association to fight against the 40-hour week. On top of that the right wing administration has agreed to "standards of production."

...of Labor ... Force, on Foreign Labor Continue Rules

WASHINGTON, June 24 (FP).—Some of the figures of labor statistics and widely used in connection with discussions over wage cuts, were revised upward in the business pamphlet. The system used to obtain the figures was established 10 years ago when standards were much below the 1927 level.

The figures are obviously ballasted against the worker and in favor of the employer, the bureau estimates, but nevertheless have been used steadily to depress, in effect, wages in many industries where unions have not been able to kick the asses of living theory into the wastebasket.

10 Hurt in Train Wreck.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 30.—Ten persons were injured, four seriously, when a Rochester-bound passenger train of the New York Central Railroad struck the caboose of a freight train two miles east of Lockport, according to word reaching here this afternoon.

The special cars were derailed but the crew escaped injury by jumping before the crash, according to the report which gave no further details.

...RE TO ELECT OBREGON

Reactionary Generals May Try Insurrection

WASHINGTON, June 30, (FP).—The Council of Workers, which is elected with labor support to succeed President Elias Calles is the unofficial position of Santiago Iglesias, secretary of the Pan-American Federation of Labor who has just returned from Mexico City.

The Mexican Federation of Labor (CROM) has taken no action yet on indorsements in the coming national elections, but it is felt that the record of Obregon while president from 1920 to 1924 as well as his recently announced program against religious dictation and ruthless imperialism will win him labor suffrage again. The Calles-Morones regime was the friendly successor of Obregon, who could have been reelected in 1924 had it not been for constitutional provisions standing in the way.

Gomez Reactionary.

Two other candidates have offered themselves for the 1928 election. General Gomez, commander of the Vera Cruz garrison, has just resigned that post to announce his candidacy while General Serrano, commander of the Federal District garrison, has done likewise. Gomez, it is felt, is a candidate of the business and oil interests which want Mexico's protective legislative bars let down to permit the ready exploitation of her great natural resources by foreigners.

Serrano is running on an anti-Obregon platform of "no re-election." He insists that Obregon's candidacy violates the spirit if not the letter of the constitutional provision against reelection for successive terms. Serrano is also well regarded by the business interests.

While labor and the organized peasants are still the strongest group in Mexico, according to Iglesias, nevertheless the army still remains a problem for constitutional government to meet. Either of the two army men contending for the presidency might conceivably receive foreign or domestic financial support. With this they might organize a coup d'etat, one or the other capturing central cities and setting up a dictatorship.

Workers Partly Armed.

Workers and peasants, through penetration of all districts, are striving to isolate the army from politics and place it on a proper footing as a defense force solely. Arms are widely distributed among the trade unionists and each able-bodied member has some knowledge of military drill and discipline.

The Mexican Federation of Labor, whose membership also composes the bulk of the Labor Party, refrain as yet officially announce its indorsement of Obregon until it meets in annual convention in September in Mexico City, Iglesias says. However, its action can be virtually predicted, unless there is some remarkable political change in the meantime.

The Mexican government is making fine headway in the economic strengthening of the country, Iglesias declares. Irrigation projects, road building, founding of rural schools and the establishment of peons on farms as individual producers go rapidly ahead.

Andy Mellon Sails for Visit to Fascist Italy

Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, and his son, Paul, sailed for Italy today aboard the liner Conte Biancamano to join his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. David Bruce, in Genoa.

They will cruise for two months on the private yacht Venetia, which they have chartered, Mellon said in reiterating that he was taking a vacation and that business did not enter into the trio.

SACCO and VANZETTI SHALL NOT DIE!

COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL TAKES UP QUESTION OF PROPER COMMUNIST TACTICS IN BRITAIN

feverish war preparations are being pushed forward and fascist elements find active support from the reactionary governmental powers. The conclusions of the British resolution are in part as follows:

"The Plenum (of the Executive Committee of the Communist International) proposes that the Communist Party of Great Britain shall continue to conduct with greater energy the campaign of exposing the General Council (of the British Trade Union Congress) in connection with this disgraceful and unprecedented ultimatum (the letter of March 25 of the General Council to the Trades Councils declaring they must sign a document demanding the breaking of all relations with the minority movement) and shall undertake a campaign among the Trades Councils and in the trade unions with a view to this document being rescinded at the first opportunity.

Fight Against British Imperialism.

"This executive declares that all the tasks of the British Party in the present period should be subordinated to the fight against the aggressive policy of British imperialism, which finds its expression in this anti-Trade Union Bill, in the war against China and in the preparations for a new war and the support which this policy is receiving from the reformist leadership.

"In order to mobilize the workers for a successful struggle against the Baldwin Government the Communist Party of Great Britain must carry out an intensive struggle against the Right Wing policy of the Labor Party reformists and trade union bureaucrats and the splitting anti-Communist decisions. The immediate tasks are as follows:

"Intensive fight against the anti-Communist decisions particularly in the trade union movement and the development of a powerful campaign in the local labor parties, the Trade Unions, etc., in order to secure the reversal of the anti-Communist decisions, thereby clearing the way for a struggle against the imperialist corruption of the Labor Party by the bureaucracy. In this way the Labor Party will be made a more effective instrument of working class struggle.

"The more active co-operation of the Communist Party members with the Left Wing workers.

Campaign Against the War Danger.

"In connection with the War Danger the Communist Party of Great Britain must: (1) carry out in its press and pamphlet literature a more exhaustive exposure of the aims of the British imperialists with regard to the Soviet Union, showing clearly the breaking off of relations is a part of the campaign of provocation leading up to the war against the U. S. S. R.; (2) must force the labor movement to link up its campaign against the anti-trade union bill with a campaign against the war on China and the warlike attitude of the British government against the U. S. S. R., under the slogans of 'A war against the Soviet Union is a war against the British workers!'; 'War on the wage-cutting, union-smashing Government which is preparing war!'; 'Prepare mass action to defeat the warmongers!'; 'Force resumption of diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union!'; (3) Must explain to the Party members more fully than hitherto the role of the Communist Party in the struggle against war; (4) Must expose pacifist slogans and policy, particularly those of the Independent Labor Party, and the so-called Left Leaders of the trade unions; (5) Must explain to the workers the principal methods of fighting the war danger."

Must Urge Unity of Workers.

The very important section dealing with the Anglo-Russian Trade Union Unity Committee is as follows:

"The Communist Party (of Great Britain) should continue to explain to the workers the importance of the unity between the workers of Great Britain and the workers of the U. S. S. R., which becomes imperative in face of the militarist policy of the British government. The Party must explain to the workers that it is due to the sabotage of the whole General Council from Hicks and Purcell to Thomas, that the Anglo-Russian Committee has not so far accomplished its great task.

"The General Council has always played a double game on the question of unity with the Russian workers. It has defended unity in words, while hampering the establishment of a real alliance between the workers of both countries. The policy of the General Council was clearly demonstrated during the last sessions of the Anglo-Russian Committee, especially on the questions of the General Strike, the fight of the miners, and the fight against the intervention in China.

"The Communist Party must especially explain the real meaning of the last Berlin conference, when the General Council, instead of enlarging the functions of the Anglo-Russian Committee, inaugurated, on the contrary, the restriction of the constitution of the Committee.

"The Comintern fully approves the statement of the British Communist Party which places the blame for the results of the last Berlin Conference on the shoulders of the General Council. The history of the work of the Anglo-Russian Committee for the last year fully justifies the position taken by the British Communist Party in explaining to the workers that the General Council is responsible for the concessions made by the Russian Unions, while these concessions prove how that the Soviet Trade Union Movement is sincerely in favor of real unity.

"At the same time the Plenum appeals to the whole Party to support the British Communist Party in developing among the miners to establish unity between the British miners and the Soviet miners. The criticism of the miners' leaders, who are in practice preventing the establishment of an Anglo-Russian Miners' Committee, is fully justified. Those leaders not only refused to set up a Joint Miners' Committee, but they even conceal from the British miners the proposal of the Russian miners to that effect."

The resolution sets forth that the British Communist Party must continue its efforts to establish the closest relations between itself and the workers, peasants and nationalist governments in the colonies and to assist the colonial peoples in their struggle for independence in every possible way.

It is pointed out that "in view of the great role which the youth has to play in the struggle against imperialism, war and militarism, the Party must give assistance to the Young Communist League to carry out its tasks.

It is demanded that, "a special effort must be made to increase the number of factory groups and factory papers. The political education of the new members must be undertaken in the most energetic way, with a view to consolidating the recent gains of the Party. The fight against the anti-trade union bill and the danger of war must be made the basis of the most energetic recruiting of new members.

"The following practical activities must be engaged in around the slogans already enumerated: (1) a careful exposure of the British Government's campaign of forgeries and provocations directed against the Soviet Union and an explanation of the military and diplomatic measures already undertaken by Great Britain in pursuance of its policy of encirclement; (2) an explanation of the achievements of the Soviet Union in the building up of Socialism and the importance of the growing strength of the working class in Russia which follows this, enabling the Russian workers to assist the workers in all other countries in their struggle against oppression; (3) the demonstration of the fact that the government after supporting the wage offensive of the employers, and introducing the bill to smash the trade unions is now proceeding to disorganize the trade of the country by creating unemployment; (4) the Party must link up the campaign against breaking off of diplomatic relations and the danger of war with the campaign against the trade union bill and insist that the Labor Party and the Trade Union Congress should conduct a joint campaign against the Anti-Trade Union Bill as well as the breaking off of relations with the U. S. S. R.; (5) the Party must emphasize the necessity of the workers in the localities setting up Councils of Action to prepare the struggle against the bill and against the war danger and must intensify its agitation for a General Strike to force the government to resign."

This brief summary of the British resolution in being written as newsboys in the streets cry "Extras!" of the "Rabotchaya Gazetta," one of Moscow's afternoon dailies, containing the news that a British court has merely "sentenced to life imprisonment" the assassin of the Soviet ambassador, Voikov. Thus does the British reaction pull the strings, the Polish puppet obeys and the murderer escapes the death penalty. But, at the same time, Great Britain moves another step nearer the war against the Soviet Union. Against this war the British working class prepares.

Workman Electrocuted While Working at N. J. State Military Camp

SEA GIRT, N. J., June 30—Andrew Kaminski, 41, of Toms River, a lineman employed by the Jersey Central Power Company, was killed yesterday afternoon while at work atop a pole at the State Military Camp here.

Kaminski was electrocuted when he came in contact with two charged wires, 4000 volts passing through his body. He was thrown thirty feet to the ground. His neck had been broken and his head crushed by the fall and his face and body badly burned.

Fascist Finance Chief Warns Foreign Friends Lira Won't Rise Again

ROME, June 30.—A warning to foreign speculators against gambling in Italian lire was contained in an interview with Count Volpi, finance minister, appearing in Popolo D'Italia. The minister says the Italian government does not intend to bolster the price of the lire to new levels, but plans to maintain the present value for some time. Observers think this a guarded admission that the government has reached the end of its financial resources and is losing its grip on the valuta.

Visas Are Assured Those Who Join in Soviet Union Tour

An advance of the closing date for the six weeks' tour to Russia, which leaves July 14th under the direction of the World Tourists, Inc. of 41 Union Square, has been made possible by the receipt of a cable from Moscow today extending the time for the filing of required Russian visa information.

By special arrangements thru the U. S. S. R. Society for Cultural Relations with foreign countries, World Tourists has been guaranteed Russian visas for all members of its party. Going with the World Tourists insures entrance into Russia, and in no other way can Americans be certain of getting into the U. S. S. R. this summer because of the absence of a consulate in either the United States or Canada.

Everything Arranged.

In addition to this tremendous advantage of a solution of the Russian visa problem, the six weeks' trip of the World Tourists offers a moderate-priced vacation with all preparations made in advance and every detail of travel cared for by experienced guides and interpreters. Rooms are engaged, meals ordered at every point of the tour, reception committees arranged at the various factories, children's colonies, nurseries; theatre tickets are bought and paid for by the committee), and all that the tourists have to do is enjoy the sights and investigate all the novel points of interest.

Tell your friends about this and have them write immediately for further information to World Tourists, Inc., Room 803, 41 Union Square, New York. Stuyvesant 7251.

Shore Leave Denied Russian Seamen by British Captains

By ART SHIELDS.
(Federated Press)

Somewhere west of Suez is the somewhat worse port of Alexandria where villainous liquor is freely dispensed to visiting sailors. American, British, Belgian, French and all other Jack Tars can fill their goblets with all the poison they can pay for —but a Russian sailor can't buy a drink.

He can't buy a drink because he can't get shore leave, since the Baldwin government broke with the Soviet Union. An American sailor told the Federated Press what happened when a Russian cargo boat came into Alexandria with several thousand tons of wheat.

"The port authorities threw a panic," he said. "They made the Russian ship anchor way out in the harbor. And there were more cops than longshoremen on the boat. The cops were supposed to be protecting the Arabs against propaganda, and every night when the workers left they were frisked for possible literature.

"Day and night a police launch kept running around the ship to prevent anyone from leaving it. This did not stop till the boat sailed away again for the Black Sea with a cargo of long staple Egyptian cotton.

The bosun of the American ship had the same bad luck. Though a naturalized citizen of the United States he happened to have emigrated from Russia some 25 years ago. He was forbidden to go ashore. The police had orders to shoot to kill if he stepped off the gang plank. Finally the skipper himself intervened and personally guaranteed the bosun as a hundred percenter.

The Yankee seaman who was telling the story has sailed over the Seven Seas, but he says that it was not till he visited Alexandria that he realized how tough the world can be. British law and order has not saved many a sailor from a fatal rap over the head for his roll.

Opium Sale Hawful.

"Opium dealing is a legal occupation, at least it is openly practised. Cocaine is illegal and bootlegged, but subject to raids as opium is not. The Americans I heard some women greeting beaten inside. The bosses speed them up with a whip."

Moscow Theatrical World Capital, Says Director of Guild

Moscow is now the theatrical capital of the world, according to the very foremost authorities of Europe and America.

"After I had been acting in Moscow's theatres, I simply could not endure any theatrical performances for 1 weeks," said Lee Simonson, a director of the New York Theatre Guild when he returned from Russia last year.

Mr. Simonson, speaking to a group of artists and musicians in New York said he never saw such remarkable things happen in any theatre as he saw in Moscow during his brief visit. There was so much experiment—new, thrilling realism; remarkable plays with political significance like one on the revolt in China; the Jewish Kamerny Theatre with its futuristic combination of music, singing, dancing, acting.

Colorful Variety.

Instead of having a dead level of uniformity, with a dozen shows nearly alike—as is usually the case on Broadway—in Moscow you find one theatre after another trying out something new in theatrical entertainment.

Sometimes this "new" performance is a revival of an old play, single ballet done in a manner so perfect that it is a marvel to all who see it. Sometimes it is a novel modern presentation of a well-known play that had been familiar to the whole audience from childhood.

Theatrical Experiments.

Anyone who is at all interested in the theatre will find the stage of Moscow, the most thrilling adventure. In planning a six weeks' tour to see the sights of Leningrad and Moscow, the World Tourists of 41 Union Square arranged with the Cultural Relations Society of Russia to take the tourists to the theatre three times a week during their visit so that they may see this most interesting phase of the art development of new Russia.

The six weeks' tour leaves New York July 14th on the Swedish-American liner "Gripsholm" for Leningrad, and the party will spend three weeks in seeing the art galleries, museums, factories, old palaces, cathedrals, schools, nurseries, and other sights of the U.S.S.R.

Reservations for the tour close on July 8th. The party is limited, but to all those accepted by World Tourists, visas for Russia are guaranteed and there will be no difficulty about entering the country. Further information can be obtained by writing at once to World Tourists, Inc., Room 803, 41 Union Square, New York.

We Declare War!

June 30, 1927

In view of the acts of aggression of the American imperialists against the workers of the world, and the attempt to involve millions in a new World War, in view of the attacks which are being made against the trade unions, on behalf of the workers of this country, we hereby declare a state of war against the capitalist class of this country. On and after July 1, 1927, there will therefore be waged an intensive campaign against our common enemy. The campaign will be waged with the most powerful weapon at our command, The DAILY WORKER. Our objective will be to secure an army of new readers for The DAILY WORKER, an army of new fighting recruits in the fight against American Imperialism, against the danger of a new World War, against the attack upon the trade unions, against the enemies and the oppressors of labor.

Grand Jury Indicts U. S. Attorney JamesOsborne On Stolen Bonds Deal

James W. Osborne, former assistant United States attorney; Eugene F. McGee, disbarred attorney, and Raymond Conway, a bondsman, were indicted by the grand jury yesterday on charges of criminally receiving stolen property.

The indictments were made in connection with the return of $131,000 in securities, stolen from Taylor, Bates and Company last May for a $10,000 reward.

McGee was formerly a member of the bucket-shop firm of Fuller and McGee.

McGee was the partner of the late William J. Fallon. Conway is alleged to have been present when, according to Osborne's story, Osborne was asked by McGee to return the securities.

About $138,000 in securities were stolen from Taylor, Bates & Co., on May 5 last when Julius Berman, a part-time messenger, was returning with them from a bank.

Flunkeys to Their Masters.

Any illusions to the effect that the social-democrats and reactionary trade union leaders would not again betray the workers into the hands of the imperialists in the next world war has been dispelled by the action of the General Council of British Trade Unions in smashing the Anglo-Russian Committee for Trade Union Unity. This monstrous crime, just at this time, when the tory government of forgery, provocation and murder, is trying to make a predatory war against the Soviet Union is more vile, more unforgiveable than was the crime of the social-democratic leaders of the Second International in August, 1914, when they went over into the camp of the imperialist war lords.

In the last world war the social-democrat traitors went over into the camp of the enemy after the war had been declared.

Today the General Council is aiding the tory government prepare for war.

The Anglo-Russian committee for trade union unity was created specifically for the purpose of bringing closer together the workers of the two nations and eventually striving to achieve unity of action of the world trade unions in order to fight against the threat of new wars. When the master class was successfully concealing its malignant features under the mask of pacifism and when it tried to gain advantages over the Soviet Union by "economic penetration," when it had not despaired of utilizing underhanded diplomacy to achieve the defeat of Russia that it failed in the early days of the revolution to achieve by military intervention, it was logical that the labor lieutenants of capitalism should also make alliances with the workers of the Soviet Union.

This alliance was welcomed by the leaders of the proletarian revolution who, although aware of the calibre of the people they were dealing with, recognized the fact that through an alliance with the leaders, they could gain a hearing before the British workers who were then still under the influence of the right-wingers and the so-called "left" of the General Council.

The sabotaging of the Anglo-Russian committee is the logical climax of the policy of treachery on the part of the General Council that manifested itself against the workers of England during the months of preparation by the government before the general strike of May, 1926, when they refused to prepare for the struggle, that stood out in glaring relief in the actual betrayal of the strike and that paved the way for the fierce assault against labor in the form of anti-union legislation.

Now that the tory government of Britain has broken trade relations with the Soviet Union and has intensified its drive against the revolution by unprecedented provocation, raids on embassies and assassinations, it is only logical that their servile flunkeys on the General Council should follow in their footsteps. Already, in insulting letters to the unions of Russia, members of the General Council have repeated the protests of their masters against the execution of the paid agents of British imperialism plotting wholesale murder of the leaders of the proletarian revolution in Russia. Step by step they keep pace with the tory government in its attacks against the working class at home and the vanguard of the world revolution in Russia.

There is, however, one fact that is to the advantage of the working class. That is that their present acts prove the leaders of the General Council to be consciously engaged as agents of the master class, to have openly formed a bloc against the workers of the whole world. This treachery, occurring as it does in the preparatory period, will completely expose them before the masses of British workers.

During the existence of the Anglo-Russian trade union unity committee the workers of Britain learned that their only friends in the ranks of international labor were the Russian workers, not the renegades of the Second International or the Amsterdam International. The bonds of solidarity established between the workers of the two countries cannot be torn asunder by the treachery of the leaders of the General Council and the vanguard of British labor recognizes that its fight must be against both the tory government and its labor agents.

The Respite for Sacco and Vanzetti.

Governor Fuller's 31-day respite for Sacco and Vanzetti, while hailed by certain gullible liberals who, in spite of all evidence to the contrary, have an abiding faith in the ability of capitalist politicians to take an impartial view of labor struggles, is a danger signal that should arouse the most determined resentment on the part of class-conscious workers.

Fuller, millionaire automobile magnate, contends that he has had insufficient time to investigate the facts in the case, hence he postponed action for another month. He needs thirty-one more days to pretend to ascertain facts that are known to practically the whole world. Thousands upon thousands of investigators from practically every walk of life have proclaimed their conviction of the innocence of these two workers who for seven long years have stood in the shadow of the electric chair. The frame-up against them has been thoroughly exposed. Not only have they been proved innocent, but one of the men who participated in the crime for which they were convicted has confessed and completely exonerated Sacco and Vanzetti. If Fuller were honest and really desirous of partly compensating these workers for their sufferings at the hands of the conspirators in the service of the labor-hating mill owners he would free them instantly. The fact that he does not do so under the pretext of conducting further investigations is prolonging the fiendish torture these class victims have suffered these seven years.

That Sacco and Vanzetti are still alive is due solely to the vigilance and determination of labor throughout the world to stay the hand of the executioner. This liberation will only be achieved through the continued efforts of labor. During the next month the nation must again ring with demands for the release of these two workers.

WHY THE WAR MONGERS HATE THE DAILY WORKER

This picture representing imperialist war is taken from "Red Cartoons" published by Daily Worker Publishing Co. Publishing this book was one of the charges on which the Federal Grand Jury acted day before yesterday to indict The Daily's staff.

The Advance on Peking

By TANG SHIN SHE.

"LIES have short legs!" After the defection of Chiang Kai Shek from the Kuomintang and the revolutionary Wuhan government, the imperialists acted as if Wuhan was immediately about to fall. Sensational telegrams were continually sent from China to the effect that Chiang Tso-lin, Chiang-Kai-Shek and other counter-revolutionaries were marching on Wuhan. In fact there was even talk of a race to Wuhan. Every day one could read of the flight of Borodin, the adviser to the Wuhan government, and some Communist Ministers in an airship from Wuhan to other cities.

Incited By Imperialists.

This campaign of incitement was deliberately initiated by the imperialist agents in China. It was believed that in this way it would be possible to defeat the gigantic Chinese revolution. Today they have to admit, contrary to their previous reports of the "fall of Wuhan," that the revolutionary troops are threatening Peking. They likewise have to admit that Borodin is still in Wuhan.

THE junction of the revolutionary armies the troops of Kuominchun proceeding along the Langhai railway line and the troops of Tang Sen Dji proceeding along the Wuhan-Peking line—was accomplished at Chengchow. Peking is now threatened on three sides. From the South side there are approaching the united forces of the Kuominchun and Tang Sen Dji along the Wuhan-Peking line from the North side there are advancing the troops of Feng Yu-Hsiang, united with the army of the model governor of Shansi, Lien Chi San, which went over to the Wuhan government in April last, and from the West the Shansi troops are pushing forward along the Taylan-Jinchen line. Before very long Chang Tsung Chang's army, which has long been in open conflict with Chang Tso-lin and which only recently was defeated in North Kiangsu near Hautchow by Chiang Kai-shek, will withdraw from there to Tientsin and thus cut off the retreat of Chang Tso-Lin to Manchuria. Chang Tso-Lin will shortly be compelled to abandon Peking in order to secure Manchuria.

Attitude Of Japan.

HOW will the Japanese behave now that Chang Tso-lin is in such a critical position? Japan is at present as equally cool towards Chang Tso-lin as it is towards the revolutionary Wuhan troops; for Chang Tso-lin is the friend of its enemy—Great Britain.

When Chang Tso-lin advanced this year against the province of Honan, the Japanese incited his follower, the former governor of the province of Chili, Li Djin Lin, to organize a military revolt against him. After the discovery of the plans for a putch at the beginning of April, Chang Tso-Lin, with a great force of troops searched just as eagerly on Japanese steamers in Tientsin for Li-Djin Lin, as he had sought for Comrade Li Tai Chou in the Embassy of the Soviet Union in Peking. The Japanese had to employ their own troops to remove the soldiers of Chang Tso-Lin from their ships. The Japanese intend to put in the place of Chang Tso-lin as the ruler of Manchuria, the former chief of staff, Jang Ju Chin, who has remained true to them.

Successor to Chang Tso-Lin.

CAN Jang Ju Chin become the successor of Chang Tso-Lin? It is highly improbable, for he is a general without soldiers. What is still worse for him is that he is being fought most bitterly by all tendencies in the Chang Tso-lin clique.

As we have already mentioned, the traitor Chiang Kai-shek is also marching northwards on Peking. There is even talk of a race to Peking between the troops of the Wuhan government and the mercenaries of Chiang Kai-shek. But there is not the least doubt that in the present strategical situation Peking will be captured, not by Chiang Kai-shek but by the revolutionary troops. Chiang Kai-Shek, has not even advanced beyond North Kiangsu, and therefore still has to cross the two provinces of Shantung and Chili where he will be opposed by Chang Tsung Chang with all his forces. In the meantime the revolutionary troops have encircled Peking on three sides.

AFTER the Plenary Session of the Kuomintang in March 1927 the Chinese revolution entered a new stage. It is the beginning of the democratic-revolutionary dictatorship of the peasants and workers. Thanks to the rapid advance of the revolutionary troops to North China the Chinese revolution will in this stage receive a fresh and gigantic impetus; for in the three provinces of Honan, Shantung and Chili, the workers' and peasants' organizations, in spite of terrible suppression, are exceedingly strong.

Let's Fight On! Join The Workers Party!

In the loss of Comrade Ruthenberg the Workers (Communist) Party has lost its foremost leader and the American working class its staunchest fighter. This loss can only be overcome by many militant workers joining the Party that he built.

and makes a bee line for home. It is inconceivable that the powers were not aware of each other's intentions before the conference met. Their spies are active and efficient. The real purpose of the conference as far as the United States is concerned was to serve as a microphone for the propaganda necessary to prepare the public mind at home for a tremendous naval building program.

JOHN ARMSTRONG, a 97-year-old beggar died recently, leaving an estate with an estimated valuation of $65,000. Armstrong learned early in life that working for a living was not what it is cracked up to be, so he parked himself at the corner of Fourteenth street and Eighth avenue and held his hat upside down for more than fifty years. Ten relatives and one benefactor are now wrangling over the estate. Those who claim that hard work is the open sesame to fortune have a few skeptical snorts coming to them. Still we must admit that Mr. Armstrong had the two virtues of patience and perserverance in abundance.

DRAMA

The Manhatters' Opens July 18—Another Hopkins Play

"The Manhatters" has shifted the opening date. The revue will now open July 18th, at the Grove Street Theatre. The principals engaged for the production, include: Eleanor Shaler, Mary Marsh, James Norris, Bill Johnstone, Edward Hale, Sally Bates and Billy Griffiths.

A. L. Erlanger has engaged Lucien Denni, the composer, to supervise all his musical interests in the new Erlanger's on tour. Mrs. Denni has written the scores of 22 musical shows and composed "Happy Go Lucky," which played at the Liberty Theatre this season.

Arthur Hopkins has another play in view. He is planning to stage "The House of Women," a dramatization by Louis Bromfield of his novel "The Green Bay Tree." Elsie Ferguson and Nance O'Neill will head the cast.

Michio Itow will stage the dances in the forthcoming Winthrop Ames production of Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Mikado."

"Rang-Fang," the new Miller and Lyles show, will spend next week in Asbury Park, and open here at the Royale Theatre Tuesday, July 12.

Charles L. Wagner's productions for next season include a play by Paul Geraldy "Robert and Marianne," "Concerning Marguerita," by William DuBolse; "Two Shall Meet," by Owen Davis, and Joe Akins's adaptations of the Wharton novel, "The Old Maid."

The Downtown International Labor Defense Branch will hold an open air meeting Friday evening at Avenue A and Seventh street. The meeting will discuss the question of Sacco and Vanzetti. The speakers will be Harriet Silverman and J. Radownsky.

Join War Against USSR Says Moscow Daily

...of the right wing ...leaders to march on the ... Committee, the Pravda ...

"The treachery that is being committed by the General Council leaders is in the eyes of the workers of the world more disgraceful than the treachery of the Second International in August, 1914.

"Then social democracy followed in the trail of the imperialists the day after the declaration of the imperialist war; today the social democrats are helping the imperialists prepare war.

MacDonalds Prepare War.

"They are openly and consciously engaged in the work of surrounding the Soviet Union and isolating the U. S. S. R. from the world proletariat. However, the franker and more open their alliance with the bourgeoisie becomes the earlier and the more completely will they be exposed in the eyes of the workers."

Trud, the official organ of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions, in referring to the treachery of the right wing leaders of the British Trade Union Congress says:

Flunkeys of Imperialism.

"In preparing the death of the Anglo-Russian Committee members of the General Council expose themselves in the eyes of the workers of England, the Soviet Union and the whole world as the flunkeys of British imperialism, sabotaging proletarian unity.

"The British working class will know how to estimate the treachery of the General Council. The bonds of solidarity uniting the workers of England and the Soviet Union cannot be torn asunder by any machination of their cowardly leaders.

"The dissolution of the Anglo-Russian Committee would entail the weakening of the international proletariat and the strengthening of the enemies of the working class.

Capture Polish Spy.

MOSCOW, June 30.—Mme. Vishnevskaya, a notorious Polish woman spy who has been active since 1921, has been captured at Tcharkov. After a court trial, at which she was found guilty of spying and instigating revolts, she was executed.

Shoe Workers Strike Against Scab System of Unity Slave Pen

Workers employed by the Unity Shoe Manufacturing Company of 2504 Pacific street, Brooklyn, are on strike for recognition of their union. The shop crew is organized 100 per cent in the Shoe Workers Protective Union, but the efforts to maintain union conditions in the slave pen resulted in the discharge of 22 men and women. This was the cause of the strike which has been in progress since Tuesday morning.

Drive Against Union.

For months the employers in the shoe industry of Brooklyn have been waging a drive against the union in an effort to break it so they can have a free hand in wage-cutting and destroying conditions that the workers have fought to establish for many years. The present condition of the industry is due to the fact that it is for the most part disorganized and all shoe workers who have had any trade union experience realize that they must build up their union in order to smash the offensive of the bosses.

Labor Fakers Fight Workers' Health Proposals at Cleveland Convention

CLEVELAND, June 27. (By Mail).—The Workers' Health Bureau held its first national conference in this city June 18 and 19 at the Winton Hotel with delegates representing trade union locals all over the country.

The findings of the W. H. B. covering an extensive period of investigation brings out the terrible fatalities and the injuries to health and limb, in industry, particularly in such work as building construction, painting, mining and electrical construction.

Fakers Fight Resolution.

Some of the officials of the Ohio State Federation seemed anxious to minimize the dangers of industrial accidents, and also to feel that the trade unions could take care of their own affairs without the aid of outside agencies like the W. H. B. Because there are a few laws operating in the state of Ohio, they seemed to feel that a federal code and federal legislation would be unnecessary and a duplication of work. When the motion was made to accept in full the report and statement of the Workers' Health Bureau, and their recommendations regarding industrial codes and standards, Mr. Donnelly, secretary of the Ohio Federation of Labor, got to his feet and after considerable hedging and mincing, he finally came forth with the opinion that the delegates could not pass this motion, first because they needed time to consider it, second, because he did not feel that the delegates could accept the responsibility for their respective unions to pass such a motion. It was a curious thing to listen to, in that trade union delegation of men and women who had come there for the express purpose of getting some facts and some light on the terrible conditions existing in industry and to formulate plans for their own protection and for the protection of the workers in all trades.

Dennis Batt of the Detroit machinists supported Donnelly declaring that he also believed that the delegates did not have the right to take the responsibility of accepting the statement and the recommendations for trade union action. It sounded as crude and unconvincing as the remarks of his leader, Donnelly.

Donnelly had almost the entire delegation against his weird interpretation of the motion. After some debate, James Maurer, president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, called upon the opposition to lay their cards on the table and come out with the stuff. He declared himself fully in accord with the motion, but...he said that for the sake of unity, a substitute motion could be and should be passed which would substantially embody the original motion and at the same time give Mr. Donnelly and his cohorts no cause for complaint. The change in the motion was slight; the substitute after some debate was unanimously accepted and the meeting was adjourned, all feeling that something concrete had been accomplished in furthering a movement for the protection of the job.

1,500,000 Injured A Year.

The investigations and reports of the bureau covers an immense area giving facts and statistics in all the states, citing the laws relative to the protection of labor, the number of accidents fatal and otherwise, their causes and remedies.

Following are some of the startling facts of industrial accidents which the W. H. B. seeks to control thru trade standards and legislation.

2,500,000 are injured or crippled every year in injury thru preventible accidents. 35,000 are killed outright every year thru preventible accidents. The majority of these accidents occur in building trades and mining. These accidents are rarely recorded. Occupational diseases also attack great numbers, particularly women and children. There is little legislature relating to standards and codes for the protection of labor on the job, and that which exists is far from adequate and not always enforced.

Negro Pupils Banned From Jersey Schools Ordered Reinstated

TRENTON, N. J., June 30.—Thirty Negro children who were removed from schools in Toms River by the Dover Board of Education and regregated in a school by themselves under a colored teacher, have been ordered by Dr. John Logan, State Commissioner of Education, to be reinstated in the Dover Township schools "until such time as the contract between the Dover Board and the Berkeley Board terminates."

The contract referred to, however, terminated on June 1st, and Negro residents of Dover and Berkeley Townships, Ocean County, fear they have won an empty victory, as it may not be renewed for next year.

The colored children had been segregated on the pretense that they were from 1 to 3 years below normal, unruly and insubordinate, but the fact that all of the transferred children were colored and that no proof had been submitted that the other characteristics attributed to them were peculiar to them and were not shared by any of the white children, was considered by the Commissioner to "raise the presumption that color is the peculiar characteristic constituting the basis of exclusion."

Shoman Arrested.

An interesting sidelight is the fact that one of the men arraigned in court on Monday was arrested while he was passing out leaflets. He was charged with two counts of disorderly conduct and resisting arrest. All the members of Albert Mandelbaum's family appeared in court on the day that Magistrate Brodsky passed sentence on the defendants. He asked the procedure before the court Wednesday in support of his contention. Brodsky refused to postpone the case and allow another magistrate to try them.

Brodsky showed his viciousness immediately upon the bench. The bail of two of the defendants was forfeited because he was not in court on time, and a bench warrant issued for his arrest. Attorney Joseph Mandelbaum says that he be given until today to produce the worker was curtly refused by the magistrate.

Right Wing Gangsters Released.

The seven right wing gangsters who last Friday morning brutally cut up four fur pickets were released yesterday on $7,000 bail each. Two of them have prison records. When questioned by the police at the time of their arrest they admitted that they were hired to do their dastardly deeds by the right wing International officialdom. The workers who were cut up are James Metzena, Frank Weiss, Stephen Sergadian and Harry Steinhart.

Coal Barons Force Miners' Children to Use Polluted Water

PITTSBURGH, (FP) June 30.—Pestilence is the latest recruit the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corp. has sought to enlist in the fight to evict striking coal miners from company homes at Castle Shannon, near here.

City water, piped to points near the houses, has been shut off, forcing scores of families to use water from wells and cisterns which an examination by state health authorities has revealed, contains disease bacteria. Notices to boil water taken from the wells and cisterns have been posted, but miners and union officers are worried lest children drink the polluted water.

If an epidemic follows the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corp. must bear the responsibility, declares Union officials.

State health officers have forwarded a report of their findings to Harrisburg, and are awaiting instructions from their superiors before taking final action. Company officials have admitted that the closing of the water pipes is a new move in their battle to evict strikers.

ASK FIFTY MILLION CO-OPERATORS TO HELP FIGHT IMPERIALIST WAR

(Special Cable to The DAILY WORKER.)

MOSCOW, June 30.—The date has been fixed as Cooperative Day by the Executive Committee of the Communist International in an appeal issued to workers' and peasants' cooperatives throughout the world.

That appeal states that an Cooperation Day co-operators of all countries should make a strenuous effort to strengthen their movement. The appeal declares that unless the co-operative movement is strengthened so that it becomes an integral part of the labor movement it will be unable to resist the attacks of the capitalist class.

Asks United Action.

Only the united action of all forces of labor, including the co-operatives, can battle against the offensive of capitalism against the workers and the peasants of the world. The demand for the accord between the co-operatives and the labor movement on the basis of class solidarity is more urgent than ever in the face of the impending imperialist war.

50,000,000 Co-operators.

Eighty-five thousand co-operatives, claiming a membership of fifty million members are coordinated in the co-operative international from a powerful mass organization whose strength must be used to defend the workers and peasants against all forms of exploitation and against the menace of war.

The appeal concludes: "Make Co-operators Day a powerful demonstration against the war mongers. Declare your solidarity with the first workers' republic. Declare for a united front against capitalism. Help the liberation struggle in China. Let every co-operative, every section of the co-operative movement be a weapon in the hands of the working class. Let the co-operative movement be a part of the united front against capitalism. Reject the deceptive pacifist slogans.

"Long live the international proletariat! Long live the co-operative movement, the weapon of class struggle for the emancipation of the workers of the world!"

2 Internes Vanish From Hospital As Result of Hazing

As a result of the scandal caused by the "hazing" of three Jewish internes at the Kings County Hospital, two gentile internes checked out of the hospital on June 20th and have not been seen since.

One of the internes wired in to the superintendent of the hospital stating that because of his father's illness he would stay away indefinitely.

When called upon yesterday, Dr. Mortimer B. Jones, the city official in charge of the Brooklyn hospital, refused to say anything on the racial question growing out of the "hazing" incident.

Nathan Sweedler, attorney for the "hazed" Jewish internes stated that he intends to recommend to Mayor Walker the creation of a grievance board to make regular rounds of the city hospitals to receive and investigate complaints from patients.

Rabbi Louis Gross of Union Temple, Brooklyn, says that he is prepared to show Walker over 100 sworn affidavits charging the Kings County Hospital staff with criminal neglect, cruelty and definite acts of an anti-semetic character.

Longshoreman is Awarded $23,000 By Railroad For Loss of Leg in Accident

Settlement for $23,000 was effected by counsel for both sides in the suit brought by Dominick Cicci, a longshoreman of Brooklyn, against the Long Island Railroad as trial of the case began yesterday before Supreme Court Justice Carswell and a jury in Brooklyn.

Julie lost his left leg as the result of an accident last fall in the yards of the railroad in Long Island City, Queens, when he was pinned beneath a case of machinery that fell from a car. Julie sued for $50,000 damages.

How the U. S. S. R. Builds Up Its Industry

[illegible] world capitalism [illegible] fleeting glimpse [illegible] what working class [illegible] obstacles [illegible] to the [illegible] problems of the [illegible] [illegible] in which no attempt is made [illegible] light on these problems is [illegible] [illegible] person [illegible] not want to go be- [illegible] the limits of parochialism, [illegible] naively does not want to take as [illegible] the concrete figures on [illegible] of which the basis of [illegible] of the Soviet Union express itself on all fundamental questions of economic construction: questions of the economic plan for the current year, or even problems of the prospective plan for five years ahead. Such [illegible] methods when dealing with the economic questions of the Soviet Union are very suspicious.

Ignore Figures.

It is of course quite natural that the fascist and bourgeois press evinces great interest in questions concerning the industrialization of the Soviet Union, sources of accumulation, etc. But it is certainly not to be commended that in connection with this, it ignores all concrete figures and calculations, that for instance, when discussing sources of accumulation in general, it does not consider it necessary to say a word about the most important economic document of recent days—about the combined production and financial plan for the industry of the U.S.S.R. in 1926-27.

Why not tell inquisitive West-European readers that the Soviet Government endorsed an expenditure of 1,100,000 roubles for the development of industry (together with electrical construction)? Why not disclose the source for which this certainly considerable basic construction is being financed? The bourgeois and Social-Democratic press, looking very wise, throws aside accumulation within industry as a negligible factor in the industrialization of the Soviet Union.

But why not try to analyse in all seriousness, for instance, the suppositions on which the five years' plan is based, according to which capital expenditure in industry is estimated at 7 billion roubles, covered by three billion roubles profits of the industry itself, 2.6 billion roubles amortization deductions and only 1.5 billion roubles drawn from the State budget? The fact is that it is not in the interest of the bourgeois and Social Democratic press to gain itself or with enlightened readers, as it is not in the interest of the international fascist press, to examine the practical figures of the economic plan for the current year, which have nothing to do with an analysis of the figures of the past (1926-27) year. It is much in the interest of Trotsky himself to [illegible] elaborate [illegible] about matters of communication, relations between the working class and the peasantry, in order to make, on the basis of these generalizations, deductions concerning the impossibility of Socialist construction in one country. . . . But we will deal somewhat more thoroughly with the published figures and material and will give prominence to a few fundamental questions.

For Electrification.

As already mentioned, the Government of the U.S.S.R. endorsed an expenditure of 1,100,000 million roubles in the current year for the development of industry including electrical construction. A few days ago, a supplementary publication of the Soviet of the People's Commissars of the Union was published, giving details re expenditures for basic construction in industry and also fundamental directions concerning the realization of this plan. For a proper appreciation of this plan of construction the most important question is of course that of its reality, that of the real sources of financing this plan. Without going into a more detailed appreciation, we will quote the following interesting figures.

Product Increased.

It seems that the profits of the industry and amortization increased in the following manner: In 1923-24, 263 million roubles; in 1924-25, 585 million roubles. In 1925-26, 802 million roubles, and the estimated increase in 1926-27 is over 900 million roubles. Such are the "insignificant" figures concerning the sources of the financing of basic construction which the capitalist and Social Democratic press consider "in all good conscience" justified to ignore.

We have no reason to think that it will be impossible to carry out the proposed plan. The development of the entire economy and industry of the U.S.S.R. which was, generally speaking, normal in the first four months of the new business year, entitles us to assume that the proposed plans do not exceed the economic possibilities of our country.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Iron and Bronze Union.

Editor, Daily Worker:

The building industry is now passing from a phase of prosperity to a slowing down stage. The prime reason for the present state of affairs in the building trade is as certain authorities declare, that the sharp demand for new buildings is no longer existing. But whatever the reasons may be the result is that a great number of building trade workers are unemployed.

The building trade bosses, taking advantage of the opportunity offered by the dullness in the trade, are preparing to launch an attack against the building trade unions.

The Iron and Bronze Workers' Union, naturally, is not to be spared by the bosses. Although they were always telling us that we do not belong to the family of the building trade unions, but this was as far as granting us better conditions was concerned.

The schemes and the combinations that the iron bosses are making already is an indication that they are hiding something in their sleeve.

The Iron and Bronze Workers' Union being aware of all the preparations the bosses are making is seeking a closer contact with the other local union in the trade and is also carrying on a wide organization campaign among the open-shop men.

The iron and bronze workers must line up solidly and strengthen their union which will lead the defensive and offensive fight against their bosses.—A. Rozenfeld, New York.

Editor, the DAILY WORKER:

Chang Kai-shek, with the stamp of Mussolini on his back, has draped himself in a brilliant robe of liberalism, and is carrying on a ardent flirtation with the imperialists. In this week's Sunday issue of the Hearst papers there is an article purporting to be written by this renegade General, but to the discerning eye it is evidently the effusion of an experienced but unusually clumsy publicity agent.

What right has Chiang-Kai-shek to speak for the Nanking Government, except as its Dictator? In spite of his repudiation of dictatorial ambitions the tone of the article betrays him. In the phrase: "with the collaboration of Dr. Wu and my other advisers, on whose wise advice in civil and political matters I totally rely," you cannot help but see a second Mussolini emerging on the Chinese scene. Dr. Wu, the Foreign Minister, becomes a mere "adviser" to the Dictator Chiang Kai-shek!

It is a well-known fact that Chiang Kai-shek, after his betrayal of the Kuomintang and the Hankow government, fought an alliance with Chang-Tso-lin. His emmissaries have crouched at the gates of Peking more than once. Now that he has failed, he turns back and attempts to whitewash his sin by a flat denial. His statement: "I shall never make, nor have I attempted to make peace by compromise with Chang Tso-lin" is the most brazen playing to the National-ist gallery. What were so many emmissaries sent for? Perhaps to inquire after the good health of Chang Tso-lin?

By his own confession, Chiang Kai-shek is not following the policies laid down by Dr. Sun Yat-sen at the time of his death, but in order to compromise with the imperialists and to bid for the support of the Chinese bourgeoisie, he has adopted Dr. Sun's moderate policy of ten years ago. Dr. Snn, like all great revolutionists, grew and developed from day to day that he lived; his growth was never arrested. He constantly shaped his policies to the need of the time and in the interests of the proletarian classes of the population. He was always for the complete emancipation of the Chinese people from the yoke of foreign imperialism. The slogan which he pronounced before his death was "Down with Imperialism!" Chiang, in enumerating his policies, did not say a word about imperialism; instead, he talked about the "crushing of militarism in China, the unity of the country (presumably under his dictatorship), and the complete but gradual revision of all unjust and all unequal treaties and concessions with foreigners." Even the word "imperialism" is dropped from his program. Dr. Sun advocated the complete abolition of the unequal treaties at the earliest possible moment; Chiang meekly murmurs a few words about "revision."

Chiang Kai-shek is not a follower of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, but the agent of the imperialists in their policy of disrupting and destroying the Chinese revolution.—Ch'ao-Ting Chi. San Francisco, Cal.

Standardize Pay for N. Y. Private Nurses

NEW YORK, June 30. (FP).—Pay for organized trained nurses in private duty is being standardized in New York. The Associated Registry Group, controlling about half the nurses, is responsible. It includes nurses from training schools of the city's large hospitals,—over 3000 in all.

For 24-hour duty, $10 will be paid. Three hours is guaranteed per vocation and six for sleep. A 24-hour is reckoned from 9 to 9; 12-hour duty from 7 to 7, or 8 to 8. A nurse is entitled to full pay with any part of that period. For 12-hour duty the rate is $8. Where meals are not provided, $3 a day allowance must be made. Traveling and laundry expenses must be paid for out-of-town cases. Two dollars extra is charged for each extra patient, except in maternity cases. These rates do not apply in the hospitals, however.

The new nursing scale is based on an investigation by the New York State Medical Assn. Average yearly income of nurses was found to be under $1400, although these women workers spend thre years in professional training.

Professional Patriots

John G., McNutt, 1st Lt. FA-Res, Sec'y-Treasurer. Incia:

67th Congress 2nd Session, Senate Committee Print, ROTC at Educational Institutions.

Copy of statement by President Elliott, Purdue University, 1-28-26.

St No 862

It so happened that these letters were mailed out in a penalty envelope—franked envelope—which privilege under Section 485 of the U. S. Postal Laws and Regulations is restricted to "officers of the United States Government" solely for the purpose of transmitting in the mails free of postage "matters relating exclusively to the business of the Government of the United States."

Just what this letter had to do with government business it is difficult to discover. When the matter of Lieutenant McNutt's violation of the law was referred to the Secretary of War and the Attorney-General of the United States it was explained that "the envelope, with its enclosures, was sent out by authority of the chief-of-staff of the 84th Division, Colonel G. L. Townsend, an officer of the Regular Army, and competent under the law."

This was the opinion of the Secretary of War. Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, therenpon wrote to Attorney-General Sargent on December 4, 1926, saying in part as follows:

"Will you have the kindness to advise me whether you concur in the view of the Secretary of War that Colonel Townsend is 'competent under the law' to send such matter in a penalty envelope without postage? I venture without hesitation to say that he is not, and that the matter sent out by McNutt is not such as relates 'exclusively to the business of the government of the United States' nor does it relate in any wise to the business of the government of the United States. It seems to me perfectly plain that the law has been flagrantly violated in this matter."

A great deal of the propaganda of the professional patriots has been published in journals dealing with the army and navy such as the Army and Navy Register, the Army and Navy Journal, and the Reserve Officer, a publication of the Reserve Officers' Association of the United States. None of these publications are in any sense official though they may seem so to the average reader. Practically every branch of the military service has an association connected with it which issues a journal. These journals can print anything they like, for they are also unofficial. Typical associations issuing publications of this character are the United States Infantry Association and the United States Cavalry Association. There are also various news letters sent out by the civilian aides of the Secretary of War, and bulletins and news letters of various corps and divisions of the army. All of these have been used to distribute indiscriminate and irresponsible propaganda chiefly against persons working for peace. Often they may be need for a wider field of propaganda as in 1925 when the Quartermaster Review issued a broadside of lies against the League for Industrial Democracy. This propaganda was in turn copied from the Eighty-third Division Bulletin. The Army and Navy Journal has been especially active in this work, having printed much of the material issued by Mr. Marvin.

A minor military organization which has lent itself to professional patriotic activities and to the propaganda against all shades of liberals and radicals is the National Society of Scabbard and Blade, whose headquarters are in Canton, Ohio. Its stated purpose is "to unite in closer relationship the military departments of American universities and colleges; to preserve and develop the essential qualities of good and efficient officers; to prepare ourselves as educated men to take a more active part and to have a greater influence in the military affairs of the communities in which we may reside, and above all to spread intelligent information concerning the military requirements of our country."

This society issues mimeographed bi-weekly "Special Situation Bulletins" to its members in which it details much gossip about the radicals, the pacifists, the youth movement, the League for Industrial Democracy, and all sorts of college and student activities of which it disapproves. It reprints the Whitney material on "The Reds in America" and Congressman Blanton's orations against the liberals. In one of its bulletins it attacks Sherwood Eddy, the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom and other persons and organizations that usually appear on the militarists' blacklist. Another bulletin is devoted to attacking all the signers of the preface to the Lane Pamphlet. It also circulates material furnished by the National Clay Products Industries Association. One offering from this source is a pamphlet called "Business Statesmanship," an address by Harry Curran Wilber, "Managers' Consultant and Nationally Known Analyst in Economics," before the sixth annual meeting of the National Clay Products Industries Association. The Scabbard and Blade Society, in sending this address, which is one long tirade against the radicals, tells its members, "You will notice it is punched ready for filing with the bulletins. Before you file it away be sure that you read it over casually and then read it making notes or underscoring phrases you wish to remember or find readily. Too much good cannot be said of this little booklet. . . . To such men as Mr. Wilbur, the American people owe a great deal as you will decide when you have finished reading 'Business Statesmanship.'"

Connections With Business and Organizations.

We have noted above, in describing the support received by the various organizations, that their chief backers are business men or their wives. Some scattered contributions come from school teachers, clerks, and storekeepers, but in the main the financial ties run from the offices of the patriotic promoters to the office of the corporation attorneys and capitalists.

The chief support of the American Defense Society doubtless comes from Mr. Elon Hooker, the manufacturer of chemicals, while Mr. Dwight Braman and fellow members of the New York Stock Exchange are the financial backers of the Allied Patriotic Societies. We have seen how the Security League received enormous defense funds from some of the wealthiest corporation directors in America. The officers of the League at the time of the congressional investigation included Mr. Menken, a law firm represented large business groups in this country and in England; Mr. Alexander J. Hemphill, director in over twenty large corporations, many of which tolerate no labor union on the premises; Mr. Franklin Q. Brown, director in the Haitian-American Corporation; Mr. Robert Bacon, of the United States Steel Corporation; Mr. H. B. Harris, who was listed as a director in the Haitian-American Corporation, which has carried much civilization to the Haitian Republic; Mr. Frederick H. Coudert, a director in oil, real estate, and banking companies; and finally, Mr. Franklin Remington, director of the Great Western Chemical Corporation and many other large concerns, and present chairman of the Finance Committee of the American Defense Society. In reporting on the activities of the League the congressional report said it constituted a serious menace to representative government. Referring to such organizations, the report read:

"Usually, as in this instance, they have access to almost unlimited wealth, and borrow respectability by the use, in honorary positions, of the names of men of national prominence. . . ."

We have noted above that the major contributors to the support of the Better America Federation are the open shop, power and other public utility corporations of California whose gifts have taken the form of substantial annual anbscriptions. It must be remembered that the organization once wore a franker name—the Commercial Federation of California—though its offices, office, and staff remained identical when it changed to Better America. Its president remained H. M. Madleman, president of the Pacific Pipe and Supply Company, and its directors still include millionaire real estate, department store, and public nullity captains of industry. Ernest J. Hopkins in his report to the California Commission on Immigration and Housing writes:

"The connection of this organization with the Los Angeles Merchants and Manufacturers Association is universally alleged in Los Angeles. The same men are active in both."

As for the American Constitutional Association we have shown that its support is exclusively from West Virginia corporations with an occasional check from outside the state, such as Judge Gary's $5,000.

The National Civic Federation, though it carries a few labor officials on its letterhead, and swears allegiance to the A. F. of L., is clearly a big business organization, and has been so ever since Ralph Easley learned much gossip about the radicals, the pacifists, the youth movement, the League for Industrial Democracy, and all sorts of college and student activities of which it disapproves. For the organization is supported wholly by the contributions of the more than well-to-do. No labor organization ever voted it a nickel, and many, like the United Mine Workers and the International Ladies' Garment Workers, have openly condemned it and forbidden their members to join it.

BOOKS

A REVIEW OF THREE NOVELS.

ARIANE, by Claude Anet. Alfred A. Knopf. $2.50.

WHILE THE EARTH SHOOK, by Claude Anet. Bard & Co., N. Y. $2.50.

PRESSURE, a novel by Margaret Calkin Banning. Harper & Bro. $2.

When the mosquitos are biting and the fish are not, "Ariane" is a good book to make life on a placid lake tolerable. It is a novel that deals purely—this term is to be understood as synonymous with lolely, as there is very little conventional purity in the book—with the amours of a well-to-do Russian girl of pre-revolutionary days.

Ariane, the heroine, started to step into the experimental sex wilderness at the early age of sixteen and as she was attractive, daring and intelligent she did not lack collaborators. She took her liasons lightly until she met a wealthy business man. The conflict between the two consumes most of the book, and ends as those things usually do by the principal characters falling in love.

The author is a Frenchman and deals sympathetically with the much-loved Ariane. One cannot help assuming that if Claude Anet were a girl, Ariane is just the kind of a girl he would be. Not a book for the serious thinker but good reading in a thunderstorm.

"While the Earth Shook" is another kind of a story.

Using Lydia Sergeevna as the motor that pulled his narrative thru to a successful finis, Claude Anet has written as readable a novel based on the early days of the Russian Revolution as I have ever had the pleasure to read. The author is frankly hissed against Bolshevism as can be seen from the fondling words he employs in painting the virtues of the counter-revolutionists—or those of them who have any virtue left—as against the strong and hostile terms he uses when dwelling on the alleged terror turned loose by the Soviets.

Nevertheless, Anet does not permit his prejudices to befoul a good story. He shows quite clearly the bankruptcy, incompetence and degeneracy of the Czarist ruling classes and the vacillation of the Kerensky regime. On the other hand he cannot avoid expressing thru some of his characters, admiration for the determination and fixity of purpose of the Bolsheviki, particularly Lenin, whose name from first to last aroused a holy dread in the breasts of the disenfilted aristocracy.

Lydia Sergueevna was a girl of eighteen, when she stumbled into her hero on the Nevski Prospect, that splendid avenue of Leningrad where the red sea of revolution was surging, on Saturday, March 10, 1917. Lydia was swept along with the human flood, driven by a hurricane of gunfire, until she was halted by the figure of a giant, who was as impervious to the human torrent around him as the rock of Gibraltar to the swirling tides.

He turned out to be the president of a big bank, was well over middle age and married to an estimable woman who fed his vanity with a few children. Nevertheless, after a reasonable lapse of time, this honest man fell madly in love with Lydia but not more madly than she fell for him.

While such affairs usually lead to complications, in this case it saved a neck. Savinski—this is the fictional name of Lydia's lover—thru his acquaintance with Semeonof, a high official in the Soviet department of Foreign Affairs, and because of Semeonof's alleged desire to have Lydia learn stenography so that she could serve the workers' republic in the Foreign office, got out of a couple of tight corners, the were we in Savinski's boots we would rather trust to the imagination of the novelist than to the mercy of the revolutionary Cheka, after being caught in illegal commerce with agents of of Kaledine, Kornilooff and the foreign imperialists.

Unlike Ariane, which is free from social implications, outside of the fact that it revolves around the amours of members of the parasite class, "While the Earth Shook" explains the inability of the Russian classes to save themselves from doom while the workers and peasants were painfully and slowly perfecting their governmental machinery and bringing order out of chaos.

Savinski tries to leave Russia on a fake passport but despite a liberal hirsute camouflage he only got as far as the Finland Station. In the last page of the book he walks out of Boutyrkii prison in Moscow a sadder but wiser man. Semeonof saved Savinski! Because the author insists, Savinski was the man who could bring Lydia within sight. Claude Anet is always searching for the woman and always finding her. Semeonof saved Savinski because the government needed the services of a good financial expert. This was Semeonof's alibi. Judging from what we hear of the Cheka of those days we are decidedly of the opinion that were Semeonof influenced by the motives ascribed to him by the author he would be in need of quite a little salvation for his own personal use.

Otherwise "While the Earth Shook" is a darned good tale.

When a book keeps a hardworking scrivener awake until 4:30 A. M. it is either a worthwhile book or the scrivener has gone crazy. This is what Pressure did! I am sane and I don't think I am crazy.

It is the stqry of life in a town which is dominated by a hardboiled banker. This banker and a flunkey are the only worthwhile villains in the story. The banker's chief competitor dies and leaves a daughter, accustomed to all the luxuries of life, with almost nothing. She is in love with a promising young businessman who is a decent fellow but, not sufficiently in love with her to suit her standard. The banker's wife entices the young man to Palm Beach where he falls in love with a bathing suit belonging to the daughter of another wealthy resident of the town. Also to what was on the inside of the bathing suit. But when the girl changed her garments his love did the same thing.

Now it appears that a man finds it as hard to serve two mistresses as to serve two masters. When the young businessman returned to his home town, the girl he loved for what she had back of the eyes as well as from the chin down was running a book store aided by a young man with tawny hair, who was dragged into the story to keep her company and shock the local babbitry. Of course he fell in love with his employer in such a fashion that his case was hopeless from the start. He was about as wicked as the skeleton of a dinosaurus. He did not stay until the end of the book. The young businessman was not successful in convincing the girl he really loved, that fate was against him.

The wicked banker is bringing pressure to bear on everybody, sparing neither youth, age nor sex. He owns a good part of the town, including a department store, which sells hooks. He winds up by putting the orphan, who runs the bookstore, out of business. A combination of carefully planned circumstances sends her to work in a restaurant where she is finally located by the young businessman who broke with the town banker and with the occupant of the bathing suit.

Together they walk ont into the rising moon.

One might gather from this review that Pressure is a sizable chunk of literary hokum. It is nothing of the kind. There is enough sex in it to guarantee its appearance among the tall grasses and under the shady trees of summer resorts. But there is also a lot of havoc committed on the inflated bladder of bourgeois society.

THE PLAYBOOK OF TROY, by Susan Meriwether. Harper & Bros. $2.

"Once upon a time long, long ago there was a great war. The war was fought over a beautiful queen named Helen." And there you are. They have taken the ancient fairy tale as told by the blind poet and set it up attractively to make it palatable enough for children to swallow in play.

Too much of the mythical history of the siege of Troy is crammed into a couple large-size, large type pages to make it easily absorbed by the immature mentality of children. Following this is another brief section of selections from Homer's Iliad and Odyssey cleverly using the original text.

Following the text are eight pages of drawings of the figures in the story, including Greek galleys and the famous wooden horse. All these are arranged for children to cut out and use before the painted stage which is the detachable cover of the book picturing the sea, the landing of the soldiers and the walls of Troy.

The detachable cover and the cut-outs are ingeniously arranged to still leave the story part intact in book form. All of it in colors, it is splendidly illustrated.

It is regrettable that the ingenuity, art work and general attractiveness of this book do not grace a little volume of greater value for children—meaning, of course, workers' children. There are better and less expensive books than this one.

BLAMES TRADE UNION LEADERS AS AIDS TO CHAMBERLAIN

Join War Against USSR Says Moscow Daily

By Federated Press

MOSCOW, June 30.—Commenting on the activities of the right wing British labor leaders to smash the Anglo-Russian Committee, the Pravda says:

"The treachery that is being committed by the General Council leaders is in the eyes of the workers of the whole world more disgraceful than the treachery of the Second International in August, 1914.

"Then social democracy followed in the train of the imperialists the day after the declaration of the imperialist war; today the social democrats are helping the imperialists prepare war.

MacDonalds Prepare War.

"They are openly and consciously engaged in the work of surrounding the Soviet Union and isolating the U. S. S. R. from the world proletariat. However, the franker and more open their alliance with the bourgeoisie becomes the earlier and the more completely will they be exposed in the eyes of the workers."

Trud, the official organ of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions, in referring to the treachery of the right wing leaders of the British Trade Union Congress says:

Flunkeys of Imperialism.

"In preparing the death of the Anglo-Russian Committee members of the General Council expose themselves in the eyes of the workers of England, the Soviet Union and the whole world as the flunkeys of British imperialism, sabotaging proletarian unity.

"The British working class will know how to estimate the treachery of the General Council. The bonds of solidarity uniting the workers of England and the Soviet Union cannot be torn asunder by any machination of their cowardly leaders.

"The dissolution of the Anglo-Russian Committee would entail the weakening of the international proletariat and the strengthening of the enemies of the working class.

Capture Polish Spy.

MOSCOW, June 30.—Mme. Vishnevskaya, a notorious Polish woman spy who has been active since 1921, has been captured at Tcharkov. After a court trial, at which she was found guilty of spying and instigating revolts, she was executed.

Shoe Workers Strike Against Scab System of Unity Slave Pen

Workers employed by the Unity Shoe Manufacturing Company of 2504 Pacific street, Brooklyn, are on strike for recognition of their union. The shop crew is organized 100 per cent by the Shoe Workers Protective Union, but the efforts to maintain union conditions in the slave pen resulted in the discharge of 22 men and women. This was the cause of the strike which has been in progress since Tuesday morning.

Drive Against Union.

For months the employers in the shoe industry of Brooklyn have been waging a drive against the union in an effort to break it so they can have a free hand in wage-cutting and destroying conditions that the workers have fought to establish for many years. The present condition of the industry is due to the fact that it is for the most part disorganized and all shoe workers who have had any trade union experience realize that they must build up their union in order to smash the offensive of the bosses.

The findings of the W. H. B. covering an extensive period of investigation brings out the terrible fatalities and the injuries to health and limb, in industry, particularly in such work as building construction, painting, mining and electrical construction.

Fakers Fight Resolution.

Some of the officials of the Ohio State Federation seemed anxious to minimize the dangers of industrial accidents, and also to feel that the trade unions could take care of their own affairs without the aid of outside agencies like the W. H. B. Because there are a few laws operating in the state of Ohio, they seemed to feel that a federal code and federal legislation would be unnecessary and a duplication of work. When the motion was made to accept in full the report and statement of the Workers' Health Bureau, and their recommendations regarding industrial codes and standards, Mr. Donnelly, secretary of the Ohio Federation of Labor, got to his feet and after considerable hedging and mincing, he finally came forth with the opinion that the delegates could not endorse this motion, first because they needed time to consider it, second, because he did not feel that the delegates could accept the responsibility for their respective unions to pass such a motion. It was a curious thing to listen to, in that trade union delegation of men and women who had come there for the express purpose of getting some facts and some light on the terrible conditions existing in industry and to formulate plans for their own protection and for the protection of the workers in all trades.

Dennis Batt of the Detroit machinists supported Donnelly declaring that he also believed that the delegates did not have the right to take the responsibility of accepting the statement and the recommendations for trade union action. It sounded as crude and unconvincing as the remarks of his leader, Donnelly.

Donnelly had almost the entire delegation against his weird interpretation of the motion. After some debate, James Maurer, president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, called upon the opposition to lay their cards on the table and come out with the stuff. He declared himself fully in accord with the motion, but he said that for the sake of unity, a substitute motion could be and should be passed which would substantially embody the original motion and at the same time give Mr. Donnelly and his cohorts no cause for complaint. The change in the motion was slight; the substitute after some debate was unanimously accepted and the meeting was adjourned, all feeling that something concrete had been accomplished in furthering a movement for the protection of the job.

The investigations and reports of the bureau covers an immense area giving facts and statistics in all the states, citing the laws relative to the protection of labor, the number of accidents fatal and otherwise, their causes and remedies.

Following are some of the startling facts of industrial accidents which the W. H. B. seeks to expose through trade standards and legislation.

2,500,000 are injured or crippled every year in injury thru preventible accidents. 35,000 are killed outright every year thru preventible accidents. The majority of these accidents occur in building trades and mining. These accidents are rarely recorded. Occupational diseases also attack great numbers, particularly women and children. There is little legislature relating to standards and codes for the protection of labor on the job, and that which exists is far from adequate and not always enforced.

Negro Pupils Banned From Jersey Schools Ordered Reinstated

TRENTON, N. J., June 30.—Thirty Negro children who were removed from schools in Toms River by the Dover Board of Education and regrouped in a school by themselves under a colored teacher, have been ordered by Dr. John Logan, State Commissioner of Education, to be reinstated in the Dover Township schools "until such time as the contract between the Dover Board and the Berkeley Board terminates."

The contract referred to, however, terminated on June 1st, and Negro residents of Dover and Berkeley Township, Ocean County, fear they have won an empty victory, as it may not be renewed for next year.

The colored children had been segregated on the pretenses that they were from 1 to 3 years below normal, unruly and insubordinate, but the fact that all of the transferred children were colored and that no proof had been submitted that the other characteristics attributed to them were peculiar to them and were not shared by any of the white children, was considered by the Commissioner to "raise the presumption that color is the peculiar characteristic constituting the basis of exclusion."

Right Wing Lawyer In Aid to Judge

Bissleman Arrested.

An interesting sidelight is the fact that one of those who were arraigned with the defendants was a bond salesman named Bissleman. He was arrested with the pickets but when they were rounded up wholesale arrests in the garment district, he was released.

At the opening of court Mandelbaum asked the judge for a postponement on the ground that Magistrate Gould is planning to run for the judgeship. He asked the procedure before the court Wednesday in support of his contention. Gould refused to postpone the case and allow another magistrate to try them.

Gould showed his viciousness immediately afterwards. The bail of four of the defendants was forfeited because he was not in court on time, and a bench warrant issued for his arrest. A request by Mandelbaum that he be given until today to produce the worker was curtly refused by the magistrate.

Eight Wing Gangsters Released.

The seven right wing gangsters who last Friday morning brutally cut up four fur workers were released yesterday on $7,000 bail each. Two of them have prison records. When questioned by the police at the time of their arrest they admitted that they were hired to do their dastardly deeds by the right wing International officialdom. The workers who were cut up are Simon Metezas, Frank Wales, Stephen Sergadian and Harry Steinhart.

Coal Barons Force Miners' Children to Use Polluted Water

PITTSBURGH, (FP) June 30.—Pestilence is the latest recruit the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corp. has sought to enlist in the fight to evict striking coal miners from company homes at Castle Shannon, near here.

City water, piped to points near the houses, has been shut off, forcing scores of families to use water from wells and cisterns which an examination by state health authorities has revealed, contains disease bacteria. Notices to boil water taken from the wells and cisterns have been posted, but miners and union officers are worried lest children drink the polluted water.

If an epidemic follows the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corp. must bear entire responsibility, declares Union officials.

State health officers have forwarded a report of their findings to Harrisburg, and are awaiting instructions from their superiors before taking final action. Company officials have admitted that the closing of the water pipes is a new move in their battle to evict strikers.

Shoot Petty Bootlegger.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Extermination of Chicago's minor westside bootleggers, said to have refused to join an alcohol syndicate continued today when Lorenzo Alagna was shot and killed by machine gun bullets as he was about to enter his home.

Detectives were unable to discover any witnesses of the shooting.

ASK FIFTY MILLION CO-OPERATORS TO HELP FIGHT IMPERIALIST WAR

(Special Cable to The DAILY WORKER.)

MOSCOW, June 30.—July 2nd has been fixed as Cooperation Day by the Executive Committee of the Communist International in an appeal issued to workers' and peasants' cooperatives throughout the world.

That appeal states that on Cooperation Day co-operators of all countries should make a strenuous effort to strengthen their movement. The appeal declares that unless the co-operative movement is strengthened so that it becomes an integral part of the labor movement it will be unable to resist the attacks of the capitalist class.

Asks United Action.

Only the united action of all forces of labor, including the co-operatives, can battle against the offensive of capitalism against the workers and peasants of the world. The demand for the accord between the co-operatives and the labor movement on the basis of class solidarity is more urgent than ever in the face of the impending imperialist war.

50,000,000 Co-operators.

Eighty-five thousand co-operatives, claiming a membership of fifty million members co-ordinated in the co-operative international from a powerful mass organization whose strength must be used to defend the workers and peasants against all forms of exploitation and against the menace of war.

The appeal concludes: "Make Co-operators Day a powerful demonstration against the war mongers. Declare your solidarity with the first workers' republic. Declare for a united front against capitalism. Help the liberation struggle in China. Let every co-operative, every section of the co-operative movement be a weapon in the hands of the working class. Let the co-operative movement be a part of the united front against capitalism. Reject the deceptive pacifist slogans.

"Long live the international proletariat! Long live the co-operative movement, the weapon of class struggle for the emancipation of the workers of the world!"

2 Internes Vanish From Hospital As Result of Hazing

As a result of the scandal caused by the "hazing" of three Jewish internes at the Kings County Hospital, two gentile internes checked out of the hospital on June 20th and have not been seen since.

One of the internes wired in to the superintendent of the hospital stating that because of his father's illness he would stay away indefinitely.

When called upon yesterday, Dr. Mortimer B. Jones, the city official in charge of the Brooklyn hospital, refused to say anything on the racial question growing out of the "hazing" incident.

Nathan Sweedler, attorney for the "hazed" Jewish internes stated that he intends to recommend to Mayor Walker the creation of a grievance board to make regular rounds of the city hospitals to receive and investigate complaints from patients.

Charge Cruelty, Neglect.

Rabbi Louis Gross of Union Temple, Brooklyn, says that he is prepared to show Walker over 100 sworn affidavits charging the Kings County Hospital staff with criminal neglect, cruelty and definite acts of an anti-semetic character.

Longshoreman is Awarded $23,000 By Railroad For Loss of Leg in Accident

Settlement for $23,000 was effected by counsel for both sides in the suit brought by David Julie, 52, a longshoreman of Brooklyn, against the Long Island Railroad as trial of the case began yesterday before Supreme Court Justice Carswell and a jury in Brooklyn.

Julie lost his left leg as the result of an accident last fall in the yards of the railroad in Long Island City, Queens, when he was pinned beneath a case of machinery that fell from a car. Julie sued for $50,000 damages.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

TWO royal palaces that housed the pretender to the throne of France and ex-king Manuel of Portugal have seen their best days. Both were located in London. One of the royal estates now plays the role of gravel pit and the other harbors superannuated cabin and telegraph officials. The pretender died and the Portuguese parasite is living in the sunny south of France. The day of kings by divine right is past; the day of kings by right of money is here, but not for long, we hope.

SAVAGE sentences are being imposed on the striking furriers, arrested on the picket line. Because the pickets refused to accept the district attorney's conception of what constitutes legal picketing they are being given heavy jail sentences, with additional terms of imprisonment inflicted on them, for contempt of court, on account of showing displeasure at the severity of the sentences. So militant workers are sent to the workhouse for exercising their legal rights. But what is a little law or two between friends?

IF Harry Sinclair, oil millionaire, has been incarcerated for contempt of court over the Teapot Dome litigation, we are in ignorance of the fact. Sinclair entered into a conspiracy with A. B. Fall and other government officials to rob the nation of some of its oil lands. To date all the gentlemen involved are at liberty, and enjoying more than their pro rata share of the ill-gotten wealth. What is sauce for the capitalist gander is something else again for the proletarian goose.

ACCORDING to a Washington dispatch, Joe Bearak, a Boston lawyer and member of the Socialist Party, has been congratulated by Secretary of Labor Davis for his work in helping to smash the needle trades unions by ousting the progressives and Communists. Davis, in recognition of Bearak's work as a strikebreaker, gave the shyster a copy of the history of his life. Davis rose or sunk from puddler to politician and is the millionaire owner of the Loyal Order of Moose. Davis's contract with the order puts one dollar in his treasury for every sucker that joins the Moose. A compliment from that kind of a fellow should be appreciated by Joe.

EVEN if Morris Sigman, president of the I. L. G. U. should succeed in completely destroying the union he will not be compelled to waste a lot of shoe leather looking for a job. He has a farm and amusement park in Iowa and his training as an anti-Communist barker should serve him in good stead when he stands outside the entrance to his main tent and urges the potential customers to walk right in and see the curiosities.

WHILE one socialist is being complimented for his union-smashing activities and another right winger is dividing his mental energies between the union of which he is a president and his amusement park, one hundred big industrial leaders are meeting in San Francisco to fight trade unionism. They are going to give every worker a "chance to be happy" by freeing them from the protection of their unions. This is the kind of freedom that will extract more beans from the workers' pot. While the reactionary labor bureaucrats and the socialists are using up their energies fighting the Communists the bosses are going ahead with their union-smashing plans.

GENERAL FENG YU-HSIANG, the so-called "Christian General" has turned his back on the Chinese revolution and joined up with Chiang Kai-shek and the foreign imperialists. This renegade will now turn his sword against the masses whose sacrifices have made possible the success so far registered by the revolution. The lure of imperialist gold was too strong for the double-crosser Feng, whose record as a betrayer is as black as the blackest of Chinese militarists.

FENG'S treachery following on the heels of that of Chiang Kai-shek, is the most severe blow yet suffered by the revolution and means of a definite setback to the cause of liberation. The Chinese bourgeoisie have done what their prototypes have done in all other countries under similar circumstances. They have sold out to foreign tyrants rather than see the exploited masses in their own country gain power. But no matter how long the struggle will last the workers and peasants of China will persist until they have settled accounts with the imperialists and with the Fengs, Chiang Kai-sheks and others.

BUKHARIN BRANDS FENG TRAITOR TO CHINESE REVOLT

Says Left Wing Must Purge Kuomintang

MOSCOW, July 1.—With the treachery of General Feng Yu-hsiang and the consolidation of native big business interests the task of liberating China lies entirely in the hands of the workers, peasants and petty bourgeoisie, according to an article in the Pravda by N. Bukharin.

N. Bukharin's article follows:

"The bloc of Feng Yu-hsiang and Chiang Kai-shek means a further step in the separation of the class forces of China. Chang Tso-lin's camp is the camp of feudal reaction; this camp is actually in the descendent. The second camp, the camp of the liberal bourgeois counter-revolution, at a given stage in the development of events in China, is the victorious force holding quite a peculiar place in the struggle of classes.

The class basis of the general's coupe is to be sought in the passing of the liberal bourgeoisie to the counter-revolution and the agrarian revolution of the Chinese peasants. The bloc of Chiang Kai-shek and Feng Yu-hsiang and other generals plus (eventuality) the left wing of the "Fengtienese" such is the bourgeois bloc from a military aspect.

At present this bloc is the strongest of the struggling camps. The strength of this liberal counter-revolutionary camp consists in the numerical predominance of its armed forces and its political position as compared with the political position of the feudal camp. The bourgeois camp already lends to amalgamate with the feudal reaction and imperialism; however it is in a certain measure still independent—on the surface.

Liberals are masqueranding as the true liberators of China, as distinct from Communists whom they call agents of the Soviet Union." One of the strong points of the liberal counter-revolution is that it has its agents in third camp, namely, Wuhan.

Feng's Betrayal.

Wuhan's weak point is that it has not sufficient armed forces. With Feng's betrayal, Wuhan lost the best part of its military forces, while the remaining part under Tang Shen-chi is likewise unreliable. The reliable military units are insufficient numerically.

Furthermore, both in the Central Committee of the Kuomintang and the government are Chiang Kai-shek's spies and petty petty bourgeois politicians, a weak ununified political leadership in Wuhan, in distinction to growing mass movement, is a most vulnerable point.

If the Communist International's directing line were practically fulfilled the situation would not be so dangerous for Wuhan.

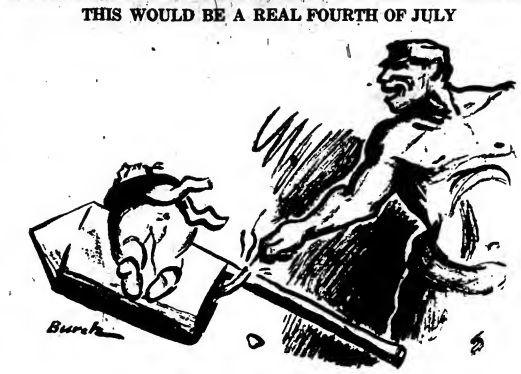
The strength of Wuhan in a powerful movement of workers and peasants.

This revolution will throw away the wavering prattlers and the enemy's spies and wavering terrified "leaders".

So far the camp of the bourgeois counter-revolution has been fighting against feudalism and to some extent, against the imperialists. At the same time it acts against the workers and peasants of its own nation, thereby becoming the henchman of the counter-revolution.

Must Mobilize Workers.

The substance of the actual class battles is the struggle for hegemony in the bourgeois democratic revolution between the working class and liberal bourgeoisie or otherwise, which amounts the same, the struggle between the liberal and plebian developments of the Chinese revolution. The more dangerous actual situation, the more energetic must be the support of the third camp, the more energetic the mobilization of the workers, the peasants and the petty bourgeois masses.



The policy of the Communist International: mobilize the masses; loosen the agrarian revolution; loosen the labor movement, struggle against the traitors. Wuhan must repel all compromising tendencies on the part of the semi-agents of Chiang Kai-shek and Feng Yu-hsiang; it must steer in the direction of clearing the Kuomintang of these wavering elements. It is necessary that it really consolidate the Jacobin "plebian" cadres which can fight to the end against all obstacles and defeats.

Feng Yu-hsiang is the leader of the camp of the enemies of the peoples' revolution and against him must be declared a relentless war. The tactics of compromise with Feng and company could be based only on an absolutely liquidatory attitude towards the agrarian revolution and to wage the struggle for the plebian way of China's development.

Even though Wuhan should fall

THIS WOULD BE A REAL FOURTH OF JULY

Give Capitalism a Trip to the Stars.

Native Merchants Won't Pay British Tax Boost; Demand Representation

(By Nationalist News Agency)

SHANGHAI, July 1. — The municipal council here is becoming panicky as a result of the Chinese rate-payers' strike against taxation without representation.

The collection of the tax is being delayed for two weeks in order to effect a compromise. The Chinese, however, are spurning compromise suggestions, and are determined to refuse tax payments until given equal representation with foreigners on the municipal council. It is predicted that not one Chinese will pay taxes now due.

The British official newspaper, the North China Daily News, admits that the Chinese have organized an almost perfect resistance against tax collection. The provisional court is under Chinese control and is the only source to which legal action, if any is taken to enforce the collection, can be referred.

Demand Release of 53 Chinese Sailors

A thorough investigation of the case of the 86 Chinese workers who forced their way off the "Rotterdam" after they were refused shore leave, has just been started by the American Civil Liberties Union.

Fifty-four of the sailors, jailed immediately after the outbreak, are still being held in Hoboken despite efforts of Ziangling Chang, Chinese Consul in New York, to secure their release. No charge has as yet been placed against them.

Got $5 a Week.

They were hired as stokers in Rotterdam about 10 days ago for a wage of $5 a week with a promise of shore leave. When they arrived in Hoboken, however, the officers ignored their pleas to be let off.

Commenting on this Ziang-ling Chang said: "If American sailors were in the same situation in China American marines would have long since taken action."

The arrested sailors charge that the food on the "Rotterdam" was atrocious, a diet of rice and beans being served them during the entire trip.

Report Sheffield Fired For Leak In Kellogg's Plan to Invade Mexico

WASHINGTON, July 1.—James R. Sheffield, American ambassador to Mexico, was in Washington today winding up his affairs preparatory to relinquishing his post. Sheffield will not return to Mexico City, although official announcement of his resignation has been withheld.

Little indication has been given in official quarters as to Sheffield's successor, but Silas H. Strawn, Chicago attorney, and John W. Garrett of Baltimore, have been mentioned. Strawn represented the United States at the Chinese customs conference a year ago. Garrett was formerly in the diplomatic service.

One of the chief reasons for Sheffield's "resignation" was a leak in the State Department's plans for fomenting revolts in Mexico and for an actual invasion. The Military Attaché to Mexico City has already "resigned" from his post because the documents divulging the State Department's plans had come into the hands of President Calles of Mexico.

CHIANG SHOCKS CHINA WITH BRUTALITY; BEATS THEN BEHEADS YOUNG PATRIOTS WHO OPPOSE HIM

(Special Cable to The Daily Worker.)

SHANGHAI, July 1.—The extreme brutality with which Chiang Kai-shek has been treating left wing critics of his terrorist regime is described in the following description by the correspondent of the Shanghai Times of the execution of three alleged Communists at Ningpo.

"The three victims were all young. Before executing Yang Mei-san they gave him more than fifty lashes with a bamboo in order to exact information from him which he refused to divulge.

"Wong Kun was a brave man and met death with fortitude, admired by friends and foes alike. In an effort to extract information from him they beat him until his whole back was bruised and raised; still he had one reply—that he was not a Communist and that he had no information. He told them that they might beat him to death but that he would die with nothing but a desire to further the three principles of Sun Yat-sen and see China assume her place among the nations of the world. He told the generals that he would haunt them with his murdered spirit. He took the beating like a man and bowed his neck to the knife without a whimper.

"His sole crime was opposition to Chiang Kai-shek. He has by Chiang's acts been raised to the rank of a real hero, martyr and patriot.

"A young woman, the third victim, was also horribly beaten and afterwards shot. These three deaths caused the greatest comments among the Chinese who say that such acts will undoubtedly reach against Chiang and will bring about his downfall."

Track Worker Is Killed By N. Y. Central Train

TARRYTOWN, July 1.—As the result of injuries received when he was struck by a New York Central Train while working on the tracks here, a man known only as M. Getwick, of New York City, is dead today.

Getwick died in the Tarrytown Hospital shortly after the accident.

What the Federal Indictment Means

Under the Federal Grand Jury indictment against The DAILY WORKER and members of the staff, the four defendants, J. Louis Engdahl, William F. Dunne, Alexander Bittelman and Bert Miller, and also David Gordon and Joseph Kalar, are subject to the following penalties under the federal statutes:

On the first count Five Years' Imprisonment, or $5,000 Fine or Both.
On the second count Five Years' Imprisonment, or $5,000 Fine or Both.
On the third count Two Years' Imprisonment, or $10,000 Fine or Both.
Thousands of dollars of bail will be required.

In addition to this the mailing privileges of The DAILY WORKER may be revoked at any time that the federal authorities see fit. The cost of the proceedings in the Federal Courts will run into thousands of dollars.

Comrades, we understand the intent and the purpose of the attack against The DAILY WORKER and its staff. We realize that American capitalism is facing such a serious situation that it seeks to rid itself of its most dangerous opponent, The DAILY WORKER. The whole weight of the United States government is being brought down upon us. We must bring the whole weight of the labor movement down upon the reactionary forces which are seeking to throttle our paper. For the next few months we face the battle of our lives. The chief need at this hour is money for the big fight which is ahead. We expect every comrade to do his share to meet the new attack against us.

British Right Wingers Try to Smash Alliance Of Anglo-USSR Workers

LONDON, July 1.—That the right wing leaders of British Trade Union Congress are taking steps to break the Anglo-Russian Committee is indicated in a report of the labor correspondent of the Westminster Gazette.

Several days ago the All Union Central Committee of Trade Unions representing more than ten million organized workers of the Soviet Union, accused the British right wing leaders of betraying their labor movement and of attempting to break the Anglo-Russian Committee.

If the reports in the Westminster Gazette are correct the guess of the All Union Central Committee is correct.

ENGINEERS FIRE FOUR OFFICIALS ON BANK CHARGES

Prenter Rushed Out by Abolition of Office

CLEVELAND, July 1.—The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers today had returned to the original method of officering the organization, following abolishment of offices of president, vice president and secretary, which were created in 1924.

Aivanley Johnston, once a caller on the Great Northern Railroad, automatically was placed in command of the B. of L. E. affairs.

The deposed officers are W. B. Prenter, president; L. G. Griffing, first vice president and treasurer; H. P. Daugherty, second vice president and C. E. Lindquist, secretary.

Trustees Named.

Three trustees were named temporarily by Johnson to take over the management of the brotherhood's financial and business enterprises with the exception of the pension and insurance departments and report semi-annually to the organization's advisory board.

Prenter Holds On.

Prentar has already signified his intention to fight expulsion from the office which gave him control over all the brotherhood's extensive but unremunerative (to the union) business ventures into scab coal mining and class collaboration banking, real estate, etc.

The investigation committee appointed by the convention to look into shady deals connected with the millions of dollars invested recommended the removal of all the higher officers of the union.

World Tourists Sail For Russia July 14; Last Call for Visas

The time is short before the sailing date for the six weeks' trip to Leningrad and Moscow, organized by the World Tourists, of 41 Union Square, Room 803. They are off on July 14th!

Many Americans have been curious and anxious to visit Russia for a long time, but the difficulty of getting a visa in the absence of a Soviet Consulate in the U. S. A. has forced them to postpone the trip.

Now is your opportunity. An arrangement between the U. S. S. R. Society for Cultural Relations and the World Tourists has made it possible to guarantee a visa for everyone who joins this tour. This is your one certainty of getting to Russia during this summer; join the six weeks' tour and go with this party. Otherwise a delay of months is inevitable, and it is always possible that no visa can be obtained at all by private individuals. The party of the World Tourists is limited in number, and each member must be approved by the Board of Directors before acceptance.

Upton Sinclair Returns Home; Promises Censors Of Boston More Battle

(By Federated Press)

Before returning to his home in Pasadena, Calif., Upton Sinclair told the Federated Press than he would give the Boston censors another pointed attack when the book clerk who sold the banned novel Oil is put on trial on a charge of violating the obscenity law.

Sinclair sold an unexpurgated Oil in the Puritan City, but the police refused to arrest him. His next move was to parade through the streets as a sandwich man, selling a special Figleaf Edition of the book, with the 9 censored pages humorously blocked out with black figleaves.

A. & C. Coni, publishers of Oil, say its sales gained a thousand per cent since the Boston censors got busy. Like all the labor novelist's other books Oil is a big seller in Germany, Britain and other European countries.

Retiring Commissioner Of Sing Sing in Favor Of System of Parole

OSSINING, N. Y., July 1.—Declaring that he passed upon applications of more than 12,000 offenders seeking release from prison in ten years on the State Board of Parole, Commissioner George W. Benham, of Auburn, N. Y., retired to private life today after attending his last session at Sing Sing.

Benhan reaffirmed his faith in the Parole System, asserting that more than eighty per cent of prisoners paroled in his time have reformed upon their release.

SACCO, VANZETTI SECRETLY TAKEN TO DEATH HOUSE

Brutal Action Despite 30-Day Reprieve

BOSTON, July 1.—Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, after seven years of torture following their conviction on framed-up charges of murder were early this morning secretly and unexpectedly transferred from the Norfolk county jail in Dedham to the Charlestown state prison.

Despite the 30-days respite announced by Gov. Alvan Fuller Wednesday the two workers were whisked away in an automobile heavily guarded by armed officers.

Blow to Defense.

A belated "explanation" was made in which it was said that "the transfer was made to conform to the statutes" which require that those facing execution must be placed in the death house 10 days before the date set by the presiding judge.

For several days prior to the respite the Boston Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee repeatedly urged governor not to permit the removal of the two men to the Charlestown prison. The latest action comes as a heavy blow to the Committee inasmuch as they assumed that the respite would automatically block the threatened transfer to the death house.

Labor Protest Grows.

Labor has one month more to make its protests against the impending execution of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti. Thirty days more must be ticked off by the big penitentiary clock before the two Italian radicals go to the electric chair. An executive order by Gov. Fuller delays the throwing of the switch till August 10th.

International protests come daily. On the date of the respite came a cable to Fuller from far-off New Zealand miners, and another from the Syndicate for the Defense of the Tenants of Nice, France.

From New York City arrives the news of the preparations for a one-hour strike, July 7, by trade unions representing 500,000 workers.

On the day of the respite Fuller interviewed Frank J. Burke, a glass bottle blower, and a witness at the Dedham trial. Burke, who happened to be standing in the roadway at South Braintree, as the bandit car went by, got a clear view of the six criminals and is positive that neither Sacco and Vanzetti were there.

Hasn't Seen Madeiros.

Fuller's reprieve order was issued after consultation with his executive council. He declined he needed more time to study the records of the case and to interview the numerous witnesses. State house talk is that another 30-day respite is possible at the end of the period.

As yet Fuller has not talked to Celestino Madeiros, the murderer convicted in another case, who swears that he and the Morelli gang, not Sacco and Vanzetti, pulled off the South Braintree crime. Madeiros, who was to have died the week of July 10th with Sacco and Vanzetti, has also been reprieved till August 10th.

Committee Hasn't Met.

And as yet the special advisory commission of three the governor appointed after the new facts ago has not met in the background. In fact the committee has just held its first meeting. Each of the three men—A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard University; Samuel W. Stratton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and former Judge Robert Grant, has conferred with the governor separately and looked over the records of the case, but they had not met together as a commission till the present session.

BRIDGEPORT, July 1.—Thousands of Bridgeport workers are expected at the monster protest demonstration for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti which will be held tomorrow at 2 o'clock on East Washington Ave., near Washington Park.

DENVER, July 1.—"Mother" Bloor, who is hitch-hiking across the United States on a tour for The DAILY WORKER and Robert Dunn, of the British Labor Party, will be among the speakers at the huge protest meeting for Sacco and Vanzetti which will be held here on Wednesday.

Testimony Kills Her.

BOSTON, July 1.—After giving testimony denouncing her own daughter in a suit for custody of the latter's child in Suffolk County Court today, Mrs. Mary L. Fallon, left the witness stand and as she prepared to her seat in the courtroom, fell dead.

Mrs. Fallon's concluding remark on the stand was "I am ashamed to call her my own daughter."

US EXPLORERS IN BOTH RACES

By ESMOND NEWTON.

The burden of unemployment is falling from the South to ever increasing numbers of white workers, attracted by the establishment of new industries in the North. Not in small percentage, however, but their way to the New England cities is one out a miserable existence in and around the over-crowded cities of New York and Chicago. In connection with the development of New England Negro, therefore, a psychology slightly different from that of the newly arrived immigrant must be taken into account.

Boston, Cambridge and New Bedford have the largest Negro populations. In each of these cities, and in others to a smaller extent, is a professional class of bankers, real estate men, and ministers. This group of self-seekers, unable to branch out beyond the limits of their own race, have become parasitical upon that race of which they are a small part. Owing to their peculiar position they have refused to take part in the struggles of the masses, and have held themselves aloof from all liberation movements, even those of their own race, their numerical strength is insignificant. Consequently this speculative group may be disregarded in a study of this sort. The present and most important problem in the Negro race is the Negro worker.

Whole Family Works.

Generally speaking, Negro labor is unskilled. Porters, shoveling by day, domestic help, teamsters and hotel employees fill the bulk of the occupations. Wages in skilled ranks are poor enough, but in unskilled ranks they are deplorable. The wives of men engaged in such work are themselves compelled to toil daily in order to make both ends meet, often then their existence is miserable. They live in squalid houses. Their shabbily dressed children are sent to school and frequently a "hot plate" is the sole constituent of their dinner.

Occasionally we come across individuals fairly well-to-do, and sometimes we hear of unemployed workers driven to suicide. But these extreme cases are exceptions. The general position of the race in New England is that just described.

Producing Cooperative.

Now what is being done to combat these conditions? Two different methods of attack are being worked out. The first is advocated by a small group of Boston workers. They are collecting funds to establish a workers' cooperative based upon a much needed automobile factory. Their purpose is to monopolize and manufacture all the inventions within the race, and in that way to raise its standards of living. They are keen enough to see the folly of engaging in a competitive field, but yet they fail to see that the success of their scheme would not abolish wage slavery. Nevertheless this movement is to be welcomed because it is symbolical of a rapidly growing realization that the emancipation of the race cannot be attained thru the superstitious channels of religion.

Labor Must Act.

The second method of combatting the unjust conditions imposed upon the race, is that worked out in the program of the American Negro Labor Congress. The congress advocates organization. It supports the struggle of the Pullman porters. It believes in the formation of tenants' unions which should refuse to pay exorbitant rents. It urges the organization of all classes of labor into trade unions for shorter hours and better wages. It is upon the white workers for a common fight against the ruling class.

This is the immediate program of the American Negro Labor Congress. Its militant program is the inevitable result of unjust conditions found in New England. Its program offers the only real solution of the race problem. It is essential as white workers come to realize that no one is free as long as there is an oppressed race. In the meantime every Negro, thru the medium of the A. N. L. C., should put his shoulder to the wheel and do his part in overthrowing capitalism—a system which is kept alive by originating and fostering religious differences, race prejudice and wage slavery.

Workers Party Opposes Intermarriage Bill

By B. B. RUBENSTEIN.

BOSTON, Mass., July 1. — The bill forbidding marriage between whites and Negroes, miscegnation, as it is termed, has died in committee, due to the vigorous opposition which developed against it. Representatives of the Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and of other local Negro organizations, and of the Workers Party appeared before the committee to denounce this bill sponsored by the Ku Klux Klan.

Again it was demonstrated that the Workers Party is the only group which fights for the interest of the Negro workers. While the Klan representatives were advocating the bill which would feist race discrimination and race hatred upon this state; while representatives of the Negro organizations were arguing against this legislation from a moral, religious, and humanitarian point of view, the representative of the Workers Party showed that the type of legislation is designed to split the ranks of the workers, and keep them from effective joint action. The representative of the Party demonstrated the anti-scientific attitude which the Klan has taken; for it has been definitely shown countless times that "racial superiority" and "racial integrity" are myths developed in the morbid minds of pseudo-scientists and blatant patriots.

The principles of gonetics tend to support the opposite view that mixed races develop the highest civilizations, develop the strongest races of mankind.

Similar bills were introduced this year in Connecticut, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania. It is apparent that all of these bills are sponsored by the Ku Klux Klan and in all cases the vigorous protest of progressive forces helped to defeat this legislation. In Massachusetts, during the hearing the Workers Party made clear its stand for absolute social, economic and political equality. The extent to which the colored people appreciate the position of the Workers Party is typified by a letter received from Dr. J. C. Pierce of Boston. The letter addressed to Gus Shklar, District No. 1 organizer, reads in part as follows:

"I am very glad to have gotten in touch with you, being very much impressed with the strong speech you made, which helped to drive the opponents to their hole. You surely made a strong impression on all present and my group will always have a warm place in their memory for you. On that date you made a large contribution to the cause of justice and in behalf of my group I thank you.

Respectfully yours,
(signed) J. S. Pierce."

The Workers Party was successful in cementing the solidarity of white and Negro workers and in bringing to them the understanding of their common problems and comradeship in the struggle for better conditions.

Maurer Attacks Craft Unionism; Urges Unity

James H. Maurer, president, the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, gave the labor movement something to think about when he urged more industrial forms and methods of organization for the trade unions at the summer camp of the League for Industrial Democracy at Camp Tamiment, Pa.

Maurer shed further light on the failure of steel unionism. He gave the case of Steelton, Pa., where 5,000 steel workers were enthusiastically united in a common steel workers' council. Craft unionism continued so far as local craft union meetings were concerned but the solidarity of the unified steel workers was achieved through the council. Then came international union leaders with a separation policy, and the movement disintegrated till today there is no longer a union card in the mills.

Sacco and Vanzetti Shall Not Die!

Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti

While Fuller Is Killing Time at Seashore Sacco and Vanzetti Wait the Chair

The two innocent fighters of the workingclass, Sacco and Vanzetti still suffer the horrible shadow of the electric chair. The "investigators" are busy with Billy Sunday and other clowns visiting the state house and advising the governor to "give these two birds the juice" and raising the war cry against all "foreigners." The "great minds" are occupied with all kinds of "exercises," spending their week-ends on the sea shore. They have no time to consider the truth of this most dirty frame-up, the Sacco-Vanzetti case. There are signs of new danger, and the workingclass must be on guard. The workingclass MUST DEMAND SPEEDY ACTION AND FREEDOM FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI. The week of June 27 to July 4 has been set aside by the International Labor Defense, when there must be a mighty demonstration of the toiling masses to free Sacco and Vanzetti. It must be a week of unity, a week of solidarity and determined action by the workingclass. The New England units of the I. L. D. have responded loyally in initiating and organizing the campaign. The united front Sacco-Vanzetti Conferences all over the New England states; the splendid mass meetings; the thousands of leaflets distributed; the resolutions and petitions is only part of the campaign. Let's double up the work during the Sacco-Vanzetti Week.

While Fuller is busy killing time, special Sacco-Vanzetti protest meetings must be organized everywhere. Get thousands and new thousands of signatures on petitions demanding the unconditional release of Sacco and Vanzetti. Call upon all workingclass organizations to work for Sacco and Vanzetti during this special week. Arrange house to house canvassing. Wind up the campaign on July 4th, Independance Day. Send new resolutions and telegrams to the governor and demand action. The only power that can free Sacco and Vanzetti is the workingclass. Unite all forces and ACT PROMPTLY.

Workers Cooperative Camp Opened in Massachusetts

Camp Nitgedaiget (Don't Worry), at Franklin, Mass. was officially opened Sunday, June 19th, with nearly 3,000 people present, who came there in spite of the driving rain which lasted nearly all day. They came in theirs with an army of trucks, busses, automobiles, from Boston, Brockton, Worcester, Fall River and many other cities all over the state.

The camp is the first big cooperative venture of the Jewish workers in Boston, and the organization was effected at a conference composed of workers' clubs, including Workmen's Circle branches, Independent Workmen's Circle Branches, Carpenters Union and other local unions. Shares were issued at $10 each which are being sold to workers all over the state.

The camp is ideally located at Franklin, Massachusetts, and the large acreage includes a lake with bathing beach, and some beautiful wood land.

A section of the grounds has been set aside for a camp for the pioneers, described elsewhere in this issue. Information regarding the camp may be secured at the Workers Book Shop, 32 Leverett St., Boston, Haymarket 6314. For Pioneer registration, apply at the office of the Young Pioneers, 26 Causeway St., Boston.

FRAME-UP ON THE DORCHESTER PIONEERS FOR ISSUING THE "SPARK"

Immediately following publication of the third issue of the "Spark," school paper issued by the Pioneers of the Grover Cleveland Reform School, a group of the Young Pioneers had a meeting. Red posters were painted, broken rule, dunce cornered, maps torn and the blackboard marked—"Young Pioneers of America." The purpose of the frame-up was to counteract the growing influence of the "Spark" on the children of the school. The "Spark" with its interesting articles; with its letter box; school conditions; with articles in favor of the working class; and with its attack on the Boy and Girl Scouts, exposing them as tools of the bosses, all this began to worry the school authorities greatly. An open attack was made in the Boston newspapers; but the attack failed. The influence of the pioneers has increased since then. The frame-up has now been carried out, but even this has failed in the desired effect.

The children in the school know already full well that the pioneers are the only ones who fight for the interests of the children in the schools, and that they would not condone such an act as the destruction of a public school room. It is evident to every child in the school that the frame-up was purposely arranged to discredit the pioneers. This effect has been to bring the children closer to the pioneer movement.

The pioneers demand punishment of those who are responsible for the frame-up. The pioneers determined to find ont who arranged the frame-up, and will demand that they be punished. Down with the hooligans! On with the struggle, Pioneers! Always Ready!

The fourth of July! How full of meaning are these words to all American boys and girls. To them it is a day of blasts, of fireworks, parades and general carousing. But what is behind all this? Why do we celebrate? Why raise a racket? Because in 1776 the American colonists decided to throw off the yoke of Great Britain, and on this day, the 4th of July, to adopt their Declaration of Independence.

Was this right? Of course it was, our forefathers were oppressed! They were not, yellow, they revolted. Yet today the American is horrified if we consider the Philippines in the same place in which we were in 1776; or if we compare the Chinese revolt to our revolt. In those days it was all right for a whole nation to strike, but now it is un-American to strike. Once the American people wrote in their declaration: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they were endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, among these are Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness—that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it, and to institute a new government."

During the World War people were arrested for repeating these words. Why? Because our rulers were afraid that the people would realize that Happiness was theirs by right, because our rulers were afraid that the people might question their Liberty and take measures in the direction referred to in the Declaration. The patriotism of our rulers goes as far as is healthy for their pocketbooks. This is too patriotic, but not for us. Pioneers, have you these rights? Then let us fight for them. For a declaration of independence of workers! For a Workers and Farmers Government!

Workers Gather on Boston Common

Every Sunday afternoon between the hours of 4 and 6, hundreds of workers gather on Boston Common at Tree II to attend the regular Sunday afternoon meetings of the Workers (Communist) Party, where they are assured that speakers well qualified to interpret the latest events will address them.

The attendance this year has been uniformly good and the workers of Boston look npon these meetings as a valuable forum for the discussion of working class problems. Great interest is manifested in the meetings and many applications for the Party 2271 and let us know what books you can give.

The Workers School to Open in Fall.

While it is yet too early to announce the definite date of the opening of the Workers School of Boston, plans are now being made for a number of classes which will begin early in the Fall. The subjects tentatively planned are: A Worker Looks at American History; The Principles of Communism; The Trade Union Movement; Imperialism; History of the Movement. Other classes will be organized when a sufficient number of students signify their willingness to attend.

Classes in English for workers will be established as heretofore in a number of cities in Massachusetts.

Workers School Library.

The Workers School of Boston has completed arrangements with the Workers Bookshop, 32 Leverett St., Boston to conduct a lending library in connection with the school. Later a reading room will be provided.

At present books on all subjects of interest to workers may be borrowed at three cents a day, though a full deposit is required to the value of the books. A drive for books or money for books is now being made and the Workers School appeals to all those who have books of interest to workers to donate them to the school. Books on history, economics, the class struggle, trade unionism, as well as source books, and file copies of periodicals will be appreciated. Call Haymarket 2271 and let us know what books you

BOSTON TO AID STRUGGLES OF N. Y. WORKERS

Fight is for the Whole Labor Movement

The New England labor movement in the past few months has given active support to the relief work of the cloak makers and furriers of New York. A United Labor Conference, which was held for this purpose in Boston on Sunday, June 26th, banded together a number of militant organizations for this purpose. An army of active workers is now exerting its efforts, bringing to every organization knowledge of the historic struggles of the furriers, its significance to the American labor movement and an appreciation of the speedy work in securing relief funds.

The furriers and cloakmakers of New York are at present engaged in an historic struggle to preserve their standard of living and the right to organize, which they have gained through many years of bitter struggle. They are faced with the organized opposition of the trade union bureaucrats, who have become servile tools in the hands of the manufacturers' association. They are faced with the brutality of the police and the dark forces from the underworld of New York.

Affects Whole Movement.

The destiny of the American labor movement, the extent of its development and victories, dspends to a large extent on the success or failure of the New York struggle. The defeat of militant trade unionism in New York will throw back for many years the progressive forces, while on the other hand a victory of the furriers and cloakmakers in New York will mean defeat for class collaboration, defeat for the trade union bureaucracy, and a victory for militant trade unionism. Such a victory will develop a strong and powerful needle trades labor movement, which will be a source of inspiration to the entire American trade union movement.

The heroic needle trades workers are bleeding on the picket line in New York. The advanced fighters in America, the militant section of labor movement must reach into its pockets and give to their last penny, in order to enable our fighters to carry the struggle to victory.

SPEED UP THE FURRIERS' AND CLOAKMAKERS' RELIEF.

Shoot Victim 63 Times In Chicago Bootleg War

CHICAGO, July 1.—The third murder in three days attributed to the outbreak of a new bootleg war, was recorded here today in the death of Numlo Jamerieco, 28, whose body, perforated by sixty-two bullats, was discovered in the rear yard of his home.

Police claint a war of extermination in which a syndicate is seeking control of the illicit liquor marts, is responsible for the slayings.

The New England Federation of Working Class Women

By G. S. SHKLAR.

The formation of the New England Federation of Working Class Women in Boston on May 15, this year, marks an important event in the life of the New England labor movement. Seventy-five delegates representing 48 organizations banded themselves together into a women's federation for a common purpose and joint action.

This conference and the formation of New England Federation was the made possible only thru the changing conditions in the life of the working women of New England.

Women Count.

Women today are an important factor in the Industrial life of the country. Records of the Department of Labor indicate that the number of women employed in the basic industries of New England has more than doubled in recent years. Particularly in the textile industry, women have replaced men in many departments and in many cases are the bread winners of the family. The lot of women employed in industry is not an easy one. The responsibility of home, motherhood, care of the children, and factory work is wrecking the health of working woman at a very early age.

Recently the Arkwright Club, an organization of cotton manufacturers, sponsored a hill in the Massachusetts legislature demanding an increase of working hours for women from 48 to 54 hours. A drive is now on foot to reduce wages and the inhuman proposal of the Arkwright Club proves conclusively to what extent the manufacturers will go in still further intensifying the exploitation of women.

The meager resources of the present workers' family have to be stretched a long way in order to meet their needs. Work is slow, there is a chronic unemployment, part time work, sickness; yet the prices of every day necessities of life are high, and woman is at the mercy of the middle man who takes his pound of flesh out of the meager income of the working class family.

New War Looms.

The world today is threatened with the danger of a new world war. American troops are in China. The bombardment of Nanking is still fresh in the memory of working women. An intensive preparation for war is being carried on. With the memory of 1914-1917 still fresh and the ghastly tragedy of the world war still vivid in the minds of our women, the women of today view with horror and justified apprehension the feverish activities in the preparation for war and the modern improved methods of warfare with its increased use of airplanes and chemicals.

The school system of today has been openly converted into an institution for turning out obedient slaves, servile workers for shops, factories and offices and willing cannon fodder for imperialist wars. Every attempt on the part of pupils, parents, or teachers for independent thought and expression of sympathy for the labor movement is crushed with an iron hand. Teachers are persecuted for expression of sympathy with the labor movement, and the typical New England steadfast stupidity is encouraged.

Fifty years ago the state legislature of Massachusetts introduced a law prohibiting the dissemination of knowledge relative to birth regulation. Today woman has been thrown into industry. The burden of a large family, the responsibility of reeouring motherhood, the hard work in the shop can hardly be endured by our working class women. And yet this barbarian piece of legislature, this typical example of New England Puritan hypocrisy, this Comstock law, placing birth regulation on the same level with obscenity still remains in force.

Unions Represented.

At the conference there were representatives from some of the largest and oldest trade unions, as well as unorganized women. Working class mothers were represented by the Mothers League of New England, an organization of long standing and considerable service on behalf of working class mothers and of the general labor movement. There were a large number of Finnish, Lithuanian, Ukranian and other language organizations, which gave the conference the benefit of their experience in mass work among women, and the successful development of the women's press. The participation of these organizations established for the federation contact with women in the basic industries of practically every large industrial center in New England. It is these women in the basic industries who are destined to play an important part in the future struggles of the workers, and who jointly with their sisters in trade unions will write future glorious pages in the history of the American labor movement. The conference clearly understood its aims and objects. All decisions were adopted unanimously.

Stop War.

Stop War slogan was greetad by all women. It was decided to issue a special appeal to women of New England to stop war. The women in New England industry understood the struggle of Chinese people and the glorious achivement of Chinese women. The women in the textile industry of New England understood the problems and needs of Chinese women employed in the Chinese textile industry. The conference instructed its executive secretary to write to the Women's Department of Kuomintang, extending to the Chinese women greetings and called for mutual exchange of information on the labor and home conditions of women and their problems and struggles. A bond of sympathy, understanding of solidarity, established in this way between the women of China and America will serve as the greatest guarantee against the danger of new imperialist wars.

Labor Political Action.

The conference recognized the role played by a number of fake women organizations set up by the politicians of the old parties in order to utilize women for their selfish political motives. And the sentiment of the conference was clearly and militantly expressed by Mrs. Clifford of Lynn, when in wringing voice she said: "We cannot hope for anything from the politicians who are supported and paid by big business men. Labor must take independent part in the political life, we must support labor candidates!" The conference also decided to take a more active part in public hearings on bills affecting the conditions of working women.

The conference instructed its executive committee to fight for the repeal of the Comstock law, prohibiting dissemination of knowledge relative to birth regulation, and placing it on the same basis with obscenity. It was also decided to support and sponsor legislative action in favor of maternity insurance and the support of working class women by the government before and after childbirth.

Child Labor and Child Education.

The conference went on record against child labor and, also decided to assist in the organization of teachers and parents' councils and for larger representation of labor on the School Board. The conference pledges support to teachers who are persecuted for their sympathy with the labor movement.

Cooperative Movement.

The question of cooperative movement was given adequate attention by the conference and its role and importance clearly understood. It is certain that out of the conference will grow a stronger and better cooperative movement closely linked up with the labor movement.

The New England Federation came into life as a result of the basic and fundamental needs of working class women. The Federation is built upon the rock foundation of veteran women organizations. The conference clearly understood its needs and problems and solved it in a clear and definite way. The changes that took place in recent years made it possible to bring together women of all nationalities, American and foreign women of different cities and industries organized and unorganized. It is for this reason that the Federation is assured its growth and development. The publication of a monthly magazine for which the women's conference is now taking steps, will be a powerful and an important part as one of the pioneers in blazing the trail for the development of a national working class women's movement.

The women's organizations of New England, who took part in the formation of New England Federation of Working Class Women, have played an important part as one of the pioneers in blazing the trail for the development of a national working class women's movement.

Deflating Trade Union Capitalism in the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

The boom period is over for the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and while it is as yet too early for us to be able to estimate accurately the extent of the damage done to the theory and practice of "trade union capitalism" in the American labor movement as a whole, it is obvious that it has received a severe blow.

The Cleveland Brotherhood bank was "the daddy of them all." Organized in 1920 with a capital of $1,000,000, it had at the end of 1925 deposits totalling $26,414,496. It was the shining example to which the officialdom of other unions pointed to inspire their followers to come and do likewise.

In 1926 the Brotherhood, in addition to the parent Cleveland institution, had banks in Hammond, Ind., Nottingham, Ohio, Three Forks, Mont., Boston, Portland, Ore., Birmingham, Ala., Spokane, Wash., Philadelphia, Tacoma, Wash., Seattle, Wash.

"Labor investment" companies were organized as follows:

Brotherhood Holding Company, Cleveland, Brotherhood Investment Company, Cleveland, Pacific Brotherhood Investment Company, Portland, Ore., New York Empire Trust Company, Inc., Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers Securities Corporation, New York City, Southern Securities Corporation, Birmingham, another securities corporation in Philadelphia and the California Brotherhood Investment Corporation, San Francisco.

The total capital of the institutions was $23,500,000. The total capital of the Brotherhood banks was approximately $4,000,000.

The Brotherhood also bought and operated three mines in the Kanawha district of West Virginia and one in Kentucky. These enterprises were capitalised at $3,000,000. The management refused to sign an agreement with the United Mine Workers and a long controversy ensued.

It will be seen that the total capital of the various concerns organized by the Brotherhood amounted in round figures to $30,000,000—no mean figure even for wealthy America.

The retreat of the Brotherhood at its Cleveland convention from the policy of trade union capitalism represented by the liquidation of the union machinery by which it was operated, is therefore an event of major significance for the American labor movement.

The financial enterprises of the Brotherhood were disastrous failures for the most part—in spite of the huge sums of liquid capital at their disposal and the magnitude of their operations.

The failures occur—and this is of additional import—not in a period of depression, but in a period when the expansion of American finance and industry has astounded the world.

The theory of the officials who put over the gigantic frauds upon the Brotherhood membership was that the class struggle was non-existent and that by becoming capitalists members of the union could solve all social, economic and political questions for themselves. Said H. V. Boswell, vice president of one of the Brotherhood's New York enterprises:

"Instead of standing on a corner soapbox, screaming with rage because the capitalists own real estate, bank accounts and automobiles, the engineer has turned in and become a capitalist himself. Now it stands to reason, doesn't it, that such men won't start any movement to destroy property or ruin big business? Why, only last spring we bought a substantial interest in the Empire Trust Company of New York City. If you could have seen Schwab, Heckscher, and the locomotive engineers seated around the directors' table, you'd have recognized the whole scene as an entirely new turn in what used to be called a fight between capital and labor." (Emphasis ours.)

This does not sound quite so well in the light of recent developments. The "substantial interest" in the Empire Trust Company had to be peddled at a ruinous discount in order to bolster up shaking investments in Florida real estate and other unreliable commodities and, according to the latest reports, the delegates to the Cleveland convention, altho they did not "scream with rage" at the capitalists did some very plain and profane talking to the gang of fat-salaried officials who had cajoled them into the smelly mess.

There will be some heavy thinking done in the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor as a result of the Brotherhood's action. The union membership will view with a cold eye the many and varied schemes which are now in force and in preparation for ushering in the era of "trade union capitalism."

Coupled with the recent refusal of the Watson-Parker law mediation board to grant an increase to trainmen and conductors on 55 western railroads, and the open advocacy of the 10-hour day by B. and O. Willard, the arch-apostle of worker-employer cooperation, the Greens, Wolls, Lewises and others in official trade union circles certainly will curse "the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune" which American capitalism hurls at their uncovered heads just at the time when they are doing their level best to smash the Communists and the left wing whose spokesmen have been telling American workers for years that safety and strength lies in militant trade union organization and a mass political party of workers and farmers ever struggling on the basis of the class divisions in society for the seizure of and the exercise of power by the working class.

Trade union capitalism has been placed on the defensive and its advocates can now be exposed more effectively than ever before as enemies of the workers they are supposed to represent.

The Treachery of Feng Yu Siang.

The series of betrayals of the Chinese revolution by generals in command of the nationalist forces is indicative of the rapid development of the movement. Certain individuals thrown upon the stage of that great upheaval personify for the time being the clash of class interests. The characteristic feature of the revolution during the past few months, since the first victorious northern advance, has been the efforts of the big bourgeoisie of China to arrest the revolution at a stage most favorable for their goal—an alliance with the imperialists against the workers and peasants.

Playing directly into the hands of this counter-revolutionary element was the fact that the movement thus far has had to depend for experienced military leadership upon leaders who rose to prominence in feudal militaristic surroundings. So rapid was the development of the revolution that, although the workers and peasants organized powerful unions they were not able to build sufficiently powerful military forces to liberate them from dependence upon such vacillating and treacherous elements as the old military leaders.

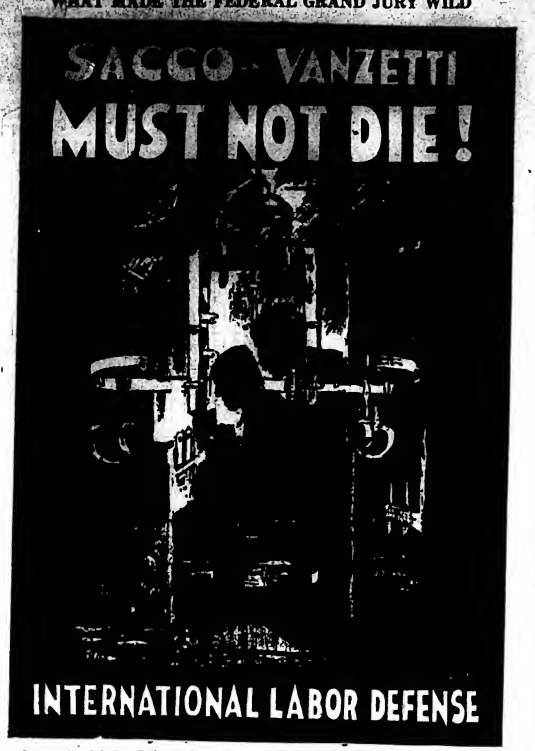
The defection of Feng Yu-Siang to the camp of Chiang Kai-Shek, means a military bloc of the liberal bourgeoisie that has gone definitely over to the counter-revolution. Already Feng, formerly called the "christian general," has completely identified himself with Chiang in his bestial attacks against the unions of workers and peasants. Although still opposing the feudal militarist, Chang Tso-Lin, both these traitors are aiding the counter-revolution by striving to destroy the Hankow government. Objectively they are fighting the battle of the imperialists against the revolution and in a short time they will be identified organizationally with the imperialist plunderers of China.

The effect upon the Hankow government of the treachery of Feng is disastrous indeed and may, probably will, result in the destruction of that government, for the simple reason that its armed forces are weak in comparison with those of the new liberal bourgeois counter-revolutionary bloc. At the same time within the Koumintang and the government itself are agents of Chiang and Feng, spies and semi-spies who are trying to throttle the workers' and peasants' revolution, who should be summarily exposed and mercilessly exterminated.

The betrayal of the revolution by Feng, following close upon the apostacy of Chiang and the denunciation of the Hankow unions by Teng Seng-shi, in direct command of the Hankow forces, which indicates that he is following the footsteps of his predecessors in infamy, clarifies immensely the struggle in China. There are three distinct groupings at present. The feudal militarist clique and the liberal bourgeoisie will merge in one reactionary group against the revolution. The third group is based upon the workers, the peasants and the small bourgeoisie.

In an article in the Moscow "Pravda" N. Bukharin indicates the line of the revolution from now on. The conflict is between the working class and the liberal bourgeoisie for hegemony of the bourgeoisie democratic revolution; or, which amounts to the same thing, the development of the workers' and peasants' revolution, taking at first the form of an agrarian upheaval. At the earliest possible moment the forces of the agrarian revolution must be set in motion and at the same time the labor movement must fight mercilessly against the traitors and agents of the renegades.

To compromise with either Feng or Chiang would be to abandon the revolution and liquidate it in favor of the imperialists bent upon the enslavement of the Chinese masses.



In the struggle the agents of capitalism will have to reveal themselves more and more as the open agents of the imperialists and as the executioners of the Chinese people. Unable to arrest the mighty forces set in motion by the revolution the liberal bourgeoisie sells out to the imperialists in the hope that they will be privileged to share in the exploitation of the millions of workers and peasants in pillaging China of its great natural resources.

As the new phase opens the Communists, as the vanguard of the working class, will find means of arming a real revolutionary army, a people's army, that will develop its own officers and revolutionary military strategists and will initiate the "Jacobin" period, the most extreme revolutionary phase of the movement.

During the interim while the infamous combination of traitors is carrying on its outrages against the revolution, the imperialist forces in China will cease their open aggressiveness and will lie in wait for the opportunity to again resume their open warfare on the revolution, when their Chinese military lackeys face the armed workers and peasants.

Through the changing situations in China there is one demand that the American workers must keep incessantly to the fore and that is that the Wall Street bandit government at Washington get its gun-men of imperialism out of China and keep them out, so that the Chinese may be free to complete their revolution.

WHAT MADE THE FEDERAL GRAND JURY WILD

International Labor Defense Cartoon appearing in The DAILY WORKER and the book of Red Cartoons. This book was specifically cited as part of the evidence against The DAILY WORKER Staff when the Federal Grand Jury indicted it this week. Sacco and Vanzetti have been transferred to Massachusetts State Prison to be near the death house. The campaign for their release must go on in spite of grand juries.

The Massachusetts Hangmen Cannot Tire the Mass Defense of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Sacco and Vanzetti have been taken to the penitentiary.

This means that they have been taken to the death-cell.

The reprieve authorized by Governor Fuller has not served to prevent a tightening of the thumbscrews and a few more twirls being given to the wheel of the rack.

In Dedham jail they were allowed a few frugal comforts and at least the electric chair was not in the same building in which they were confined.

Today they are treated as murderers whose fate is only a matter of time.

There is no mercy in Massachusetts officialdom. There is only a cold contempt for the millions of liberty-loving persons who know that Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent and who demand that the state of Massachusetts release them or at least grant the new trial it obviously fears.

The executioners who have plotted for seven years to murder these two workingmen and to cover the crime with a shroud of legality are playing for time.

They hope to tire out the multitude which stands at the prison gates and demands freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti.

The reply must be that we never tire of defending those of our class who are endangered by the vicious conspiracy of our enemies.

On July 7, in the New York City demonstration for Sacco and Vanzetti, there can be and there will be shown, by masses of workers striking and demonstrating, to the Massachusetts hangmen, who in this instance speak and act for American imperialist reaction as a whole, the solid and unshakable determination of thousands of workers to fight for Sacco and Vanzetti as long as may be necessary.

The July 7 demonstration in Union Square and a number of huge halls will be concrete evidence that our class understands the strategy of those in Massachusetts who lead the bloody conspiracy against two innocent workers and that there is no sign of weariness in the struggle to defeat it and liberate our comrades.

Sacco and Vanzetti must be freed!

N.E. CITIES NEED UNITED LABOR TICKET

By G. S. S.

For a Labor Ticket in 1927 Elections.

All over the country, and particularly in New England there is a concerted drive against the labor movement in the attempt to destroy the trade unions and to still further lower the standard of living of the workers. This drive has extended into practically every important industry in New England and is affecting the life of each and every worker.

The Sacco and Vanzetti Case.

Behind the gray walls of Dedham jail awaiting execution on August 10, are two innocent Italian workers, Sacco and Vanzetti, whose only crime was their activities on behalf of Salsedo and the organization of the workers of Massachusetts. There is a deep significance in the Sacco and Vanzetti case. These Italian workers represent a militant section of the labor movement in New England. Sacco and Vanzetti were selected by the manufacturers of New England to strike terror into the hearts of the militant foreign born workers. The dark shadow of the electric chair is chosen to terrify the workers of New England and prevent them from militant struggle.

Anti-Labor Legislation.

At no time has there been so many anti-labor bills introduced in the state legislatures as during the current month. The labor movement had a difficult struggle on the bills effecting workman compensation. Bills introduced by the Arkwright Club representing the cotton manufacturers of New England, proposed the increase of working hours for women from 48 to 54 hours. There were bills introduced and aimed against the legal existence of the Workers (Communist) Party. There were bills dealing with criminal syndicalism, as well as bills affecting the question of sympathetic strikes and the right to strike. A bill prohibiting the intermarriage of Negroes and whites sponsored by the Ku Klux Klan, was a clear attempt to divide the negro and white workers and to use the race prejudice in still further cutting down the standard of living. On all these bills the representatives of the union of the patriotic organizations and of the manufacturers clubs, were outspoken in their hatred for labor and the demand for total submission of the labor movement.

Cutting Down of Wages and Destruction of Unions.

The textile industry, which at the present time is of unstable condition and where the labor market is demoralized, due to the partial moving of the mills to the South, has suffered the most from this attack. The typical method, by means of which the manufacturers intimidate the workers and force the reduction in wages can be seen from the example of workers in Ware, Mass. The picture of the situation there can be drawn best from the speech made by the representative of the Arkwright Club at the public hearing on the bill proposing increase of hours for working women. "Look at Ware, Mass.," he stated, "the industries there are at a standstill and there is practically no unemployment. Ware, Mass., was a fertile field before, for an outside agitator. Not only workers, but the business men lend their ears to this kind of a talk and now you can see the results." This is the brutal story as told by the representative of the manufacturer. It is the story of the manufacturers, using their economic power in order to shut down the industry, wreck the economic life of the city and to throw hundreds of workers out of employment. This story is repeated on a small or larger scale in a number of industrial establishments in the shoe, textile and metal industries thruout New England. Using the temporary crisis in industry, and the resultant unemployment, the manufacturer raise the scare of the shutdown and moving of the mills and on the basis of this receive subsidies from the city administrations, reduction of taxes and the cutting down of wages. This is the story of the hundreds of thousands of the workers of basic industries of New England, at the utter mercy of greedy manufacturers.

Ware, Mass., clearly indicates that the manufacturers will not stop even at the destruction of the economic life of the entire city in order to gain their aims. The barbaric cruelty in achieving the lowering of the standards of the labor movement is practically the same as the subjugation by the imperialist powers of the colonial and semi-colonial people. And even as the battleships of imperialist powers shell and pour a rain of steel into the defenceless villages of colonial peoples when they show the slightest resistance, and level these villages to the ground, so with the same barbaric cruelty the imperialists at home do not stop before the destruction of their own cities, even if this is done thru economic pressure.

In every city there are a number of militant trade unionists and other prominent leaders of various labor organizations, who should form themselves immediately into a committee for the purpose of calling a labor conference to consider the question of a labor ticket.

Conditions in New England are ripe for independent political action of the workers. The experiences of past years clearly indicates the class character of the existing political party. Labor must and will answer the increased attacks, by a more active participation in the political life of the country. This political campaign, coupled with the intensive drive of the organization of the unorganized, with the struggle for improvement in the standard of living, with the organization of the unemployed, demanding relief from their unbearable conditions, would tend to strengthen and steel the labor movement and will be the only weapon by means of which the labor movement of New England will be able to beat back the attack of the manufacturers and to prevent the total degradation of the labor movement in New England.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

FLYING across thousands of miles of ocean will soon be as uneventful as the crossing of an ocean liner. Science and human ingenuity and courage are gradually conquering the forces of nature which have been in combat with man since and before the dawn of history. Unfortunately human inventiveness is not always harnessed to constructive work, but to the work of destruction. Airplane feats in these days are chiefly for the purpose of developing the destructive forces of capitalist powers.

THE first thot that strikes the mind of the militarist, after reading of the achievements of Lindbergh, Chamberlin, Levine and Byrd and his comrades is the possibility of dropping bombs from planes on cities, distant thousands of miles. There is not the slightest doubt that such bombings will be feasible within comparatively few years. Instead of utilizing air transport to bring the peoples of the world closer together our ruling classes will use every new improvement in flying machines to make wars more destructive. This is a good argument to give a worker who is opposed to Communism because he believes that it means war.

WHILE American flying machines are romping in the air over two mighty oceans, American admirals are growling across Geneva tables at British admirals. Japanese admirals watch and listen and get a word in, once in a while. The Japanese have not much love for either the British or the Americans. Both have committed hostile acts against them, the British in dropping the Anglo-Japanese alliance at the behest of the Americans and the Americans in passing the anti-Japanese exclusion act.

THE three powers are jockeying for position and as the United States and England are the chief rivals, the why Japanese statesmen are availing themselves of the opportunity to get something out of the squabble. Nothing will come out of this conference except more warships. The New York World is very anxious to make it appear that progress is being made. The World wants to see a united front of imperialism, which is a real league of nations attitude, a united imperialism would be better able to wage war on the Soviet Union than a divided imperialism. But there is no indication that the imperialists can reach an accord just now. Still it is not wise to lay down any hard and fast rule in this respect. It would create a feeling of false security which would be very dangerous.

IN an interview with an English correspondent a few days ago, Tchicherin, foreign minister of the U.S.S.R. expressed his conviction that there was little likelihood of peace between his country and Great Britain in the near future. The Briton questioned him about Communist propaganda alleged to have been sent out thru Soviet embassies. Tchicherin denied the charge, but turned the tables on his interrogator by citing half a dozen instances of where British consuls, ministers and ambassadors organized and financed armed revolts against the Soviet Union.

POLAND is not sincere in its professions of a desire for peace with the U. S. S. R. Tchicherin said, as proof of this he cited the case of the murderer of the Soviet Minister Volkoff, whose life sentence was commuted by the Polish authorities to 15 years and who is receiving large sums of money in prison from Polish admirers, who honor him for the murder of the Soviet Minister. The Soviet chief stated that the youthful murderer will be a rich man when he is released and this will be an incentive to others to engage in the profitable business of murdering Soviet ambassadors. Poland is not yet ready for a war with the U.S.S.R. But the preparations are going on with feverish speed.

A VERY important conference is taking place in Wall Street these days. The real rulers of the capitalist world are meeting there. They are the governors of the state banks of Germany, France, England and the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. They are expected to discuss a revision of the Dawes Plan, withdrawal

AMERICAN LABOR AIDS CHINESE TO STRIKE STEAMER

Refuse to Scab on the S. S. "Rotterdam"

By S. A.

A remarkable example of working class solidarity was manifested by a group of marine workers in connection with the attempted replacement by white labor of the Chinese crew which had mutineed on the "S. S. Rotterdam" when they found that they were being given a dirty deal by the Holland American Line.

This group of workers, members of the International Seamens Club at 26 South Street, went aboard this scab ship and talked to the men who had been duped into working her under the inducement of far higher rates than the average wage today. This was done while the men of the crew were unaware of the strike situation and in order to break the spirit and militancy of the members of the Dutch Seamens Union who are now on strike in Holland for an increase in wages and the right to stand by the ship and receive wages for working her while in port.

Refused Shore Leave.

One of the reasons for the mutiny of the Chinese crew was that at the time that they were signed up on the vessel in Rotterdam the ship masters and officers had not told them that there was a strike on board the "S. S. Rotterdam." The Chinese crew besides this infamous move on the part of the Holland American Line had been promised shore leave on arrival in the United States.

Instead of giving them the shore leave promised them by the captain of the "S. S. Rotterdam" himself, he called upon the immigration authorities and customs officials to prevent them from entering the country.

The Chinese sailors finding themselves denied the right of coming into the land of promise and being quite tired of the filthy quarters and miserable diet of sou beans and rice during the entire trip, armed themselves after dressing in accordance with the best American style and descended the gang plank. In doing this they displayed far more courage than has been manifested on the waterfront since the eventful strike of 1923.

A terrific struggle took place during which the company officials and immigration authorities called upon the longshoremen at the docks to assist them in quelling this so called "riot."

53 Arrested.

Fifty-three of the Chinese workers were arrested and held in Hoboken for three days, despite the fact that no charges were entered against them.

The crew itself had been originally paid a wage scale amounting to $6.00 a week in American money. They worked for 12 hours a day and were not paid for one week out of every five that they worked. The pretext for this action on the part of the company officials was the fact that during this last week the "S. S. Rotterdam" was not making profit for the company. In addition the bedding was rarely if ever changed, the food was atrocious and the company was instigating a drive against the Dutch Seamens Union.

Paid $3 a Week.

The Chinese, in turn, were paid the starvation wages of $3.00 a week and fed upon the diet mentioned. When the company found that they could not break the militancy of the Chinese firemen and coal passers, they

FUR MARKET TO SEE BIG PICKET LINE TOMORROW

A tremendous picketing demonstration is expected to take place tomorrow morning when thousands of strikers will gather in the fur market to demonstrate against the scabs and the right wing International.

The right wing hope that the mass arrests and long time imprisonments would break the fighting spirit of the workers will be smashed after tomorrow's picket line.

To Appeal Case.

Arrangements are being made to appeal the extreme sentences meted out to the fur pickets. The legal papers have already been made out and will be submitted by tomorrow. The attorney for the joint board expects quick action to be taken.

Hyman Mellief, father of Oscar and Nathan Mellief, active furriers, states that libel proceedings will be taken against the Jewish Daily Forward, right wing organ. It has accused the Mellief brothers of being gangsters. Martin Feldman and many other furriers are contemplating similar action.

Spirit of Strikers.

The splendid spirit of the fur strikers and their friends is shown by the attitude of the women who were the victims of Magistrate George Ewald's wrath when they came up for sentence.

Thirty-six of them are in jail on Welfare Island serving sentences of five, 10, and—in certain cases—30 days and even six months. Those given five or ten days could come out if they would pay their fines; but when a representative of the Furriers Joint Board went over Friday afternoon with money to release every woman there, all of them refused to allow the fine to be paid. "We will serve our sentences," they declared. And even the pleas of anxious relatives could not make them change this determination.

Cloakmakers' Meeting Wednesday.

The Joint Board of the Cloak and Dressmakers' Union is arranging a meeting for Wednesday evening at Columbia Hall, 522 Stone St., Brooklyn. Important questions will be taken up. All cloak and dressmakers living in Brooklyn should attend.

"Red Army Invincible," Declares Rykoff When Addressing Graduates

MOSCOW, July 3.—"The Red Army is invincible," declared A. I. Rykoff, addressing 230 corps commanders graduating from Frunze Military Academy today.

"The Soviet Union is the only country in the world able to count upon the assistance of as many class allies behind the enemies' lines," said Rykoff. "This assistance of our sympathizers means victory in many a war."

Rykoff was referring to the Communist organizations in other countries who would strike and refuse to shoulder arms against the Soviet government.

M. Vorshiloff, speaking after Rykoff, said that the country needs only a short breathing spell of peace, after which the Red Army would be sufficiently powerful to defend itself against any enemies.

SUPREME COURT HAS APPEAL ON MINE INJUNCTION

WASHINGTON, July 3.—(FP)—Yellow dog contracts go before the United States Supreme Court in the appeal of the United Mine Workers from the iron-clad injunctions of 316 southern West Virginia coal operators.

Whether the coal bosses can tie their workers up with individual contracts containing anti-union clauses and then get injunctions to enforce them against union organizers is the big issue in petitions for writs of certiorari to the circuit court of appeals. If acted upon favorably by the Supreme Court, these writs would oblige the circuit co t to review errors in its ruling upholding the yellow dog contracts.

Nearly every operator in southern West Virginia joined in the 12 suits instituted to end forever the possibility of organizers legally approaching non-union miners and asking them to join the union or go on strike. The circuit court backed the mine owners against the union by upholding claims that the union is engaged in "restraint of trade" through its wage prices. Using the Sherman anti-trust law to hit at labor, the lower court issued general restraining orders prohibiting any official or member of the United Mine Workers from persuading non-union men to "become members of the union or cease their labor in the production of coal."

Filed July 1, the petitions for the

ANTI-IMPERIALIST STRIKES AND BOYCOTTS SWEEP SOUTHERN CHINA; RIGHT WING TERRORISM IN CANTON

2,000 Workers, Students Jailed by Chiang Henchmen in Canton as Revolt Looms

SHANGHAI, July 3.—Anti-British and anti-Japanese strikes and boycotts are sweeping southern China. Steps are being taken in Shanghai for the organization of an anti-British strike to protest against the tax boost authorized by the Shanghai Municipal Council, which is controlled by Englishmen.

Removal Protested

THE ACTION of Massachusetts authorities in removing Sacco (above) and Vanzetti from Dedham jail to the Charlestown state prison has been condemned in a statement issued by the committee working in the prisoners' behalf.

Despite the efforts of the right wing administration, an effective boycott against British goods' is taking place in Canton, according to reports received here. Japanese trade also has been hit hard in Fukien and Kwantung provinces as a result of a boycott to protest against the dispatch of Japanese troops to Shantung.

SHANGHAI, July 3. — The campaign against the imposition of additional taxes by the Shanghai Municipal Council without the consent of the Chinese taxpayers is acquiring political significance. The former fundamental demands of the Nationalist movement are being put forward by the native population.

Agitation placards are posted thruout the city. Protest meeting are being held by various organizations. In view of the unsatisfactory negotiations with the municipal authorities the Committee of Chinese Taxpayers has decided to call a general strike in the native settlement.

Chiang Executes Workers.

20,000 PHILA. WORKERS MEET FOR VANZETTI

Demand Freedom For Two Italians

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

PHILADELPHIA, July 3.—The largest Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration ever held in America took place here today when more than 20,000 men and women gathered at the Century Central grounds to protest against the attempt to execute the two Italian workers.

Starting from Broad and Christian streets in the center of the city over 15,000 people marched to the grounds where the meeting was held. When they arrived, there were over 5,000 workers waiting for the opening of the meeting.

Have Banners.

With scores of banners distributed thruout the assembled workers telling of the attempt to murder Sacco and Vanzetti, the meeting opened under the chairmanship of Dr. Giambaldo.

James H. Maurer, president of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor, brought greetings from that organization.

"We know that Sacco and Vanzetti," said Maurer, "are not guilty of murder. The reason that they are today in jail is because they are working class fighters."

Wicks Speaks.

"Today's demonstration," said H. M. Wicks of The DAILY WORKER, "is the biggest ever held in America. It shows that the working class of this country will not allow the rulers of this land to take from us our fellow fighters."

Other speakers included Juliet Stuart Poyntz and Joseph Magliacano.

Yesterday afternoon an airplane flew over the city distributing 150,000 leaflets telling of this afternoon's demonstration which was held by a committee representing 160 organizations.

Reports from the various Sacco-Vanzetti committees thruout the country confirm the fear that the removal of the two Italian workers from Dedham jail to the penitentiary in the close proximity of the death-house is a move that should be met with spirited and forceful demands on the part of organized labor for the immediate release of the railroaded radicals.

Labor Backs Strike.

According to Rose Baron, acting secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee, trade union heads are calling at the committee offices daily, pledging support to the strike move on July 7th.

Rabbi Charges Race Discrimination at Kings County Quiz

Mayor Walker continued his "investigation" yesterday into the charges of religious and racial discrimination which exist in the King's County Hospital and which resulted in a lynching party being staged at the hospital two weeks ago last Monday. The hearing failed to produce any evidence other than that which has been in circulation since the six gentile internes who took part in the "hazing" were expelled from the Brooklyn institution.

Cruelty, Anti-Semitism.

Rabbi Louis Gross, of Union Temple, Brooklyn, chairman of the committee of 100 rabbis who have conducted a sectarian investigation into the conditions at the hospital as they affect their co-religionists, took the stand and adduced evidence to show that cruelty, marked anti-Semitism and contempt for Jewish patients were practiced at the King's County Hospital. The rabbi offered affidavits to substantiate his testimony.

Everything is being done by the mayor to turn his investigation into a political weapon for the ousting of Commissioner Coler from his post as head of the department of Public Welfare. He has taken sides with Dr. Mortimer D. Jones, superintendent of the hospital, who admitted on the stand Wednesday that he voted in favor of a ruling that kept Jewish applicants for internships out of the city hospitals.

The Daily Worker Needs Your Support NOW! Will YOU Do Your Share?

The DAILY WORKER, four members of its staff, Bittelman, Dunne, Engdahl and Miller, and two contributors, Gordan and Kalar, have been indicted by a federal grand jury.

The DAILY WORKER is threatened with the loss of its mailing privileges and the indicted members of the staff, and the contributors can be given a maximum penalty of 12 years in prison or a fine of $20,000, or both.

Back of the attack on The DAILY WORKER are various professional "patriotic" societies, open shop capitalist organizations like the National Civic Federation and reactionary union officials who belong to such organizations and hate the Worker because of its uncompromising advocacy of honest and militant trade unionism.

The attack on The DAILY WORKER is not something separate and apart from the drive to crush the United Mine Workers of America, the announcement that the 10-hour day must become the regular working period, made by Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio, the refusal to grant a wage increase to the trainmen and conductors on 55 western railroads, of conquest of Nicaragua, the continual threats against the Mexican people, the bombardment of Nanking by American and British warships and the propaganda for a huge navy and outright militarism which is sweeping over the country like a poisonous tidal wave.

The only daily paper in the United States which fights the battles of the working class on all fronts without asking quarter from any section of the capitalist class or its hangerson, The DAILY WORKER naturally becomes the target of attack.

The DAILY WORKER gets its support only from the militant section of the American workers. Since January 13, 1924, this support has enabled it to carry on the struggle for organization of the uncorganized, a labor party, honest and effective trade unionism—basic needs of the American labor movement.

Only a continuation of this support, and its increase in volume to meet this new emergency, can keep The DAILY WORKER on the firing line.

Money is needed, new readers are needed. This is the only effective way to answer the challenge of reaction and to keep the voice of the only national labor daily from being silenced.

[illegible] Plumbers In Planning, Trade To Be Organize Committee

A committee to organize the alteration plumbers was formed at a meeting held Thursday evening at the Labor Temple, 14th St. and Second Ave. Seventy-five workers joined at this meeting.

Plans were laid for an organization drive; including the issuing of leaflets to the trade. It was decided out of the meeting that the United Association of Plumbers and Helpers has jurisdiction over the pressing industry and an attempt will be made to become connected with that organization.

It was said that of the 15,000 plumber workers in the city, only 5,000 are organized in the union. The 5,000 helpers and 5,000 alteration workers not being connected.

The next meeting of the alteration organization committee will take place next Thursday evening at the Labor Temple.

Fake Parson Arrested After Marrying 1,000

[illegible] Workers Unite To Reduce 70-Hour Week at Convention

By HARVEY GOODMAN

WASHINGTON, (FP), July 3.—Government workers will show the extent to which they understand a new goal in the shorter work week when they meet for convention at San Antonio, Texas in September. That goal will be the 30-hour week, according to Luther Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes.

The San Antonio convention is expected to put the formal seal of approval on the union's campaign to establish the Saturday half-holiday in all federal departments except the post office, which is under the jurisdiction of other unions. The proposal will be whipped into legal form and presented to congress when it convenes in regular session in December.

Strong Union.

"We are working toward the goal of the American labor movement in seeking the shorter work week," Steward explained. "That has been the main struggle of the Federal Employes ever since their organization.

"This year for the first time, government workers in Washington have obtained the Saturday half-holiday for four months, instead of three. With the seven-hour day, that means we have the 35-hour week in the summer months from June 1 to September 30. The next step for the union is to win the Saturday half holiday the year round.

"When we attain that, it will be a beacon to all clerical workers in the country, showing them the value of union organization."

In the meantime the union has a stiff fight on its hands in enforcing the equal work-equal pay clause of the Sterling-Lehlbach Act reclassifying federal employes. This act, passed in 1923, was hailed as a great victory for the principle that women should receive the same pay as men for the same sort of work.

Equal Pay For Equal Work.

But Coolidge, unwilling to admit the force of the equal rights victory when it came to giving the government's women workers hard-earned wage increases, ignored the Sterling-Lehlbach Act by packing the personnel classification board, in charge of its administration, with enemies of the law. Now the Federal Employes Union, tired of appealing to the board for justice for 200 women in the Bureau of Printing and Engraving who have been consistently denied men's wages for the same sort of work, will appeal to congress this winter to set up new administrative machinery out of touch of the Coolidge appointive power.

"Not only the undisputed rights of 200 women in a Washington bureau, but the struggle of America's millions of working women, exploited through the double standard of pay, are involved in this fight," Gertrude McNally, vice-president of the Federal Employes Union, told members of the Women's Union of the Bureau, organized as Local 176. "Threats of demotion and discharge because we insist on observance of the law will not swerve us from our appeal to congress to put teeth into the equal work-equal pay law."

Secretary Frank Coleman of the Maryland-District of Columbia Federation of Labor, promised the full support of the Washington and Baltimore labor movements to the federal workers.

Five-Year Prison Term For Opposing Fascisti

ROME, July 3.—For opposing the dictatorship of Mussolini, Stefano Lefano was today sentenced to serve five years in prison by a special military tribunal.

The same body acquitted Anzelo Bartolini on the chorge of "an offense against the king," but sentenced him to one year on the charge of "resisting arrest."

Negro Labor Speaker In Cleveland Arrested At Open Air Meeting

CLEVELAND, O., July 3.—The heights to which police stupidity may rise was revealed when a speaker for the American Negro Labor Congress was arrested here last night at a street meeting, on the charge that he was "stirring up race hatred."

Later Freed.

The speaker was later released and returned to the meeting where he received an enthusiastic reception from the large crowd of 200 white and colored workers. The attempt of the police to break up the meeting was denounced and the crowd signified their whole-hearted support of the program and tactics of the Negro Labor Congress for drawing the white and colored workers closer together for a struggle against their common enemy—the bosses. Several workers signed applications for membership in the organization.

Meetings of the Cleveland local of the Congress will be held every Monday night at the same corner—Woodlawn and 40th Sts.

Head of "Ice Trust" Indicted for Perjury

Lorenza De Maria, head of the ice trust which carries on its operations in New York city, was indicted by the Queens County Grand Jury Friday on a charge of perjury.

De Maria, who is general manager for the Metropolitan Coal and Ice Dealers Union, Inc., is charged with falsely telling Referee Hamilton that he had not discussed price-fixing in a conference held July 11th with John Murray, owner of an ice plant at Rockaway Beach.

In the course of his statement Hazelton pointed out "the iceman sells his ice for three times as much as he pays for it or even more; he does not weigh his ice, and if a customer complains, the customer is punished by the iceman "forgetting to deliver it for a few days."

a scandal, and a misfit that must go," and accusing the Chinese judge with interposing himself between criminals and the law.

Judge Ziar pointed out that such statements contempt under both British and Chinese laws, and that the North China Daily News was fined for contempt by a British court a few years ago because it attacked a British judge for sentencing Morris, the paper's proprietor.

The Chinese court might be unable to get at the North China Daily News directly, said Judge Ziar, because foreign newspapers hide themselves under the shelter of extraterritoriality, but its Chinese printers are technical accomplices to the contempt and they are under the jurisdiction of the Chinese court.

The present incident developed when agents of the newspaper brought suit in the Chinese court against a Russian for rent. The case was thrown out, Judge Ziar declaring that the court "cannot give relief to the North China Daily News when coming here reeking with the blood of its own offenses against the court." The paper had previously attacked the court because of the court's refusal to enforce the foreign municipal anti-Chinese laws which are contrary to the Chinese code.

Needle Trade Defense

The entire program of the New Symphony Orchestra conducted by Erno Rapee, and Borodine's "Prince Igor" with Alexis Kosloff and his famous ballet will be broadcast over the radio by Station WCGU, Saturday night, July 16, from the open air arena of the Coney Island Stadium. This dual concert and operatic event is being presented by the Joint Defense & Relief Committee, 41 Union Square, for the purpose of raising funds for the wives and children of the imprisoned cloakmakers and furriers.

Mr. Rapee, who needs no introduction to the vast radio audience, has prepared a special musical program for this occasion. Some of the composers whose work will be featured are: Tschaikowsky, Wagner, Johann and Richard Strauss, Rimsky-Korsakoff, Berlioz and Borodina. Rapee will also conduct musical program of the well known Russian opera, as well as the divertissements, which are being arranged by Kosloff. Rita de Laporte of the Metropolitan Opera House, Katya Minassian, Emma D. Miller and Valentia Kaschouba, recently arrived here from Russia and who danced in the company of Anna Pavlowa, will render solo selections in addition to their respective parts in "Prince Igor."

In case of rain on Saturday, July 16, the concert will be postponed to the next night, Sunday.

Back Concert.

The example set by the Food Workers shows that workers outside the Needle Trades are commencing to realize the importance of defeating the attempt to destroy the healthy trade union movement. All class-conscious workers must now throw their energies into the struggle to arouse the workers. A moral as well as a financial success at the Coney Island Stadium will be a big step in this direction. See to it that your organization takes tickets. Urge every member of your local union, fraternal society, Workmen's Circle, or other organization, to attend this Concert. Tickets are only $1.00 for general admission and $2.00 for reserved seats. A magnificient program has been arranged. Borodine's world famous "Prince Igor" presented by Alexis Kosloff of the Metropolitan Opera House, in person, assisted by his famous ballet corps and the New York Symphony Orchestra of 100 musicians, conducted by Erno Rapee, internationally-acclaimed musical virtuoso, will be the principal attractions. Rita de Laporte, solo dancer of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will be presented in the principal female role.

'Still' Found in Plant of Big Captain of Industry

Application to dismiss a charge of conspiring to violate the prohibition law and to vacate the bail of five defendents, which has been filed with the clerk of the federal court, disclosed a case which involves a well-know New York business man and four others.

The New Yorker is George Leary who keeps offices at 15 Moore Street, and whose town residence is at 1053 Fifth Avenue. Mrs. Leary, his wife, was decorated by the pope in 1919. Leary was arrested April 11th.

Thriving Business.

On that date, according to P. Tubbs, a prohibition agent, a still was discovered on the plant of the Seal Hook Electric Light and Power Company of which Leary is president. The agent states that several lines of pipes were laid from the stills and reservoirs into the general offices of the company.

Supreme Court Receives Mine Injunction Case

writs of error and appeals cannot be heard by the Supreme Court until it reconvenes this fall." In the meantime, the operators of West Virginia operating companies not only to prevent union organizers from entering the mines freely but are carrying on a campaign to force the miners from the United Mineworkers Organization to accept reducing rates on coal from the Pittsburgh district to the inland by 39 cents a ton. The southern West Virginia operators have responded by offsetting the 20 cent differential through another slice off the wages.

The West Virginia Southern Coal Co., newly organized syndicate, is floating an additional $150,000 bond issue after a $1,500,000 issue on the boast that their properties "are and always have been operated by non-union labor." Resting at ease behind the shield set up by the circuit court ruling, the new company confidently predicts that its earnings from non-union labor in the future will be adequate to meet interest claims.

Ohio Operators Try to Break

CLEVELAND, July 3.—The Ohio coal operators have determined to open the mines in the state with scab labor. They held a meeting at Columbus recently and decided to appeal to the men over the heads of the union officials. The officials challenged them to find sufficient men to obey their call. A small group at Nelsonville, following the lead of a traitorous president of the local by the name of Emmet Searles, decided to accept the offer of $5 a day and return to work.

The rest of the man left the meeting and it was soon apparent that Searles, the Judas of the section, had little following.

Scabs Appear.

The situation however is becoming more complicated. At Adena the operators brought in scabs, who were hooted and stoned by miners and their wives. The Shariff wired to Governor Donahey, who promised aid if needed. The miners began to picket the mine, but the operators got a restraining order, which prohibits them from having more than 20 men on the line and from holding meetings within a certain area.

Company spies also are on the job. Recently one was at Adena, who declared he was for Brophy, as the proper man to lead the organization. The next night he attacked Brophy, stating that he wanted to build a new union. The union must be saved —and any man who states that Brophy or any other man wants to form another union now is helping the operators.

Thousands of miners were reported to be in Steubenville, but the sheriff, according to his own words, took steps to clean them out, in order "to avoid trouble." Now the operators say that they will not consider any further negotiations with the United Mine Workers. July 1st has come and the mines are to resume operations. S. H. Robbins, president of the Ohio Coal Operators Association, holds out the offer of $5 a day, negotiations to be either through or aside from union affiliations. He offers 8 cents per net ton for loading; cutting with breast machine, 11 cents; cutting with short wall machine, 9 cents; cutting with top machine, 5 cents; and maximum eight-hour day $5.

Threaten Scabbing.

"If the union does not officially sanction the new wages and allow the men to return to work, we shall disregard the union and open our mines with non-union labor."

Union officials have looked askance at the idea of a conference for relief of the miners. Workers have had a slack time of it for years—working one, two or three days a week—they have no funds to fall back on. Progressives argue the labor movement must be called upon to help the miners. The open shop operators are determined to go the limit. In Pennsylvania they are even taking away water from the miners' homes. In Ohio, the court does not allow them to picket in masses. They claim the officials should be obliged to go thru the same restrictions as the miners.

Flexible Shaft Co. Cuts Wages on Plea of Poverty; False

CHICAGO, July 4 (FP).—Though placed in the position of refusing to make the wages of its metal polishers and grinders uniform with those of 60 other shops in the city, the Chicago Flexible Shaft Co. is in reality a flourishing concern, the Metal Polishers' Union has discovered. The polishers have been on strike since May 2 for a 10 per cent raise to $1.10 an hour.

Big Profit.

Starting with a capitalization of $6,000 it now has $700,000 capital stock of which $650,000 is 7 per cent preferred. This the union found out by research work in the country recorder's office.

The principal stockholder is Richard A. Cooper, of the Cooper Securities Co. which has world-wide industrial interests. It has probably the principal interest in the Cooper Engineering Co. of Australia and Cooper Ltd. of England. The Australian concern has always placed big orders for the Flexible's sheepherding equipment.

The Chicago Federation of Labor executive board has placed the Chicago Flexible Shaft Co. on the unfair list. This makes the Sunbeam electric irons and toasters unfair and also the Cooper, Stewart and Stewart-Arizona combs, cutters and shears for shearing sheep and horses. Organized labor in America and Australia are urged by the board to bear in mind the unfair nature of these products and to make known to the Chicago Flexible Shaft Co. at 5600 W. Roosevelt Rd., why they do not care to use them.

The firm joined the anti-union National Metal Trades Assn. recently and has discharged all union toolmakers from its employ. Gunmen can be observed around the plant waiting to beat up union pickets.

The application of Harry Bloom, president of local 1011 of the painters' union for an injunction restraining officers of the District Council from interfering with the books of the council while criminal proceedings against several of the officers is in progress was today taken under advisement by Justice Ingraham in supreme court.

Alfred J. Fischer, president of the council, Max Stein and William Hartley are accused of using $50,000 of the union's funds in Wall Street speculation, and are now under charges of grand larceny.

9 Poverty Suicide Suicide Victims Are Buried in Flushing

The bodies of Mrs. Mario Freeman and her five small children who died Monday night from gas poisoning in their home, 43 East Eighteenth Street, Whitestone, Queens, were buried in two graves yesterday in Flushing cemetery, Queens Avenue and 163rd Street, Flushing.

Feared Poverty.

Mrs. Freeman, fearing the poverty which faced the family after the death of her husband several months ago, turned on the gas in a bedroom where the children were sleeping, killing herself and the children.

Brief funeral services were held at the undertaking establishment of Martin A. Glenn, Eighth Avenue and Twenty-first Street, Whitestone. The Rev. Frederick Gorenieck, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, Whitestone officiated. Only about fifteen people, all friends of the family, attended. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Dawson, of Auburndale. The Dawsons had visited Mrs. Freeman but a few hours before the tragedy and Mrs. Freeman wrote Mrs. Dawson a letter explaining that the reason for her act was that she feared the poverty which confronted her.

After the services at the funeral parlors, the six bodies, that of the mother in a grey hearse and those of each of the children in separate white hearses, were taken to the cemetery. After a brief service at the cemetery the six bodies were placed in two graves. Mrs. Freeman and her two youngest children James, two years old, and Nancy, three, were placed in one, and Kathleen, five, Jeanette, seven, and Theodore, eleven in the other.

Despondent, Tubercular Patient Takes His Life

DOBBS FERRY, N. Y., July 3.—Luiz Risbeiro, 40, of Hastings, was in a critical condition at the Dobbs Ferry Hospital today as the result of a suicide attempt, according to police.

Knowing he was afflicted with tuberculosis, Risbeiro applied at the Dobbs Ferry Hospital yesterday for treatment. After a diagnosis, the physician in charge told Risbeiro to go to the Grasslands Hospital, and gave him a note directing his admission to that institution.

Instead of going to Grasslands, he returned to his home, and fired a bullet into his chest. He was rushed to the hospital, where little hope was held out for his recovery.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

FLYING across thousands of miles of ocean will soon be as uneventful as the crossing of an ocean liner. Science and human ingenuity and courage are gradually conquering the forces of nature which have been in combat with man since and before the dawn of history. Unfortunately human inventiveness is not always harnessed to constructive work, but to the work of destruction. Airplane feats in these days are chiefly for the purpose of developing the destructive forces of capitalist powers.

THE first shot that strikes the mind of the militarist, after reading of the achievements of Lindbergh, Chamberlin, Levine and Byrd and his comrades is the possibility of dropping bombs from planes on cities, distant thousands of miles. There is not the slightest doubt that such bombings will be feasible within comparatively few years. Instead of utilizing air transport to bring the peoples of the world closer together our ruling classes will use every new improvement in flying machines to make wars more destructive. This is a good argument to give a worker who is opposed to Communism because he believes that it means war.

WHILE American flying machines are romping in the air over two mighty oceans, American admirals are growling across Geneva tables at British admirals. Japanese admirals watch and listen and get a word in, once in a while. The Japanese have not much love for either the British or the Americans. Both have committed hostile acts against them, the British in dropping the Anglo-Japanese alliance at the behest of the Americans and the Americans in passing the anti-Japanese exclusion act.

THE three powers are jockeying for position and as the United States and England are the chief rivals, the wily Japanese statesmen are availing themselves of the opportunity to get something out of the squabble. Nothing will come out of this conference except more warships. The New York World is very anxious to make it appear that progress is being made. The World wants to see a united front of imperialism, this is a real league of nations attitude, a united imperialism would be better able to wage war on the Soviet Union than a divided imperialism. But there is no indication that the imperialists can reach an accord just now. Still it is not wise to lay down any hard and fast rule in this respect. It would create a feeling of false security which would be very dangerous.

IN an interview with an English correspondent a few days ago, Tchitcherin, foreign minister of the U.S.S.R. expressed his conviction that there was little likelihood of peace between his country and Great Britain in the near future. The Briton questioned him about Communist propaganda alleged to have been sent out thru Soviet embassies. Tchitcherin denied the charge, but turned the tables on his interrogator by citing half a dozen instances of where British consuls, ministers and ambassadors organized and financed armed revolts against the Soviet Union.

POLAND is not sincere in its profession of a desire for peace with the U. S. S. R. Tchitcherin said. As proof of this he cited the case of the murderer of the Soviet Minister Voikoff, whose life sentence was commuted by the Polish authorities to 15 years and who is receiving large sums of money in prison from Polish admirers, who honor him for the murder of the Soviet Minister. The Soviet chief stated that the youthful murderer will be a rich man when he is released and that will be an incentive to others to engage in the profitable business of murdering Soviet ambassadors. Poland is not yet ready for a war with the U.S.S.R. But the preparations are going on with feverish speed.

A VERY important conference is taking place in Wall Street these days. The real rulers of the capitalist world are meeting there. They are the governors of the central banks of Germany, France, England and the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. They are expected to discuss a revision of the Dawes Plan, withdrawal

Refutes Coolidge Boast of "Prosperity" By the 1927 Business Failures

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Citing the business failures during the past six months as evidence, Chairman Oldfield of the democratic congressional committee yesterday denied statements of President Coolidge to newspapermen in Rapid City, S. D., that "business is as good as usual."

Reports of R. G. Dun & Co., declared Oldfield, contain the information that during this period there have been 12,292 failures, with liabilities aggregating $281,527,518 as against 11,476 failures, with liabilities of $209,888,501 during the same months in 1926.

American Seamen Help Chinese in Tie Up of Ship

By S. A.

A remarkable example of working class solidarity was manifested by a group of marine workers in connection with the attempted replacement by white labor of the Chinese crew which had mutineed on the "S. S. Rotterdam" when they found that they were being given a dirty deal by the Holland American Line.

This group of workers, members of the International Seamens Club at 26 South Street, went aboard this scab ship and talked to the men who had been duped into working her under the inducement of far higher rates than the average wage today. This was done while the men of the crew were unaware of the strike situation and in order to break the spirit and militancy of the members of the Dutch Seamens Union who are now on strike in Holland for an increase in wages and the right to stand by the ship and receive wages for working her while in port.

Refused Shore Leave.

One of the reasons for the mutiny of the Chinese crew was that at the time that they were signed up on the vessel in Rotterdam the ship masters and officers had not told them that there was a strike on board the "S. S. Rotterdam." The Chinese crew besides this infamous move on the part of the Holland American Line had been promised shore leave on arrival in the United States.

Instead of giving them the shore leave promised them by the captain of the "S. S. Rotterdam" himself, he called upon the immigration authorities and customs officials to prevent them from entering the country.

The Chinese sailors finding themselves denied the right of coming into the land of promise and being quite tired of the filthy quarters and miserable diet of sou beans and rice during the entire trip, armed themselves after dressing in accordance with the best American style and descended the gang plank. In doing this they displayed far more militancy than has been manifested on the waterfront since the eventful strike of 1923.

A terrific struggle took place during which the company officials and immigration authorities called upon the longshoremen at the docks to assist them in quelling this so called "riot."

Fifty-three of the Chinese workers were arrested and held in Hoboken for three days, despite the fact that no charges were entered against them.

The crew itself had been originally paid a wage scale amounting to $6.00 a week in American money. They worked for 12 hours a day and were not paid for one week out of every five that they worked. The pretext for this action on the part of the company officials was the fact that during this last week the "S. S. Rotterdam" was not making profit for the company. In addition the bedding was rarely if ever changed, the food was atrocious and the company was instigating a drive against the Dutch Seamens Union.

Paid $3 a Week.

The Chinese, in turn, were paid the starvation wages of $3.00 a week and fed upon the diet mentioned. When the company found that they could not break the militancy of the Chinese firemen and coal passers, they

SUPREME COURT HAS APPEAL ON MINE INJUNCTION

Ohio Operators Calling For More Scabs

WASHINGTON, July 3.—(FP)—Yellow dog contracts go before the United States Supreme Court in the appeal of the United Mine Workers from the iron-clad injunctions of 3.6 southern West Virginia coal operators.

Whether the coal bosses can tie their workers up with individual contracts containing anti-union clauses and then get injunctions to enforce them against union organizers is the big issue in petitions for writs of certiorari to the circuit court of appeals. If acted upon favorably by the Supreme Court, these writs would oblige the circuit court to review errors in its ruling upholding the yellow dog contracts.

Circuit Court Adverse.

Nearly every operator in southern West Virginia joined in the 12 suits instituted to end forever the possibility of organizers legally approaching non-union miners and asking them to join the union or go on strike. The circuit court backed the mine owners against the union by upholding claims that the union is engaged in "restraint of trade" through its wage prices. Using the Sherman anti-trust law to hit at labor, the lower court issued general restraining orders prohibiting any official or member of the United Mine Workers from persuading non-union men to "become members of the union or cease their labor in the production of coal."

Local Postmasters Permitted Sweeping Censorship Powers

That local postmasters may exercise dictatorial censorship powers as they see fit it became known Saturday when Washington upheld the action of the New York post office officials when they denied the use of the mails to Harcourt Brace, publishers, to send their summer book catalog to their subscribers.

Although a veil of secrecy surrounds the post office department's action, information elicited from Horace J. Donnelly, solicitor of the post office department at Washington, is as follows:

"All postmasters have the right to bar matter they regard as unmailable. The postmaster has very wide latitude, and there is nothing to prevent his banning books or advertisements of books which have never been shut out by the department."

Donnelly admitted that in spite of the fact that the local postmaster may use his authority "within his discretion" no official would take advantage of his power to bar any advertisements of books unless the department had previously closed the mails to the books.

The catalog in question had come under the scrutiny of the postal czars because it contained announcements of Sinclair Lewis's "Elmer Gantry," "The Red Pavilion," by John Gunther and other "modern" fiction.

Under this ruling it is possible for postmasters in small towns and in rural communities to ban any paper, magazine or book that fails to meet with his approval.

It is obvious that this ruling will be evoked to bar minority political newspapers and magazines from the mails.

SEE STRIKES IN BALKANS AS BLOW TO WHITE TERROR

Celebrate Co-operation Day in Moscow

(Special Cable to Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, July 3.—The recent strikes of Bulgarian and Greek workers, which took place recently, in spite of the Balkan white terror has moved the Executive Bureau of the Red International of Labor Unions to issue an appeal to the workers of all countries in which it expresses its deepfelt sympathy for the struggles of the Bulgarian and the Greek proletariat.

"The strike of the ten thousand Greek and Bulgarian workers showed the world workers that even in the countries where there exists the most brutal terrorism the revolutionary trade unions continue to move forward. The experience of the strike will give the workers of Greece, Bulgaria and the other Balkan countries new strength for a struggle against the bourgeoisie.

"The heroic actions of the workers will instil new vigor in the ranks of the struggling workers. The Executive Bureau of the Red International of Labor Unions calls upon all affiliated organizations to explain to the workers the significance of the valiant struggle of the Greek and Bulgarian comrades on their difficult path of class emancipation."

Celebrate Co-operation Day.

International Co-operation Day was celebrated in the Soviet Union with official meetings of co-operative organizations, the inauguration of children's grounds and communal dining halls and the graduation ceremonies of various co-operative courses.

The Daily Worker Needs Your Support NOW! Will YOU Do Your Share?

The DAILY WORKER, four members of its staff, Bittelman, Dunne, Engdahl and Miller, and two contributors, Gordan and Kalar, have been indicted by a federal grand jury.

The DAILY WORKER is threatened with the loss of its mailing privileges and the indicted members of the staff, and the contributors can be given a maximum penalty of 12 years in prison or a fine of $20,000, or both.

Back of the attack on The DAILY WORKER are various professional "patriotic" societies, open shop capitalist organizations like the National Civic Federation and reactionary union officials who belong to such organizations and hate the Worker because of its uncompromising advocacy of honest and militant trade unionism.

The attack on The DAILY WORKER is not something separate and apart from the drive to crush the United Mine Workers of America, the announcement that the 10-hour day must become the regular working period, made by Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio, the refusal to grant a wage increase to the trainmen and conductors on 55 western railroads, of conquest of Nicaragua, the continual threats against the Mexican people, the bombardment of Nanking by American and British warships and the propaganda for a huge navy and outright militarism which is sweeping over the country like a poisonous tidal wave.

The only daily paper in the United States which fights the battles of the working class on all fronts without asking quarter from any section of the capitalist class or its hangers-on, The DAILY WORKER naturally becomes the target of attack.

The DAILY WORKER gets its support only from the militant section of the American workers. Since January 13, 1924, this support has enabled it to carry on the struggle for organization of the unorganized, a labor party, honest and effective trade unionism—basic needs of the American labor movement.

Only a continuation of this support, and its increase in volume to meet this new emergency, can keep The DAILY WORKER on the firing line.

Money is needed, new readers are needed. This is the only effective way to answer the challenge of reaction and to keep the voice of the only national labor daily from being silenced.

ANTI-IMPERIALIST STRIKES AND BOYCOTTS SWEEP SOUTHERN CHINA; RIGHT WING TERRORISM IN CANTON

2,000 Workers, Students Jailed by Chiang Henchmen in Canton as Revolt Looms

SHANGHAI, July 3.—Anti-British and anti-Japanese strikes and boycotts are sweeping southern China. Steps are being taken in Shanghai for the organization of an anti-British strike to protest against the tax boost authorized by the Shanghai Municipal Council, which is controlled by Englishmen.

Removal Protested

THE ACTION of Massachusetts authorities in removing Sacco (above) and Vanzetti from Dedham jail to the Charlestown state prison has been condemned in a statement issued by the committee working in the prisoners' behalf.

Despite the efforts of the right wing administration, an effective boycott against British goods is taking place in Canton, according to reports received here. Japanese trade also has been hit hard in Fukien and Kwantung provinces as a result of a boycott to protest against the dispatch of Japanese troops to Shantung.

SHANGHAI, July 3. — The campaign against the imposition of additional taxes by the Shanghai Municipal Council without the consent of the Chinese taxpayers is acquiring political significance. The former fundamental demands of the Nationalist movement are being put forward by the native population.

Agitation placards are posted throughout the city. Protest meeting are being held by various organizations. In view of the unsatisfactory negotiations with the municipal authorities the Committee of Chinese Taxpayers has decided to call a general strike in the native settlement.

Chiang Executes Workers.

General Yang-hu who was recently sent by Chiang Kai-shek for the "pacification" of Chekiang has vainly attempted to crush the labor anti peasant movements. Yang-hu has been commissioned by Chiang Kai-shek to execute some "reds" at Ningpo without trial.

Yang-hu is accompanied by 200 henchmen, armed with special swords for wholesale execution.

SACCO-VANZETTI REMOVAL ADDS TO LABOR'S PROTEST

Unions Behind Strike On Thursday, July 7

Reports from the various Sacco-Vanzetti committees thruout the country confirm the fear that the removal of the two Italian workers from Dedham jail to the penitentiary in the close proximity of the death-house is a move that should be met with spirited and forceful demands on the part of organized labor for the immediate release of the railroaded radicals.

The Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee of New York asserts that the condemned men were allowed certain simple comforts in Dedham due to the affection for themselves which they created during their long stay in prison. In the penitentiary, however, they will be subjected to the usual rigorous treatment accorded habitual and hardened criminals. This latest act of cruelty on the part of the Massachusetts legal czars is one that will be answered in sharp and vital tones during the general strike and mass demonstration which New York is staging on July 7th.

Labor Backs Strike.

According to Rose Baron, acting secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee, trade union heads are calling at the committee offices daily, pledging support to the strike move on July 7th. So far more than twenty-five unions and internationals and brotherhoods have endorsed the mass strike and demonstration plan. Notable in this respect are, the Joint Board Furriers Union, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, United Textile Workers of America, and others with total membership of over three hundred thousand. Political and fraternal organizations will swell the number to over the half million mark.

U. S. Navy Contracting For 100 Bombing Planes Put Out by Detroit Firm

CLEVELAND, July 3.—Fifty-four bombing planes have been ordered by the United States government of the Glenn L. Martin Co., whose plant is situated in this city. These planes are for the navy, which has taken an option to buy ninety-six more of the same type within five weeks.

Production of airplanes for the navy has been going on in this city since January, 1926, five planes being delivered each week on an order for 100 bombing and torpedo planes.

Deliveries will go on for another fifteen weeks. Twenty planes on this order are being made for "overseas

Rabbi Charges Race Discrimination at Kings County Quiz

Mayor Walker continued his "investigation" yesterday into the charges of religious and racial discrimination which exist in the King's County Hospital and which resulted in a lynching party, being staged at the hospital here a few days ago last Monday. The hearing failed to produce any evidence other than that which has been in circulation since the six gentile internes who took part in the "charivari," were expelled from the Brooklyn institution.

Cruelty, Anti-Semitism

Rabbi Louis Gross, of Union Temple, Brooklyn, chairman of the committee of 100 rabbis who have conducted as sectarian investigation into the conditions at the hospital as they affect their co-religionists, took the stand and adduced evidence to show that cruelty, marked anti-Semitism and contempt for Jewish patients were practiced at the King's County Hospital. The rabbi offered affidavits to substantiate his testimony.

A Political Stunt.

Everything is being done by the mayor to turn his investigation into a political weapon for the ousting of Commissioner Coler from his post as head of the department of Public Welfare. He has taken sides with Dr. Mortimer D. Jones, superintendent of the hospital, who admitted on the stand Wednesday that he voted in favor of ruling that kept Jewish applicants for internships out of the

Alteration Workers Organize Committee

A committee to organize the alteration plumbers was formed at a meeting held Thursday evening at the Labor Temple, 14th St. and Second Ave. Seventy-five workers joined at this meeting.

Plans were laid for an organization drive, including the issuing of leaflets to the trade. It was pointed out at the meeting that the United Association of Plumbers and Helpers has jurisdiction over the plumbing industry and an attempt will be made to become connected with that organization.

It was said that of the 15,000 plumber workers in the city, only 5,000 are organized in the union. The 5,000 helpers and 5,000 alteration workers not being connected.

The next meeting of the alteration organization committee will take place next Thursday evening at the Labor Temple.

Government Bureaus To Demand 44-Hour Week at Convention

By HARVEY O'CONNOR

WASHINGTON, (FP) July 2.—Government workers will show the trend of the labor movement a new goal in the shorter work week when they meet in convention at San Antonio, Texas in September. That goal will be the 35-hour week, according to Luther Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes.

The San Antonio convention is expected to put the formal seal of approval on the union's campaign to establish the Saturday half-holiday in all federal departments except the post office, which is under the jurisdiction of other unions. The proposal will be whipped into legal form and presented to congress when it convenes in regular session in December.

Strong Union.

"We are working toward the goal of the American labor movement in seeking the shorter work week," Steward explained. "That has been the main struggle of the Federal Employes ever since their organization.

"This year for the first time, government workers in Washington have obtained the Saturday half-holiday for four months, instead of three. With the seven-hour day, that means we have the 35-hour week in the summer months from June 1 to September 30. The next step for the union is to win the Saturday half holiday the year round.

"When we attain that, it will be a beacon to all clerical workers in the country, showing them the value of union organization."

In the meantime the union has a stiff fight on its hands in enforcing the equal work-equal pay clause of the Sterling-Lehlbach Act reclassifying federal employes. This act, passed in 1923, was hailed as a great victory for the principle that women should receive the same pay as men for the same sort of work.

Equal Pay For Equal Work.

But Coolidge, unwilling to admit the force of the equal rights victory when it came to giving the government's woman workers hard-earned wage increases, ignored the Sterling-Lehlbach Act by packing the personnel classification board, in charge of its administration, with enemies of the law. Now the Federal Employes Union, tired of appealing to the board for justice for 200 woman in the Bureau of Printing and Engraving who have been consistently denied men's wages for the same sort of work, will appeal to congress this winter to set up new administrative machinery out of reach of the Coolidge appointive powar.

"Not only the undisputed rights of 200 women in a Washington bureau, but the struggle of America's millions of working women, exploited through the double standard of pay, are involved in this fight," Gertrude McNally, vice-president of the Federal Employes Union, told members of the Women's Union of the Bureau, organized as Local 105. "Threats of demotion and discharge because we insist on observance of the law will not swerve us from our appeal to congress to put teeth into the equal work-equal pay law."

Secretary Frank Coleman of the Maryland-District of Columbia Federation of Labor, promised the full support of the Washington and Baltimore labor movements to the federal workers.

Negro Labor Speaker In Cleveland Arrested At Open Air Meeting

CLEVELAND, O., July 3.—The heights to which police stupidity may rise was revealed when a speaker for the American Negro Labor Congress was arrested here last night at a street meeting, on the charge that he was "stirring up race hatred."

Later Freed.

The speaker was later released and returned to the meeting where he received an enthusiastic reception from the large crowd of 200 white and colored workers. The attempt of the police to break up the meeting was denounced and the crowd signified their whole-hearted support of the program and tactics of the Negro Labor Congress for drawing the white and colored workers closer together for a struggle against their common enemy—the bosses. Several workers signed applications for membership in the organization.

Meetings of the Cleveland local of the Congress will be held every Monday night at the same corner—Woodlaws and 40th Sts.

Lorenza De Maria, head of the ice trust which carries on its operations in New York city, was indicted by the Queens County Grand Jury Friday on a charge of perjury.

De Maria, who is general manager for the Metropolitan Coal and Ice Dealers Union, Inc., is charged with falsely telling Referee Hamilton that he had not discussed price-fixing in a conference held July 11th with John Murray, owner of an ice plant at Rockaway Beach.

In the course of his statement Hazelton pointed out "the iceman sells his ice for three times as much as he pays for it or even more; he does not weigh his ice, and if a customer complains, the customer is punished by the iceman "forgetting to deliver it for a few days."

a scandal, and a misfit that must go," and accusing the Chinese Judge with interposing himself between criminals and the law.

Judge Ziar pointed out that such statement as court contempt under both British and Chinese laws, and that the North China Daily News was fined for contempt by a British court a few years ago because it attacked a British judge for sentencing Morriss, the paper's proprietor.

The Chinese court might be unable to get at the North China Daily News directly, said Judge Ziar, because foreign newspapers hide themselves under the shelter of extraterritoriality, but its Chinese printers are technical accomplices to the contempt and they are under the jurisdiction of the Chinese court.

The present incident developed when agents of the newspaper brought suit in the Chinese court against a Russian for rent. The case was thrown out, Judge Ziar declaring that the court "cannot give relief to the North China Daily News when coming here reeking with the blood of its own offenses against the court." The paper had previously attacked the court because of the court's refusal to enforce the foreign municipal anti-Chinese laws which are contrary to the Chinese code.

The entire program of the New Symphony Orchestra conducted by Erno Rapee, and Borodine's "Prince Igor" with Alexis Kosloff and his famous ballet will be broadcast over the radio by Station WCGU, Saturday night, July 16, from the open air arena of the Coney Island Stadium. This dual concert and operatic event is being presented by the Joint Defense & Relief Committee, 41 Union Square, for the purpose of raising funds for the wives and children of the imprisoned cloakmakers and furriers.

Mr. Rapee, who needs no introduction to the vast radio audience, has prepared a special musical program for this occasion. Some of the composers whose work will be featured are: Tschaikowsky, Wagner, Johann and Richard Strauss, Rimsky-Korsakoff, Berlioz and Borodine. Rapee will also conduct the musical program of the well known Russian opera, as well as the divertissements, which are being arranged by Kosloff. Rita de Laporte of the Metropolitan Opera House, Katya Minasian, Emma D. Miller and Valentia Kaschouba, recently arrived here from Russia and who danced in the company of Anna Pavlowa, will render solo selections in addition to their respective parts in "Prince Igor."

In case of rain on Saturday, July 16, the concert will be postponed to the next night, Sunday.

Back Concert.

The example set by the Food Workers shows that workers outside the Needle Trades are commencing to realize the importance of defeating the attempt to destroy the healthy trade union movement. All class conscious workers must now throw their energies into the struggle to arouse the workers. A moral as well as a financial success at the Coney Island Stadium will be a big step in this direction. See to it that your organization takes tickets. Urge every member of your local union, fraternal society, Workmen's Circle, or other organization, to attend this Concert. Tickets are only $1.00 for general admission and $2.00 for reserved seats. A magnificent program has been arranged. Borodine's world famous "Prince Igor" presented by Alexis Kosloff of the Metropolitan Opera House, in person, assisted by his famous ballet corps and the New York Symphony Orchestra, of 100 musicians, conducted by Erno Rapee, internationally-acclaimed musical virtuoso, will be the principal attractions. Rita de Laporte, solo dancer of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will be presented in the principal female role.

Application to dismiss a charge of conspiring to violate the prohibition law and to vacate the bail of five defendents, which has been filed with the clerk of the federal court, disclosed a case which involves a well-know New York business man and four others.

The New Yorker is George Leary who keeps offices at 15 Moore Street, and whose town residences is at 1053 Fifth Avenue. Mrs. Leary, his wife, was decorated by the pope in 1919. Leary was arrested April 11th.

Thriving Business.

On that date, according to P. Tubbs, a prohibition agent, a still was discovered on the plant of the Red Hook Electric Light and Power Company of which Leary is president. The agent states that several lines of pipes were laid from the stills and reservoirs into the general offices of the company.

Supreme Court Receives West Virginia Injunction Case

writs of error and review cannot be heard by the Supreme Court until next October, this fall, in the meantime the operators of West Virginia have obtained only an injunction against organizers from entering the mine fields, but are visiting wages cuts. The last cut resulted from the Interstate Commerce Commission's order reducing rates on coal from the Pittsburgh field to the lakes by 20 cents a ton. The southern West Virginia operators have responded by offsetting the 20 cent differential through another slice off the wages.

The West Virginia Southern Coal Co., newly organized syndicate, is floating an additional $150,000 bond issue after a $1,500,000 issue on the boast that their properties "are and always have been operated by non-union labor." Resting at ease behind the shield set up by the circuit court ruling, the new company cocksurely predicts that its earnings from non-union labor in the future will be adequate to meet interest claims.

Ohio Operators Try to Break

CLEVELAND, July 3.—The Ohio coal operators have determined to open the mines in the state with scab labor. They held a meeting at Columbus recently and decided to appeal to the men over the heads of the union officials. The officials challenged them to find sufficient men to obey their call. A small group at Nelsonville, following the lead of a traitorous president of the local by the name of Emmet Searles, decided to accept the offar of $5 a day and return to work.

The rest of the man left the meeting and it was soon apparent that Searles, the Judas of the section, had little following.

Scabs Appear.

The situation however is becoming more complicated. At Adena the operators brought in scabs, who were hooted and stoned by miners and their wives. The Sharriff wired to Governor Doheney, who promised aid if needed. The miners began to picket the mine, but the operators got a restraining order, which prohibits them from having more than 20 men on the line and from holding meetings within a certain area.

Company spies also are on the job. Recently one was at Adena, who declared he was for Brophy, as the proper man to lead the organization, the next night he attacked Brophy, stating that he wanted to build a new union. The union must be saved —and any man who states that Brophy or any other sane man wants to form another union now is helping the operators.

Thousands of miners were reported to be in Steubenville, but the sheriff, according to his own words, took steps to clean them out, in order "to avoid trouble." Now the operators say that they will not consider any further negotiations with the United Mine Workers. July 1st has come and the mines are to resume operations. S. H. Robbins, president of the Ohio Coal Operators Association, holds out the offer of $5 a day, negotiations to be either through or aside from union affiliations. He offers 8 cents per net ton for loading; cutting with breast machine, 11 cents; cutting with short wall machine, 9 cents; cutting with top machine 5 cents; and maximum eight-hour day $5.

Threaten Scabbing.

"If the union does not officially sanction the new wages and allow the men to return to work, we shall disregard the union and open our mines with non-union labor."

Union officials have looked askance at the idea of a conference for relief of the miners. Workers have had a slack time of it for years—working one, two or three days a week—they have no funds to fall back on. Progressives argue the last movement must be called upon to help the miners. The open shop operators are determined to go the limit. In Pennsylvania they are even taking away water from the miners' homes. In Ohio, the court does not allow them to picket in masses. They claim the officials should be obliged to go thru the same restrictions as the miners.

Flexible Shaft Co. Cuts Wages on Plea of Poverty; False

CHICAGO, July 3 (FP).—Though pleading poverty in its refusal to make the wages of its metal polishers and grinders uniform with those of 60 other shops in the city, the Chicago Flexible Shaft Co. is in reality a flourishing concern, the Metal Polishers' Union has discovered. The polishers have been on strike since May 2 for a 10-per cent raise to $1.10 an hour.

Big Profit.

Starting with a capitalisation of $6,000 it now has $700,000 capital stock of which $450,000 is 7 per cent preferred. This the union found out by research work in the country recorder's office.

The principal stockholder is Richard A. Cooper of the Cooper Securities Co. which has world-wide industrial interests. It has probably the principal interest in the Cooper Engineering Co. of Australia and Cooper Ltd. of England. The Australian concern has always placed big orders for the Flexible's sheepherding equipment.

The Chicago Federation of Labor executive board has placed the Chicago Flexible Shaft Co. on the unfair list. This makes the Sunbeam electric irons and toasters unfair and also the Cooper, Stewart and Stewart-Arisons combs, cutters and shears for shearing sheep and horses. Organized labor in America and Australia are urged by the board to bear in mind the unfair nature of these products and to make known to the Chicago Flexible Shaft Co. at 5600 W. Roosevelt Rd., why they do not care to use them.

The firm joined the anti-union National Metal Trades Assn. recently and has discharged all union toolmakers from its employ. Gunmen can be observed around the plant waiting to beat up union pickets.

Hear Injunction Plea Of Painters Against 3 Crooked Officials

The application of Harry Bloom, president of local 1011 of the painters' union for an injunction restraining officers of the District Council from interfering with the books of the council while criminal proceedings against several of the officers is in progress was yesterday taken under advisement by Justice Ingraham in supreme court.

Alfred J. Fischer, president of the council; Alex Stein and William Hartley are accused of using $50,000 of the union's funds in Wall Street speculation, and are now under charges of grand larceny.

6 Poverty Stricken Suicide Victims Are Buried in Flushing

The bodies of Mrs. Marie Freeman and her five small children who died Monday night from gas poisoning in their home, 48 East Eighteenth Street, Whitestone, Queens, were buried in two graves yesterday in Flushing cemetery, Queens Avenue and 169rd Street, Flushing.

Feared Poverty.

Mrs. Freeman, fearing the poverty which faced the family after the death of her husband several months ago, turned on the gas in a bedroom where the children were sleeping, killing herself and the children.

Brief funeral services were held at the undertaking establishment of Martin A. Gleason, Eighth Avenue and Twenty-first Street, Whitestone. The Rev. Frederick Cervonlock, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, Whitestone officiated. Only about fifteen people, all friends of the family, attended. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Dawson, of Auburndale. The Dawsons had visited Mrs. Freeman but a few hours before the tragedy and Mrs. Freeman wrote Mrs. Dawson a letter explaining that the reason for her act was that she feared the poverty which confronted her.

After the services at the funeral parlors, the six bodies, that of the mother in a grey hearse and those of each of the children in separate white hearses, were taken to the cemetery. After a brief service at the cemetery the six bodies were placed in two graves. Mrs. Freeman and her two youngest children James, two years old, and Nancy, three, were placed in one, and Kathleen, five, Jeanette, seven, and Theodore, eleven in the other.

Despondent, Tubercular Patient Takes His Life

DOBBS FERRY, N. Y., July 3. Luis Ribeiro, 40, of Hastings, was in a critical condition at the Dobbs Ferry Hospital today as the result of a suicide attempt, according to police.

Knowing he was afflicted with tuberculosis, Ribeiro applied at the Dobbs Ferry Hospital yesterday for treatment. After a diagnosis, the physician in charge told Ribeiro to go to the Grasslands Hospital, and gave him a note directing his admission to that institution.

Instead of going to Grasslands, he returned to his home, and fired a bullet into his chest. He was rushed to the hospital, where little hope was held out for his recovery.

WORKERS HERE END OF GOVERNMENT THAT THIRSTS FOR NEW WORLD WAR

NOTE—The article by Comrade Englund was written and mailed from Vladivostok before Englund started on his return to their country. Comrade Englund arrived in New York last Friday. Englund will write additional articles for the DAILY WORKER on recent developments within the Soviet Union. Watch for these articles.

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R. (By Mail).—"Down with the government that thirsts for world war!"

This was the slogan that blazed from the breastplate of the huge locomotive that brought the funeral train of Comrade P. L. Voikoff, Soviet Ambassador slain at Warsaw, Poland, to its journey's end in the White Russian-Baltic railroad station here.

Beneath the slogan was the picture of Comrade Voikoff clipped from the Pravda, the central organ of the All-Union Communist Party.

The workers and peasants of the Soviet Union look upon Voikoff as the first victim in the new war launched against the Soviet Union, and they are not slow to place the entire blame at the door of the British reaction. Today (Saturday, June 11) the Moscow proletariat did honor to its dead.

We have come to the station as a delegation representing the Communist International. Spokesmen of the workers of many lands are in our group. All the way from the Comintern building we have seen that the Red Army has already closed the streets to traffic. Great throngs were already assembled about the station, workers' delegations from many shops and factories, under their own banners. Thousands of Red Army infantry and cavalry were in their places.

Strange Coincidence This.

The great station is hung with evergreens and with black and red bunting. Evergreens also carpet the approach to the station, the passage thru the station, as well as the entire train platform.

Strange coincidence, we, the representatives of the Communist International, should be standing here in the Belorussian station, the same station where the body of Comrade Voikoff, Soviet ambassador to Poland, was received by the Polish government, Mr. Patek, brings a wreath of living flowers for the Polish legation. But such sentiments are frozen in the ice of capitalist diplomatic formality.

But on the far side of the platform there gathers an increasing host of representatives of the Soviet government, the All-Union Communist Party, the Soviet Trade Unions, the Narkomindel (the Soviet foreign office of People's Commissariat of Foreign Affairs) with which Voikoff was directly connected, and which has also suffered the loss of Vaorvsky, slain by an assassin in Switzerland. There are also members of the bereaved family. Soldiers of the Red Army stand in long straight lines. No trains come or enter the station. All traffic is at a standstill. Today the pillars of the covered platform are draped with red and black flags. Streamers of mourning everywhere.

Police Attack and Jail Palestinian Workers in May Day Demonstration

LONDON, June 17 (By Mail)—Sakiatvala, Communist M. P., inquired in the House as to the reason for the police attack on Palestinian workers during May Day demonstrations in Tel Aviv, Jerusalem and Haifa, held in common with May Day celebrations and demonstrations of workers all over the world. The Palestinian demonstrators were viciously attacked, and a large number wounded. Many were arrested and imprisoned, and bail refused.

Minister Amery replied that the reason of the attack was that the Communist Party organized illegal demonstrations in order to embarrass the Government. He admitted that 12 persons had been injured at one of the demonstrations, but disclaimed knowledge as to the others, or as to the number of arrests and convictions.

On Sakiatvala's inquiry as to whether demonstrations which were legal and permissible in Great Britain were illegal in Palestine, Mr. Amery replied: "The conditions are somewhat different. In these matters we trust the discretion of our representatives on the spot." Mr. Amery was also questioned as to the reason for a sentence of 50 days' imprisonment and deportation passed on Arie Karp, editor of the "Red Ald Bulletin." He replied that he knew nothing.

Economic Theory of the Leisure Class

by Nikolai Bukharin

Nikolai Bukharin, besides being the president of the Communist International, is the leading Marxian theoretician in the world today. He has done a great deal of scientific work in the field of sociology and economics, and has published a number of outstanding contributions in these fields.

The "Economic Theory of the Leisure Class" is one of his most important theoretical writings to be translated for the first time into English. Just as Marx has studied the theoretical systems of the classical economists (Smith, Ricardo, Mill, etc.) Bukharin tackles the dominant bourgeois politico-economic views as the Austrian School, (Boehm-Bawerk, Visser, Wieser, Clark, etc.) in a brilliant style and with lucid Marxian reasoning he overthrows the theories of Marginal Utility, Value and Profit of the leading bourgeois economists, showing that the Austrian School is governed by the vulgar psychology of the rentier, the coupon-clipper.

Another Important Book by Bukharin

While "Economic Theory of the Leisure Class" is a study in the field of political economy, "Historical Materialism" by the same author is an application of Marxism to the field of sociology. This book has already become the standard text book and is considered one of the outstanding Marxian classics. In fact, it is the only book available where the materialist method has been applied to an analysis of the various social phenomena.

VOIKOFF'S FUNERAL AT MOSCOW

American Seamen Help Chinese Strike Ship

appealed to the United States shipping board. The results were that the shipping board, looking after the interests of the Holland American Line, provided the "S. S. Rotterdam" with six-masters-at-arms. This number was later increased to eight.

The company in conjunction with the shipping board, was willing to pay these men $6.00 a day, their board and first class passage to and fro. These men they provided with special badges and guns and the instructions to use these guns upon any sign of open discontent on the part of the crew. They were pretty careful to pick husky, healthy gunmen for this job.

Join Strike.

The remainder of the ships black gang (firemen and coal passers) however, were already greatly discontented, by this time and were ready to join in sympathy with their striking brothers. It was just about this time that the before mentioned group of sailors came aboard ship, entered the focsles and spoke to their fellow workers. They asked them to show their solidarity, refusing to man a scab ship. The greater part of the men left thereupon, marching down the gang plank past customs officials, immigration officers and watchmen who were unable to stop their victorious progress.

The next morning word went up and down South Street and all along New York's waterfront as the effect that the "S. S. Rotterdam" was a condemned ship; was hiring scab labor and that if the crew were filled, it would be a scab crew. Soon enough the enraged ship's officials found themselves faced with sailing time and eighty men short. Their need was so desperate that they moved the ship to Quarastine. This was done with a greatly undermanned force, endangering the lives of the passengers aboard. All other attempts were made to fill the ranks of the missing coal passers and firemen, but the work of this small group of class conscious sailors had been so effective that the ship was tied up for eight hours.

Tied Up For 8 Hours.

The "S. S. Rotterdam" was kept outside of Quarantine without a crew for eight solid hours. This cost the Holland American Line quite a neat sum of money, because she is a mail-carrying vessel.

Another interesting phase lies in the fact thnt whereas the "Rotterdam" was listed as paying $62.50 for the run the evening before the Holland American raised the wage scale first to $100 and then to $150 the next morning. They also promised all sorts of fantastic favors, bonuses and trips to the men, which of course, never will be kept.

Hold Meeting.

An open air meeting was held under the auspices of the International Seamens Club at Coentis Slip. A united front was effected with the Marine-Transport Workers' Union, 510 and other water front organizations. The subject of the meeting was the strike situation facing the Dutch Seamen and the creation of picketing committees for the boycotting of the "S. S. Rotterdam. The meeting turned out a success. After the meeting the men all came up to the headquarters of the International Seamens Club at 26 South Street where ways and means of boycotting the Rotterdam and other Dutch ships was discussed.

Plan to Unite Seamen.

In an interview with Harry Kwelt, Secretary of the International Seamens Club, he pointed out that this was probably the most glaring case of the exploitation of seamen and their replacement by American sailors through the strike-breaking tactics of the shipping interests which has occurred on the New York waterfront for quite some time. Kwelt says that the International Seamens Club will do all in its power to cooperate with other waterfront organizations to help the striking Holland seamen in their struggle for higher wages and organization.

It was also the opinion of Frantsen, acting organizer of the Marine-Transport Workers Union, 510, that the present will lead to the uniting of all seamen's organizations.

Indian Workers in Solid Labor Front Win Madras Strike

MADRAS, June 1. (By Mail)—The strike of Indian workers employed by the Burma Oil Company in Madras has came to an end on May 16 on terms which mean a practical victory for the strikers.

A weak previously, unarmed strikers had been shot down by the company's officials. Lorries with petrol tried to pass through a strikers' meeting, and the way being barred, the company officials opened fire and some belonging to the "Volunteer Guard" charged the crowd. Eighteen workers were wounded.

General Strike Threat.

This only strengthened the spirit of the men. The next day the strike extended to the Standard Oil Company and to the Asiatic Petroleum Company. The press reported that practically all labor in oil companies in Madras had been withdrawn. The price of petrol nearly doubled owing to the shortage.

On May 15th representatives of all Labor unions in Madras met and decided to support the strike in every way, and considered the question of calling a general strike in Madras.

Under this threat the company gave way. The terms agreed on include: (1) the reinstatement of the 114 men whose summary dismissal caused the strike; (2) the restoration of benches in the workshops; (3) restoration of a two anna wage cut of a group of twenty men. Only the demand for an all-round one anna wage increase was held over.

The Burma Oil Company is a British company, of which the Annual General Meeting was held in Glasgow last week. The chairman, Sir John T. Cargill, reported that during the past year the profits had increased to £2,479,000. He regretted that "in view of the uncertain petroleum market the board does not feel justified in recommending a larger final dividend than 20 per cent."

With the interim dividend of 10 per cent this makes 30 per cent for the year; or, since there was also a distribution of bonus shares, the equivalent of 40 per cent on the old capital.

British India Is Made Safe for Imperialism; All Propaganda Barred

German Press Scoffs At Chamberlain Pose Of "Angel of Peace"

BERLIN, June 15. (By Mail)—The capitalist press in London has been very positive in its descriptions of the "swing away from Russia" of the Germon press. Yet here is what "Vorwaerts" says the Socialist organ which has been consistently and venomously anti-Soviet in its policy:

"The British Tory Government assures the world that it does not want war, or even an interruption of Anglo-Russian trade. It reminds one of the wartime cartoon of Wilhelm II. on his knees before a soldier's grave saying, 'I did not want this.'"

The "Vassische Zeitung," again (Liberal and strongly anti-Bolshevik), writes: "The British Government must realize that the Russian note to Poland has found a wide echo in world public opinion. It touches certain chords in the European soul which vibrate easily when England is accused.

"The Treaty of Tirana would never have been concluded without British connection, and what good does it do now that it has led to grave trouble, for Britain to pose as an angel of peace? If the weak and timid in Europe dared to utter their complaints, the present British rulers would not hear anything very pleasant."

Voikov's Murder.

The Social-Democratic (anti-Bolshevik) organ in Vienna, "Arbeiter Zeitung," writes: "The responsibility for the murder of Voikov by a monarchist falls on Chamberlain. . . . If a Conservative Minister breaks open safes and steals other people's documents, why should not a Russian counter-revolutionary resort to his revolver? A diplomatic act in London becomes a murderer's shot in Warsaw."

Muscle Shoals Power Holds Up Its Patrons

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Revelation by residents of Muscle Shoals City that they will have to pay 10 cents a kilowatt hour to the Alabama Power Co. unless the war department allows them to buy directly from the government at production costs—two mills—has stirred congressmen into renewed promises. Chairman James of the house military affairs committee, in charge of the disposition of Muscle Shoals, declares he will favor public operation if private companies do not offer satisfactory bids by the time congress meets. Congressman Willis L. Davey of Ohio maintains that farmers of his state are being robbed of $1,000,000 a year in excessive fertilizer prices because the government is not operating Muscle Shoals.

COOPS OF SOVIET UNION REPORT 20 MILLION MEMBERS

Pravda Raps Reformist Leaders Abroad

MOSCOW, July 3.—In connection with International Cooperation Day centers of the cooperative system summarized the results of their work in the ten years of the existence of the Soviet Union.

Since the seizure of power by the workers and peasants of the U.S.S.R. the turnover of consumers' cooperation has grown from 500 million to seven billion roubles yearly; the number of mambers of cooperative societies has increased five times and has increased to twelve and a half millions; agricultural cooperation counts 60,000 cooperative societies, uniting seven million peasant homes; namely, one third of the whole peasant population of the whole Soviet Union.

Producers' Cooperatives.

The yearly production of handicraft and industrial cooperation amounts to two and a half million roubles. Twenty per cent of all handicraft and artisan workers throuut the U.S.S.R., namely 600,000, are united in handicraft and industrial cooperatives.

The balance sheet of the All-Russian Cooperative Bank shows an approved total of 176,200,000 roubles and profits of 1,900,000. H. Hintchuk has been elected chairman of the board of directors of this bank.

An editorial in the Pravda points out that cooperation in the Soviet Union during the last few years of its development has grown into a great economic force and has created apparatus operating thruout the whole country. Thru peaceful economic organization there have gradually been built up 100,000 cooperative societies, including twenty million shareholders (the total is much greater if the families of the co-opernators are included) with a general turnover of 10 hillion roubles.

War Threat.

If the Soviet Union is threatened with war, the cooperatives will ensure a regular circulation of goods within the country and help the Red Army on the front. In event of war, it will be necessary to revert to primitive methods of distribution which prevailed during the period of war communism.

While fighting the enemy, and if necessary curtailing superfluous ontlay, we shall carry on thru modern methods the development of socialistic forms of economy.

Abroad cooperation forms part of the whole opparatus of imperialist oppression. The reformist lenders of cooperation servilely lick the feet of their capitalist rulers and carry thru projects which tend to rob cooperation of any independence from the capitalist system.

Struggle Against Reformism.

However, the rank and file of cooperatives in the capitalist countries are beginning to see the truth. Step by step revolutionary ideas are penetrating the mass of members, and stirring them to activity. The struggle against war is actually the most favorable field of revolutionary work among the masses of cooperators.

The slogan of cooperatives should be the defance of the Russian and Chinese revolutions. These slogans can rally all of the honest elements of international cooperation.

The Bombardment Begins

News has just reached the headquarters of the General Staff of the DAILY WORKER Army that the heavy shell fire has been opened on several important fronts against the enemy. The reports indicate that the results of these heavy bombardments have been devastating. Chicago has opened up her Big Berthas swamping the city with Six Thousand DAILY WORKERS distributed in working class districts. The Chicago battalions are now engaged in mopping up the enemy and gathering up the subscriptions which have been wrested from the retreating enemy. From the heights of Bunker Hill in Boston five thousand telling shots have been fired in the big DAILY WORKER distribution campaign conducted over the week-end. The power of the assault has thrown the plutocrats on Beacon Hill into a state of frenzied terror. Brooklyn, which was the scene of many a fierce struggle during the American Revolution, has decided not to be behind in the present struggle. Communiques from the Brooklyn chief of staff state that the enemy in that territory has suffered heavily under the recent bombardment of 10,000 copies of The DAILY WORKER. Remember, every new reader is a dent in the line of the enemy. Be sure to do your bit.

Replace "Trade Union Capitalism" by Genuine Co-operatives

The carefully worded reports of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers' convention fail, however, to conceal the orgy of "high finance" which was carried on by the inner circle of the Brotherhood officialdom.

In order to save something from the wreckage the convention has voted a two-year assessment which, it is estimated, will bring in $7,200,000. This assessment has been used as security for a loan, replacing securities which were either worthless or of a value far below amounts loaned upon them.

A paragraph in the New York Times' story dealing with this phase of the matter is illuminating. It says:

"Officials explained that the paper in question was "good paper" but that the Controller had not considered it "good paper for the bank because it represented other Brotherhood investments." (Emphasis ours.)

The "trade union capitalists" who were in charge of the Brotherhood's financial affairs seem to have learned quickly the crooked methods of the banking fraternity. They organized divers subsidiary and auxiliary financial institutions (a list of which we published on this page Saturday) and then proceeded to loan the money of the parent Cleveland institution to these concerns on the bonds issued by them. This is a favorite device of the J. Rufus Wallingford fraternity but for a labor organization it can mean only disaster.

The officials of the Brotherhood not only went in for trade union capitalism but for trade union capitalism which was of so shady a nature that it is barred even by the very elastic ethical code of the capitalists themselves.

The membership of the Brotherhood, now assessing itself for millions of dollars with which to pay the debts contracted in the name of the union by the advocates of worker-employer co-operation will think twice before they are lured again into similar anti-working class schemes.

The experience of the Brotherhood, a damning indictment of the whole theory of trade union capitalism, can be utilized to great advantage by the left wing in securing repudiation of this whole policy by the labor movement and in turning these "labor capitalist" enterprises into genuine co-operative institutions with control solidly held by the rank and file.

Graphic Is Cleared—DAILY WORKER Is Indicted

The DAILY WORKER has published a poem attacking the capitalist institutions of America, in language which jars the delicate sensibilities of the degenerate bourgeoisie. For this crime the staff of The DAILY WORKER is held under a Federal Grand Jury indictment subject to fines aggregating $120,000 and ten years' imprisonment each, or both.

The Graphic, an evening tabloid newspaper, owned by the MacFadden Publications, a millionaire concern, and Emile H. Gouvreau, managing editor, have just been cleared of all charges brought against them under Section 1141 of the Penal Code, the same section under which The DAILY WORKER was prosecuted. The Court of Special Sessions, the same court which sentenced William F. Dunne to thirty days in jail, Bert Miller to seven days, and fined the paper five hundred dollars, declared in the case of the Graphic, "In our opinion, and therefore on all the grounds, the MacFadden Publications, Inc., will be acquitted and discharged."

The line here is clearly drawn. The full limit of the law is invoked against The DAILY WORKER, because it is a working class paper, fighting against the employers, fighting for Sacco and Vanzetti, fighting against war. The utmost clemency and consideration is shown to a capitalist newspaper, which has become notorious for the publication of filth, in connection with the Browning and Thaw cases.

It shows that a workers' paper can expect consideration from a capitalist court only if labor manifests its power in our defense. We must build up a powerful legal defense which requires the expenditure of thousands of dollars. We must fight against the imposition of heavy fines and jail sentences against the comrades on the staff. We must fight against the revocation of mailing privileges. For this fight we need money. Our lawyer estimates that the defense will take not less than $25,000. It is the duty of every comrade to help us meet this new and more dangerous attack on The DAILY WORKER by vigorous and immediate support of the Defense Fund.

Kerensky's Host and the Drive on the Soviet Union.

Alexander Kerensky, avowed enemy of the Soviet Union and its workers' and peasants' government, has sailed for Europe. According to the New York Times, Kerensky's host while in New York was Assistant United States District Attorney Simpson.

In view of the present drive against the Soviet Union openly engineered by Great Britain but which American imperialism is furnishing with the sinews of war by making a series of loans to the fascist and semi-fascist nations on the Soviet Union frontier, extended comment is unnecessary.

of the French from the Rhur in return for German support for the policy of isolation of the U.S.S.R. and the opening up of American credit to France.

THE United States saved European capitalism from destruction after the world war. European capitalism is somewhat healthier now than it was at that time, but there is a rotten apple in the capitalist barrel, represented by the precarious condition of British imperialism, chiefly due to the turbulent condition in her Oriental colonial and semi-dependencies. England is not in a position to bribe France into making the concessions to Germany necessary to draw the latter country into the anti-Soviet bloc, which England is trying to organize. But if the United States, in return for some other considerations, opens her treasury to France, the French government might be willing to withdraw her troops from the Ruhr. Uncle Sam's payment would very likely have to come out of John Bull's pocket.

The Progressive Movement in the Shoe and Leather Industry

THE progressive movement in the shoe and leather industry in Massachusetts is a young movement, but it has already much to its credit.

After the decline of the Knights of Labor the Boot and Shoe Workers Union gained a foothold in Lynn and vicinity. In 1903-05 the shoe makers of Lynn rebelled against the BSWU. As the result of the "revolt" the BSWU was driven out of Lynn. Out of this fight a new union, the United Shoe Workers of America was born. This union during its existence improved the conditions of the Lynn workers.

Lynn was 95% organized, a 44 hour week and five-day week during the summer months wore secured. In 1922-23 a serious attempt was made to amalgamate all existing independent unions into one powerful union, the Amalgamated Shoe Workers of America.

Due to the treachery of the leaders in the Shoe Workers Protective Union of Haverhill, Mass., who refused to enter the union, this attempt failed. In 1923-25 the BSWU spent large sums of money to capture Lynn.

In 1925 the BSWU established itself by force in the city of Lynn. What were the methods of the BSWU in gaining control of Lynn? The BSWU knows well that the shoe workers of the country dislike their methods and policies. For two years the BSWU carried on a campaign thru the press and spies in the local.

HOWEVER, this time the BSWU and the Lynn Shoe Manufacturers Association of Lynn did not reckon with the militancy of the Lynn shoe workers. This "buy and sell" proposition of the BSWU and the shoe manufacturers aroused the fighting spirit of the Lynn shoe workers. A progressive movement to stop the cuts in wages and the lengthening of hours was organized. The joint council of the Lynn shoe workers became the center of the fight. When the bosses, thru the socalled shoe agents, appealed to the union for the reduction of wages, the progressives put forward a counter demand for an increase in wages and in certain instances threatened the shoe manufacturers with strikes. The shoe manufacturers have learned to fear the militancy of the Lynn shoe workers, altho they now had their union, the BSWU.

Seeing that they could not control the Lynn shoe workers, they moved their factories to Boston where they could get 100% protection.

BOSTON is only ten miles from Lynn and the same union. Still it cost the shoe manufacturers to produce shoes 25 to 35% less than in Lynn. It is true that the BSWU constitution has a provision where it says "if any manufacturer has a union contract, and if this firm moves to another city the highest price for labor shall be paid." The Lynn council and the six executive boards went to the general office of the BSWU to eliminate this emigration to escape paying state board prices and conditions. The reply of the general office was, "We have no right to interfere with Boston. That is we have local autonomy." After this remarkable cooperation which the Lynn shoe workers received from their general office, the Lynn progressives realized that the only salvation for the shoe workers of Lynn was to organize the shoe workers of Boston. Consequently a gigantic progressive movement was organized in Boston on the same lines as the one in Lynn.

The next move of the Lynn shoe manufacturers was the introduction of the Golden Rule system and individual contracts (yellow dog contract), selling shares and the like. This golden rule, etc., introduction is a very important phenomenon in the shoe industry. It means that a worker must buy a job for not less than a hundred dollars, and sign a contract that he will agree to everything laid down by the committee of the concern. No strikes, no walkouts, overtime, work on holidays, not even thinking of unionization, and surely no organization—this is the meaning of the golden rule system. Would the management find out that a worker even thinks of joining a union, not only would the worker lose his job but also the money paid in for the shares.

The union makes no attempt to stop this golden rule movement. In fact it helps in certain instances to establish the golden rule system. It is a logical thing for the present reactionary leadership of the BSWU as well as that of the Shoe Workers Protective Union to point to the Golden Rule shop conditions as being worse than the conditions in the union shops. In other words the reactionary officialdom is glad to have such an organization as the Golden Rule system and uses the comparison between it and the union shops to maintain themselves in office.

THE tragedy of the twelve thousand Brockton shoe workers is not only a black spot for the shoe and leather workers, but for the entire labor movement. Four years ago, when the Brockton shoe workers revolted against both oppressors, the bosses and the union policy, when they were met with the strong arm of both enemies, both the shoe manufacturer and the union officialdom united for one purpose to crush down the rebellion. With the aid of the courts and the "cossacks" the shoe manufacturers and the officialdom of the BSWU broke the ranks of the Brockton shoe workers. After the defeat the union imposed a fine of twenty-five or more dollars upon each striker. They took away the charters of practically every local and appointed a governing board to supervise the work of the Brockton shoe workers. That means that the Brockton shoe workers were put in local O. Some of the heads of the governing board are members of the Brockton Chamber of Commerce. It is four years since the strike and the Brockton shoe workers have no say about their working conditions as yet.

Boston was the backbone of resistion. The Boston local has a membership of four thousand and until the recent election there were two unlimited dictators in office for the past fourteen years.

There are reports from the shoe workers of St. Louis and Canada about their conditions, which are similar to ours under the same union. There are about two hundred and ten thousand shoe workers in the country, and two unions in the field, The Shoe Workers Protective Union (independent) and with a membership of about twelve thousand and the Boot and Shoe Workers Union with a membership of about forty to forty-five thousand.

A CONFERENCE of representatives from all over the country was held in Boston on Nov. 26, 1926. This was the first real move to bring an end to the present conditions in the shoe and leather industry. A plan for carrying on constructive work in every shoe city was adopted. After a discussion the conference unanimously adopted a resolution for one mighty union in the shoe and leather industry.

Another important conference was held on June 5th, 1927 in Boston. This conference was a state convention with representatives from each large shoe city. At the conference a lengthy report of the progress made since the last conference, was made. It was pointed out that since the last conference in Nov. 1926 cuts in wages were stopped. The biggest feature was the lively discussion by the delegates, on how to organize the unorganized. The conference went on record in favor of one powerful union in the shoe and leather industry and the amalgamation of both existing shoe unions into one union. The conference instructed the delegates that when they go back they should organize progressive committees to elect progressive slates to the various local offices. Especially was it pointed out that as the history of the shoe industry shows it was the constant secessions from the recognized unions that destroyed the power of the shoe workers. It was the unanimous opinion that the amalgamation of all the existing shoe and leather unions into one powerful shoe and leather union was imperative.

An executive committee of two from each city was elected to carry on the work. It was decided that this committee publish a monthly bulletin, called the "Progressive Shoe and Leather Bulletin of America."

The shoe and leather workers are badly paid and work under the worst conditions. The present leadership in both unions is responsible for these conditions. The shoe workers had enough lessons by being divided into various independent unions. Therefore the policy of the progressives is correct and will lead the shoe and leather workers to victory.

FIGHT WATSON-PARKER BILL; BOARD REFUSES TRAINMEN WAGE INCREASE

By CARL HAESSLER.

The doom of the Watson-Parker rail labor act was probably sounded when the arbitration board sitting on the wage case of the 50,000 conductors and trainmen of the western railroads refused to grant any increase in wages. About 25,000 switchmen and yardmen received a 7½ per cent raise which was dated back to March 1. Switchmen will now receive a minimum of $5.07 a day.

The award, made after almost a month of hearings in Chicago, upset all the dope, both company and union. Everybody expected that the 7½ per cent raise obtained earlier in the year on the eastern and the southeastern roads would be extended to the western train service workers also. Higher-ups among the officials of the Order of Railway Conductors and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen almost regarded the arbitration proceedings as cut and dried preliminaries to the anticipated increase. Railroad presidents seemed to think the same and President Gorman of the Rock Island was so quoted in the financial columns of the leading afternoon paper.

"Neutral" Arbitrators.

The refusal to grant what President L. E. Sheppard of the conductors called adequate pay for responsible work was made effective by the socalled neutral arbitrators who rushed to the aid of the railroad nominees on the board. The brotherhood nominees dissented. These alleged neutral arbitrators are the big joker in the Watson-Parker act, under which the roads and the unions are to name their representatives and to agree on neutral representatives. But if they can't agree the neutrals are packed on the board by the permanent board of mediation and this is nominated by President Coolidge. Thus the fraud of ostensibly "public" representatives on the old rail labor board nominated by the president is succeeded by the fraud of "neutral" representatives also nominated by the president. In either case the unions after a little encouragement at the start get the raw deal thereafter.

The neutrals in the western wage case were two men whose sympathies are naturally with the employing class and against the workers. They were President E. C. Brown of the National Live Stock Exchange of Chicago and President W. M. W. Splawn of the University of Texas, a large employer of labor and a man whose salary and surroundings remove him far from the life of the railroad brakeman, getting less than $5 for an 8-hour day.

Oppose Watson-Parker Bill.

The decision was based partly on the agricultural depression in the northwest, thongh this runs counter to the principle laid down by the interstate commerce commission in rate cases to the effect that the right of a company to charge certain rates does not depend on whether its customers are making or losing money thereby.

Signs of opposition to the Watson-Parker law are increasing. The convention of the Switchmen's Union of North America has demanded its repeal. Vice-president Goff of the Locomotive Firemen is taking cracks at it and now the conductors and trainmen are expected to drop their former advocacy of it. Taken in connection with the demand of President Daniel Willard of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad that railroad employes drop the basic 8-hour day in favor of a flexible day of 8 to 10 hours, all at straight time, it appears that the railroad wolf masquerading these years in sheep's clothing is about to have the hide torn off him.

WORKERS URGE END OF GOVERNMENT THAT THIRSTS FOR NEW WORLD WAR

NOTE—This article by Comrade Engdahl was written and mailed from Moscow before Engdahl started on his return trip to this country. Engdahl arrived in New York last Friday. Engdahl will write additional articles for THE DAILY WORKER on recent developments within the Soviet Union. Watch for these articles.

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R. (By Mail).—"Down with the government that thirsts for world war!"

This was the slogan that blazed from the breastplate of the huge locomotive that brought the funeral train of Comrade P. L. Voikoff, Soviet Ambassador slain at Warsaw, Poland, to its journey's end in the White Russian-Baltic railroad station here.

Beneath the slogan was the picture of Comrade Volkoff clipped from the Pravda, the central organ of the All-Union Communist Party.

The workers and peasants of the Soviet Union look upon Volkoff as the first victim in the new war launched against the Soviet Union, and they are not slow to place the entire blame at the door of the British reaction. Today (Saturday, June 11) the Moscow proletariat did honor to its dead.

We have come to the station as a delegation representing the Communist International. Spokesmen of the workers of many lands are in our group. All the way from the Comintern building we have seen that the Red Army has already closed the streets to traffic. Great throngs were already assembled about the station, workers' delegations from many shops and factories, under their own banners. Thousands of Red Army infantry and cavalry were in their places.

Strange Coincidence This.

The great station is hung with evergreens and with black and red bunting. Evergreens also carpet the approach to the station, the passage thru the station, as well as the entire train platform.

Strange coincidence, we, the representatives of the Communist International, are to march behind the bier of Comrade Volkoff, who was killed by a White Guard, a representative of the Russian counter-revolutionary émigré organization, which has its headquarters in Paris, and which is financed by the French government.

Beside us march the delegations of the Soviet government, the All-Union Communist Party, the Soviet Trade Unions, the Narkomindel (the Soviet foreign office of People's Commissariat of Foreign Affairs) with which Volkoff was directly connected, and which has also suffered the loss of Vorovsky, slain by an assassin in Switzerland. There are also members of the bereaved family. Soldiers of the Red Army stand in long straight lines. No trains come or enter the station. All traffic is at a standstill. Today the pillars of the covered platform are draped with red and black flags. Streamers of mourning everywhere.

by Nikolai Bukharin

Nikolai Bukharin, besides being the president of the Communist International, is the leading Marxian theoretician in the world today. He has done a great deal of scientific work in the field of sociology and economics, and has published a number of outstanding contributions in these fields.

The "Economic Theory of the Leisure Class" is one of his most important theoretical writings to be translated for the first time into English. Just as Marx has studied the theoretical systems of the classical economists (Smith, Ricardo, Mill, etc.) Bukharin tackles the dominant bourgeois political economy known as the Austrian School, (Menger, Boehm-Bawerk, Wieser, Wolras, Clark, etc.), in a brilliant style and with lucid Marxian reasoning, he analyses the theories of Marginal Utility, Value and Profit of the leading bourgeois economists, showing that the Austrian School is governed by the vulgar psychology of the rentier, the coupon-clipper.

Another Important Book by Bukharin

While "Economic Theory of the Leisure Class" is a study in the field of political economy, "Historical Materialism" by the same author is an application of Marxism to the field of sociology. This book has already become the standard text book and is considered one of the outstanding Marxian classics. In fact, it is the only book available where the materialist method has been applied to an analysis of the various social phenomena.

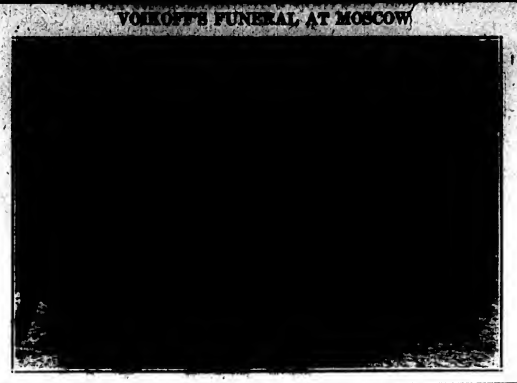
Police Attack and Jail Palestinian Workers in May Day Demonstration

LONDON, June 17 (By Mail)—Saklatvala, Communist M. P., inquired in the House as to the reason for the police attack on Palestinian workers on May Day demonstrations in Tel Aviv, Jerusalem and Haifa, held in common with May Day celebrations and demonstrations of workers all over the world. The Palestinian demonstrators were viciously attacked, and a large number wounded. Many were arrested and imprisoned, and held incommunicado.



Minister Amery replied that the reason of the attack was that the Communist Party had organized illegal demonstrations in order to embarrass the Government. He admitted that 12 persons had been injured at one of the demonstrations, but disclaimed knowledge as to the others, or as to the number of arrests and convictions.

On Saklatvala's inquiry as to whether demonstrations which were legal and permissible in Great Britain were illegal in Palestine, Mr. Amery replied: "The conditions are somewhat different. In these matters we trust the discretion of our representatives on the spot." Mr. Amery was also questioned as to the reason for a sentence of 50 days' imprisonment and deportation passed on Aris Karp, editor of the "Red Ald Bulletin." He replied that he knew nothing.

appealed to the United States shipping board. The results were that the shipping board, looking after the interests of the Holland American Line, provided the "S. S. Rotterdam" with six-masters-at-arms. This number was later increased to eight.

The company in conjunction with the shipping board, was willing to pay these men $6.00 a day, their board and first class passage to and fro. These men they provided with special badges and guns and the instructions to use these guns upon any sign of open discontent on the part of the crew. They were pretty careful to pick husky, healthy gunmen for this job.

Join Strike.

The remainder of the ships black gang (firemen and coal passers) however, were already greatly discontented by this time and were ready to join in sympathy with their striking brothers. It was just about this time that the before mentioned group of sailors came aboard ship, entered the focsles and spoke to their fellow workers. They asked them to show their solidarity, refusing to man a scab ship. The greater part of the men left thereupon, marching down the gang plank past customs officials, immigration officers and watchmen who were unable to stop their victorious progress.

The next morning word went up and down South Street and all along New York's waterfront to the effect that the "S. S. Rotterdam" was a condemned ship; was hiring scab labor and that if the crew were filled, it would be a scab crew. Soon enough the enraged ship's officials found themselves faced with sailing time and eighty men short. Their need was so desperate that they moved the ship to Quarantine. This was done with a greatly undermanned force, endangering the lives of the passengers aboard. All day frantic attempts were made to fill the ranks of the missing coal passers and firemen, but the work of this small group of class conscious sailors had been so effective that the ship was tied up for eight hours.

Tied Up For 8 Hours.

The "S. S. Rotterdam" was kept outside of Quarantine without a crew for eight solid hours. This cost the Holland American Line quite a neat sum of money, because she is a mail-carrying vessel.

Another interesting phase lies in the fact that whereas the "Rotterdam" was listed as paying $62.50 for the run the evening before the Holland American raised the wage scale first to $100 and then to $150 the next morning. They also promised all sorts of fantastic favors, bonuses and trips to the men, which of course, never will be kept.

Hold Meeting.

An open air meeting was held under the auspices of the International Seamens Club at Coentis Slip. A united front was effected with the Marine-Transport Workers' Union, 510 and other water front organizations. The subject of the meeting was the strike situation facing the Dutch Seamen and the creation of picketing committees for the boycotting of the "S. S. Rotterdam. The meeting turned out a success. After the meeting the men all came up to the headquarters of the International Seamens Club at 25 South Street, where ways and means of boycotting the Rotterdam and other Dutch ships was discussed.

Plan to Unite Seamen.

In an interview with Harry Kweit, Secretary of the International Seamens Club, he pointed out that this was probably the most infamous case of the exploitation of workers and their replacement by American sailors through the strike-breaking tactics of the shipping interests which has occurred on the New York waterfront for quite some time. Kweit says that the International Seamens Club will do all in its power to cooperate with other waterfront organizations to help the striking Holland seamen in their struggle for higher wages and organization.

It was also the opinion of Frandsen, acting organizer of the Marine-Transport Workers Union, 510, that this situation will lead to the uniting of all seamen's organizations.

Indian Workers in Solid Labor Front Win Madras Strike

MADRAS, June 1. (By Mail)—The strike of Indian workers employed by the Burma Oil Company in Madras came to an end on May 16 on terms which mean a practical victory for the strikers.

A week previously, unarmed strikers had been shot down by the company's officials. Lorries with petrol tried to pass through a strikers' meeting, and the way being barred, the company officials opened fire and some belonging to the "Volunteer Guard" charged the crowd. Eighteen workers were wounded.

General Strike Threat.

This only strengthened the spirit of the men. The next day the strike extended to the Standard Oil Company and to the Asiatic Petroleum Company. The press reported that practically all labor in oil companies in Madras had been withdrawn. The price of petrol nearly doubled owing to the shortage.

On May 15th representatives of all Labor unions in Madras met and decided to support the strike in every way, and considered the question of calling a general strike in Madras.

Under this threat the company gave way. The terms agreed on include: (1) the reinstatement of the 114 men whose summary dismissal caused the strike; (2) the restoration of benches in the workshops; (3) reextention of a two anna wage cut of a group of twenty men. Only the demand for on all-round one anna wage increase was held over.

The Burma Oil Company is a British company, of which the Annual General Meeting was held in Glasgow last week. The chairman, Sir John T. Cargill, reported that, during the past year the profits had increased to £2,479,000. He regretted that "in view of the uncertain petroleum market the board does not feel justified in recommending a larger final dividend than 20 per cent."

With the interim dividend of 10 per cent this makes 30 per cent for the year; or, since there was also a distribution of bonus shares, the equivalent of 40 per cent on the old capital!

German Press Scoffs At Chamberlain Pose Of "Angel of Peace"

BERLIN, June 15.—(By Mail) The capitalist press in London has been very positive in its descriptions of the "rowing away from Russia" of the German press. Yet here is what "Vorwaerts" says the Socialist organ which has been consistently and venomously anti-Soviet in its policy:

"The British Tory Government assures the world that it does not want war or even an interruption of Anglo-Russian trade. It reminds one of the wartime cartoon of Wilhelm II. on his knees before a soldier's grave saying, 'I want this.'

Britain's Mailed Fist.

The "Vossische Zeitung," again (liberal and strongly anti-Bolshevik), writes: "The British Government must realise that the Russian note to Poland has found a wide echo in world public opinion. It touches certain chords in the European soul which vibrate easily when England is accused.

"The Treaty of Tirana would never have been concluded without British sanction, and what good does it do now that it has led to grave trouble, for Britain to pose as an angel of peace? If the weak and timid in Europe dared to utter their complaints, the present British rulers would not hear anything very pleasant."

Voikov's Murder.

The Social-Democratic (anti-Bolshevik) organ in Vienna, "Arbeiter Zeitung," writes: "The responsibility for the murder of Voikov by a monarchist falls on Chamberlain. . . . If a Conservative Minister breaks open safes and steals other people's documents, why should not a Russian counter revolutionary resort to his revolver? A diplomatic act in London becomes a murderer's shot in Warsaw."

Muscle Shoals Power Holds Up Its Patrons

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Revelation by residents of Muscle Shoals City that they will have to pay 10 cents a kilowatt hour to the Alabama Power Co. unless the war department allows them to buy directly from the government at production cost—two mills—has stirred congressmen into renewed promises. Chairmon James of the house military affairs committee, in charge of the disposition of Muscle Shoals, declares he will favor public operation if private companies do not offer satisfactory bids by the time congress meets. Congressman Martin L. Davey of Ohio maintains that farmers of his state are being robbed of $1,000,000 a year in excessive fertilizer prices because the government is not operating Muscle Shoals.

COOPS OF SOVIET UNION REPORT 29 MILLION MEMBERS

Pravda Raps Reformist Leaders Abroad

MOSCOW, July 3.—In connection with International Cooperation Day reports of the cooperative system summarized the results of their work in the ten years of the existence of the Soviet Union.

Since the seizure of power by the workers and peasants of the U.S.S.R. the turnover of consumers' cooperation has grown from 500 million to seven billion roubles yearly; the number of members of cooperative societies has increased five times and has increased to twelve and a half millions; agricultural cooperation counts 60,000 cooperative societies, uniting seven million peasant homes; namely, one third of the whole peasant population of the whole Soviet Union.

Producers' Cooperatives.

The yearly production of handicraft and industrial cooperation amounts to two and a half million roubles. Twenty per cent of all handicrafts and artisan workers thruout the U.S.S.R., namely 600,000, are united in handicraft and industrial cooperatives.

The balance sheet of the All-Russian Cooperative Bank shows an approved total of 176,200,000 roubles and profits of 1,900,000. Il. Hintchuk has been elected chairman of the board of directors of this bank.

An editorial in the Pravda points out that cooperation in the Soviet Union during the last few years of its development has grown into a great economic force and has created apparatus operating thruout the whole country. Thru peaceful economic organization there have gradually been built up 100,000 cooperative societies, including twenty million shareholders (the total is much greater if the families of the co-operators are included) with a general turnover of 10 billion roubles.

War Threat.

If the Soviet Union is threatened with war, the cooperatives will ensure a regular circulation of goods within the country and help the Red Army on the front. In event of war, it will by no means be necessary to revert to primitive methods of distribution which prevailed during the period of war communism.

While fighting the enemy, and if necessary curtailing superfluous outlay, we shall carry on thru modern methods the development of socialistic forms of economy.

Abroad cooperation forms part of the whole apparatus of imperialist oppression. The reformist leaders of cooperation servilely lick the feet of their capitalist rulers and carry thru projects which tend to rob cooperation of any independence from the capitalist system.

Struggle Against Reformism.

However, the rank and file of cooperatives in the capitalist countries are beginning to see the truth. Step by step revolutionary ideas are penetrating the mass of members, and stirring them to activity. The struggle against war is actually the most favorable field of revolutionary work among the masses of cooperators.

The slogan of cooperatives should be the defence of the Russian and Chinese revolutions. These slogans can rally all of the honest elements of international cooperation.

The Bombardment Begins

News has just reached the headquarters of the General Staff of the DAILY WORKER Army that the heavy shell fire has been opened on several important fronts against the enemy. The reports indicate that the results of these heavy bombardments have been devastating. Chicago has opened up her Big Berthas swamping the city with Six Thousand DAILY WORKERS distributed in working class districts. The Chicago battalions are now engaged in mopping up the enemy and gathering up the subscriptions which have been wrested from the retreating enemy. From the heights of Bunker Hill in Boston five thousand telling shots have been fired in the big DAILY WORKER distribution campaign conducted over the week-end. The power of the assault has thrown the plutocrats on Beacon Hill into a state of frenzied terror. Brooklyn, which was the scene of many a fierce struggle during the American Revolution, has decided not to be behind in the present struggle. Communiques from the Brooklyn chief of staff state that the enemy in that territory has suffered heavily under the recent bombardment of 10,000 copies of The DAILY WORKER. Remember, every new reader is a dent in the line of the enemy. Be sure to do your bit.

What is Marxian Interpretation of the American Revolution?

By WILLIAM F. KRUSE.

The commemoration year of the events which have been given a definite question is not yours. One type is represented by an article "Colonel Revolution" by Joe Lewinson, and in the DAILY WORKER issue (Monday, July 1926), based on a book review by Joe Lewinson, and in the DAILY WORKER article (March 1926) by Gertrude Stevens, "Dictatorship in the American Revolution." Most of these may be seriously beyond criticism but they would seem to give us at least the correct Marxist-Leninist approach, and point the road along which American Communists have much to do.

The last of these mentioned does fall into a subjective terminology, usually associated with opponents of revolutionary activity: (Speaking of the revolutionary "Committees of Correspondence"): "Their role was tyrannical and despotic in the extreme. Everywhere the loyalists were in a clear majority they were soundly defeated, persecuted, and hounded out of the country that they never opened their heads again'. . .

Those who get in the way of a revolutionary committee may complain of their being "tyrannical and despotic," our only interest in the subject is that they be timely and effective.

The Social-Democratic Anti-Revolutionary Trend.

Among the leading exponents of this school are James O'Neal, A. M. Simons, Allan Benson, Irwin St. John Tucker. All belong to the numerous petty-bourgeois muck-raker school.

Coming down to the American Revolution and the causes that led up to it, we find O'Neal saying: "Smuggling became so popular with the merchants and shippers that they lost all sense of gratitude toward Great Britain when France was endeavoring to annex the colonies to Canada" (p. 106)—this was at a time when Britain was fighting to capture the French colonies for the purpose of closing them to Yankee products. There is little cause for gratitude here. As soon as England had finished France as a major colonial power in North America (1763) the real suppression of American commerce and industry began, which quickly led up to the revolution. It was really the colonists who bore the brunt of the war against the French in Canada, not for the sake of England, but because they were fighting for possession of the western lands. Colonial fishermen and farmers captured the great fortress of Louisberg, only to see Britain give it back in the course of European diplomatic horse-trading. Not gratitude but land and power was involved in these colonial wars.

Borrowing a Wrong Approach.

From such social-democratic and bourgeois reformist writers we can expect no other conclusion. From them much valuable data can be taken, and thus time saved in research, though even here some caution is necessary, since an examination of original sources will undoubtedly bring even more striking material to light than the reformist historian gives. Where the danger comes in is when our comrades take this material uncritically, without distinguishing between worthless middle-class social-democratic dicta and really valuable source material. We have sinned in the past in this respect because it is very easy to string together a few of these "facts." Very recently, in a big "historical" article on George Washington, in our DAILY WORKER of February 22nd, 1927, we find an example.

Comrade Gaylan cites citations, clearly expressive of their social-democratic pacifist sources, to tell us in effect that: (1) The revolution was not fundamentally a bourgeois national liberation struggle at all, not a real revolution; (2) that only a small part of the American people were in favor of it and some of these seemed by the prototypes of the Ku Klux Klan; (3) that it was really a "putsch" organized by smugglers who used so low as to use violence (!) to secure their ends; and (4) that the revolutionary army was a ragged lot that owed its very existence to the British general's love for American independence. In short, there was no revolution and the heritage of what struggle there was goes to the Klan! Let us take up these points one by one.

A Revolutionary Revolution.

1.—The revolution was not a real revolution at all but (quoting Simons, again uncritically) "The American phase of an English civil war. It was not so much a conflict between colonies and English government, as it was one aspect of a war between different divisions of the English people on both sides of the Atlantic. . . It was part of the violent upheaval of society by which the capitalist class overthrew feudalism and came into power." This is not true.

While there was a political struggle between whigs and tories going on in Britain, the final political overthrew of feudalism had taken place more than a century before, and similar battles had been fought out in Carolina, New York and elsewhere to the complete rout of those who had pipe-dreams of transplanting a feudal society to a new world where there was on open frontier and every colonist had his own rifle. It was the bourgeois republic of Cromwell that passed the first of the Navigation Acts against which the colonists fought. And decades of whig ministers had tried to enforce them. The whigs used the American revolt as a club against the tory administration but very few of them favored complete independence. Marx suggests that Edmund Burke, one of the most vigorous champions of America, was bribed. (Capital, Vol. I, p. 833). Certainly we know that John Wilkes, the stormy petrel of British radicalism, gracefully accepted a "flattering letter and a valuable present" from his admirers, the Boston patriots. (Daly: "Radical Pioneers of the XVIII Century" p. 24).

Revolutionists or Kluxers?

2.—It was not a popular uprising . . . "only a small portion of the settlers in the Colonies took an active part in the fight for independence. . . Large numbers of colonists were forced into the war much against their own desires. Our intrepid "Fathers of the revolution knew how to apply pressure and resort to forceful means in order to gain supporters." (Then follows a long citation from the prejudiced Fisher: "True History") "Truly the Ku Kluxers and 100 percenters of today, with their methods of violence and intimidation, live true to the forms exhibited by their forefathers of 150 years ago."

Such sentiments are either pacifist or counter-revolutionary—or both. The Klan claims that very thing, the revolutionary heritage of 1776, the vigorous measures applied by the merchants, farmers and tradesmiths of those days against the landed aristocrats and royal government cliques. This was not Kluxism, it was revolutionary terror, applied by the revolutionary tribunals of that time. It is our task to popularize the excellent organizational measures of the patriotic "Committees of Correspondence"—organs, at first, of dual government, and then of the sole revolutionary government.

Those Bad Smugglers.

3.—Was it really a mere putsch! "We need not wonder that smugglers, rum and slave traders, were strong for independence from the mother country." "John Hancock was known as the Prince of Smugglers and was to stand trial in Boston (he was actually to be transported to England for trial because no American jury would convict an WEK) for smuggling, the very day when the battle of Lexington was fought. Simons remarks that like all smugglers, Hancock cared little for the forms of law, and trusted to bribery and violence to secure his ends. When his sloop, Liberty, was endeavoring to run the customs he first tried to bribe the officials and, failing, locked up the guard in a cabin and unloaded the sloop under the protection of a gang of thugs secured for the occasion."

Simons remarks! Naturally! Why not? But how can we uncritically accept Simon's interpretation of such an event? Seven paragraphs in this long article are devoted to smuggling, but there is not an inkling of the revolutionary role played by the smuggler of those days. One of the first weapons to which a colonial bourgeoisie resorts in a struggle against an exploiter nation is the boycott—see China. The only way an industrially undeveloped country can make a boycott effective against a nation which controls the seas is by smuggling. The fact that it is profitable to the smuggler makes it none the less a revolutionary weapon, and Hancock was not unjustified in calling his sloop "Liberty." Bourgeois "liberty," of course, liberty to trade where and with whom the rising young American bourgeoisie pleased, but that was one of the things that the fight was about. These smugglers—like the Lewis and Clark keel boats came under this category, the basis being a smugglers' paradise—gave a good account of themselves in the revolution, they fitted out as privateers manned by a force equal in numbers to the entire revolutionary army, and their depredations on England's shipping while she was fighting not merely America but France, Spain and Holland as well, and had aligned against her the armed neutrality of the rest of Europe—this activity of the "smugglers" contributed heavily to winning the revolution. The boycott movement of 1769 brought some relief, and again the First Continental Congress, in 1774, called for a boycott against all British goods, and left it to these aforementioned revolutionary Committees of Correspondence to see to it, that it was carried out. (Wertenbaker, The American People, p. 40). Before the revolution more than a third of the total British imports came from America, and more than one-fourth of her exports was shipped there. (Day, History of Commerce in U. S. A., p. 9.) The boycott hit the British merchants so severely that they were the loudest in demanding the repeal of the Stamp Act. Of the million and a half pounds of tea consumed in America not more than 10 per cent was imported legally—all unsmuggled tea was boycotted. (Meloney: Industrial History of the American People, p. 200.) In the light of these facts the story of Hancock and the revenue officer takes on a different complexion, and between these two worthies Communists will certainly root for John and his "gang of thugs secured for the occasion"—very likely they may have been shipmates in whose daily political discussions became so famous that they are said to have bequeathed us the very word, "caucus," without which our vocabulary is hardly complete.

Who Won the War?

4.—"The revolutionary army was a ragged lot. . . . Desertions grew at an alarming pace. (Citing Hart on whipping soldiers). . . It is impossible to remember that General Howe, who was in command of the British forces . . . was a most intensely partisan Whig. He was absolutely opposed to any use of force against them; believed them to be in the right and entitled to victory."

Has there ever been a revolutionary army that was not a "ragged lot"? The French army of the Great Revolution, the Russian Red Guard and Red Army—were they models of "What the Young Man Will Wear"? It may be argued that it is no discredit to call them a ragged lot. But is this a sympathetic or even accurate picture to be drawn by a revolutionist of a great revolutionary struggle?

But as to Howe. It is true that he was accused by the British Tories of not trying hard enough to lick the rebels, and as a scapegoat to save British pride against the defeat suffered in the colonies this story is often made use of. The fact remains that Howe was operating in an unknown country without roads, 3,000 miles away from his home base and that he was fighting not against an army but against a hostile population. He did not do so badly. The Americans won not a single pitched battle and every coast town at one time or another fell into British hands. Only when the Americans were strong—where every popular revolutionary army is strong—set—was in ability to survive defeat after defeat and yet, living off the country, continue the fight. Finally, with the aid of a French army and navy, they forced the British to quit. Washington's regular army was outnumbered, outgeneralled and whipped at Long Island, at White Plains, and in other battles, but with only three regiments he made brilliant midwinter guerilla raids on Trenton and Princeton. Again, the Mohawk Valley county militia shattered, one at a time, three British armies that were intended to cut the colonies in half by occupying New York from Canada to the sea. Gen. Gates was cut to pieces by Cornwallis in Charleston and Camden, but he was succeeded by the guerilla bands of Sumter, Pickens, Marion and Green, which saved the revolution in the South, as did the epic march of George Rogers Clark in the West. These back-woodsmen applied real partisan tactics, Green wrote, "We fight, get beat, rise and fight again." And in the end they held their foes to the coast towns. De-bunk, but don't De-revolutionize.

In resentment against the classic bourgeois historians it is to be expected that protesting writers will deal ruthlessly with the pretty strawmen, pre-conceptions of all the bourgeois virtues, that have been made out of the very ordinary (and sometime extraordinary) specimens of their time and class—the "Fathers." This goes by the name of de-bunking history, it is a very necessary process, there is a lot more of it to be done, but in stripping away the halos we should leave the heads. The de-bunking process must not result in the de-revolutionizing of actual revolutionists, albeit bourgeois ones. As Marx puts it in the "18th Brumaire": "Unheroic though bourgeois society may seem, heroism had been needed to bring it into being—heroism, self-sacrifice, the reign of terror, civil war, and the slaughter on the battlefields." True, this is only one side of the rise to power—the struggle, the grafting, stealing, treachery to its allies, etc., are another aspect. True also that Marx was speaking here of the French revolution, but to a somewhat more limited degree all these things were also present in the struggle for power of the native American bourgeoisie. Theirs was a real revolution, and we have no reason whatever to deny this. More than that, it was a skilfully managed revolution from which there are lessons to be learned by Communists.

This article does not purport to give a Marxian analysis of the American Revolution, it merely tries to point out some pitfalls to be avoided by the comrades who undertake this task. It is indeed encouraging to note that one of the fields to which our new theoretical organ is to be devoted is precisely this one of American history. It should be obvious that it requires much more than citations from Simons and O'Neal to give us a real basis for such work.

What's What in Washington

WASHINGTON, July 1.—When the fifth congress of the Pan-American Federation of Labor meets in Washington on July 15, it will be attended by the most representative body of labor men from the Caribbean and Gulf of Mexico nations ever assembled on American soil.

But not a single delegate from Argentina, Brazil or Chile, the A.B.C countries of South America, will be in attendance. This is indicated by credentials now in the hands of Secretary Santiago Iglesias. The Argentina Socialist Party submitted credentials, but has been informed by Iglesias that the congress will be primarily for trade union bodies.

Suspicion.

The failure of the A.B.C countries to attend the Washington meeting is seen as another indication of the growing antipathy between the non-Caribbean Latin countries and the United States. The feeling against the United States as the "colossus of the north" permeates not only labor organizations but commercial bodies as well, where it bobbed up in the recent Pan-American Commercial Congress.

This propaganda has an unfortunate effect, Iglesias explains, on labor relations between the South American countries and the American Federation of Labor. The Latin workers believe the equator look upon A. F. of L. officials, exporters, manufacturers, diplomats and financiers as the Yankee bogey.

Delegation Going.

If Iglesias' suggestion is adopted by the Congress, a delegation of North American labor leaders will visit Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires, Valparaiso, Santos, Montevideo and Santiago, the centers of anti-United States propaganda, explaining the program and policies of the A. F. of L.

The Washington congress will seat delegates from the United States, Mexico, Colombia, Cuba, Nicaragua, Santo Domingo, Venezuela, Panama, Salvador and Porto Rico. At the fourth congress in Mexico City in 1924, delegates were present from Nicaragua, Panama, Santo Domingo, Guatemala and Porto Rico, in addition to the A. F. of L. and Mexican Federation of Labor (CROM).

Unionizing.

The main object of the fifth congress, according to Iglesias, who is also president of the Porto Rico Federation of Labor, will be the strengthening of labor unions along the shores of the Caribbean.

Iglesias sees the job as an immense one with scores of sharp conflicts with employing interests before success is attained. That it can be attained in good measure is evidenced, he declares, by the success of the Mexican Federation of Labor.

Dear Comrades: I

Without doubt you are informed of the imprisonment on May 1st of Comrade Monmousseau, Secretary of the C. G. & U. of France. Since then a great number of militants have been put in prison. Lately the reactionary wave has been extremely intense. The French government has resolved to destroy our party, and it is now the first serious blow by arresting the most prominent leaders. Parliamentary immunity will soon be a thing of the past, and Doumer, Painleve, Cachin, Couturier and the rest of our parliamentary group are in danger of imprisonment.

The discovery of so-called "Red Plots" are the order of the day; but one balloon explodes after another, and this causes extreme rage among the reactionaries. The influence of our party on the soldiers and sailors is very considerable and the govarnment feels its hold loosening every day in so far as the army is concerned. Sarraut's Constantine speech threateing death to Communism, the law Boucour militarizing men, women, children and labor organizations in time of war, recently passed, the intensification of reaction, the worsening economic conditions of the proletariat and the lower classes, the danger of war, etc., have strengthened the position of our party ulong the whole line. Evidence of this can be seen in the recent various local elections in which the Party has come out victorious nine out of ten times; and the participation of more than 100,000 workers in the recent assemblage at the "Wall" to commemorate the martyrs of the Commune.

In a word, the French bourgeoisie has a hard bone to hite on, and therefore the struggle which threatens to break out in the near future, will be of a great historical importance, if not decisive, in view of the revolutionary sympathy of great masses of soldiers and sailors.

Receive my revolutionary greetings, and believe me, Fraternally yours,— Louis De Fillipnis.

Editor, the DAILY WORKER:

To those who fear for the future of our militant DAILY WORKER, it is necessary to point out how splendidly the workers all over are rallying to the call for support.

Comrades Dunne and Miller were in the front line trenches facing the enemy, and all the workers throughout the country put forward a special effort the result of which was to defeat (temporarily at least) the machinations of the employing class who took upon The DAILY WORKER as their most dangerous opponent.

Bishop W. M. Brown just recently ended a short two weeks' tour of the Philadelphia and Boston districts. Almost without exception, their reception was splendid.

In Philadelphia, Comrade L. Lesser, the energetic DAILY WORKER agent had his program all organized. Sermons, Banquets, Dinner, Dances and Philadelphia was pulled for donations and Comrade Olga Gold, Hoffman, Wiskowsky, Maximoff and a host of others all put their shoulders to the wheel.

In spite of the fact that special drives were being made for the Protest Against Polish Defense of Pilsudski, Chamberlain and many other reactionary objects, the splendid sum of over $200 was raised for the Daily.

In Boston the reception was even better, if that were possible. Comrade Shohan of the Bookstore had set his quota for the tour in his territory at $500 and he sure made a herculean effort to attain it.

Norwood, Brockton, Worcester, Peabody, South Boston and Gardener were visited. Comrade Gage and his wife, Feinstein, Parta, Anderson and others too numerous to mention all joined in a 100 per cent effort and raised the magnificent sum of $480. The Finnish comrades promised support, however, and there is no doubt that they will send a substantial donation to The DAILY WORKER, which will bring the Boston district quota up to scratch. One can truly say that with such friends the only English labor daily in the world will live.

A continuation of such devotion will not only save The DAILY WORKER, but will send it into new fields where its influence will increase one hundred fold.—Pat Devine.

Editor, DAILY WORKER.

Dear Comrade:—One need not be very imaginative these days to perceive the great game of deception being played at the expense of the reading public by the powers of the world. In fact, a course of "reading between the lines" should be taken by Americans and others, in order to make clear the true goal to which nations of the world are pointing.

One of our foreign "defenders" Mr. Houghton speaking at the Harvard commencement exercises makes the following statements:

First, that a declaration of war against other peoples in the group (meaning, of course, the group whose purpose shall be to "outlaw" war") can be made only after the question has received the affirmative sanction of a majority of the qualified electors of each; and,

Second, that in return for reciprocal pledges, each shall agree not to attack the others for a term of—say —one hundred years.

Does this not smack of anti-Russian propaganda? Does this not seem like the forerunner to the gradual formation of a powerful alliance against the common enemy? This talk of "outlawing war" is the bunk. There is too much profit to be made from the sales of munitions, etc., for any such talk to be clothed with any sincerity. It seems to be little more than a desperate attempt to bind back the great tide. We seem to be on the verge of a world-wide flood that will make our own mid-country disaster shrink to the insignificance of a mirage in the desert. We'll not try to bank it. We'll leave that task for old King Canute, Capitalism.—L. Chaskin, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Levine Sued For $500,000.

PARIS, July 2.—Charles A. Levine, who flew to Germany with Clarence Chamberlin, is now facing a $500,000 U. S. Government suit as a result of alleged irregularities involved in his purchase of salvaged war materials from the war department. Levine has stated that the government has offered to settle for $200,000, adding that he is making counter-claims for an even higher sum.

IT WAS LONG AGO

By T. LOAF.

YEARS ago the learned professors of the theory of the so-called "constitutional law" as it was being taught at the European universities, had always a mighty hard job when in their nicely rounded systems of government they came across the question of Revolution. Then the legalistic minds of the learned professors knew but one source of law—the law itself. That means every new law had its validity from a preceding one, the whole presenting thus an uninterrupted chain of legal facts plus the learned comments thereto. To be sure, the textbooks in single cases referred as to the "source of law"; in more or less absolutist countries it was the "divine right" of the monarch, in more democratic ones it was the "will of the people" as expressed through their representation, the Parliament.

The trouble for the professorial guild started when it was necessary to "explain" the change from an absolutist to a constitutional government that has come about as a result of a Revolution.

It was not so bad yet if the result of the Revolution was a constitutional monarchy. In such case the legal theory was taking a leaf from theology: as God through the laws of nature establishes of his own volition an "order" to be followed by his selfsame power so the monarch establishes the constitution through which he puts limitations upon his own actually unrestrainable rule. Such had been the "theory" for tsarist Russia, monarchist Germany and Austria-Hungary, etc. But the job became harder when, as in France, the final outcome of a revolution (or for that matter of a series of revolutions) there emerged a democratic republic. Still, even in that case the learned men tried to help themselves by finding the "legal basis" for the constitutional assembly and the new constitution in some centuries-old and forgotten statutes or some legitimistic acts of the counter-revolution. But under the circumstances cited they—some rare exceptions excluded—admit the "legality" of the Revolution itself,

There was one democratic country, however, whose "organic law" defied the finest mentality of the reactionary jurists, presenting at the same time an "interesting case" to the more liberal-minded—the United States. The "Declaration of Independence," representing the first, world-known revolutionary act of a people in revolt, breaking its colonial ties and establishing its own rule. Here was a charter that unmistakingly was establishing the right of the People to a Revolution!

That whenever any form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the people to alter or to abolish it. . . .

We db not know how European textbooks of "constitutional law" look nowadays—after the experiences of the World War, Russian Revolution, Fascism and so on. We confess, it even puzzles us. But we do know this thing. The country with such exceptional and exemplary constitutional document is moving rather fast to a point where some paragraphs of this document will be considered criminal.

It is a pity (indeed, a great pity) that The DAILY WORKER can't be as free with money as the capitalist organizations which seem to send at will astronomical sums to so many people. If we did not know that the cost of postage alone would bankrupt the paper we should insist on sending one to at least all government officials, including the members of the cabinet, requesting their candid opinion regarding this little phrase. Who can doubt the result of such a questionnaire? And after all, while at present it only happens with individuals that they are arrested for reading the Constitution in public place, can there not come a time when the powers that be would be compelled to repudiate the law, lest it be necessary to imprisor the whole people for taking the words of the proud document at their face value?

In the "material" brought a few days ago before the Federal Grand Jury for the indictment of the staff of The DAILY WORKER there was, according to newspaper reports, a book "which ridiculed Christianity, American history" and "conservative labor leaders and organizations" seems somewhat strange. The bewilderment disappears, however, when one considers that all three serve as secure and trustworthy props of the "American Constitution," or correctly speaking of stagnant reaction. Other connections are no less plausible. It may be, for instance, that "conservative leaders and organizations" show actually so little life that they belong already to history; or, that "conservative labor leaders and organizations" are on the same level as "Christianity" so far as their actual value and usefulness to Labor is concerned.

Be it as it may, let us keep to the "Independence Day." Wa must state then that the "American history" which is mentioned here is not the true American history, but the one falsified for patriotic use. Just recently there appeared an interesting biography of Thomas Paine by Miss Mary Agnes Best. In her conscientious study Miss Best shows what a generous treatment has been meted out to this giant of American Revolution. The man who more than anybody else was responsible for keeping the ragged revolutionary army in high spirits, whose writings were a tremendous spur to the energy of the revolutionary leaders and whose services, by the way, were fully recognized by men like Washington, Jefferson, etc., this man was prosecuted by American (and English) reactionaries, cursed by the Church ("Christianity") and maligned by professional patriots ("American History").

Now if moderate revolutionists like Paine get such treatment at the hands of American patriots, what can the poor devils from The DAILY WORKER expect? And, by the way, does not the raving of Ambassador Herrick against the Bolshevik Revolution and his high praise for Russian tsarism call to our memory another ambassador to France who was intriguing in company with the French court against the French revolution and who out of his tory hatred for the moderate revolutionist Paine helped to clap the latter in prison and almost caused his death?

The place of Morris in the unfalsified American history is known—the dungheap. The place of Paine has been, despite all the maligning, firmly established.

But we are sure, neither Herrick nor the Federal Grand Jury will heed this.

THE L. I. D. MEETS AMONG POLITICAL COBWEBS

By MARIA LETRO.

THE League for Industrial Democracy in its annual conference at Camp Tamiment, July 22 to 26, took into consideration the subject of "prosperity" and all those phases of existence that are affected by the presence or absence of prosperity. All of the speakers deplored the myth of prosperity, particularly among the unorganized and unskilled workers, and the farmers. There was a good deal of talk about business cycles, recurrent periods of prosperity and depression, index numbers, real wages and standards of living. Certain sessions of the conference were reminiscent of the academic, musty flavor of the economics classroom. When speakers are chosen who have no direct contact with the scarring struggle to obtain bread and butter on the farms and in the mines, and who are so used to the classroom that they never lose the professorial attitude, it is to be expected that their tale of prosperity or lack of prosperity will not ring with conviction or the sincerity of first hand knowledge.

There was one honorable exception in this group, and that was Benjamin Marsh of the Farmers' National Council and the People's Reconstruction League. Although he does not believe in the efficacy of revolutionary methods or direct action, he spoke from twenty-five years' experience as a fighter for farmers' rights and the nationalization of public utilities, with practical knowledge and a keen insight into the present agricultural condition of this country: "The American farmer is the strongest individualist in the United States.

"Cooperatives alone won't solve the farm question. Let tho farmer go so low, let him get so miserable that finally tha only way out for him is organization, and then unionize him." Dean Cary Taylor of North Carolina College read a brilliant paper on the agricultural situation which sounded, someone said "as though it had been written for the American Philosophical Society." In one part of the paper he stated that the majority of the farm mortgages are held by city enterprises, a large body of them being life insurance companies, and in another section of the paper he said that "the tariff was not inaugurated for the benefit of agriculture, but the way for the farmers to get their share is either to get up on the tariff table, or to pull out the legs from under the tariff table and bring down the bankers on top with a bump."

Scott Nearing, taking Bertram Wolfe's place in offering the Communist political program as opposed to the socialist political program offered by Morris Hillquit stirred up a hornet's nest in the midst of those comfortable intellectuals, liberals and intense radicals who for the most part thought with Comrade Hillquit that the efforts of the socialist party should be centered on the attainment of social insurance and old age pensions for workers, on the attack against the power of the courts, and on the building up of a strong opposition party in this country, as in England, until the time is ripe for a socialist state to step up and offer itself on a silver platter. The buzzing of the hornets began when Scott Nearing said that there must be organized and built up in the United States a professional revolutionary class which will prepare for the revolution. Charney Vladeck, representing a socialist paper with a quarter of a million dollars profit annually, was so amused over this that when Nearing hammered back, "Vladeck, if you send your like in the socialist party had remained as lean and vigorous as you were twenty-five years ago, and if you were drawing down a salary of forty or fifty dollars a week the socialist party would not be where it is today," the business manager of the "Forward" and the rest of the audience were forced to be quiet, temporarily only, however.

Sitting directly in back of the writer was an economics professor from one of the New York colleges. Once when Nearing had jolted her academic sensibilities too harshly she whispered to her companion, "Oh well, he's a Russian Communist." An all-damning statement presumably. It was a good thing for the health of the conference that a Communist was present. At least then there was spirited, if at times, from the audience, not very intelligent discussion.

WOMEN

The Mothers' League of New England

By SARAH PELL-TELLIN.

During the world war, when the war propaganda penetrated every corner of the country, when young and old, idealists and adventurers, were drawn into the patriotic nationalistic game, the women and the youth—the most sentimental section of the population—were the first victims. Young boys, strong and healthy, right from the school desks, were driven by their sweethearts, aye, and even by their mothers to enlist. Thousands of women's clubs, sewing circles, the Red Cross, were spontaneously organized, all over the country to assist in the massacre of their own and other women's children, husbands, brothers, and lovers. It was then that the class-conscious men and women workers decided that something must be done to stop the disgraceful war propaganda and open tha workers' eyes to the real reasons of America's entry into the war, and its results—tha high costs of living, high rent, etc., from which the working people suffered most.

They Organize.

In the midst of these conditions a group of bravo class-conscious women organized themselves into a body under the name of the Mothers' League of New England. As we see, the mere name of the organization indicates its aims and purposes: A union of mothers who sacrificed their lives for their children against the destroyers of the younger generation for selfish aims of the ruling capitalist class. Thousands of women responded to the call of the mothers' league, and joined the organization to fight under the mighty slogans of protest and discontent. The mass anti-war demonstrations conducted by the league are still remembered, also the splendid organized assistance to the bakers and shoemakers in their struggle for better conditions.

The ordinary woman appreciated the good work of the Mothers League, because it was fighting for immediate needs (lower prices and rent) as well as for her general education in social matters.

The membership increased rapidly. Quantitatively it was already a mass organization but it suffered from a lack of understanding. Its program was inadequate, its tasks limited. When the war ended a great number of members dropped out, the others went back home to their kitchens, or joined the petty bourgeois clubs maintained by organized charity or the chamber of commerce, and partook of ice cream and cake and hand shaking with prominent leaders who entertained them with music and dancing. This was a crystalization process and the Mothers League came out of it stronger than before. The membership was now more class conscious, and had learned much more about class relations and the class struggle.

Instead of mere propaganda, the league now adopted new methods, studying the rolo of the woman in the world social order, and the economic and political situation of society, managing lectures, discussions on various problems, classes in history of culture in women's movements. In the every day struggle the league was active in helping strikers, the workers' press, workers' institutions, defenses of political prisoners, etc, using this activity as a means to educate the women of the working class. Now in the twelfth year of its existence we find the Mothers League of New England, the only organization of Jewish working women and housewives, with a definite left orientation, although non-partisan. Ten branches all over the state, with a membership of over six hundred, and a constant sympathisers about twice as large, who are doing the hard work of agitating and educating the working women, and keeping them in constant touch with the bitter struggle, for a better and a happier future—this is the accomplishment of the Mothers League of New England.

CO-OPERATIVES

SESSION of the COÖPERATIVE ALLIANCE

At its session of April 26-29 in Brussels, the Central Committee of the alliance concentrated attention on determining the points for discussion at the International Cooperative Congress in Stockholm. The question of representation of Soviet cooperatives in the Central Committee was decided, in accordance with the proposal of the Soviet representative by 21 votes against 5 as follows: Soviet cooperatives are to have 14 representatives to the 5 allotted to other individual countries.

Only Two Groups Oppose.

Only the German and Czech delegations voted against the proposal. The German delegates were very strongly opposed to the proposal. Since the Amsterdam Trade Union International has been invited to send representatives to the congress, the Soviet delegation proposed that the Red International of Labor Unions should be also officially invited. This proposal was rejected, the voting resulting in a draw (17:17). A proposal to have at the congress a demonstration against fascism was also rejected.

The German representatives took advantage of this opportunity for renewed fierce denunciations of proletarian dictatorship and thus gave the Soviet representative an opportunity to explain the character of proletarian statt power as compared with bourgeois class rule and particularly with fascist methods. All other proposals were left to the decision of the congress.

Forced Concessions.

On the whole the voting particularly in regard to representation of the Soviet cooperatives in the Central Committee, and to the invitation of the I.H.L. as well as the discussion, showed that the representatives of the reformist unions are more often than not compelled to make some concessions to the spirit of class consciousness prevailing among rank and file cooperators. — ("Koop Zhizn," 11.5).

Coöperative Delegations to the Soviet Union

The Central Union of Soviet-Russian Consumers' Cooperatives (Centrosoyus) has invited the following cooperative organizations to send delegations to the Soviet Union in the course of the current year for the purpose of studying the work of the Soviet cooperatives and their development after 10 years of proletarian dictatorship: the English and Scotch Wholesale Societies, the British Cooperative Society, the English and Scotch Cooperative Women's Guilds, the Swedish Cooperative Society, the Central Society of German Consumers' Cooperatives, the Hamburg Wholesale Society, the Central Society of the Czecho-Slovakian Consumors' Cooperatives, the National Federation of French Cooperatives, the Central Society of the Workers' Cooperatives of Belgium, the Austrian Central Society of Consumers' Cooperatives and the Cooperative League of North America. The cooperative delegations are to spend 2 to 4 weeks in the Soviet Union.

They are to visit Moscow, Leningrad, Kharkov, Rostov-on-Don, Nizhni-Novogorod, Tiflis, Baku and any other towns they would like to see.

Prague Accepts.

One of the first among the organizations invited to accept the invitation is the Czecho-Slovakian Cooperative Society in Prague, since a decision to this effect was already made at last year's congress in Pilsen. The society is sending a delegation of 14 cooperators composed of representatives of leading organs and of certain big organizations. Apart from a few Communists, most of the delegates are social-democrats. The delegation will arrive in Moscow in the first half of May and will remain four weeks in the Soviet Union. The delegation question was discussed at all district sessions which have taken place up till now and at many meetings held by individual consumers' cooperatives.

Delegated From German Group.

The German cooperative society of Czecho-Slovakia said in reply to the invitation that in view of the delegation to the Soviet Union in 1925 it is compelled this year to abstain from any other delegations to foreign countries for financial reasons. The society emphasizes in its reply that it is very interested in the Soviet cooperatives and that it is in favor of close and friendly relations with them. The Reichenberg District Society which is affiliated to the German Society decided at its congress to send delegates to Soviet Russia at its own expense. Individual societies wishing to dispatch a delegation of their own are to receive financial support from the funds of the district society.

The Belgian Society did not accept the invitation, giving its precarious financial position as the only reason for this non-acceptance.

Await French Reply.

The French Federation (Society of Consumers' Cooperatives) has not yet given a definite reply. The member of the Central Cooperative Commission in the CC of the Communist Party, Paquereaux, announced in the "Humanite" that in the event of the bureaucrats rejecting the invitation, the question would be raised at the National Congress in May. At the same time, Communists are of the opinion that the smaller societies which are under the control of the revolutionary minority, should band themselves together in order to send delegates to the Soviet Union at their own expense.

The English and Scotch Wholesale Societies have rejected the invitation. One can see by the British cooperative press that considerable interest is shown in individual local organisations of the cooperative society in the trip to the Soviet Union. The producers' cooperatives too which are affiliated as an autonomous group to the British Cooperative Society wish to participate in the trip.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—When the fifth congress of the Pan-American Federation of Labor meets in Washington on July 13, it will be attended by the largest representative body of labor men from the Caribbean and Gulf of Mexico nations ever assembled on American soil.

But not a single delegate from Argentina, Brazil or Chile, the ABC countries of South America, will be in attendance. This is indicated by credentials now in the hands of Secretary Santiago Iglesias. The Argentina Socialist Party submitted credentials, but has been informed by Iglesias that the congress will be primarily for trade union bodies.

Suspicion.

The failure of the ABC countries to attend the Washington meeting is seen as another indication of the growing antipathy between the non-Caribbean Latin countries and the United States. The feeling against the United States as the "colossus of the north" permeates not only labor organizations but commercial bodies as well, where it bobbed up in the recent Pan-American Commercial Congress.

The propaganda has an unfortunate effect, Iglesias explains, on labor relations between the South American countries and the American Federation of Labor. The Latin workers become the equator look upon A. F. of L. officials, exporters, manufacturers, diplomats and financiers as Yankee bogey.

Delegation Going.

If Iglesias' suggestion is adopted by the Congress, a delegation of North American labor leaders will visit Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires, Valparaiso, Santos, Montevideo and Santiago, the centers of anti-United States propaganda, explaining the program and policies of the A. F. of L.

The Washington congress will seat delegates from the United States, Mexico, Colombia, Cuba, Nicaragua, Santo Domingo, Venezuela, Panama, Salvador and Porto Rico. At the fourth congress in Mexico City in 1924, delegates were present from Nicaragua, Panama, Santo Domingo, Guatemala and Porto Rico, in addition to the A. F. of L. and Mexican Federation of Labor (CROM).

Unionizing.

The main object of the fifth congress, according to Iglesias, who is also president of the Porto Rico Federation of Labor, will be the strengthening of labor unions along the shores of the Caribbean.

Iglesias sees the job as an immense one with scores of sharp conflicts with employing interests before success is attained. That it can be attained in good measure is evidenced, he declares, by the success of the Mexican Federation of Labor.

IT WAS LONG AGO

By T. LOAF.

YEARS ago the learned professors of the theory of the so-called "constitutional law" as it was being taught at the European universities, had always a mighty hard job when in their nicely rounded systems of government they came across the question of Revolution. Then the legalistic minds of the learned professors knew but one source of law—the Law itself. That means every new law had its validity from a preceding one, the whole presenting thus an uninterrupted chain of legal facts plus the learned comments thereto. To be sure, the textbooks in single cases differed as to the "source of law"; in more or less absolutist countries it was the "divine right" of the monarch, in more democratic ones it was the "will of the people" as expressed through their representation, the Parliament.

The trouble for the professorial guild started when it was necessary to "explain" the change from an absolutist to a constitutional government that has come about as a result of a Revolution.

It was not so bad yet if the result of the Revolution was a constitutional monarchy. In such case the legal theory was taking a leaf from theology: as God through the laws of nature establishes of his own volition an "order" to be followed by his selfsame power so the monarch establishes the constitution through which he puts limitations upon his own actually unrestrainable rule. Such had been the "theory" for tsarist Russia, monarchist Germany and Austria-Hungary, etc. But the job became harder when, as in France, the final outcome of a revolution (or for that matter of a series of revolutions) there emerged a democratic republic. Still, even in that case the learned men tried to help themselves by finding the "legal basis" for the constitutional assembly and the new constitution in some centuries-old and forgotten statutes or some legitimistic acts of the counter-revolution. But under no circumstances would they—some rare exceptions excluded—admit the "legality" of the Revolution itself.

There was one democratic country, however, whose "organic law" defied the fossilized mentality of the reactionary jurists, presenting at the same time an "interesting case" to the more liberal-minded—the United States. The "Declaration of Independence," representing the first written revolutionary document of a people in revolt, breaking its colonial ties and establishing its own rule. There was a charter then unmistakingly was establishing the right of the People to a Revolution!

That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the people to alter or abolish it.

We do not know how European textbooks of "constitutional law" look nowadays—after the experiences of the World War, Russian Revolution, Fascism and so on. We confess, it even puzzles us. But we do know this thing. The country with such exceptional and exemplary constitutional document is moving rather fest to a point where some paragraphs of this document will be considered criminal.

It is a pity (indeed, a great pity) that The DAILY WORKER can't be as free with money as the capitalist publications which are able to send at will a questionnaire to so many people. If we only know that the cost of postage alone would bankrupt the paper we should insist on sending one to at least all government officials, including the members of the cabinet, requesting their candid opinion regarding this little phrase. Who can doubt the result of such a questionnaire? And after all, while at present it only happens with individuals that they are arrested for reading the Constitution in public place, can there not come a time when the powers that be would be compelled to repudiate the law, lest it be necessary to imprison the whole people for taking the words of the proud document at their face value?

In the "material" brought a few days ago before the Federal Grand Jury for the indictment of the staff of The DAILY WORKER there was, according to newspaper reports, a book "which ridiculed Christianity, American history and conservative labor leaders and organizations."

At first sight, the connection between "Christianity," "American history" and "conservative labor leaders and organizations" seems somewhat strange. The bewilderment disappears, however, when one considers that all three serve as secure and trustworthy props of the "American Constitution," or correctly speaking of stagnant reaction. Other connections are no less plausible. It may be, for instance, that "conservative leaders and organizations" show actually so little life that they belong already to history; or, that "conservative labor leaders and organizations" are on the same level as "Christianity" so far as their actual value and usefulness to Labor is concerned.

Be it as it may, let us keep to the "Independence Day." We must state then that the "American history" which is mentioned here is not the true American history, but the one falsified for patriotic use. Just recently there appeared an interesting biography of Thomas Paine by Miss Mary Agnes Best. In her conscientious study Miss Best shows what a generous treatment has been meted out to this giant of American Revolution. The man who more than anybody else was responsible for keeping the ragged revolutionary army in high spirits, whose writings were a tremendous spur to the energy of the revolutionary leaders and whose services, by the way, were fully recognized by men like Washington, Jefferson, etc., this man was prosecuted by American (and English) reactionaries, cursed by the Church ("Christianity") and maligned by professional patriots ("American History").

Now if moderate revolutionists like Paine get such treatment at the hands of American patriots, what can the poor devils from The DAILY WORKER expect? And, by the way, does not the raving of Ambassador Herrick against the Bolshevik Revolution and his high praise for Russian tsarism call to our memory another ambassador to France who was intriguing in company with the French court against the French revolution and who out of his deep hatred for the moderate revolutionist Paine helped to clap the latter in prison and almost caused his death?

The place of Morris in the unfalsified American history is known—the dunghean. The place of Paine has been, despite all the maligning, firmly established.

But we are sure, neither Herrick nor the Federal Grand Jury will heed this.

THE L. I. D. MEETS AMONG POLITICAL COBWEBS

By MARIA LETRO.

THE League for Industrial Democracy in its annual conference at Camp Tamiment, July 23 to 26, took into consideration the subject of "prosperity" and all those phases of existence affected by the presence or absence of prosperity. All of the speakers deplored the myth of prosperity, particularly among the unorganized and unskilled workers, and the farmers. There was a good deal of talk about business cycles, recurrent periods of prosperity and depression, index numbers, real wages and standards of living. Certain sessions of the conference were reminiscent of the academic, musty flavor of the economics classroom. When speakers are chosen who have no direct contact with the scarring struggle to obtain bread and butter on the farms and in the mines, and who are so used to the classroom that they never lose the professorial attitude, it is to be expected that their tale of prosperity or lack of prosperity will not ring with conviction or the sincerity of first hand knowledge.

There was one honorable exception in this group, and that was Benjamin Marsh of the Farmers' National Council and the People's Reconstruction League. Although he does not believe in the efficacy of revolutionary methods or direct action, he spoke from twenty-five years' experience as a fighter for farmers' rights and the nationalization of public utilities, with practical knowledge and a keen insight into the present agricultural condition of this country: "The American farmer is the strongest individualist in the United States.

"Cooperatives alone won't solve the farm question. Let the farmer go on his way, let him get so miserable that finally the only way out for him is organization, and then unionize him." Dean Cary Taylor of North Carolina College read a paper on the agricultural situation, contributing at the same time an "interesting case" to the more liberal-minded—the United States. The "Declaration of Independence," representing the first written revolutionary document of a people in revolt, breaking its colonial ties and establishing its own rule. There was a charter then unmistakingly was establishing the right of the People to a Revolution!

That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the people to alter or abolish it.

WOMEN

The Mothers' League of New England

By SARAH FELL-YELLIN.

During the world war, when the war propaganda penetrated every corner of the country, when young and old, idealists and adventurers, were drawn into the patriotic nationalistic game, the women and the youth—the most sentimental section of the population—were the first victims. Young boys, strong and healthy, right from the school desks, were driven by their sweethearts, aye, and even by their mothers to enlist. Thousands of women's clubs, sewing circles, the Red Cross, were spontaneously organized, all over the country to assist in the massacre of their own and other women's children, husbands, brothers and lovers. It was then that the class-conscious men and women workers decided that something must be done to stop the disgraceful war propaganda and open the workers' eyes to the real reasons of America's entry into the war, and its results—the high costs of living, high rent, etc., from which the working people suffered most.

They Organize.

In the midst of these conditions a group of brave class-conscious women organized themselves into a body under the name of the Mothers' League of New England. As we see, the mere name of the organization indicates its aims and purposes: A union of mothers who sacrificed their lives for their children against the destroyers of the younger generation for selfish aims of the ruling capitalist class. Thousands of women responded to the call of the mothers' league, and joined the organization to fight under the mighty slogans of protest and discontent. The mass anti-war demonstrations conducted by the league are still remembered, also the splendid organized assistance to the bakers and shoemakers in their struggle for better conditions.

The ordinary woman appreciated the good work of the Mothers League, because it was fighting for immediate needs (lower prices and rent) as well as for her general education in social matters.

The membership increased rapidly. Quantitatively it was already a mass organization but it suffered from a lack of understanding. Its program was inadequate, its tasks limited. When the war ended a great number of members dropped out, the others went back home to their kitchens, or joined the petty bourgeois clubs maintained by organized charity or the chamber of commerce, and partook of ice cream and cake and hand shaking with prominant leaders who entertained them with music and dancing. This was a crystallization process and the Mothers League came out of it stronger than before. The membership was now more class conscious, and had learned much more about class relations and the class struggle.

Instead of mere propaganda, the league now adopted new methods, studying the role of the woman in the world social order, and the economic and political situation of society, managing lectures, discussions on various problems, classes in history of culture in women's movements. In the every day struggle the league was active in helping strikers, the workers' press, the workers' institutions, defense of political prisoners, etc, using this activity as a means to educate the women of the working class. Now in the seventh year of its existence we find the Mothers League of New England, the only organization of Jewish working women and housewives, with a definite left orientation, although non-partisan. Ten branches all over the state, with a membership of over six hundred, and a crowd of sympathizers about twice as large, who are doing the hard work of agitating and educating the working women, and keeping them in constant touch with the bitter struggle, for a better and a happier future—this is the accomplishment of the Mothers League of New England.

SESSION OF THE COÖPERATIVE ALLIANCE

At its session of April 26-29 in Brussels, the Central Committee of the alliance concentrated attention on determining the points for discussion at the International Cooperative Congress in Stockholm. The question of representation of Soviet cooperatives in the Central Committee was decided, in accordance with the proposal of the Soviet cooperative by 21 votes against 5 as follows: Soviet cooperatives are to have 14 representatives to the 7 allotted to other individual countries.

Only Two Groups Oppose.

Only the German and Czech delegations voted against the proposal. The German delegates were the most strongly opposed to the proposal. Since the Amsterdam Trade Union International has been invited to send representatives to the congress, the Soviet delegation proposed that the Red International of Labor Unions should be also officially invited. The proposal was rejected, the voting resulting in a draw (17:17). A proposal to have at the congress a demonstration against fascism was also rejected.

The German representatives took advantage of the opportunity for renewed fierce denunciations of proletarian dictatorship and thus gove the Soviet representatives an opportunity to explain the fundamental difference in state power as compared with bourgeois class rule and particularly with fascist methods. All other proposals were left to the decision of the congress.

Forced Concessions.

On the whole the voting—particularly in regard to the representation of the Soviet cooperatives in the Central Committee, and to the invitation of the RILU—as well as the discussion, showed that the representatives of the reformist unions are more often than not compelled to make some concessions to the spirit of class consciousness prevailing among rank and file cooperators. — ("Koop Zhizn," 11.5).

Coöperative Delegations to the Soviet Union

The Central Union of Soviet-Russian Consumers' Cooperatives (Centrosoyus) has invited the following cooperative organizations to send delegations to the Soviet Union in the course of the current year for the purpose of studying the work of the Soviet cooperatives and their development after 10 years of proletarian dictatorship: the English and Scotch Wholesale Societies, the British Cooperative Society, the English and Scotch Cooperative Women's Guilds, the Swedish Cooperative Society, the Central Society of German Consumers' Cooperatives, the Hamburg Wholesale Society, the Central Society of the Czecho-Slovakian Consumers' Cooperatives, the National Federation of French Cooperatives, the Central Society of the Workers' Cooperative Consumers, the Austrian Central Society of Consumers' Cooperatives and the Cooperative League of North America. The cooperative delegations are to spend 2 to 4 weeks in the Soviet Union.

They are to visit Moscow, Leningrad, Kharkov, Rostov-on-Don, Nizhni-Novogorod, Tiflis, Baku and any other towns they would like to see.

Prague Accepts.

One of the first among the organizations invited to accept the invitation is the Czecho-Slovakian Cooperative Society, Prague. The decision to this effect was already made at last year's congress in Pilsen. The society is sending a delegation of 14 cooperators composed of representatives of leading organs and of certain big organizations. Apart from a few Communists, most of the delegates are social-democrats. The delegation will arrive in Moscow in the first half of May and will remain four weeks in the Soviet Union. The delegation question was discussed at all district sessions which have taken place up till now and at many meetings held by individual consumers' cooperatives.

Delegated From German Group.

The German cooperative society of Czecho-Slovakia said in reply to the invitation that in view of the delegation to the Stockholm congress, it is compelled this year to abstain from any other delegations to foreign countries for financial reasons. The society emphasizes in its reply that it is very interested in the Soviet cooperatives and that it is in favor of close and friendly relations with them. The Reichsberg District Society which is in affiliated to the German Society decided at its congress to send delegates to Soviet Russia at its own expense. Individual societies wishing to send a delegation of their own are to receive financial support from the funds of the district society.

The Belgien Society did not accept the invitation, giving its precarious financial position as the only reason for this non-acceptance.

Await French Reply.

The French Federation (Society of Consumers' Cooperatives) has not yet given a definite reply. The member of the Central Cooperative Commission in the CC of the Communist Party, Paquereaux, announced in the "Humanité" that in the event of the bureaucrats rejecting the invitation, the question would be raised at the National Congress in May. At the same time, Communists are of the opinion that the smaller societies affiliated to the German Society of revolutionary minority, should band themselves together in order to send delegates to the Soviet Union at their own expense.

The English and Scotch Wholesale Societies have rejected the invitation. One can see by the British cooperative press that considerable interest is shown in individual local organizations of the cooperative society in the trip to the Soviet Union. The progressive cooperatives too which are affiliated as an autonomous group to the British Cooperative Society wish to participate in the trip.

Dear Comrades:

Without doubt you are informed of the imprisonment on May 1st of Comrade Monmousseau, Secretary of the C. G. & U. of France. Since then a great number of militants have been put in prison. Lately the reactionary wave has been extremely intense. The French government has resolved to destroy our party, and is dealing the first serious blow by arresting the most prominent leaders. Parliamentary immunity will soon be a thing of the past, and Doriot, Marty, Cachin, Couturier and the entire Communist parliamentary group are in danger of imprisonment.

The discovery of so-called "Red Plots" are the order of the day; but one balloon explodes after another, and this causes extreme rage among the reactionaries. The influence of our party on the soldiers and sailors is very considerable and the government feels its hold loosening every day in so far as the army is concerned. Sarraut's Constantine speech, threatening death to Communism, the law Boncour militarizing men, women, children and labor organizations in time of war, recently passed, the intensification of reaction, the worsening economic conditions of the proletariat and the lower classes, the danger of war, etc., have strengthened the position of our party along the whole line. Evidence of this can be seen in the recent various local elections in which the Party has come out victorious nine out of ten times; and the participation of more than 100,000 workers in the recent assemblages at the "Wall" to commemorate the martyrs of the Commune.

In a word, the French bourgeoisie has a hard bone to bite and therefore the struggle which, threatens to break out in the near future, will be of a great historical importance, if not decisive, in view of the revolutionary sympathy of great masses of soldiers and sailors.

Receive my revolutionary greetings, and believe me, Fraternally yours,— Louis De Fillippis.

Editor, The DAILY WORKER:

To those who fear for the future of our militant DAILY WORKER, it is necessary to point out how splendidly the workers all over are rallying to the call for support.

Comrades Dunne and Miller were in the front line trenches facing the enemy, and all the reserves thruout the country put forward a special effort for the result of which was to defeat (temporarily at least) the machinations of the employing class who look upon The DAILY WORKER as their most dangerous opponent.

Bishop W. M. Brown just recently visited a short two weeks' tour of the Philadelphia and Boston districts, almost without exception, their reception was splendid.

In Philadelphia, Comrade L. Lemley, the energetic DAILY WORKER agent had his program all arranged. Scranton, Allentown, (Chester, Trenton and Philadelphia were polished for donations and Comrade Olga Gold, Hoffman, Wishnewsky, Markoff and a host of others, all put their shoulders to the wheel.

In spite of the fact that special drives were being made for the Protest, the Joint Defense of Passaic and Gastonia, and other worthy causes, the splendid sum of over $200 was raised for the Daily.

In Boston the reception was even better, if that were possible. Comrade Shohan of the Bookstore had set his quota for the tour in his territory at $500 and he sure made a herculean effort to attain it.

Norwood, Brockton, Worcester, Peabody, South Boston and Gardener were visited. Comrade Gage and his wife, Feinstein, Parta, Anderson and others too numerous to mention all joined in a 100 per cent effort and raised the magnificent sum of $480. The Finnish comrades promised support, however, and there is no doubt that they will send a substantial donation to The DAILY WORKER, which will bring the Boston district quota up to scratch. One can truly say that with such friends the only English labor daily in the world will live.

A continuation of such devotion will not only save The DAILY WORKER, but will send it into new fields where its influence will increase one hundred fold.—Pat Devine.

Editor, DAILY WORKER,

Dear Comrade:—One need not be very imaginative these days to perceive the great game of deception being played at the expense of the reading public by the powers of the world. In fact, a course of "reading between the lines" should be taken by Americans and others, in order to make clear the true goal to which nations of the world are pointing.

One of our foreign "defenders" Mr. Houghton speaking at the Harvard commencement exercises makes the following statements:

First, that a declaration of war against other peoples in the group (meaning, of course, the group whose purpose shall be to "outlaw" war") can be made only after the question has received the affirmative sanction of a majority of the qualified electors of each; and,

Second, that in return for reciprocal pledges, each shall agree not to attack the others for a term of—say—one hundred years.

Does this not smack of anti-Russian propaganda? Does this not seem like the forerunner to the gradual formation of a powerful alliance against the common enemy? This talk of "outlawing war" is the bunk. There is too much profit to be made from the sales of munitions, etc., for any such talk to be clothed with any sincerity. It seems to be little more than a desperate attempt to hold back the great tide. We seem to be on the verge of a world-wide flood that will make our own mid-country disaster shrink to the insignificance of a mirage in the desert. We'll not try to bank on World Court talk but try to bank on World Labor Solidarity and Class Consciousness.—Comrade L. Cantz, Capitalism.—L. Chaskin, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Loyhee Bond For $500,000.

PARIS, July 3.—Charles A. Levine, who flew to Germany with Clarence Chamberlin, is now facing a $500,000 U. S. Government suit as a result of alleged irregularities involved in his purchase of salvaged war materials from the war department. Loyhee has stated that the government has offered to settle for $250,000, adding that he is making counter-claims for an even higher sum.

PROSECUTOR SAYS VERDICT IN GOLD CASE 'IRREGULAR'

Asks Postponement of Sentence

When Sam Gold and Sam Kurland, fur workers who were convicted by a jury in the court of general sessions last Wednesday came up for sentence Friday morning before Judge Donnellan, Assistant District Attorney Morris Pasner asked that for a postponement of sentence on Gold saying that he did not believe that he had been legally convicted.

On the suggestion of Pasner, bail was set at $5,000 for Gold who will be released today. The judge said that due to the postponement of sentence on Gold he would do the same in the case of Kurland, but instead of doing so he was committed to the Tombs where he will remain for the next two months until Judge Donellan has returned from his vacation.

To Investigate Trial.

In requesting that sentence be deferred in the case of Gold, Pasner said that he wanted time to "investigate the matter" as he said he had grave doubts as to the legality of the procedure at the trial. He did not give any further details.

Paul Goodman, a striker and Willy Rosenfeld, a foreman, sympathetic to the right wing, were both dismissed when brought before Magistrate George Ewald in Jefferson Market Court.

Had Cut Striker.

They were both arrested a week ago after Rosenfeld had brutally cut up Goodman who had worked in the same shop. At first the police refused to arrest the right winger but when officials of the Joint Board went to the 80th St. police station and made a protest he was taken into custody.

Big Picket Line Tuesday.

The largest picketing demonstration since the beginning of the strike is now being planned for Tuesday morning. While the right wing and the police have been hoping that the wholesale arrests and mass sentencing of the militant workers would break the fighting spirit of the fur workers, it is believed that when they see the thousands of working class fighters pour into the market after the Fourth of July holidays, they will realize that all of their terrorism has been in vain.

Tricks Are Useless.

Many of the strikers Friday were heard to express that in their opinion, after the mighty picket line next Tuesday, the right wing-police combine will have realized that all of their tricks are useless when matched by the mighty power of the workers, struggling together as one individual.

A meeting to organize a Williamsburg branch of the Furriers Women's Council will be held Tuesday evening, 7:30 p. m. at the home of Abe Rosen, 64 Tompkins Ave., Brooklyn. All mothers, wives, sisters and sweethearts of fur workers are urged to attend and become members.

The council will help the furriers in their struggle to better their working conditions.

THINK OF THE SUSTAINING FUND AT EVERY MEETING!

PROGRESSIVES WIN FOUR POSTS IN THE CHICAGO CARPENTERS' DISTRICT COUNCIL

By JERRY ANDREWS.

CHICAGO, July 3.—In the June 11th elections of Chicago Carpenters' District Council officers the following progressives were elected to office: Anton Johannsen member of Local Union 1367, for inside (Millmen's) Business Agent. He received 11,397 votes a plurality of 3720 over Ben Wittmen, the Jensenite. Fred Anderson from Local 416 was elected on the Finance Committee. Frank Stahl from Local 13 and A. Bierman from Local 504 were elected on the Arbitration Board.

The whole Jensen administration was put out of office with the exception of Chas H. Sand, Sec'y-Treasurer and Mark D. Taylor, Business Agent for the outside (buildings). Thos F. Flynn, a Business Agent of Local 13 for almost a quarter of a century and known as a "regular fellow" among the official family, is the newly elected Jensen successor.

Bullying Methods.

Bullying methods to gain votes on the part of the Jensenites and Flynnites are the reasons for the defeat of some of the progressives.

According to the law, the vote of locals where such was the election procedure, has to be thrown out and the guilty officials punished with expulsion from the union. But the evidence of the progressives was disregarded by the Jensenite tabulating committee and the vote of the vote of such locals by John Brims, progressive candidate for business agent was overruled by the Jensen machine in the district council; the Flynnites remained passive. And the report of the Tabulating Committee was that Taylor has defeated Brims by a majority of 84 votes.

The New Administration.

The present administration is composed of heterogeneous elements, but with one thing in common i.e., to support General President Hutcheson.

If it is permissible to characterize people then we could say, that (on a rather crude union scale) Flynn is the President Harding (he is not a red) baiter, but he has plenty of Daugherties to do that job).

Anton Johannsen is the LaFollette and the newly elected Business Agent, John R. Stevenson, is the insurgent senator from Idaho.

Secretary-Treasurer Chas H. Sands is the Branting birth, is a regular Noske, nevertheless.

Three years ago he attacked the progressive caucus as the agents Moscow and the progressive candidates who ran for office as Reds. What a "fine" combination is this, he said. See them reds, they have amalgamated with the old Flynn-Brims gang—with that gang of grafters and corruptionists. This year he ran on the Flynn ticket himself—on the ticket of the men he has proclaimed as grafters. Probably he did this with an intention to sacrifice his honor and thereby save the reds from contamination. In this election he could not find anything wrong with the doings of the reds in Chicago and therefore he covered a lot of territory. From the Atlantic seaboard to the Pacific slope he "courageously hunted down their crimes."

Among some of the "good" policies in the election campaign, Flynnites advocated the election of an American administration and the isolation of the foreigners and the reds. And they have "proved" their hundred per cent intentions by their coalition with the renegade socialist Sand, who is not a native of this land of the Indians and who only some years ago was the editor of the "Svenska Socialisten," claimed to be a revolutionary Marxist and an internationalist paper.

Machinists Journal Turns Thumbs Down On 9-Hour Day Plan

WASHINGTON, (FP) July 3.—"Nothing doing," asserts the Machinists Journal, in an editorial to be published in the July issue, in answer to the Willard plan for bringing back the 9 and 10-hour day on the railroads. Under the guise of "stabilizing employment," a railroad executives' committee headed by Daniel Willard of the Baltimore & Ohio recommended that the 8-hour day be dropped in the busy seasons.

"It is our opinion," declares the Machinists Journal, "that this is a subterfuge pure and simple. It is the opening wedge for a 10-hour day. As a matter of fact, the railroads do not as a rule employ more men than they need. If emergency requires, men may be worked overtime, if overtime rates are paid. Apparently what the Committee had in mind is a 9 and 10-hour day at straight time for the additional one or two hours worked.

"We are unalterably opposed to the Committee's suggestion, which will we are confident, find little favor and be given less consideration, except on roads under company union domination. So far as the shopcrafts' organizations are concerned, there will be nothing doing."

Have Paid Your Contribution to the Subbotnik Sustaining Fund?

"A farm in Iowa."

This is what Morris Sigman, president of the reactionary International, is said to have owned during the past few years.

The reason why he chose to buy the farm in the Far West rather than in New York state, Pennsylvania or Connecticut has just become clear.

On Sigman's "farm" grow merry-go-rounds, shoot-the-chutes, ferris wheels, shooting galleries, fat ladies, hot dog stands, South Sea dancing girls, and other Coney Island attractions to refresh him when he sags under the strain of trying to maintain his reactionary leadership over the workers who have repudiated him.

The correspondent who spotted these two advertisements from the Storm Lake (Ia.) "Pilot-Tribune" relates that Sigman is a big figure among the business leaders of the town. The labor "leader" paid $14,000 for the land upon which his amusement park is situated, and the total value of the business is now estimated to be over $75,000.

Y. W. L. MEMBERS THREATENED BY FEDERAL AGENTS

Stop the Distribution of Anti-War Pamphlet

While distributing leaflets at Grand Central Station, Friday to some recruits leaving for the citizens' military training camp at Plattsburg, N. Y., three members of the Young Workers (Communist) League were stopped by agents of the department of justice. After the leaflets were confiscated the three young workers were run out of the railroad depot.

One of the department of justice operatives questioned them. When they said that they were Communists, he told them that he had helped secure the indictment against The DAILY WORKER staff earlier in the week. He threatened to visit the headquarters of the Young Workers League and the Workers Party, located at the East 125th St., and "run everyone I find there."

He then asked who is the leader of the league. When he did not get a reply he growled, "Is it Kaplan? I'll get him yet!"

They were told that they were lucky because he did not have them in prison where they "would be taken care of."

Several hundred leaflets were given out before the federal detectives were aware of the distribution. Many of the recruits refused to give the leaflets to the captain who were around to collect them.

The three members of the league who distributed them are, Philip Frankfeld, B. Cohen and I. Shiffman.

The leaflet reads in part.

"Today you are leaving for camp. Most of you are going for the first time, others have been there before. Before you leave, we want to say a few things about the CMTC to you—and we want you to think it over.

"We are faced with the prospect of another World War. Of all the imperialistic powers, America is the most ruthless and aggressive. Thousands of American marines are still in little Nicaragua, "pacifying" that country for the bankers of Wall Street. Warships and marines are in China, defending the investments of Wall Street and trying to crush the heroic struggle of the Chinese people for freedom. Great Britain is trying to provoke a war against Soviet Russia, the only Workers' and Farmers' government in the world. America is taking the lead in suppressing all of the little countries in Latin and South America, in creating a large navy and air force, and in militarizing and prusalanizing the youth.

"The citizens' military training camps is one of the means to train the future cannon fodder for this will fight and die on some far off battlefield. The CMTC's help to prepare for war—it is a military institution first of all. The slogans employed in order to attract you to the camps are nothing more than smoke screens to hide the real character of this war breathing plan. "Build your body," "Enjoy a good vacation, etc." are snares to entrap the unsuspecting ones into the tentacles of the military machine. More than that, the CMTC's are supported and endorsed by big bankers, industrial concerns and railroads for another reason too.

"The CMTC's get the approval of the U. S. Steel Corporation, Pennsylvania Railroad, Standard Oil Company of Gary and Rockefeller, because anti-labor and anti-union ideas are instilled into the minds of the recruits. The lectures given on citizenship are attacks on the labor movement, on all progressive tendencies within America, and particularly on Soviet Russia."

Davison Plans Huge Air Force; Flights Part of Propaganda

That many of the air flights that have been furnishing the capitalist press with front page news have been inspired by the War Department was admitted by Assistant Secretary of War F. Trubee Davison in a luncheon address before the Yonkers Rotary Club recently. The War Department is working out plans for a huge military air force before 1932, he said.

"The flight from California to Hawaii by Lieutenants Maitland and Hegenberger, in an army transport of service type, is a fitting climax to a year of remarkable progress in army aviation in this country," he said. "The courage and skill exhibited by these two pilots typify the spirit of the army air corps; the efficient performance of the plane points to the high standards set for army aircraft."

During the fiscal year just ending, the speaker said, marked the last stand of wooden planes in the army service.

"After September 1, not a single 'flimsy' will be in service. The discard of these planes began on June 1st."

Order New Planes.

Orders for 290 new planes of various types were placed during the year. The new equipment included 50 pursuit craft, 40 attack planes, 10 transports similar to the Fokker used by Commander Byrd, 80 observation machines, 110 training ships and 9 Amphibians, equipped for both land and water landings.

"Next Saturday marks the first anniversary of the adoption of the five-year army air corps development program. As the new fiscal year starts tomorrow, $21,891,000 will be available for continuation of this program. Out of this sum, $12,000,000 is authorized for the purchase of 590 planes. Authorization is also given to increase the number of flying officers to 1,100, and the enlisted strength to 10,000.

Huge Air Force.

"There is every indication that the support of Congress and an airminded public, this country, by the end of 1932 will have attained the air defense goal set out in the five-year program of 1926. Then we will have in the army flying plant, a corps of 1,650 flying officers, 550 reserve officers on active duty, and 15,000 enlisted men. The flying equipment will consist of 480 pursuit, 95 attack, 185 bombardment, 80 transports, 412 observation, 72 amphibian and 479 training planes, and 110 aircraft of various types in war reserve."

Besides the Honolulu flight, secretary Davison pointed to the 23,000 mile Pan-American Good Will flight, the Canadian Fairfrending flight and the Michigan-Texas Scouting Tour as outstanding achievements of the year. Those flights as well as the day-to-day routine spins of the army birdmen were credited with having resulted in important contributions toward motor development, plane construction, aerial navigation and airplane photography.

Editor Did Not Violate Smut Law, Court Says in Dismissing Graphic Head

The Court of Special Sessions yesterday acquitted Emil H. Gouvreau, editor of the Graphic, of violating the law by persistently devoting more than half its space to crime and for being indecent and a public nuisance.

The charge was made by John S. Sumner, anti-hunter, toward the close of the "Peaches" Browning separation trial.

Not Guilty.

Speaking for the court Justice Healy said, "As far as the question of indecency is concerned, we might find that the pictures and perhaps the printed matter may be, in the opinion of some, disgusting and perhaps not what we believe should be printed in a paper in the city of New York or any other place. But still, it does not come under the law, in our opinion, and therefore on all the grounds the defendant is acquitted and discharged."

3 Dead in Chicago Heat.

RIGHT WING PLOT TO JAIL FURRIER PICKETS EXPOSED

Unity Committee Tells of "Forward" Gloating

Calling upon the needle workers to protest against the wholesale jailing of the furriers, the Unity Committee of the Fur, Cloak and Dressmakers' Joint Boards, has distributed thousands of leaflets in the market, pointing out the treachery of the right wing.

It reads as follows:

"Three hundred fifty workers, men and women, have been sentenced to jail terms ranging from 5 days to 6 months. What was their crime?

"Even the police who testified against them admitted that their crime consisted of nothing more violent than that of peacefully picketing in the fur market.

"The real reason why these workers were sent to jail is because IT WAS REQUESTED BY SIGMAN AND MCGRADY. The judge was nothing but a puppet in their hands. Sigman, McGrady and the Forward have determined to break the fur-workers' strike at any cost. The time has apparently arrived when they who were at one time so-called labor leaders are now the leaders of the police and the courts.

"Day after day gangsters are caught in the murderous attempts on the lives of our workers. These gangsters have long criminal records as safe-crackers, robbers and murderers. These men of the underworld are freed on bail and cannot live their bloody deeds because they belong to the Sigman-McGrady clique and thus aid the cause of Americanism, etc., while workers fighting for the right to a decent life are sent to jail.

"Workers, we must not permit this to continue! We must not permit one hundred more to be jailed and treated like prostitutes! We must not permit hundreds of men, old as well as young, to be herded off into the filthy jails and workhouses! We must not permit Sigman and McGrady to establish permanent war in the fur industry. We must not permit that these men shall destroy the working conditions that we have achieved after years of struggle.

"The 'Forward' is happy. It gloats over the torture inflicted upon our workers. Note how it describes the jailing of the fur pickets:

"'Communist fake pickets are sent to jail for five and ten days for molesting furriers.'

"This is socialism! This is the paper that until recently dominated the Jewish workers.

"We must not remain silent! Raise such a mighty protest that the politicians, police and courts will be compelled to change their tactics. Together we will battle until the Sigmans and the McGradys will be driven from the labor movement, disgraced and discredited.

"Let us battle for our freedom and rights!"

U. S. Insurance Plan Spurned by Veterans, Says General Hines

WASHINGTON, July 3.—More than 4,000,000 world war veterans gave the government life insurance, claim the cold shoulder when they refused to reinstate their war time policies having a face value of over 26 billion dollars. This information was vouchsafed by General Frank T. Hines, director of the United States Veterans' Bureau.

Recently the government has been carrying on powerful campaign to induce the ex-doughboys to pick up their lapsed wartime policies before midnight July 2, the final time for reinstatement. Hines estimates that only 700,000 policies will remain in force on the government. This More than 4,685,000 ex-soldiers were entitled to continue the government insurance.

Not Cheap.

The cost of the government life insurance is just a trifle lower in cost than most non-participating (non-dividend paying) companies charge, and when one remembers that life insurance companies make fabulous sums of money at their rates, the insignificant reduction offered by the government failed to hook the veterans.

Wily Doughboys.

General Hines said he was at a loss to explain the failure of so many veterans to "take advantage" of the government insurance.

Bewailing the fact that so few veterans fell for the government propaganda, Gen. Hines said, "It is the most inexpensive insurance available, and in case of permanent disability no premiums are collected." Hines failed to mention that the free disability clause is to be found in all standard life insurance policies irrespective of which company issued the policy.

"No greater or more advantageous privilege was ever granted by any nation to its veteran population," bemoaned the general.

But the veterans didn't agree with him.

What's What in Washington

WASHINGTON, July 1.—When the fifth congress of the Pan-American Federation of Labor meets in Washington on July 18, it will be attended by the most representative body of labor men from the Caribbean and Gulf of Mexico bona ever assembled on American soil.

But not a single delegate from Argentina, Brazil or Chile, the ABC countries of South America, will be in attendance. This is indicated by credentials now in the hands of Secretary Santiago Iglesias. The Argentina Socialist Party submitted credentials, but has been informed by Iglesias that the congress will be primarily for trade union bodies.

Suspicion.

The failure of the ABC countries to attend the Washington meeting is seen as another indication of the growing antipathy between the non-Caribbean Latin countries and the United States. The feeling against the United States as the "colossus of the north" permeates not only labor organizations but commercial bodies as well, where it bobbed up in the recent Pan-American Commercial Congress.

This propaganda has an unfortunate effect, Iglesias explains, on labor relations between the South American countries and the American Federation of Labor. The Latin workers below the equator look upon A. F. of L. officials, exporters, manufacturers, diplomats and financiers as one Yankee bogey.

Delegation Going.

If Iglesias' suggestion is adopted by the Congress, a delegation of North American labor leaders will visit Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires, Valparaiso, Santos, Montevideo and Santiago, the centers of anti-United States propaganda, explaining the program and policies of the A. F. of L.

The Washington congress will seat delegates from the United States, Mexico, Colombia, Cuba, Nicaragua, Santo Domingo, Venezuela, Panama, Salvador and Porto Rico. At the fourth congress in Mexico City in 1924, delegates were present from Nicaragua, Panama, Santo Domingo, Guatemala and Porto Rico, in addition to the A. F. of L. and Mexican Federation of Labor (CROM).

Unionizing.

The main object of the fifth congress, according to Iglesias, who is also president of the Porto Rico Federation of Labor, will be the strengthening of labor unions along the shores of the Caribbean.

Iglesias sees the job as an immense one with scores of sharp conflicts with employing interests before success is attained. That it can be attained in good measure is evidenced, he declares, by the success of the Mexican Federation of Labor.

HATS off to Alexander, Kerensky, the international white hope of us all! He believes that the early downfall of the U. S. S. R. is on the agenda. If he had not believed this for several years people might think he was full of vodka, but when a man exhibits signs of political derangement for several years something else must be the matter. Alex has made more predictions of a similar nature than any man living or dead with the exception of Grand Duke Nicholas and William J. Burns, author of the famous interviews on the Wall Street explosion.

KERENSKY spent four months here as the guest of a New York District attorney, the socialist party, the chambers of commerce and the American Federation of Labor. He delivered the goods. That is, he told those lads what they wanted to hear, in return for their coin. The Czarist emigres have little else to buoy up their courage in these dark days except faith in Russia. It is the duty of the more mentally agile among them to furnish the dope. In the United States, the officials of the A. F. of L. fear that the militants in the trade unions led by the Communists and progressives in general may turn them out into the cold. It is consoling to learn from an authority like Kerensky that "Communism will come much sooner on Mars than in the United States."

EVIDENTLY Kerensky has not succeeded in convincing the United States government that the social revolution will take place in Mars before it bestows its blessings on the workers of this country. Else the government authorities would not be so anxious to put The DAILY WORKER out of business. As we said on another occasion, Alexander is sore spiritually, because of the painful impact of the Russian revolution on his pleasant boot on his political posterior when he was sent flying into space from the Winter Palace to make room for the Bolsheviki. Kerensky is human, hence we understand the reason for his chronic emission of bile. Being grateful for small mercies we note with pleasure that he has left the country as a first class passenger on the Homeric, no doubt at the expense of members of the American bourgeoisie who would like to see this parasite in power in Russia so that they would have access to the immense wealth that is awaiting exploitation in that country to the great profit of the exploiters.

BECAUSE Mrs. Florence Kelley supported legislation for the protection of children and mothers, the D. A. R. (Daughters of the American Revolution) has issued a savage attack on her thru a paper called "The Common Enemy." Those old hussies whose minds are as light as a whiff of cigarette smoke, have not the intelligence to understand what Mrs. Kelley and people like her stand for. In fact Mrs. Kelley is a perfectly good and harmless liberal, good because she means well, and harmless for the reason that her efforts to chisel off the rough edges of capitalism are as ineffective as an attempt to change the character of the savage leopard by clipping his claws.

IN one respect this country is the most lawless in the world; in other respects the most orderly. There is less heckling at public meetings in this country than in England. This is so much so, that when heckling incidents take place, even such a well-balanced and restrained organization as the Civil Liberties Union reminides for the right of free speech. In England, cabing ministers are lucky if decomposed tomatoes and cabbages are not added by way of good measure to the vocal discord.

GERMANY had a reputation for other virtues besides efficiency. Compared to the volatile Latins, the Teutons were supposed to be staid and orderly. But if this was true of the past it certainly is not true of the present. At a recent session of the Prussian diet, Communists, socialists and nationalists, mopped a beer-soaked floor with each other. Had this happened in the United States congress it would provide headline material for a week. "You are a docile people" said Lord Northcliffe, as he looked thru a lower Broadway window at American conscripts marching down to the boat on their way to France in 1917, to fight for Wall Street and the British Empire.

U. S. DELEGATION AT GENEVA READY WITH ULTIMATUM

Conference Probably to Break Down Soon

GENEVA, July 4.—The American delegation to the "disarmament" conference is utilizing the holidays in preparation of what in plain language would be called an ultimatum to England, that unless the latter's cruiser program is modified immediately, the United States will embark on an armament race, with unlimited building of cruisers and probably of battleships also.

Many, including the highly skeptical French "observers" see this as the real reason for the existence of the conference. That is, impossible conditions will be laid down to the British and Japanese, and when the conference breaks up in disagreement, the way will be clear for the Coolidge administration to go before the American voters with the argument: "We offered to limit navies, and Britain and Japan will not consent, therefore national security demands that we build immediately and extensively." Then, as the more or less mysterious "Admiral B" who tells in the French papers all the secrets of the supposedly confidential causes held among the delegates, says, 'there will be joyful activity among munitions makers and ship yard owners."

Small Ships Advantage.

The British held a conference a few days ago and formulated in highest secrecy a program for $600,000,000 of cruisers for both United States and England, all of them to displace under 7,500 tons apiece. This, being duly reported by "Admiral B," has been uncomfortably admitted to be approximately correct by the British delegates. The joke, as all can see, is that the large number of small size cruisers asked for, gives England, with her abundance of fueling and naval stations an enormous advantage, since neither the United States nor Japan can send such small ships far enough to do much damage to the widespread British Empire.

U. S. For Big Ones.

On the other hand, the American proposal for only 300,000 tons of cruisers with an upper limit of 10,000 tons will enable the United States to compete equally with England anywhere in the beginning of the war, and give time for the superior economic power of the American to outbuild England during the early months of the conflict.

Both these proposals are, for home consumption, disguised as economy. Britain says, "Why build large cruisers—you don't need big ships to crush colonial rebellions."

Hugh Gibson, head of the American delegation says, "Great Britain is playing a dangerous game—proposing to build twice as many ships as the United States desires" and his experts will present the British with a threat to declare all limits off and build in open rivalry to England. Tomorrow will probably bring the conclusive clash.

Riffians Fight Spain On Continuous Battle Front Across Morocco

MADRID, July 4.—In spite of the severe censorship that stops all news out of Morocco, which Primo Di Rivera has several times recently declared, "completely subdued," a war office dispatch just issued betrays that the situation is far from submission that a battle line stretches across the country thru Yebala and Gomara regions. The communique was a boastful statement that "three Spanish columns had stormed and captured Bab Taza (which previous statements had always treated as already in Spanish hands) and that the Riffians had lost a hundred prisoners and fifty dead. Spanish losses were heavy, but not enumerated, and the declaration is then made, "Spanish forces in Yebala and Gomara have effected a junction and the front now consolidates a continuous line."

Needle Workers On Street!

PICKET CALL BY JOINT BOARD OF I.L.G.W. ISSUED

All active members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union are urged to be on the picket line this morning in a statement issued by the Organization Department, Joint Board, Cloak and Dressmakers' Union.

Pointing out the open alliance of the bosses, right wing and the police, the call urges the workers to sacrifice to the extreme to make victory possible for the workers.

It reads as follows:

"To all active cloak and dressmakers:

"The occurrences of the past week have revealed again the perplexed condition of the right wing bureaucracy. At the behest of the "The Forward" and the corrupt officialdom of the A. F. of L., more than 300 incorrigible workers were sent to prison to serve terms ranging from ten days to eight months.

Open Alliance.

"An open alliance has been effected between the right wing, the bosses, Mayor Walker, Governor Smith, the city magistrates and others in an effort to crush the present strike.

"This fight will end only when an overwhelming victory is achieved. Be ready to sacrifice yourself, if necessary, for the existence of the labor movement. Early Tuesday morning a huge picket demonstration will be arranged before the shops where members of the Joint Board are now on strike.

"Workers will meet at 16 West 21st Street at 7 o'clock."—Organization Department.

USSR Textile Output Increasing Rapidly; Tops Pre-War Level

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Textile production in the Soviet Union is considerably above pre-war level, according to the Soviet Union Information Bureau.

Textile production in various lines for first six months of the current fiscal year (October 1 to March 31) shows an increase of from 18.6 to 34.1 per cent. The building of new factories and the use of new equipment is responsible for the increase.

For the same period the output of cotton cloth amounted to 1,158,900 meters, while the output of woolen cloth reached the total of 42,288 meters.

Four Hurt As Ferry Crashes Into Pier

Pandemonium reigned among the two thousand passangers on the Staten Island ferryboat American Legion Sunday night when the ferryboat, swept on by a flood tide and a wind, crashed into the floating bridge on the end of its slip. Twenty feet of the floating bridge were crumpled.

Failure on the part of its captain, John Bauman, to reverse his engines in time was assigned by ferry officials as the cause of the crash. Alarmed by the shrieks and screams of the 2,000 passengers, police, fearing that the accident might be a serious catastrophe, assaulted reporters in an endeavor to suppress news of the accident.

EXPECT BEN GOLD TO LEAD FURRIER LINE HERE TODAY

Ben Gold is expected to lead this morning's picket line in the fur district when thousands of workers will hold one of the largest demonstrations since the beginning of the strike.

The furriers will show by their mass power that all the terrorism of the police and the right wing gangsters can not break their fighting spirit in the struggle to advance wages and working conditions.

"After Tuesday's demonstration the Matthew Wolls, McGradys and the rest of the crowd will realize that they cannot break the furriers union in spite of all the forces they have at their disposal," stated an active striker yesterday.

To Be Released Today.

It is hoped that today will see the release on bail of many of the strikers who are serving sentences ranging from five days to six months. The attorney for the Joint Board furriers' union in his appeal will point out the open hostility displayed by the magistrates in Jefferson Market Court when they meted out the sentences.

He will show how the attorney for the right wing, Samuel Markowich, at one occasion appeared as council for the right wing and later told the court that he was the lawyer for the bosses. He said the latter when he questioned the arrested pickets, trying to make them say things that would result in their sentences being more severe.

We Are Fighting With Our Backs to the Wall

The new attack upon The DAILY WORKER with all the force and power of the federal government, is by far the most serious threat against the existence of our paper. The indictment by the Federal Grand Jury backed by the Dollar Patriots opens up the perspective of a long hard battle, in which The DAILY WORKER will have to enlist the ablest legal talent obtainable. The proceedings in the Federal courts are expensive in the extreme, requiring the printing of voluminous records and data. The bail alone for our comrades, before any sessions of the grand jury begin, will run into many thousands of dollars. The cost of the case at this time is estimated to be at least $25,000.

Comrades, we have two courses open to us. We can put up little or no defense. We can allow ourselves to be meekly crushed, after the splendid fight we have waged for more than three years. We can allow our leading comrades to go to jail, and suffer an irreparable loss to our movement, if we do not meet the powerful attack which is being launched against us. Or on the contrary we can capitalize this attack to arouse new sympathy and loyalty to our DAILY WORKER. On the basis of this attack, we can draw in new readers and new supporters for The DAILY WORKER. Which shall it be? The support which you give our case, the resources which you give for the defense, the energy and speed with which you respond to the appeal of your DAILY WORKER, will determine whether this new attack of the capitalist class will be successful or whether we shall instead turn it into a new triumph for The DAILY WORKER.

POLAND, TORY PUPPET, PREPARES NEW ATTACK ON USSR; COMMANDS TROOPS, "BE READY FOR ACTION"

Soviet Boycott Hits Britain; Obtain German Credit; Moscow Celebrates Defense Week

MOSCOW, July 4.—The danger of a British attack on the Soviet Union thru its puppet, Poland, looms closer than ever with the receipt of a manifesto from the Communist faction of the Polish Chamber of Deputies describing feverish war preparations in Poland.

Officers of the Polish Reserve, the manifesto states, have been ordered to complete their equipment and be ready for an urgent call to action. "The sharpshooters" and other fascist organizations, with a total membership of 250,000, have been ordered to prepare for an "immediate emergency." Arms and munitions factories are working at feverish speed, often on two or three shifts, the manifesto states.

Recent evidence submitted at the trials of captured white guard bandits proved that monarchists and British spies have long used Polish territory as a base for action against the Soviet Union. The Pilsudski regime has openly encouraged Ukrainian white guard bandits, according to a statement recently issued by a prominent member of the Polish Chamber of Deputies.

The leniency with which the Polish authorities dealt with Kowceda, the murderer of Voikoff, Soviet minister to Poland, is also regarded as evidence of the openly anti-USSR policy pursued by the Pilsudski regime.

USSR Boycotts Britain.

BERLIN, July 4.—Anglo-Soviet trade will come to a complete stop in the very near future, according to statements from the Trade Commissary appearing in the Moscow press. The passage of Anglo-Soviet trade conforms with the declaration of the Soviet Union that it would boycott Britain after the tory government had annulled the Anglo-Soviet Trade Agreement and broken diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union.

Although Premier Baldwin expressed the pious hope that trade between the USSR and Great Britain would continue after the break, the Soviet Union expressed its intention of boycotting Britain. The Arcos raids proved to Soviet officials that trade with tory Britain was not a very safe business.

Better Credits In U. S. A.

The Soviet Union can trade on better terms and receive better credits in the United States than in Great Britain, according to statement in the USSR. The Soviet Union has already received a 300,000,000 mark credit from Germany.

Exports from the Soviet Union during the first eight months of the current fiscal year are officially reported as totalling 516,000,000 rubles, while exports for the same period last year amounted to only 421,000,000 rubles. Imports dropped from 516,000,000 rubles for the same months last year to 411,000,000 rubles.

Celebrate Defence Week.

MOSCOW, July 4. — "Defence Week," which began in Moscow yesterday, was featured by the graduation of several hundred officers from the Soviet War College.

"Defence Week" will be celebrated thruout the rest of the Soviet Union from July 10th to July 17th.

Outlining the object of Defence Week, M. Rykoff, chairman of the Council of Peoples Commissars, declared that the Soviet Union was not safe unless "our probable enemies, brought to realize that the Red Army, backed 100 per cent by the workers and peasant masses, is fully alive to the danger and fully prepared to meet it, shall shrink at the last moment from odds too formidable to tackle."

Consider Moscow to Tokio Air Line in Journey of 4 Days

MOSCOW, July 4.—An air line, connecting Moscow and Tokio, which is 7,000 miles apart is being contemplated here.

Three Zeppelins, capable of carrying thirty passengers and four tons of mail and perishable freight, are being constructed by the Soviet Union and may be used for journeys. The Zeppelins will be luxuriously equipped.

The air journey, with stops, will take four days. It is calculated. The trip by train across Siberia and Manchuria takes fifteen days.

$7,200,000 LEVY IS OPPOSED BY MANY ENGINEERS

Demand For Special Convention Made

(Special to the Daily Worker).

CLEVELAND, July 4.—A flood of telegrams from members protesting the unparalleled assessment of $7,200,000 placed upon them in a desperate attempt to rescue the sinking business enterprises of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, has served to show the Inquiry Committee of Ten and the convention itself that there exists a strong feeling in the organization against thrusting good money after bad.

Arithmetical Exercises.

The membership quite evidently has been doing some rapid exercises in division and multiplication. It has been discovered in cabs and roundhouses that the assessment means that each engineer, figuring up the basis of some 70,000 effective (with allowance for overhead of collection, etc.) will be required to kick in with about $120.

This would not be so bad if it were not for the fact that the membership has been led to believe that as a result of the activities of the self-styled financial wizards at the head of the union, it would receive dividends instead of having to pay assessments.

Want Special Convention.

The opposition to the assessment and the deep suspicion which prevails among the membership since the carefully censored disclosures have been made, is expressing itself in the demand for a special convention.

It is felt that the membership which is called upon to pay the bills is entitled to a much more detailed report than has as yet been given as to the real status of the far-flung "investments" made under the Stone-Prentice leadership and which range from an $8,000,000 venture in permanently moist Florida real estate (called Ven-

HIT BRITISH TAX BOOST BY STRIKE; TIE UP SHANGHAI

Right Wing Continues Terror in Canton

(Special Cable to Daily Worker.)

SHANGHAI, July 4.—The Chinese taxpayers' strike has virtually closed all of the shops in the International Settlement. Although the strike has not been extended to industrial enterprises, a large number of mills are idle.

The strike was called to protest against the order of the Municipal Council which increased municipal taxes from 14 to 16 per cent. The Chinese, who pay most of the taxes of the International Settlement, object to being taxed by a British-controlled Council.

The Association of Chinese Taxpayers has decided that if a compulsory tax raise occurs again, a strike will be called pending the settlement of the question thru negotiation.

SHANGHAI, July 4.—Reports from Canton state that the execution of left wing labor and student leaders continues. Armed troops are patroling the streets.

The anti-Japanese and anti-British boycotts that have been organized to protest against the landing of imperialist troops at Tientsin and Shantung are spreading rapidly thru the Yangtze valley.

STRIKE OF 1,500 CAPMAKERS TODAY TO ENFORCE PACT

Bosses Repudiate 40-Hr. Week; Plan Offensive

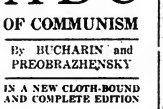
Challenged by the refusal of the bosses to put into force the 40-hour week agreed upon July, 1926, over 1,000 capmakers employed in contracting shops will strike this morning.

At the time the agreement was signed it was stipulated that the new working schedule was to go into effect no later than July 1st of this year. This concession was put thru by the right wing of the union which insisted that a period of 12 months was necessary in order to permit the bosses to "adjust themselves" to the new arrangement.

The recent formation of a national association to fight the 40-hour week promises to result in a general lockout of capmakers in many cities in the East as part of the offensive of the employers.

40 Dead, 75 Injured In Yangtse Explosion

SHANGHAI, July 4.—Forty persons were dead today and 75 others were seriously injured, of whom 25 are not expected to recover, as the result of a terrific explosion which destroyed two Chinese junks lying alongside the railroad wharf at Hsiakwan on Saturday, according to a news dispatch from Nanking.



Great property damage was done by the explosion, the powder junks having been moored in the midst of the harbor area which was congested with other shipping.

The cause of the explosion was not definitely determined, but it was believed to have been due entirely to carelessness on the part of some Chinese coolies.

Coolidge to "Supervise" Nicaragua Elections

WASHINGTON, July 4.—A professional soldier, Gen. Frank R. McCoy, was yesterday named by Coolidge to "supervise" the Nicaraguan elections in 1928.

McCoy has a long record of active service on behalf of American imperialism. He has helped in the subjugation of Cuba, Santiago and the Philippines, serving at various times, under the direction of Gen. Leonard Wood and under William Howard Taft, when the latter was governor of the island.

With the constitutional president, Sacasa, driven from the country by U. S. marines, the "election" of Diaz under the supervision of American bayonets is now a foregone conclusion.

ice with what now appears as cynical humor and to which the Locomotive Engineers' Journal paid many glowing tributes in the boom days) to wash coal mines in West Virginia and Kentucky.

Private Business Scandal.

As one curious delegate puts it in speaking of the Venice enterprise: "I don't know whether they threw our money away like water or not, but I do know that they threw a lot of it into the water. My lodge would like to at least know how many millions were spent for gondolas."

The revelations made here would show that the late Warren S. Stone, former president of the union, had used the machinery of the union to promote a number of private enterprises of a doubtful character and in which many members had invested, has served to create a current of stern determination among many delegates close to the rank and file to probe to the bottom of the tangled heap of financial wreckage which has been barely uncovered. Underneath the humorous comments heard there is a definite feeling that the Brotherhood insurance fund, with liabilities totalling some $186,000,000, has perhaps not escaped manipulation at the hands of officials intrigued by the possibilities of high finance.

Huge Building Half Empty.

Even the modern office building which houses the headquarters of the Brotherhood here is financially in a bad way. From 50 to 60 per cent of its office space is vacant and Cleveland is overbuilt in this field.

W. P. Futch, former head of the insurance department, who was removed in 1924 because he opposed the financial policies of Stone, will probably be named by the convention. By this act alone the convention will respond to some extent to the tremendous discontent which cannot find full expression here.

It is believed that the convention will be in session for at least ten days more. The important Advisory Committee has yet to be elected.

Report German Plea For Change in Dawes Plan at N. Y. Confab

BERLIN, July 4.—While the New York banking conference revived the periodical rumors that Reichsbank President Schacht would move for the revision of the Dawes plan, the Germans themselves are less optimistic in view of the week's continued business improvement.

Production, wages and employment increased, accompanied by slow but sure recovery on the bourse, and only the persistence of a passive, foreign trade balance remained to give backing to a demand for lightening the reparations burden.

The recent black Friday on the stock exchange is proving to have little serious effect on general business. The public is unwilling to sell, and speculative purchases by professionals is showing the general level up.

A "society of black Friday victims," was formed for the purpose of suing the banks for damages sustained when a sudden credit restriction precipitated the panic, but his small chance of getting the money back, according to Berlin legal experts.

One of the most important signs of Germany's economic health appears in the report of the production of raw iron, showing that this product reached a record in the month of May

TOMSKY REPORT SCORES BRITISH RIGHT WINGERS

Reformists Hit Anglo-Soviet Labor Unity

MOSCOW, July 4.—The report of Tomsky (head of the All Union Federation of Trade Unions) to the plenary session of the All Union Central Council of Trade Unions has just been published. The AUCCTU attached exceptional significance to the meeting of the Anglo-Russian Committee because of the danger of the disruption of the Committee thru the tactics of the right wing leaders of the General Council, Tomsky said.

The Berlin meeting Tomsky said, was very short. It opened with an attempt on the part of the right wing representatives of the British General Council to limit the discussion to the interview which Tomsky had given to the press on the subject of the British Trade Union bill.

Reformist Tactics.

Tomsky declared that nobody had a right to limit his freedom of speech and that he did not consider himself bound in his personal activities to any resolutions of the Anglo-Russian Committee. He said that he had a right to his own opinions in the international labor movement and deemed it his duty to express them.

Representatives of the AUCCTU protested against deferring the meeting of the Anglo-Russian Committee and demanded the reason for the failure of Anglo-Russian Committee to meet, considering it time that the workers of the Soviet Union and Great Britain know the problems that it must face in its struggle against the danger of war.

Delay Harmful.

The workers must know where they stand. Does or does not the Anglo-Russian Committee exist? Why is it inactive? Who is responsible at this moment for the delay in the calling of the Anglo-Russian Committee—a delay that is more harmful than the actual refusal to call it.

The representative of the AUCCTU did not receive an honest reply to these questions. Representatives of the British General Council "doubted" whether they could immediately call the Anglo-Russian Committee.

AUCCTU pointed out that this would be the greatest mistake, that this would be regarded as a desire to abandon the workers of the Soviet Union in an hour of danger. The further postponement of the Anglo-Russian Committee meeting on the part of the British workers cannot be estimated otherwise than the direct intention to smash the Anglo-Russian Committee and an attempt to curry favor with Conservative government and bourgeois public opinion.

After this brief exchange of views followed the brief communication from Citrine (British labor leader) that the question of the General Council's attitude towards the Anglo-Russian Committee would be referred to the International Committee of the General Council.

U.S.S.R. Wants Unity.

In conclusion Tomsky declared that Anglo-Russian Committee had been created for the purpose of realizing the fraternal union of the workers of the Soviet Union with the workers of Great Britain and that even if the leaders of the General Council were very bad leaders and were unequal to the task of dealing with the question of war the AUCCTU does not assume the initative in breaking up the Anglo-Russian Committee and appeals to the working masses of the Soviet Union and England to watch against the threat to the Anglo-Russian Committee thru the tactics of the General Council.

Let the masses fairly estimate the policies of the AUCCTU and those of the General Council.

Nation-Wide Rally to Fur Workers' Defense; Boston Pledges $5000

The Coney Island Stadium Concert, to be held July 16th, at 8 P. M., must be a smashing expression of solidarity with the striking furriers, Brother Gomez forwarded his order to the Defense Office for a ticket, although he will not be able to attend; this is a fine example to follow if you find it impossible to come, but we want you not only to buy tickets, but to come to the Concert. A packed Stadium will be another blow against the "Forward," Sigman, McGrady and the rest of the gang. All workers must come to this demonstration.

In case of rain the concert will be held on Sunday, July 17, at 8 p. m. Tickets are $1.00 for general admission and $2.00 for reserved seats. They can be bought at the following stations: Joint Defense Office, 41 Union Square, Room 714; Joseph Liddsky Book Store, 202 East Broadway; Sasser's Restaurant, 78 Second Ave.; Health Food Vegetarian Restaurant, 1600 Madison Ave.; Solin's Restaurant, 222 East 14th St.; J. Goldstein's Book Store, 365 Sutter Ave., Brooklyn; London Vegetarian Restaurant, 230 So. 4th St., Williamsburg; Kasspaport and Cutler Book Store, 1810 Southern Blvd.; Joint Board Cloakmakers' Union, 128 East 25th St.; Furriers' Joint Board, 22 East 22nd St.; Local 22, 16 West 21st St.

The vacation season has started. Thousands of workers and sympathizers are leaving the city with its noise and confusion and the resorts are filling up. Even there the workers do not forget the striking furriers and arrested cloakmakers, and are helping them in the struggle. Brother Joseph Ostoshever forwarded $10 to the office of the Defense Committee collected among the guests at Mountainside House, Sullivan County, after a left and right discussion on the present situation in the needle trades. Many people took part in the discussion and it was revealed that the demands of the furriers and cloakmakers are justified. A collection of $10 was made.

The country' hotels and vacation places are fine fields for propaganda and for the raising of ammunition for the striking furriers and arrested cloakmakers. We urge all workers to take advantage of their opportunities when on vacation.

Jewish workers are not the only ones active in the present struggle. Workers of other nationalities are rallying to the struggle. The Workers' Clubs realize that the furriers are fighting not alone for themselves but that the issue involves all other sections of the labor movement. The Finnish Workers' Club at doing its share. They have started by purchasing a $100 bond and $50 worth of tickets to the Coney Island Stadium Concert.

A group of hardware workers collected $35 and pledge themselves to further support the struggling furriers. The money was collected by Benny Rohler and Martin Rubinstein. The New York Journeymen Tailors' Local collected $16 at its last meeting. This amount was forwarded to the defense. The Lithuanian Working Woman's Organization, Branch 26, donated $10 to the Furriers' Defense. The money was brought in by Mrs. Semanskas. At a party in the house of Mr. and Mrs. Privaus, $20 was collected for the defense. The money was forwarded by Jack Semel and Jack Kriener.

A conference of workers' organizations to support the striking furriers was held in Boston on June 26th. It was decided to raise at least $5,000 to assist the furriers in their struggle. Rose Wortis of New York was present at the conference.

Another Call For Flood Relief.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—A national disaster fund of $10,000,000 established by congress to be expended by the president during emergencies such as the Mississippi flood, was urged today by Rep. Bloom (D.), New York.

The first duty of congress is to provide federal aid for flood victims, "whether it costs $10,000,000 or $90,000,000," Bloom said. He predicted that congress would adopt a comprehensive flood control program.

3 Boys Drown Near Sing Sing As Six Guards Bar Rescue

OSSINING, N. Y., July 4.—A thousand prisoners and guards in Sing Sing looked on helplessly while three unidentified youths, off on a holiday excursion, drowned 300 feet from the walls of the prison today.

The prisoners begged to be allowed to rescue the boys, but the guards, acting under orders not to let them out in any emergency, held them at bay with rifles.

Warden Lewis E. Lawes heard of the tragedy too late to be of any assistance. He deplored the fact that word had not reached him sooner so that he might have sent men to the rescue.

The prisoners were exercising in the big yard facing the Hudson River when they heard screams. Suddenly turning toward the cries, they saw the boys making desperate efforts to swim to shore after their frail little canoe had overturned.

They cried and begged to be allowed to go to the rescue. All that separated them from the boys was a picket fence, 12 feet high, and less than 300 feet of water which a good swimmer could easily have negotiated.

Two boys sank some distance from shore. The third had only 15 yards to go when he gave his final cry and disappeared under the waters.

The six guards stood watch with guns, unwilling to rescue the boys themselves or to allow any of the prisoners to do so.

jailed in Welfare Island have sent the following communication to their fellow workers:

"We, twenty-eight strikers who were sentenced to Welfare Island through the machinations of the Forward-Sigman-McGrady gang, with the active cooperation of the bosses and the police who have dared to smash our union, express our deep hatred for the contemptible campaign of our enemies.

"We await impatiently the time when we will again be free in order that we may once more be among our comrades in the front-line trenches who are fighting the battle against working-class treachery, and for a democratic, powerful union. We say: better to be in jail than in the scab union of the International.

Meeting Tomorrow.

All Brooklyn cloak and dressmakers are urged to be at Columbia Hall, 522 Stone St., Brooklyn, tomorrow evening when the Joint Board of the Cloak and Dressmakers Union will hold a meeting. Important questions will come up and all workers should attend.

The Unity Committee of the furriers, cloak and dress makers will hold an open forum at Cooper Union at 1 p. m. Thursday. Ben Gold and Louis Hyman will be among the speakers. Morris Sigman's "promise" of proportional representation will be taken up as well as the latest developments of the furriers' strike.

91 City "Pioneers" Leave for Workers' Co-operative Camp

Eighty youngsters, whooping it up and singing lustily, left the headquarters of the Young Pioneers Camp at 108 East 14th St., yesterday at noon headed for their camp at Wingdale, N. Y. Two large buses carried the happy campers off to the accompaniment of parental warnings about wearing sweaters on chilly nights, etc.

The party was in charge of Martin Gottfried and Dave Lyons who are in charge of the camp organization, both experienced boy's camp counselors.

The Wingdale camp is adjacent to Unity Camp. The embryonic young rebels will sleep in tents and will have lots of opportunity for hiking, swimming and games.

The next batch will leave the city on July 18th and parents who want their children to benefit by the outdoors life would do well to register before that date.

Chicago Workers Run Children Summer Camp

CHICAGO, July 4 (FP).—Steps to run a summer camp for the children of Chicago trade union families were taken at a conference attended by delegates from many organizations. The metal polishers, the ladies auxiliary of the machinists, the women's organizations of the Finnish and Ukrainian workers, the German sick benefit society, the Russian co-operative society and Polish and Negro associations participated. The camp is to be called the Young Pioneers, as the conference is affiliated with the Young Pioneers of New York, who have maintained summer camps for several years with trade union assistance.

The conference resolved to request the indorsement of the Chicago Federation of Labor and the use of time on WCFL, the federation radio station, to make the plans known to the world of labor.

Headquarters are in Room 803, 1553 W. Madison St. Anna Thompson is secretary.

Youthful Scofflaws Get Firecrackers for Fourth

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Despite the ever increasing agitation for a "safe and sane" Fourth and the outlawing of fireworks, the United States imported a million pounds more "shootin' crackers" the first four months of 1927, than in the same period last year, the Commerce Department announced today.

In the four months, when the bulk of the fireworks burned up on the Fourth are imported, 3,000,000 pounds of firecrackers reached this country from abroad, while many times that amount were domestically produced. The value of the imports was given as $590,000.

Imports of other varieties of fireworks reached a total of several million pounds.

Mine Workers Will Seek Publicity Are Now Says Rev. Straton

New York's newspapers were alternately spanked and petted on the head by Rev. John Roach Straton in a sermon Sunday night.

Calls For Penance.

At the same time he said that any preacher would be simple-minded who did not avail himself of the opportunity of preaching to the millions thru the columns of the daily newspapers."

He ended by exhorting "the publishers, managing editors, city editors and reporters to come to penitence," and broke into a hymn.

20,000 in Baltimore Building Trades Win Fight for 5-Day Week

BALTIMORE, July 4 (FP).—Union building trades workers didn't report on the job Saturday, July 2. Instead they stowed the kids in the back of the family bus and rolled away to beach and mountain for a glorious three-day holiday.

No strike at all. Just the 5-day week going into effect in another big American building center. Nearly 20,000 men share in the victory, gained by the Allied Building Trades Council.

Although the unions did not win a wage increase, there will be little loss in annual pay, officials assert. Building has been slow, many men have been unemployed and few have averaged five and a half days' work a week the year around.

Lenin Buried Amid Scenes of Deepest Grief

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

Moscow, Jan. 27.—Lenin, founder of the Communist International, organizer of the Red Army, leader of the Proletarian Revolution, and head of the Russian Soviet Republic, was laid to rest today in the cold and bleak Moscow winter, with the sun of a clear day shining on the scene of the funeral. A mourning is gripped up against the bitter cold and Red Army soldiers and proletarian students of the Moscow Universities, of the inner circles of the Communist Party, of the Kremlin, more than one hundred in all, most of them from the factories and the workshops of Warsaw. In the words of the writer for the Izvestia, central organ of the Soviet government:

"There were luxurious wreaths, and pure metal wreaths, and simple wreaths of field flowers woven by the hands of workers and peasants."

They are all there, Stalin, Rykov, Kalinin, Bukharin, Molotov, Voroshilov, Ordjonikidze, Litvinov, Melnichansky, Kotov and others. Rykov speaks first for the Soviet government. As he finishes the Red Army band takes up a defiant strain from "The International." Then Bukharin speaks for the All-Union Communist Party. Stalin is not here. He is ill and cannot attend. Then I speak as the representative of the Communist International. Then Litvinov from the foreign office. Melnichansky for the trade unions and Volkoff for the Moscow Soviet. As the last address is finished all the Red Army bands join in the thunder challenge of "The International."

We descend from The Tribune and lift the heavy metal casket upon our shoulders and carry it toward its last resting place beside the Red Kremlin Wall. I am just behind Rykoff. He is quite frail. The burden is too much for him. He relinquishes his place but walks with us. At the grave workmen take over the casket and place it beside the deep gash, that has been cut in the earth. The cover has not yet been put in place. One look at Volkov's face, quiet in death, reveals how peacefully he sleeps, how courageously he died. Then the funeral couples up beside the coffin. She clings to its side, weeping softly. She is dressed in black, with only a grey shawl for a head covering. A Mother of the Revolution weeping while these in the high places of the Soviet Power stand by, paying homage to her grief. At the Mother's side the Widow, biting her lips to hold back her sobs. In the dark days in Warsaw and the sad, journey home to Moscow, her grief has composed itself. Gently the workmen take the coffin and begin lowering it into the grave; the Red Army Commandant who has been standing by with right hand raised high, brings it quickly down to his side. It is a signal to the two Red Army soldiers who have been standing not far away with bugles in their hands. They send on the orders and in another second guns begin to roar on the drill grounds within the Kremlin. Twelve guns are fired as a final tribute to Volkov—the Red Soldier of the Revolution.

Then eight workmen fill in the grave that is very near to that of John Reed, and close to where the ashes of Ruthenberg were placed in the Kremlin Wall. We return to the tribune and review the procession of workers, students and Red Army soldiers as they pass before diapering the music now being that of "The International" in place of the Funeral March. Melnichansky's voice takes up slogans upon the banners for me. The declaration that still remains foremost in my mind was that carried by a workers' delegation declaring:

Do Not Want War.

"We Do Not Want War! But We Are Ready for It!"

Today the "Rabotchaya Gazetta" issued a special edition, with most of the work contributed. The entire proceeds are to go to "The Answer to Chamberlain Fund," for which 150,000 roubles (£75,000) have already been subscribed, to build battle airplanes commemorating the death of Volkov.

Thus the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union show that they do not forget. The murder of Volkov has stirred them deeply.

We learned of the assassination late Wednesday afternoon at the Comintern. Thursday morning the Soviet press was full of it. Tens of thousands of mourning flags appeared quickly in all sections of the city. Thursday afternoon, immediately after work, tens of thousands of workers marched thru the streets, demonstrating against this foul deed, passing thru the Red Square, before the Comintern Building, the First House of the Moscow Soviet, the Party Headquarters and other Soviet institutions. One hundred thousand marched in Leningrad.

No Mistaking Workers' Spirit.

There was no mistaking the spirit of these workers. We called to them from the balcony of the Comintern: "Long Live the Proletariat of Moscow!" Back came the shout, "Long Live the Red Terror!" Upon one banner was inscribed: "Against the White Terror the Red Terror." The workers had been stirred by the slaying of Opansky, a high official of the "G. P. U." at Minsk, and the murderous attack on a party discussion meeting in Leningrad, during which two bombs were thrown, injuring scores.

No wonder that the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union feel that the new capitalist attack on their Power has actually begun.

Drill Killing Chinese

Lieutenant Colonel Thomas Holcomb, above, of the U. S. Marine Corps, is enroute from Washington D. C. to Peking, China, where he has been assigned the command of the American Legation guard to succeed Colonel Louis McC. Little. Lieutenant Colonel Holcomb is the most junior officer, both in age and rank, to command the Marines in Peking.

Our Letter from Australia

AUCKLAND, New Zealand.—During the hearing of a case in the Auckland police court of which a Communist was charged with selling copies of a pamphlet entitled "The Path to Power," the mayor and for the Auckland area, the following interesting statistics were given. They were confined to cinema theatres, footwear, etc., in the same way as they did before the war. If every temperately and well-expressed argument put forward by the Communist Party or the labor party is to be the subject of prosecution by the government, it will mean that the only vehicle for expression and education left will be secret discussion." However, the reactionary judge was not convinced, and inflicted a heavy fine.

SYDNEY, Australia.—With a view to assisting farmers and preventing them getting into the grip of financial exploiters, the labor government of New South Wales has arranged to advance financial help to farmers at 6 per cent interest. The assistance is confined in cases of crops having failed, or where farmers have been the victims of unforeseen circumstances.

BRITISH COAL INDUSTRY TOTTERING: EXPORTS DROP; TWO HUNDRED THOUSAND MINERS JOBLESS

By LELAND OLDS (Federated Press).

Coal, the basis of modern industrial civilization, is becoming a barometer forecasting the increasing storms which will mark the decay of capitalism. The intensity of the conflict between the great capitalist powers seeking an outlet for their surplus production is revealed in a U. S. Department of Commerce bulletin on the world coal trade with special reference to Europe.

World production of coal in 1925 and 1926, according to the bulletin, ran only slightly above pre-war. In 1925 it was 1,261,000,000 tons and in 1926, 1,335,000,000 tons, compared with 1,342,000,000 tons in 1913. But changes in production and export centers, and especially in consuming areas, are noteworthy.

Production Decline.

The British share of world production has declined from 21.4 per cent in 1913 to 18 per cent in 1925. The 1926 figures are not comparable because of the effect of the 7-month coal strike. The United States produced 38.6 per cent in 1913, 38 per cent in 1925 and 44.4 per cent in 1926. Germany, France, Poland, Japan and China are also among the countries with a slightly greater per cent of world coal production in 1926 than in 1913.

The coal trade has been important to England not only in itself but because it provided outgoing cargo making possible lower shipping rates on goods brought from other countries in British vessels. England is now fighting with its back to the wall to recover foreign markets for its coal.

Losing French Market.

France, the principal foreign market for English coal, is using drastic measures to favor its own mines. Starting with reductions in freight rates on its own coal and increases in the tariff on imported coal it is proceeding to a general embargo on foreign fuel other than reparations coal from Germany.

"Thus," says the London Daily Herald (labor), "the price-cutting in the export trade practiced by the British mine owners and denounced by Herbert Smith at the recent meeting of the international miners' executive in Paris has produced its deadly effect. The new French measure is merely a crushing retort to an uneconomic price war begun by British exporters."

Exports Drop.

The following U. S. Department of Commerce table shows the exports of British coal to various parts of the world in 1913, 1925 and 1926:

British coal exports to	1913 tons	1925 tons	1926 tons
North Europe	19,944,000	7,845,000	2,667,000
Germany	8,952,000	4,165,000	1,517,000
France	12,776,000	10,234,000	3,792,000
South & Central Europe	17,088,000	14,040,000	6,275,000
South America	6,893,000	4,215,000	1,859,000
British possessions	4,985,000	5,998,000	2,654,000
Other	2,792,000	4,320,000	1,632,000
Total	73,400,000	50,817,000	20,596,000

In 1913 Russia afforded a market for 5,998,484 tons of British coal. In 1926 Russia took only 11,587 tons.

Slash Wages.

The productive capacity of the British coal industry is greater than ever, due to improved equipment and to a large number of new deep mines. Reductions in cost of production ranging from 24 cents to 72 cents a ton have been secured by lengthening of hours. Wages have been slashed. But it is doubtful whether Britain will regain its markets in face of the increased competitive power of Germany and the diminished dependence of France, the Netherlands and other countries on British coal. Meanwhile more than 200,000 British miners are unemployed.

Are the Philippines A Chinese Problem?

By ANNA LOUISE STRONG.

EN ROUTE TO MANILA FROM HONOLULU, (By Mail), (FP). — This boat is a regular half-way house to the Philippines, most of its passengers are going there, and most of the conversation (except for bridge and shuffle-board tournaments), deals with the islands.

Yesterday the old-timers were teasing the newcomers. Telling the budding young teachers en-route for the first time to Manila just what had happened to the predecessors whose places they were called to fill. . . . Much of it was exaggerated jest. But it's true that the white man can't live in the tropics, which means that Americans can't live in the Philippines. They don't grow old; they send their children home; they take vacations in Japan; and even so come down with tropical diseases. Just like the British in India.

Friction Grows.

The missionary at my table, a very moderate, intelligent man, says that every year the Filipinos are more anxious for independence, and every year the Americans in the island are less willing to grant it.

I have read several books on the ship about the Philippines. Pages of propaganda, briefly, for holding the islands. White man's burden, train up good colonial rulers like the English— and all that sort of thing. The American business men on board are all for continued ownership, only they want it made definite in order to guarantee investments.

Useless Schools.

Our schools, widely hailed, have given an academic training—producing orators and lawyers, but no farmers or mechanics. The high school graduates seek careers of exploitation or politics.

"The trouble with the Filipinos is that they are now just like Americans," said a cynical Manila business man. "They are grafters and get-rich-quick schemers! Typically American. Every American wants special privilege and thinks he can speculate or bluff his way into wealth . . . We have taught it to the Filipino; he wants to make 100 per cent on a sale where a Chinese merchant will take 2 per cent and be content."

I realize, more than I ever did, what the new Russia has to offer to the east. If it had had the Philippines it would have organized the peasants first of all into cooperatives and unions; it would next have introduced education based on labor. We have created politicians and lawyers and they are shouting "independence." Anyway, the common Filipino wants it. He doesn't want to be governed by white men.

China the Hope.

All sides agree on one thing—that they wish America had a continuous, definite, open policy. They all cry for it, and it's the only thing they can never get. We don't have policies; we have checks and balances.

Manuel Quezon, leader of the Filipino Nationalists, says they will never get Independence "till China grows strong." It's my bet that not Japan will absorb the Philippines, but that China will. China has taken some ideas from Russia, including freedom of minor nationalities combined with economic federalism. The east fears Japan, with her militarized autocracy. But if China creates a centralized, federal democracy—what will the east do then? China has powers of absorption unequaled in history; the Philippines are off her coast. Chinese merchants control her retail trade. I doubt if America's decision about independence will affect the future of the Filipinos much; what will be, will be, by economic and population pressures.

Dawes Wants Open Fascist Rule Here, Denounced by Owen

WASHINGTON, July 4.— Vice President Dawes, admirer of Fascism, is asked point blank just what he means by declaring that the American government may turn into an open dictatorship, as in Mussolini. Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma, puts the question in an answer to Dawes' attack on the direct primary in the North American Review.

"It is pertinent to inquire from what source would Mr. Dawes have us expect a military dictatorship to arise in America," asks Senator Owen. "Mussolini would have remained a harmless agitator had he not been financed and reinforced by the vested interests, the militarists and reactionary statesmen of Italy. His success was achieved by the gun and the bludgeon; the destruction by terrorism of political democracy, of trade unionism, of the co-operative movement, of freedom of speech, press and assemblage, and of academic freedom."

Call Conference to Scare Imperialism; Demand Free Speech

WASHINGTON (FP)—Suppression of civil rights to further American imperialism looms as large on the national horizon that the People's Reconstruction League is holding a two-day conference in Washington, July 6-7, to consider ways of meeting the menace.

As an aftermath of Nicaragua, Marico, China, the Geneva naval conference, the export of $13,000,000,000 of private American capital abroad and the growing belligerency of American foreign policy, imperialism is becoming the dominant issue in American politics, Director Benjamin C. Marsh declared June 30 in calling the conference.

U. S. Suppresses Criticism.

Morris L. Ernst and Charles E. Rowe of New York will discuss the suppression of free speech by radio at the morning session July 6. Arthur Garfield Hays, New York attorney and E. C. Davison, secretary of the International Association of Machinists will speak on free speech and its suppression in labor disputes while Esther Van Slyke of the Women's International Peace Union will trace the movement to outlaw war at the afternoon session. Efforts to suppress criticism of America's foreign policy and methods to insure freedom of the press will center the attention of the conference in the evening.

Joseph N. Bejarano, secretary of the Mexican Chamber of Commerce speaks on the Mexican situation at the morning session of July 7 with Dr. T. S. Vaca, representative of the Nicaraguan liberal government outlining the rape of independence in his country and Marsh speaking on recent developments in American imperialism.

Speak on China.

At the afternoon session the Rev. Mercer G. Johnston of Baltimore, chairman of the Progressive Party, will discuss the relation of the church to imperialism. C. Kuanson Young speaks on China and Dorothy Detzer, secretary of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom on checking imperialism through legislative action.

At the concluding session Norman Thomas, director of the League for Industrial Democracy will answer the question, can America be saved from world domination and Dr. Albert H. Putney, of National University, will endorse the executive assumption of war-making powers.

lar politics and politicians from his administration. He will eliminate graft. His name is Campbell, a good name for a dryer, and his record in the past leaves nothing missing by way of qualification. He was reporter, press agent, motion picture director and producer and a major in the United States army. With such a background, Mr. Campbell should be able to get his name in the papers frequently without having to resort to such vulgar methods as raids on speakeasies. We almost forgot to say that what Campbell promises to do could be listed under the heading of garbage. He will neither bar politics nor eliminate graft. He would not if he could and he could not if he would.

Cal Glum as Offensive Starts

Our Special Staff Correspondent at the Summer White House reports an air of gloom and dejection pervading the atmosphere of the presidential chambers. Various reasons are assigned to the wave of pessimism which has struck the president's headquarters. However the leading political sharps are agreed that the presidential dumps are directly caused by the nation-wide offensive which the Reds have directed against the citadels of American capitalism in the drive for five thousand new readers for The DAILY WORKER.

The speed with which The DAILY WORKER General Staff has turned the attack of the Federal Grand Jury into an offensive for thousands of new readers has taken the enemy completely by surprise.

With the announcement of the splendid premiums which are being offered to readers of The DAILY WORKER in the present campaign, the feeling at Black Hills, even among the most optimistic of the president's advisers, is that the success of our offensive is assured.

The Chinese Mass Liberation Movement Will Overcome the Present Crisis.

The efforts of the imperialists to crush the Chinese liberation movement meet resistance in a form which alone shows the mass roots of the movement.

This resistance can be compared best to the impact of waves upon the shore. No sooner has one spent itself, or had its strength shattered by piers and breakwaters, than another takes its place and the land is never allowed a moment's respite.

Imperialist propaganda attempts to make every temporary setback suffered by the Chinese liberation movement appear as a crushing and final defeat. Nothing could be farther from the truth. The briefest survey of the history of the movement since 1922 gives the lie to such statements.

Since the strike of the transport workers in Hongkong in 1922 the organization of the Chinese masses has proceeded in a curve which is decisively upward in direction altho broken here and there by defeats.

The organization of the reactionary merchants' association and the suppression of the labor unions in Canton by its armed mercenaries was hailed as the decisive defeat of the Canton government. But the labor movement continued to grow and the murder of workers and the smashing of unions ceased.

Then came the Shanghai massacre. This too was interpreted as the final blow which would drive the liberation movement into an ineffectual illegality. It had the opposite effect. The masses rallied to the banner of the Kuomintang.

The defeat and withdrawal of the army of General Feng from Peking, thru Nankow pass and his retirement back of Kalgan, before the militarist forces of Chang Tso-lin was said to mark the liquidation of the Nationalist movement in the north.

But the northward march of the Kuomintang armies from Canton began and soon they had reached the Yangtze river, captured the greatest center of heavy industry in China, (the three cities of Hankow, Wuchang and Hanyang) and established a new base in the heart of the nation, on its greatest waterway.

The Kuomintang armies began their drive toward Shanghai and first Sun Chuang-fang and then Chang Tsung-chang became the heroes who were to stop their advance. They would never reach Shanghai, the biggest port in China and one of the largest in the world.

The armies of national liberation entered Shanghai—aided by the strikes and armed insurrections organized by the labor unions.

American and British warships bombarded Nanking and killed hundreds of Chinese. This murderous attack also was supposed to put the finishing touches to the national liberation movement.

The Nanking bombardment was followed by the treason of General Chiang Kai-shek. Like all traitors he was and is more vicious toward his former comrades than the imperialists. Hundreds of Communist workers and labor unionists have been executed, unions and peasant organizations suppressed, a reign of terror inaugurated.

Chiang's defection was to encompass the downfall of the Wuhan (Hankow) government. The imperialist press was jubilant and the mass execution of workers was greeted with sadistic glee.

But the Wuhan government, expressing the aims of the workers and peasants and the honest sections of the middle class, continued to exist and win victories.

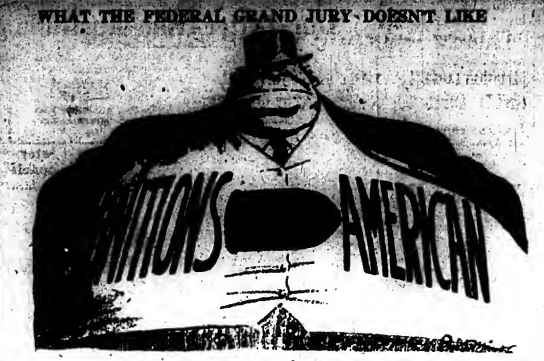
General Feng declared his allegiance to the Wuhan government and inflicted defeat after defeat on the northern militarists.

Now comes the alliance between Chiang and Feng against the Wuhan government and once more the imperialist press yelps triumphantly. The defeat of the Chinese liberation movement, so far as the aims of the workers and peasants are concerned, is certain, it says.

Of the greatest significance, however, is the fact that no sooner is the counter-revolutionary alliance between Feng and Chiang consummated than a great wave of strikes and boycotts breaks out in the principal seaports. Even large sections of the middle class are drawn into the movement as is the case in Shanghai where the Chinese property owners are fighting the proposed increase in taxation. So greedy and arrogant are the imperialist henchmen in Shanghai that they try to raise taxes and force the Chinese themselves to pay the cost of maintaining the imperialist occupation forces.

For effective support in their struggle against this cynical demand the merchants must depend upon the labor movement. It is to be noted in this connection that Chiang Kai-shek has sent a squad of executioners numbering some two hundred to Shanghai to terrorize the masses.

Chiang thus works for the imperialists and against both the masses and the middle class.



Wuhan has not yet falled in spite of the predictions of the imperialists and the tremendous scope of the mass movement, in the face of the terroristic activities of Chiang and his generals, is a guarantee that the present crisis of the liberation movement is not decisive but that like those which have preceded it will be survived and the liberation movement will emerge with its base widened.

This much is sure that if Chiang and Feng continue to make concessions to the imperialists they will be overwhelmed by the tidal wave of the mass liberation movement.

Immediate future developments in the Chinese struggle are uncertain but we can say with the utmost conviction that the will to destroy imperialism and militarism was never stronger among the masses, that the liberation movement has never had a wider base and that this is a guarantee that its present military weakness will be overcome.

POSTERS AND LEAFLETS AS PART OF THE MILITARY EQUIPMENT OF THE KUOMINTANG ARMIES

HANKOW, May 30 (By Mail).—War with paper "bullets," 150,000,000 of them!

Flight in which 150,000,000 pamphlets, posters, handbills, books (paper "bullets,") have been fired in a year, these paper "bullets" more than doubling the amount of steel directed at the enemy.

A war with pen and paste-pot, with bullets taking a secondary place, brought the Nationalist army to the Yangtze.

Before leaving Canton, the base of the revolution, the armies vowed that they would not halt in the northern march until "their steeds drank in the Yangtze."

AND now, when the horses stem the tide of the swift yellow stream, they find a strong flavor of ink, paste and paper in the waters.

Never before in China, never before in the world, perhaps, has the march of an army to victory been paved placarded with so much paper.

Armed only with light hand rifles, the Cantonese army has faced and is facing, modern war equipment in the hands of northern armies; heavy guns airplanes, bombs, trench mortars.

A fine, high spirit has spurred those men onward; each made his "will" before leaving home, each pledged that he would never speak of a fallen comrade as dead; that he would say "tai hwa," (he has won his flower.).

THIS spirit, then and the knowledge that 20,000 trained propagandists marched forward with them have given the Nationalist troops courage to walk into the devastating fire of smashing guns.

From the very beginning of the campaign, propagandists, men and women, have served as vanguards for the army, slipping ahead into districts and villages, braving death and torment at the hands of enemies.

At first the propagandists were regarded with suspicion by the people. The coming of troops meant one thing to the Chinese peasant—looting, pillage, rape, ruin. This wall of prejudice had to be battered down. The people had to be made to understand the Nationalist army was a different army.

SLOWLY, and by exemplary behavior on the part of the troops, the word spread through the countryside that indeed this was a "different army."

Gray clad, serfgoe youths, the troops came quietly and marched on, eating their own simple food, greeting the peasants as "comrades" and "brothers."

The propagandists talked of "an army of the people; an army which would fight to free the oppressed; to wipe out militarists."

The people came to believe—and to help.

The march north became a triumphant procession, at times. Peasants greeted the troops as "saviors of the people;" brought them rice, tea, vegetables, chickens, everything that they had.

PEASANTS who had never before thought of soldiers as anything but enemies, wretched thieves and murderers, acted as "spies" for the Cantonese; gave them knowledge of enemy troops' location, of short cuts, of secret passes; and in some cases, took up rifles and aided in the fighting.

Sometimes the country people could not read the simple propaganda pamphlets; but they were always hungry for knowledge. When a district was especially illiterate, the propagandists had to summon the few men from the village who could read; drill them swiftly in propaganda work—and pass on.

Posters of the revolution are slashing, glaring things—"revolutionary art" after the western fashion.

Complete, sure escape from the sophistication, the delicacy of Chinese art! Art with a bang!

A NEIGHBORING warlord, hands dripping blood, dancing over the skulls of murdered peasants and laborers!

A local magistrate, bespectacled, fleeing in terror, before the army of the revolution.

A well-known militarist, trapped in a room, falling back in horror at bayonets plunging through the walls.

A stalwart youth with a battering ram, smashing down the doors of feudalism.

Hundreds of them magnificent in their simplicity.

The pamphlets extremely simple; —this was the army founded on the San Min Chi (three people's principles) of Dr. Sun Yat-sen—an army which would battle to bring about a "government of the people, for the people, by the people" of China.

THERE are 3,000 different kinds of propaganda addressed to all classes of people—women, soldiers, peasants, laborers, students, common people. It is estimated that an average of 60,000 copies of each type of propaganda has been disseminated in the year that it has taken the Cantonese army to reach the Yangtze.

All of the propaganda originates from the General Political Department of the Military Council of the Nationalist Government which is now located at Wuchang. One hundred and fifty people are employed in this central office, who paint, write, print, distribute material to 20,000 propagandists, who work with the army.

LISTEN to what Li Ho-lin, director of the Central Propaganda Bureau, has to say of his corps:

"One propagandist is worth 20 armed soldiers. There could have been no northern expedition, had it not been for our propaganda corps. It was the propagandists who paved the way for the soldiers; who went among the laborers and peasants and explained the mission of our army.

"Do not think that I underrate the value of our army, that hardy group of men which has suffered untold hardship and suffering so that China may be free.

"Our soldiers have gone hungry; thirsty; unpaid, not for months, but in some cases, for an entire year.

"I am only trying to make clear that without our propaganda army—our small armed forces would have been wiped out. We have had to depend on the propagandists to get the support of the people.

"Our enemies could have well withstood our steel bullets; but they cannot hold against us with the entire population of a province roused against them; interfering with their food and water supply; aiding us."

THE way of the propagandist corps has not been easy. The intense provincial feeling that one finds in China is not rooted in superficial boundaries; the differences are far more fundamental.

The hardy Hunanese are a swift excitable people, stirred to revolution by the fire of an orator; they are the "radicals" of China—called so by all Chinese.

They are stirred by "slogans;" by brilliant posters. Propagandizing such territory is not difficult for the corps.

BUT there is Hunan—just two provinces north. A propagandist, recently rushed back from the war front there—demanding new propaganda, in a hurry. He wanted copies of the constitution of the Peasant association, and other leaflets, as bases for original publicity work. He said that the printed circulars sent from Wuhan entitled "To the Honan people on the Second Northern Expedition," were useless. Most of the Honan people were illiterate. Few could read ordinary writing; still fewer modern literature, or comprehend modern terms. They were by nature conservative, tended to reject new ideas with a single gesture. They were particularly adverse to slogans, treated them as childish, he reported.

Thus the policies of the Kuomintang had to be worded in old fashioned literary style, put out as huge official notices, posted in all streets and lanes in Honan cities and towns.

This was a true feudalistic practice, but was compelled by circumstances, the propagandist pointed out.

Demonstrating that even paper "bullets" must be properly tempered and wrought.

Eisenstein Working on Oct. Revolution Film

Eisenstein, who was responsible for the remarkable filming of "Potemkin" and "The Legend of the Bear's Wedding," has finished another Russian picture titled "The Central Line," and has started work upon his anniversary celebration film. It has been provisionally re-titled "October." With the aid of the Red Army and the Russian Workers' naval and aviation forces, he aims to present a comprehensive and pictorial history of the October Revolution.

To the list of anniversary films must be added a novelty achieved by Esther Busch, and called the "End of the Romanoffs." From a vast store of documents she has selected and arranged material in a manner that is said to be astonishing.

In Moscow and elsewhere a first showing has been made of Room's latest production, "When One is Three." This young Communist has again set the critics a-buzzing by his simple workaday theme of the dominance of the male, treated in his own impressionist manner.

Other new productions now being screened in Soviet Russia include Ivanovsky's "The Decembrists," a version of Lermontov's "Bella," a new Ukrainian film, "Parass Chevtchenko."

Broadway Briefs

The Texas Guinan revue "Padlocks of 1927," will have its premiere this evening at the Shubert Theatre.

Charles Hopkins will do a new play by Adelaide Matthews next season. The opus is titled "Love and Lightning."

There will be eleven companies of "Broadway" next season, according to an announcement from Jed Harris, the producer of the night club melodrama at the Broadhurst Theatre.

Oshrin and Grisman, producers of "Talk About Girls," are planning another musical show, "Miss Millions." Daniel Kusell is responsible for the script, and Russell Mack and Andrew Tombes will co-star in it.

JAMES RENNIE

The former star of "Crime" is making his vaudeville debut at the Palace Theater in a new sketch by John V. S. Weaver.

Curtis Sheet Spreads 'Prosperity' Bunk; but Farmers Know Better

WASHINGTON (FP).—The few progressive farm congressmen and organizations which remaining in Washington this summer reacted angrily to claims made by a Curtis farm paper that the "farmer is getting more and spending more."

The magazine, which claims 1,-500,000 circulation among "country gentlemen," quoted the higher level of grain prices on the Chicago market as proof that the farmer is better off now. "Yes, but those are the prices the gamblers are getting," they pointed out. "The wheat farmers sold their crops last fall at distress prices."

With last year's crops mostly in the possession of speculators, wheat prices have advanced 19 cents a bushel in the last two months. Cotton, sold by growers at 9 cents a pound last fall, is now quoted at 17 cents.

"New Negro" Editor to Study African Slavery

WASHINGTON, (FP) July 4.—Dr. Alain Locke, professor of philosophy at Howard University and editor of "The New Negro," is leaving for Geneva to study the work of the League of Nations in African reconstruction, with particular reference to the administration of African mandates. He will center his attention on reports of slavery in Abyssinia and Central Africa and will report back to the Foreign Policy Association on his findings.

Washington Residents Hit at Power Trust

WASHINGTON, July 4 (FP).—This city's voteless citizens have voted by an overwhelming majority against the power trust's ambition to grab the Great Falls of the Potomac, near Washington, for private exploitation.

Acting through the Federation of Citizens' Associations, the nearest approach in the District of Columbia to a city council, they not only asked the federal power commission to keep the Byllesby utilities interests out of the Great Falls but demanded that the Potomac Electric Power Co., another power trust subsidiary, cut down its exorbitant rates. Although steam plants manufacture electricity for ½ cent a kilowatt hour, the Potomac firm is charging 6½ cents.

Employment Shark Gets Worker Job at Empty Lot; Won't Return Fee

The employment agencies are still at their old tricks. Their latest stunt was to send a worker out as a cook, to a vacant lot.

The employment sharks are full of tricks. They do anything to get the worker's money.

There is an employment office who called an Italian cook into the office to take a job as order cook. The fee was ten dollars. The cook gave five dollars and promised to give the other five after working a week. The shark said, "All right," and so he issued the working card to the cook. They sent the cook down on Greenwich street. When he arrived all he could find was a vacant lot.

Looking For A Job.

He walked a block each way from the vacant lot, thinking that the shark might have made a mistake on the location, one block one way or the other. The number still remained the vacant lot. The cook asked a policeman where the place was. The policeman said, "What is this place supposed to be anyway?" The cook said, "A cafeteria. I was sent down from an employment office to take an order cook job." The policeman looked around and discovered that the number really was the vacant lot. So the policeman told the cook to go back to the employment office and get his money back. When he returned the shark said, "Well, how's the job?" The cook answered, "There's no cafeteria at that number and no such place in that neighborhood." The shark said, "Oh, the job is there all right, go back down there and go to work and shut up about it."

How To Get Right.

Hotel and restaurant workers who are seeking employment in the hotel and restaurants of New York and vicinity, should come over to the office of the Hotel and Restaurant Workers' Union, 133 W. 81st street, New York City.

TRADE UNION COMMITTEES WILL DRAFT NATIONAL SAFETY CODES TO PREVENT LABOR ACCIDENTS

By ART SHIELDS.

Organized labor has taken the initiative in its own health and safety standards for the dangerous trades. Following the National Labor Health Conference, which was attended by delegates from all parts of the country, who have already been organized in the building, shop trades and mines, the Workers' Health Bureau has announced "Safety committees for the other trades will be organized soon.

The National Trade Union Safety Standards Committees, as they are called, will demand drastic safety codes. Thirty-five thousand workers are now killed every year on American jobs, and 2,500,000 others injured. The lives of millions more are shortened.

Study Industrial Mishaps.

The trade union safety campaign will be directed first to a thorough study of industrial accidents and diseases, and next to enforcement of safety requirements by federal and state laws and trade union agreements. The labor committees are expected to go much further in behalf of the workers than the Engineering Standards Committee, which is a federation of employers' organizations, engineering societies, insurance companies and government officials. This body is entrusted by the U. S. bureau of standards with the task of preparing safety codes. To date it has prepared 10, which only 3 states have put into law.

Aim to Prevent Deaths.

The miners' section also discussed a set of tentative regulations prepared by the bureau, which the delegates approved and which now appears to be amplified in detail into a comprehensive code of measures to prevent the present slaughter in our coal mines—2,500 deaths a year—fourteen times that of Great Britain. The miners' delegates present were Vincent Kemenyuk, Miners' Local 1345; Andrey Durisek, Mine Safety Inspector, Miners' Local 940; Thomas Baker, Miners' Local 3404; Harriet Silverman, educational secretary of the Workers' Health Bureau, was elected secretary of the Miners' National Trade Union Safety Standards Committee.

Delegates to the National Labor Health Conference are submitting the conference's recommendations to their unions. Since the recommendations were favorably received by unanimous vote, prompt ratification is expected.

Urge Federal Control.

The conference urged federal safety control for the mining industry and the control of industrial poisons, with standard federal requirements for safe, properly guarded machinery in all industries, and federal compensation administration for railway workers. For trade union action the drafting of national health and safety standards, with the cooperation of trade union committees and the Workers' Health Bureau is recommended; safety clauses to be included in trade union agreements: the 40-hour week; trade union inspection committees on every job and equal representation for organized labor in all labor departments. Effective state laws are likewise demanded.

SOCIAL EDUCATION FOR SCHOOL TEACHERS FIRST NECESSITY OF UNION, SAYS PRESIDENT

CHICAGO, (FP) July 4.—Social education for school teachers is an important function of the American Federation of Teachers, Pres. Mary C. Barker told the 11th convention of this union of classroom educators at its opening session in Chicago June 28.

"Not the least in need of stimulation in the field of social intelligence have been the teachers themselves, and the American teacher, whether in the federation or out of it, has felt the quickening power of the new emphasis which the American Federation of Teachers has given to social ideas," said Miss Barker in reviewing the year's work.

"The affect of this growing social interest of the teacher means that new power is entering the school-room," she continued. "A new personality will meet the boys and girls as they gather there."

Fault Appears.

A sinister omen in American education, she suggested to the delegates, is the fact that most of the attacks on freedom of teaching and freedom of speech come from people who have had 12 to 16 or more years of schooling themselves.

"Surely we teachers and the curriculum have been at fault," she frankly admitted. "As we deplore these recurring displays of the non-thinking or the uninformed or the anti-social mind in the present generation let us lay the foundation to make a more creditable showing in the training of the next."

Membership Increases.

Delegates representing locals from every quarter of the country are at work on the problems of education and of strengthening the union's position. Its less than 4,000 members, though an increase of 10 per cent since 1926, are but a minute fraction of the more than 800,000 teachers in the United States. Many of the most progressive teachers are enrolled in the federation, making it the vanguard of the profession.

Secretary-Treasurer Florence Curtis Hanson reports a few locals and considerable gains in membership in the old locals. The union is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Bertaud to Fly to Rome.

Lloyd W. Bertaud, U. S. mail pilot, who was originally scheduled to make the flight to Paris in the Reliance plane has just signed a contract to fly to Rome and back. The contract calls for the take-off between July 15 and 26.

2000 New York Painters Charge Graft in Council 9 and Ask Suspension

At a big mass meeting of painters held June 28th, 9th Avenue and 110th St., a resolution was passed unanimously demanding "from our General Executive Board the reinstatement of Thomas Wright, legally elected secretary, the suspension of the District Council for a period of 18 months and the reorganization of an entirely new District Council.

Members who were present at this mass meeting also signed individual cards demanding from the G. E. B. immediate action on the above proposals.

The mass meeting was called by five of the biggest local unions of New York City, namely, 261, 499, 848, 905 and 1011. Representatives from each local union brought out facts of robbery, graft, corruption, favoritism, sell-outs on the jobs to the bosses and the betrayal of the five day week by the majority of the council controlled by the holy "Socialists" Sasser and Silverman.

Bills of expenses in hundreds and thousands of dollars were submitted to the council for any little thing and was voted by the Silverman machine to be paid out.

Out of the pile of facts which were brought out at the meeting I will just mention a few.

The council ordered to arrest the thieves. At the next meeting the Silverman majority in the council passed a motion that the council pays the expenses for their defense; of course to hire one of the best lawyers in the city to defend them.

The same council which prosecutes them for their robbery of $50,000 should also defend them.

A check was found of $1,500 dollars with which one officials gambled on Wall Street. This check has to be paid out to a Wall Street firm.

Brother Thomas Wright, the suspended secretary, who was legally elected by a majority of 4,000 members, expressed his doubts of the willingness of our G. E. B. to clean out the corruption and thieves.

He stated: "This fight is no local issue. Our G. E. B. is mixed up in this crime, they are a party to the robbery."

When G. E. B. was invited to the meeting but they didn't show up. Mr. Kelly, representative of the G. E. B. in New York City, did not show up either.

The New York painters are determined to clear all the betrayers and thieves out of the union.

The rank and file is awakening!

Candee RubberWorkers On Strike Against Cut

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 4. — Over 80 workers of the L. Candee Rubber Footwear Co. are on strike against a reduction in wages amounting to 2½ cents on 100 pairs of rubber shoes. The L. Candee Co. is one of the richest subsidiaries of the U. S. Rubber Co. which employs in New Haven about 5,000 workers in all departments. The arctics department is affected by the strike and is practically crippled. It employs mostly skilled, unionized workers who cannot be easily replaced.

The wages and hours of the Candee workers are incomparably worse than those in Boston or other New England rubber shops. The mill room workers average about 25 dollars a week, frame workers $16 to $17, calendar dept. $16, cutting $20, arctic dept. $20 to $25, fitting $9 to $15. Gum shoe workers average $10 to $12 a week.

The workers are on a piece work basis, and work from 50 hours a week up. They never know when they will leave the factory. Work starts at 7 in the morning, and very often they don't leave until 7 or 8 at night. The treatment by superintendents and foremen is miserable. The workers lose hours of their own time waiting to be supplied with materials.

The management has refused to deal with the representative of the workers elected by the strikers. In a circular letter mailed to all the strikers, the business manager, Robinson states that he will deal only with the shop council which is the name for the company union in the factory. The workers have no faith in the shop councils, as it is the bosses' union. This the workers see from the fact that the representative of the council is scabbing. They are bitter against the continuous policy of cutting their wages. Many who have worked for 20 years or over in the factory earn as low as $20 a week, on which they must support large families. When some workers complained that their wages were too low, and their children were going hungry and without shoes Mr. Robinson shouted that $20 a week is more than enough. The company, however, is not satisfied with 20 dollars a week, and while it made 18 million dollars last year, instituted wage reductions amounting to between two and three dollars a week.

Organizations and Individuals Rally to Help The DAILY WORKER Carnival

The office of The DAILY WORKER is having a busy time in helping the various units of Section 3 with assistance for the Midsummer Carnival and Fair, to be held on June 29-30 and July 1-2-3 at Webster Hall. In addition to the offers previously published in these columns we have just received reports on the following:

The Cooperative Unit will furnish a cake, candy and ice cream booth.

Factory District 2, 3-D will supply an Art Booth.

Sub-section 3-B will give a miscellaneous booth.

Section 7, Branch 1 and 2 will supply a shooting gallery and a number of prize games. Branch 3 will give a punching board, while the Coney Island comrades will furnish a Nail Driving Contest.

Sub-section 3-B promises a caricaturist who will sketch the visitors to the Carnival and also a pyrographic artist who will burn out magnificent designs on woodwork at the affair.

Carpenters will be furnished by Carpenters' Local 2090, which promises to give us enough men to do all the construction work. The carpenters living in the Cooperative have also promised their aid.

Comrade Norman Silber is giving us free engineering service and we are thus assured that the grounds will be completely transformed on a magnificent scale.

Tickets for the Midsummer Carnival and Fair will be 50 cents each and 75 cents for a combination ticket good for two days. On Saturday the feature will be a Moonlight Flower Dance. On Sunday there will be an open air Chauve Sonris and vaudeville with many noted stars. Tickets will be on sale at 108 East 14th St., Jimmie Higgins Book Shop and 33 First St.

FEWER STRIKES IN UNITED STATES IN 1927 THAN IN 1926, LABOR DEPARTMENT INQUIRY REVEALS

By LELAND OLDS (Fed. Press).

The industrial truce between labor and capital in the United States continued through 1926, as indicated in a U. S. department of labor review of strikes and lockouts in that year. The department reports fewer strikes and fewer workers involved than in any year since the record began in 1916.

The record shows 1035 strikes or lockouts in 1926 compared with 1301 in 1925. For the last 5 years strikes and lockouts have averaged 1250 a year.

Fewer Strikes.

The department has reports covering the number of workers involved in 783 of the strikes occurring in 1926. The total for the year was 329,595, compared with 428,416 workers in 1012 strikes in 1925. The disputes in which the workers involved were reported and the number of workers year by year since 1916 were:

Strikes and lockouts	Number of disputes	Workers involved	Average per dispute
1916	2,667	1,599,917	600
1918	2,151	1,239,989	576
1919	3,665	4,160,348	1,561
1920	2,226	1,463,054	657
1921	1,785	1,099,247	616
1922	899	1,612,562	1,794
1923	1,109	756,584	631
1924	898	654,641	729
1925	1,012	428,416	423
1926	783	329,592	421

Wage Disputes Cause.

Wage disputes were the most important cause of strikes in 1926, being chiefly responsible for 477. Union recognition was an issue in 106 strikes. Other important issues were discharge of employees, employment of non-union men and open vs. closed shop operation.

The building trades staged the most strikes in 1926, being responsible for 272. There were 194 strikes in the clothing industry, 90 in the textile industry, 78 in coal mining and 75 in the metal trades. There were only 8 strikes in the entire transportation industry including both electric and steam railroads.

The department's figures suggest that the bulk of union activity is in the region north of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi rivers. Here occurred 869 of the 1035 strikes and lockouts compared with 68 south of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi, 80 west of the Mississippi and 8 which were interstate in character. More than half of all the strikes took place in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts.

Housing Revolution in the USSR

How Workers and Peasants Lived in the Days of the Tsar.

The New Houses of Workers and Peasants, Built After the Revolution.

By YU LARIN.

According to the census of December 16, 1926, there are about 25,000,000 inhabitants in all the town settlements of the U.S.S.R. About half of this population belongs to the proletariat (including workers and their families) and the remainder are office workers, petty and other bourgeoisie and de-classed elements. The town population was approximately the same prior to the revolution and about half of it also consisted of proletarian men and women and their families. This being so a comparison between the distribution of housing accomodation at present, and prior to the revolution, is particularly instructive.

Give Homes to Workers.

Already in the first days of the October Revolution, I drew up a decree (which was immediately endorsed and issued by the Soviet Government) which gave the power to the Soviets of Workers' Deputies of all towns to transfer workers to bourgeois flats and to evacuate bourgeois and other non-working elements or restrict their housing accomodation and also to confiscate privately owned houses.

Local soviets began to transfer on a very large scale, workers and their families from damp and semi-dark flats to better premises. In nine months' time, on August 20th, 1918, the decree was issued re the confiscation in all towns of the U.S.S.R. of all houses valued at not less than 10,000 roubles which were to be handed over to Soviet administrative organs.

More than half of the confiscated housing accomodation was put under the cooperative administration of the householders themselves ("Cooperative Leasehold"). Moreover, the oldest and most unsanitary houses which were accomodating over one million people were pulled down and replaced by new housing accomodation put up mainly in 1924-1925 (part of it has been built by workers on the principle of "cooperative ownership" and with the help of long-term State loans).

Thus the features of the housing revolution in the U.S.S.R. are: (1) compulsory restriction of housing accomodation by fixing a special norm with respect to the dwellings formerly occupied by the non-proletarian population; (2) moving working class families from the worst dwellings to better ones; (3) pulling down the worst premises and building new houses; (4) confiscation of big houses and making them Soviet property. The main result of the housing revolution (together with other measures for the improvement of workers' position) was: A very much diminished death rate (about one half of the former death rate) in U.S.S.R. towns, taking the year 1926 for comparison with the usual pre-revolution death rate in the towns of Czarist Russia. For instance the yearly death rate decreased in Moscow to 13 per thousand, whereas it was 30 per thousand before the revolution.

One Family Houses.

One third of the entire proletarian and half of the entire non-proletarian urban population of the U.S.S.R. live at present in their own little houses built for one family. The remaining 60 per cent of our urban population live in flats which they rent, three-quarters of these living in Soviet houses and one-quarter in private cooperative houses. There are at present about 4 million flats in the towns of the U.S.S.R. of which 70 per cent are occupied by one family, 10 per cent by one family and some single lodgers, only 20 per cent being occupied by several families (the bigger bourgeois flats divided now among several families). Half of the housing accomodation belongs to the State and half to private people and cooperatives.

As a result of the revolutionary redistribution of the housing accomodation the working population has now at its disposal double the pre-war housing accomodation (average per head calculation). This is accompanied by a one-third decrease of the housing accomodation at the disposal of the non-working population prior to the revolution (hence the ever increasing complaints of the better-to-do intelligentsia and bourgeoisie about overcrowding as compared with the pre-war epoch).

Healthier Conditions.

The larger and much larger housing accommodation now at the disposal of the workers does not cost them more than the insufficient and insanitary accommodation at their disposal prior to the revolution.

Lighting, water, removal of refuse and the flat itself cost U.S.S.R. workers at present not more than their insanitary and far too small flats cost them before the revolution (moreover the present real average earnings are, generally speaking, equal to pre-war earnings, and in some cases, they even exceed them). Anyhow, workers and their families live now in much healthier conditions than before. This has been achieved firstly, by doing away with house-owners' profit, and secondly, by fixing rent according to earnings.

Czarist Legacy.

On January 1st 1927, the per capita housing accommodation, exclusive of kitchens, passages, bathrooms, etc., was about 6 square metres per head in U.S.S.R. towns. Such is the accursed legacy of the Tsarist-bourgeois order when the general inefficiency of housing accommodation in towns was aggravated by a very generous allotment of housing accomodation to the bourgeoisie and aristocracy. In accordance with credits for new buildings endorsed by the organs of the Soviet power and taking into consideration increase of population, the aforesaid per capita housing accommodation will be increased in four years time by one square metre (i.e. by 20 per cent of the present clear average per capita housing accommodation in U.S.S.R. towns). We do not consider it prudent to promise a bigger increase in 1931, as it is essential to spend in the coming years as much as can be spared from the revenue of the country for the development of industry, agriculture and transport. A further extension of the aforesaid plan for improved cultural and housing conditions must for the time being remain in abeyance.

The Doctors Are Busy in the Kings County Hospital, But Not With the Patients.

Dr. Mortimer D. Jones, testifying at the Walker hearing which is delving into the charges of religious and racial discrimination which three Jewish internes claim is rampant at the Kings County Hospital, stated that the Brooklyn hospital is understaffed.

Jones, who is the superintendent of the hospital under fire of the Tammany chiefs, declared that in some wards there was only one member of the staff on duty for every 70 patients.

Last Friday, two of the "hazed" internes testified that several deaths were caused by criminal negligence on the part of gentile internes who ignored the pleas of dying Jewish patients for medical aid.

Rabbi Louis Gross, who heads a rabbinical investigating committee, submitted to the mayor over 100 sworn affidavits in which the internes' statements are substantiated.

Nathan Sweedler counsel for the Jewish internes, says that all but one of the six expelled "hazers" come from Klan states.

Scabs Assault Striking Miners Under Eyes of Pennsylvania Cossacks

Valley Cndp's strikebrokers can't stay idle. If they don't want to dig coal, they must go out and beat union miners up

A striker, Thomas Flater, of Kinlock, was beaten up by a strikebreaker, right in the heart of New Kensington's business district, where several dozen state troopers and deputy sheriffs guard the streets, not saying anything about the local police. The injured striker was taken to Citizen's General Hospital. The strikebreaker fled, and police were not able to find him, or rather didn't want to.

In the meantime another strikebreaker by name George Johnston attacked some strikers, and aimed to hit a miner in the head with a stick, but didn't succeed; instead he hit the window of G. C. Murphy Co. and broke it. City Police placed him under arrest and fined him $10.00 cost, and $5.00 for the broken glass. That's because he didn't have a good aim. Now if he would have broken a striker's head instead of a glass!

The Northwest Railroad Chaos Leads to Demand for Dictator

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press)

The dilemma of private railroad operation with the separate carriers competing for traffic again comes to the fore in a discussion of the rate situation in the northwest by F. J. Lisman, New York dealer in railroad securities. Lisman suggests that only a "czar" dealing with the problem as a whole can help the roads in the northwest to the abundant prosperity enjoyed by railroads in other regions.

"While the bankruptcy of the St. Paul may be due to a variety of reasons," says Lisman, "the low rate structure of the northwest was unquestionably the largest factor. Railroads all over the country are doing better than they did almost at any previous period, except the roads of the northwest. The great Northern, Northern Pacific and Chicago & Northwestern are all paying smaller dividends than they did previously, the Soo Line, formerly prosperous and conservatively capitalized, has stopped payment of dividends on its preferred as well as on its common stock, while the St. Paul and the Minneapolis & St. Louis are in bankruptcy."

Lisman points out that an advance in rates on agricultural products is probably out of the question partly because Congress has enjoined the commission from granting such increases and partly because this would involve similar advances in the west and southwest where the railroads are already making large profits. He charges, however that the northwestern railroad companies have been far from doing all they could toward cutting the ruinous overhead out of the business. Lisman has found that there are many commodities moving to the northwest at abnormally low rates. The commission has repeatedly arrested a revision of these rates, but under individualistic private management the railroad officials don't dare.

"On the bulk of commodities," Lisman explains, "the rate structure is not being fixed by the carriers, but by the various trade associations—the cement associations, the lumberman's association, agricultural implement association, packers association, etc. The officials of a railroad engaging a large share of business in any given commodity lack the courage to join in a request for rate advances on such traffic, for fear of antagonizing their patrons. It is well known in railroad circles that whenever a meeting is held on the subject of advancing any given rate the interested shippers hear of such efforts within an hour and will, by the promise of a substantial volume of business, prevail on some carrier to withdraw from the request for a rate advance."

Lisman thinks that if owners instead of traffic managers were operating the railroads, steps to improve these conditions of the northwestern carriers would have been long ago. He continues:

"Ownership of the railroads is scattered and the stockholders, as a rule, are not assertive. Too many railroad directorates are quasi self-perpetuating and the directors are too often selected by the officials rather than by the inarticulate stockholders."

This condition is of importance to railroad labor because the unprofitable operation of carriers in the northwest is a leading argument against further advances in railroad wages. If the government had power to work out a scientific rate structure without regard to the immediate interests of any single carrier, the western conductors and trainmen would undoubtedly have won wage increases in the recent arbitration case instead of suffering a defeat.

News Campaign Against Labor Faker Thievery Praised by Painters

(By A Worker Correspondent)

Last Friday night at the regular union meeting of Local 905 which was the first local to begin on investigation of the D. C., much praise and credit was given to The DAILY WORKER and "Freiheit" for exposing the thieves of the union. If not for these two workers' papers the charges would never have come before the great number of members and the public in general.

While the socialist Forward and "New Leader" branded these charges as "Communist forgery" and belied in every way to cover the truth with the "red" scare, for the last six months The DAILY WORKER and the "Freiheit" were militantly exposing every crook and thief who ruled our union. The new and sudden change of policy of the "Forward" and "New Leader" in coming out at last against their own Socialist Party members who are leading figures in this robbery game is another proof of their own betrayal and the close alliance between the socialist press and the thieves of the unions.

THE STRUGGLE IN THE N. Y. NEEDLE TRADES

THE POLICE AT WORK.

By I. JEROME.

A picket demonstration outside the shop of Gans and Brauniber, dress manufacturers, 118 West 27th. St. 7 a. m.

Fifty workers, men and girls, earnest, stalwart-spirited, file before the building back and forth.

The firm has locked out its workers for refusing to register with the right wing of the union, and the Joint Board has declared a strike.

7.15. Workers from other shops on their way to work swell the picket line. There is life. Comrade greets comrade. Steps are resolute. Eyes gleam defiance.

The court has issued an injunction against the strikers and the left wing Joint Board. And the workers have come to answer with a mass violation of the injunction.

The line grows bigger. Danger looms.

Surrounding the factories stand police clubs emotional. Industrial squad man lurk in the doorways.

Pickets march. Back. Forth.

An automobile draws up.

There are cries from the picket line:

"Scabs! They've brought scabs! Look, Sigman's gunsellas! The right wingers—they want to break our strike. Down with the strikebreakers! Down with the traitor Sigman!"

The automobile opens. A thin pale man emerges. A scab. His face is ashen with fright. The police clear a path for him. He runs. Runs the gauntlet of boots and hisses. Into the building.

The work of making the world safe for strike-breaking begins. The cops let fly here their clubs. The industrial squad swoop from the hallways. Ties pouncing from thickets. Men, women, bystanders, strikers, battered, felled, charged. The street is a battle-field. The legions of the law and the right wing are renting the workers.

A ruffinn stands on the running-board of the automobile. He is recognized. A notorious gangster, hireling of Sigman.

A girl picket passes him. He lifts his foot and kicks her square in the eye. The girl staggers. Falls. She is blinded.

There is a howl from the workers. Twenty police rush to the rescue and arrest—the girl.

A young worker leaps forward and seizes the gangster.

"Why don't you arrest him? He assaulted the girl!"

Fists of cops hail on his head, on his face. Blinded by arms of the law jerk him, drag him into a hallway. Dark doorways tell no tales.

But the grip of the young worker is strong. He holds on to the gangster thru the beating and the dragging.

"Officer, I demand that you arrest me together with this man!"

"Shut yer mouth, or I'll shut it for yer, yer red damned Bolshevik!" And they drag him farther into the hallways.

"Officer No. ——— will you do your duty?"

Officer No. ——— growls. Bad business. Bolshevik has spotted his number!

He arrests the three: the gangster, the worker and the girl. He lines them up in the passageway. They wait for the patrol wagon.

Two policemen arrive.

"Here you" to the gangster "get the hell outa here!"

Before the eyes of everybody the gangster is taken out into the street and tipped off to slip round the corner.

The patrol-wagon comes for the bruised young worker and the blinded girl.

The Editors have taken out of this article the names of the girl, of the worker, of the gangster who blinded the girl, and also the number of the policeman who arrested the three and then permitted the gangster to escape. They will furnish these names and the policeman's number for purposes of investigation by proper parties.

How the Proletariat Manages Houses

The October Revolution expropriated not only the works, factories and estates, but also houses. The expropriation affected those houses which served in the hands of the owners as a means of exploitation; the small houses in which the owners lived were not confiscated by the Soviets. Out of 2,200,000 urban houses throughout the U. S. S. R., only 300,000, i. e. 13%, were municipalized.

But the houses confiscated constitute 50% of the entire housing capacity and 60% of the value of the houses, as the largest and most valuable houses were confiscated. On an average, every house confiscated is five times larger than the average house which remained in the hands of the owners.

The importance of the municipalized houses is enormous. The municipalized houses are concentrated primarily in the large industrial and administrative centres and from 50 to 90% of the population and also all State, trade union, co-operative and public institutions are located in those buildings. In view of the fact that all commercial enterprises are situated in those buildings, the rent which they pay gives considerable revenue—it constitutes about 10% of the entire municipal revenue.

How are the houses managed and exploited?

During the first years after the revolution, in the period of the civil war, when the success of the revolutionary struggle depended on the degree of centralization by the revolutionary government of all threads of state and economic administration, the administration of the buildings was directly in the hands of the municipal Soviets. This was especially necessary owing to the fact that it was essential, to revolutionize the living conditions of the population, to confiscate the private mansions from the nobility, to provide as many people as possible with housing facilities in the luxurious rooms of the upper classes and to take the working population out of the basements, garrets, and dark "corners."

With the termination of the civil war, and the restoration of economic life, the policy of the Soviet Government in exploiting the municipalized houses, as in the exploitation of every other branch of national economy, is such as to encourage the toiling masses to take the administration of affairs into their own hands. The administration of the houses is transferred year to year given over to a greater extent into the hands of the population inhabiting the houses, who are organized into associations of the people living in the given houses. The municipal organs retain in their hands the control of what is being done in the houses and they see to it that the inhabitants fulfil all the obligations they have taken upon themselves, such as to repair and keep the houses in good condition; they see to it that the houses are utilized properly without allowing them to become a means of commercial speculation, etc.

At the present time about 30% of the municipalized buildings are under the direct administration of the municipal organs, and 70% are in the hands of the housing co-operatives and partly in the hands of various institutions on leases.

The first housing co-operatives were organized in Moscow, Leningrad, and several towns in the Ukraine in 1923. But at the present time there are already housing co-operatives in all the gubernia and uyezd capitals; they are securing an ever greater section of the housing fund into their hands. About three-quarters of the municipal buildings in Moscow and Leningrad are in the hands of the housing co-operatives, and in the provincial towns they have not less than one-third of the houses in their hands. The number of co-operative houses is continually increasing.

In every municipalized building the toilers (i. e. those who have the rights of suffrage) have a right to organize their house co-operative. The house co-operative has, according to the law, priority rights in leasing the building from the municipal administration. The housing co-operatives have various privileges in leasing a house. They can lease it for a term of 6 to 12 years, they are free from construction and income taxes. Rent collected by the town administration is as a rule sufficient to cover the amortization of the building; the houses, the occupants of which belong to the poorer sections, having a very small income are entirely freed from rent. The expenditure for repair in considered as part of the rent. The municipal banks supply the housing co-operatives with loans on favorable terms for building repairs.

When a housing co-operative leases a building it has the right to manage it and is responsible to the municipal administration in keeping the building in good condition. The questions concerning the administration and utilization of the housing facilities are decided by the management of the co-operative, which is elected by a general meeting of the members of the given co-operative,—more important questions are decided by all affiliated to the central housing co-operative which consists of: housing co-operative building co-operatives in town and provincial unions of housing co-operatives, housing co-operative unions of entire republics, and the All-Union Alliance. The housing co-operative unions give their members support and assistance in carrying out organizational, technical and juridical help. Finally, what is of special importance, the unions supply the housing co-operatives with building material at reduced prices and advantageous terms. Such material is purchased by the unions and kept in store for the housing co-operatives.

This system of co-operative management by the workers covers now tens of thousands of the largest buildings, the value of which amounts to about four billion roubles. Such an extensive utilization of State property on a co-operative basis by the toiling masses is possible only in the Soviet State.

Standard Oil Appeals To Kellogg as Mexico Nullifies Land Steal

WASHINGTON, July 4.—The American government is expected in a few days to ask Mexico for a full explanation of its reported action in refusing an oil drilling permit to an American oil company because the company has refused to comply with the Mexican petroleum law.

The Transcontinental Oil company, a Standard Oil of New Jersey subsidiary, is the company affected. Officials of the firm have reported the action to the state department, inclosing a letter from the Mexican secretary of commerce, Luis N. Morones, by which the Transcontinental was refused a permit for drilling on the ground that the rights of the company were "considered as having been renounced." Mexican oil lands were illegally granted by the Transcontinental, Morones charged.

Under the Mexican oil law foreign companies were to have their rights confirmed by the Mexican government by December 31st.

GOODYEAR RUBBER TRUST WILL BUILD NEXT SKY TERROR

This design for a huge dirigible has been awarded first prize of $50,000 in the United States' navy's competition for a new airship of 6,500,000 cubic feet gas capacity—more than twice as large as the Los Angeles. The design was submitted by the Goodyear Zeppelin corporation, Akron, O. The above picture shows how the ship would look over a modern warship of the line. Note the guns and the absence of power cars on the hull. This new giant of the air will cost $5,000,000, it is estimated, take three years to build, will carry five airplanes and a crew of 45 at a maxium speed of 80 miles an hour. Her length will be 780 feet and her diameter 135 feet, 15 percent longer and nearly 50 percent wider than the Los Angeles.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

MATTHEW WOLL has developed into a fully-fledged "internationalist." From now on Matty should experience difficulty in working up moral indignation over the activities of "those subversive forces that are trying to undermine our constitution by injecting into our social anatomy the political poison of internationalism." Woll proposed the organization of a "world trade union cartel" as a counter move to the organization of capitalist cartels. What is Mr. Woll getting excited about? Surely he has not suddenly changed his position and is now in favor of international trade union unity.

THERE is a nickel under the heel we suspect. Unless one examined Woll's statement on the subject the following excerpt from it might create the impression that Matty had gone to the devil and was corrupted by "Moscow gold." Look: "The time is here when international labor forces should no longer be divided because of considerations relating solely to political theories and political governments. Now is the time for the workers everywhere to rally themselves internationally on the economic and industrial field, rid their labor movements of the political follies of the past and unite in improving the working conditions of the wage earners the world over." The emphasis is mine.

MR. WOLL is the favorite capitalist labor lieutenant on the executive council of the A. F. of L.—the favorite of big business. Green is considered more or less of a dumbbell who is loyal but lacking in originality. What Woll means by "political follies" is radicalism. His object in proposing a world trade union cartel is to serve the imperialistic program of the American capitalists on a world scale as the Pan-American Federation of Labor is designed to serve those aims in Central and South America. The policy of the A. F. of L. follows that of Wall Street as slightly as buzzards follow a retreating army.

WOLL calls attention to the giant steel combination that was organized in Europe between France, Belgium and Germany. The United States Steel corporation looks on this development with a cold and fishy eye. So Woll thinks it would be well for American business to have a labor auxiliary to hold the fort against the labor fakers of Europe, who are serving the interests of their own capitalists. Woll would eliminate every vestige of "folly" from the international labor movement. It would be transformed into a gigantic lash to whip the workers into submission to imperialism and the workers of the various sections of this trade union cartel would be used to aid the employing classes of their own countries in the latter's clashes with their foreign rivals. Woll would have the American section of this international trade union cartel carry out whatever policy Wall Street adopted in its drive for world regemony.

THIS is the brand of internationalism that Woll favors. It is perfectly safe. No doubt Woll talked the matter over with his cronies in the National Civic Federation. International socialism is a wicked thing when it means the unity of the workers of all lands to fight for more food, clothing and shelter now and for their ultimate freedom from wage slavery. When it means class-collaboration on an international scale it is a noble idea.

THE workers should not be fooled by this specious plea of Woll's for unity to improve the conditions of the workers all the world over. The man who plays the role of strikebreaker in the United States cannot be expected to be anything better in some other part of the world. The man who is urging the police and the courts to use more violence against the striking furriers and inflict severer sentences on them cannot be other than an enemy of the workers. The British miners have just conferred the Order of the Hobnailed Boot on Frank Hodges, a capitalist tool, with a record remarkably like that of Matthew Woll. When will the American workers do the same to the scabby Woll?

JOHN HAYNES HOLMES is nothing if not optimistic. He thinks loyalty to one's country should end when that country goes to war. This is about as silly as the threatened sex strike of the feminists some years ago when the wild and woolly male was opposed to letting them play with the vote. But boys will be boys and so will Mr. Holmes's pacifists. When the war comes, they will either go to war or to jail, sell liberty bonds or be tarred and feathered. We hasten to add that it all depends on what kind

BRITAIN AND U. S. IN DEADLOCK AT ARMS CONFERENCE

All Meetings Off; May Never Meet Again

GENEVA, July 5.—A state of complete deadlock developed today, as all observers expected it would, when the naval expert's committee of the "disarmament" conference received the two contradictory proposals by the British and American delegates as to cruiser strength and the size of cruisers.

Britain's interests lie in having an enormous navy of small boats—her enemies can have the same, but they can't effectively use them because they do not possess England's wide-flung net of naval fueling stations, and small cruisers are not useful without them. On the other hand, the United States proposition for a lesser number of big cruisers is abhored by the British delegation, because if England does not have a naval superiority in the beginning of a war the superior building power of U. S. shipyards will make Britain a loser.

U. S. Offers More Tonnage.

The American proposition represented a compromise between the United States' first proposal of 250,000 to 300,000 cruiser tonnage each for Great Britain and the United States, and the British demand for nearly 600,000 tons. This American compromise proposition was presented at the expert's committee meeting, and almost immediately the work of the committee was adjourned without a set date for another meeting. The proposal of the U. S. was for 10,000 ton ships while England wants the limit 7,500.

This action left the arms conference without a committee meeting scheduled, with the members of the various delegations conferring independently within their own ranks.

Usual Hypocrisy.

Following the adjournment, the experts' committee issued a communique saying the adjournment was taken with "a view to permitting the various delegations to seek a means of adjusting the cruiser needs of the different powers."

The communique also declared on agreement had been reached respecting submarines, but later it was authoritatively learned that the agreement was only to limit submarine torpedo tubes to 21 inches in size, and that no agreement had been reached on the tonnage or number of submarines to be allowed the various powers.

20 Vacationers Hurt in N. Y. Central Wreck

More than twenty passengers were injured yesterday when a southbound Ontario and Western train, loaded with a switch engine at Iona Island, between Newburgh and West Point.

The baggage car and first coach of the train were telescoped by the force of the crash. First reports were that several of the passengers had been killed, but these were discredited by the officers of the railroad here.

The injured were taken to Newburgh on a special train. The passenger train is believed to have hit an open switch, and crashed into the engine, operated by the West Shore Railroad.

Begin Trial of Jersey Cossacks on Charge of Theft at Meaney Farm

FLEMINGTON, N. J., July 5.—The trial of Lieut. Daniel F. Rogers, and two other New Jersey state troopers involved in the attack on the farm of Timothy Meaney, and which resulted in the death of his sister, charging them with the theft of $2,675 from the home, began today.

ALL CHINA LABOR CONGRESS CLOSES DENOUNCE CHIANG

General Tang Betrays Nationalists

HANKOW, July 5.—The Fourth All China Congress of Trade Unions closed today.

Representing more than nine million organized workers, a representative of the Soviet Union delegation presented the Congress with a banner at the closing session. The Congress was also presented with banners in the name of the Red International of Labor Unions and by a Javanese delegate in the name of the All Pacific Labor Union Congress.

Ask War Against Chiang.

The Congress adopted an appeal to the Central Committee of the Kuomintang demanding a punitive expedition against Chiang Kai-shek. The Congress also adopted a resolution asking that conditions of women and child labor be bettered.

An appeal to the workers of all countries, calling upon them to join in a united struggle against reaction, was also adopted at the Conference.

Tang Betrays Revolution.

HANKOW, July 5.—General Tong Sheng-chi, who directed the Nationalist drive along the Hankow-Peking railway in Honan Province last month, has betrayed the Nationalist Government and will join Generals Feng Yu-hsiang and Chiang Kai-shek in their counter-revolutionary alliance, it is said. He has left Hankow for Changsha.

In a counter-revolutionary telegram to the Wuhan Government, General Tang declares that he considers correct the removal of all Communists from power in Hunan and recommended to the Wuhan Government that no Communists be put forward by the Nationalist Government for posts in the new Provincial Government or for the new committee of the Kuomintang. Declaring that he would permit "open labor unions," Tang declares in his telegram that he deems it necessary to reelect their leaders.

Tang Won't Punish Traitor.

In conclusion General Tang states that it is "impossible" to severely punish the officers responsible for the counter-revolutionary putsch in Changsha. In his telegram to the Executive Committee of the Kuomintang, Tang Sheng-chi declares:

"After carefully investigating the situation I found that the leadership of the peasants and workers movement was incorrect. The movement slipped away from the control of the leaders and a reign of terror started. Contrary to the orders of the Nationalist Government, special taxes and contributions were extorted.

Asks "Censure" For Hsu.

Oakland Kuomintang Women Send $1,000 to Aid Wounded at Hankow

OAKLAND, Cal., July 5.—The Woman's Section of the Kuomintang of Oakland, California, thru its Secretary Alice Sun sent $1,000 (Mexican) to Mrs. Sun Yat-sen who is head of the Chinese Red Cross.

The money was sent to Hankow China to be used for the wounded soldiers. The money was raised among the Chinese workers and merchants in San Francisco—part of it was raised at a play, "The Woman Goes to War," depicting the Chinese women and their activities in the present revolution.

The Woman's section is not only carrying its work among the Chinese women, but is also planning to reach the various organizations of the American working class women and all other women's societies, clubs, etc., in order to get their cooperation and assistance on behalf of the Chinese Revolution.

USSR BARES NEW WHITE GUARDIST PLOT IN MOSCOW

MOSCOW, July 5.—That a Russian white terrorist attempted to blow up the headquarters of the political police on the night of June 3rd and succeeded in killing one man and wounding two others before she was shot by Red Army soldiers at Smolensk was revealed in an official communique issued today.

The attempt to blow up the headquarters is the latest of a series of terrorist attacks attempted by white guards within the last few weeks. A communique issued several weeks ago cited evidence proving that white terrorists have attempted to assassinate Stalin, Bukharin and Krassin. A bomb explosion in Leningrad, engineered by white guards, supported, it is said by British agents, killed more than twenty persons a short time ago.

The plot to blow up the headquarters by a woman terrorist named Zakhartchenko Shultz, who entered the Soviet Union from Finland. After the failure of her plot to blow up the police headquarters, she fled with two male companions. The terrorists killed one man and wounded two others for refusing to assist them in escape. They were finally shot by Red Army troops as they were trying to escape after the murder.

BIG PICKET LINE IN FUR DISTRICT BRINGS ARRESTS

Sixty More Workers to Be Tried Today

Thousands of fur workers poured into the market yesterday morning and held one of the largest demonstrations since the beginning of the strike called to advance the wages and working conditions of the unionists that have been perided by the scab tactics of the right wing.

As usual hundreds of police were on hand eager to provoke the peaceful workers. Thirteen pickets were arrested and fined $3 each by Magistrate Abraham Rosenbluth in Jefferson Market Court.

Did Not Interfere With Traffic.

Jacob H. Mandelbaum, attorney for the strikers made the police who were pressing the charges admit on the witness stand that the workers were not interfering with traffic, and that the only reason that they were taken into custody was because they were picketing.

The arrested workers are Nathan Meilef, Joseph Crane, Alexander Brueker, Nathan Noodelman, Joseph Zucker, Jacob Brafman, Dora Rubinstein, Rose Wortis, Anna Liebowitz, Reba Dorn, Dora Halpern, Rose Kintes and Kate Taifman.

Snitkin Is Lawyer.

The case of the seven right wing gangsters who two weeks ago brutally cut up four fur pickets, was postponed until Thursday when it came up for a hearing before Magistrate Rosenbluth yesterday morning. Former Judge Leonard A. Snitkin, who was disbarred several years ago and later reinstated, appeared as their lawyer.

It is the opinion of many close observers that Snitkin will attempt to have the case squashed before it is sent to a higher court. In this way the story of the right wing practices of engaging gangsters to cut and brutally beat up strikers will not be exposed to the light of day.

To Give Further Evidence.

At a meeting of the general strike committee held last night action was taken to give to the city authorities further proof of the unfair methods used by the police department in their arresting of pickets, when the only "crime" they are guilty of is peaceful picketing. It was pointed out that when picketing, every means is taken not to interfere with the traffic, and in that way give the police another excuse for arresting them. But in

We Must Meet the Conspiracy Charge

"The defendants, continuously thruout the period of time from March 1st up to and including the date of the filing of this indictment, at the Borough of Manhattan in the Southern District of New York and within the jurisdiction of this Court, unlawfully and feloniously conspired, combined, confederated and agreed together with divers other persons to the grand jurors unknown, to commit an offense against the United States." Quoted from the Grand Jury Indictment, Southern District of New York.

By this charge the Federal government shows clearly its very evident purpose to proceed against The DAILY WORKER on account of its Communist character and activity. This should be clear proof to those who were under the impression that The DAILY WORKER was being prosecuted simply because it overstepped the bounds of bourgeois morality.

The present attack is part and parcel of the offensive against the entire labor movement, the offensive which is now being waged to destroy the Miners' Union, to cripple the Needle Trades Unions, and to shackle the labor movement with arbitration machinery. The persistence and viciousness manifested by those prosecuting the case is due to the determination of the forces of capitalism not to be defeated in their drive against labor's most militant weapon, The DAILY WORKER.

Comrades, we must show a similar determination. We must meet the attack in such a firm manner that not only will the enemy be repulsed and defeated, but we must emerge from the battle more powerful and influential than before. We can do this if you are with us. Show that you are by your contribution to the Defense Fund.

Mother Bloor Urges Immediate Release of Sacco and Vanzetti

PUEBLO, N. M., July 5.—Mrs. Ella Reeve Bloor, 65 year old labor fighter, urged the immediate release of Sacco and Vanzetti in a speech here July 1st. Mother Bloor is hitch-hiking across the country and has urged the release of Sacco and Vanzetti in numerous speeches along her route.

SACCO, VANZETTI COMMITTEE WARN OF FALSE HOPES

Urges Mass Support of Strike, Tomorrow at 4

In an appeal to the organized workers of the city by the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee calling for a united front in the one-hour general strike and mass demonstration which is to take place tomorrow the committee says:

Friends of Sacco and Vanzetti must not be lulled to sleep by the rumor that is being cautiously circulated that Governor Fuller, in whose hands the final decision on these two militant workers is placed, may commute the death sentence to one of life-long imprisonment.

This rumor is being spread so that the enemies of Sacco and Vanzetti, the Keymen of America and other labor-baiting organizations, may feel out the reaction to this plan among the defenders of the two tortured workers. They want to know if the splendid show of working class solidarity which has struck such heavy blows at the Massachusetts legal hierarchy, will succumb to the sop of a commutation.

We will not rest until these heroic workers are set free and restored to their families and loved ones. Until that time the fight must be waged relentlessly.

The workers who have by their great show of power and solidarity prevented the execution of our two comrades must continue the fight for their liberation with greater spirit and more grim determination.

The hearts of the Massachusetts executioners have not softened with kindness, and their desire to murder our comrades has not changed. They are merely seeking for new methods of torture.

Workers of New York! Do not weaken at this critical moment. Agitate for the immediate release of Sacco and Vanzetti. Do not permit the New England textile barons to bury our comrades olive in a Massachusetts bastile.

Support your comrades who have been subjected to seven years of prison torture, by downing tools at 4 o'clock sharp tomorrow. Go to Union Square and join in the mass demonstration for the liberation of capitalist bloodlust.

Liberate Sacco and Vanzetti!

Not death but freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti!

Stay the hand of the Massachusetts Hangman!

MINERS' RANK AND FILE UNITES FOR STRIKERS' RELIEF

Armed Scabs Try Terror On Spadra Miners

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 5.—Fifty-eight delegates representing thirty-four striking local unions of U. M. W. A. District five met in conference at the Walton Hall, Pittsburgh, Pa., Friday, July 1st to consider the question of raising funds for the relief of the striking miners and their families. The conference was called by the Miners' Relief Conference of Allegheny Valley, an organization consisting of a number of miners' locals of Sub-district Seven, District Five U. M. W. A.

Struggle More Serious.

In district five the struggle between the miners and the coal operators is assuming a more and more serious character. Iron fences are being built by the companies thruout the district in order to protect the scabs. Evictions, shutting off of the water supply and electricity, tearing off the roofs of the houses in order to compel the miners to move, are but few instances of the bitterness with which the coal companies are carrying on their attacks against the miners union. It is to be expected that the struggle will last for some time. The miners realize this and are preparing for a determined struggle to the finish. Their splendid response to the call for the Relief conference leaves no doubt that the miners are ready and are preparing for a fight until victory is won.

Permanent Organization.

The conference organized itself into a permanent organization to be known as "The Miners Relief Conference of Western Pennsylvania," and adopted an elaborate plan for raising and distributing of relief. The headquarters of the relief conference are to be established in Pittsburgh. Victor Kamenoviz of Daisytown was elected secretary. An Executive Committee of eight was elected and the District Executive Board of the U. M. W. A. District Five was asked to add a representative to this committee.

Appeal to A. F. of L.

A resolution was adopted appealing to President Green of the A. F. of L. to levy an assessment on all members of the American Federation for the purpose of supplying the striking miners with relief.

It was also decided to appeal to all

15,000 MARCH FOR SACCO, VANZETTI IN PHILADELPHIA

20,000 Demonstrate for Two Workers' Case

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

PHILADELPHIA, July 5.—The largest Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration ever held in America took place here Sunday when more than 20,000 men and women gathered at the Century Centennial grounds to protest against the attempt to execute the two workers for a crime they could not have committed.

Starting from Broad and Christian streets in the center of the city over 15,000 people marched to the grounds where the meeting was held. When they arrived, there were over 5,000 workers waiting for the opening of the meeting.

Have Banners.

With scores of banners distributed thruout the assembled workers telling of the attempt to murder Sacco and Vanzetti, the meeting opened under the chairmanship of Dr. Giambaldo.

James H. Maurer, president of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor, brought greetings from that organization.

"We hope that Sacco and Vanzetti," said Maurer, "are not guilty of murder. The reason that they are today in jail is because they are working class fighters."

Wicks Speaks.

"Today's demonstration," said H. M. Wicks of The DAILY WORKER, "is the biggest ever held in America. It shows that the working class of this country will not allow the rulers of this land to take from us our fellow fighters."

Other speakers included Juliet Stuart Poyntz and Joseph Magliacano.

An airplane flew over the city distributing 150,000 leaflets. The demonstration was held by a committee representing 160 organizations.

... Treasury; Arrest Urged

BUCHAREST, July 5.—Before the ... Antonescu and his colleagues completely emptied the Rumanian treasury, according to charges in ... newspapers, by his last day in office he disbursed the sum of ... twelve billion lei.

The newspapers charge that the ... disbursements went into the pockets of Averescu and his supporters. An audit of the treasury books showed that most of the money handed out was unaccounted for. Local newspapers demand the immediate arrest of the ex-premier.

Averescu's government carried on one of the most brutal reigns of terror against workers and peasants. His fascist government aided Britain in its war against the Soviet Union thru its occupation of Bessarabia.

By Roosevelt In New Loan Effort

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Senate, unopposed by Queen Quirk's pro-scandal loan lawyer, yesterday made another bid for American "good-will" when the Rumanian ambassador in Washington, George Costaiscu, conferred the highest military honor of his country upon two members of the 106th Infantry, New York National Guard at Peekskill.

The recipients were Sergeants Joseph Tracy and Joseph E. Miccio, of companies C and H respectively.

Big Picket Line in Fur District is Attacked

spite of all these precautions on their part, the strikers are continuing to be arrested in large numbers.

That the long sentence given to the 132 strikers last Thursday was decided before their trial, is the charge of several of the pickets who have just been released from Welfare Island. They claim that when several hundred workers were arrested a week ago Monday, the court officials immediately notified Welfare. Island to prepare for about 60 woman prisoners. On Wednesday, one day before the trial, the Welfare Island authorities were preparing to receive their new "guests."

60 On Trial Today.

Sixty workers who were arrested last week and had their cases postponed, due to the crowded calendar in the court, will appear before Magistrate Rosenbluth this morning for trial.

A membership meeting of the strikers will be held tomorrow, right after the Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration at Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East Fourth St. Important questions will be taken up including a reduction of the strike assessment.

Forty women strikers now confined on Welfare Island have sent the following messages of greetings to their fellow workers:

"We send our greetings to the Joint Board of the Furriers and the Joint Board of the Cloak and Dressmakers' Union. The prison walls are unable to separate us from you comrades. Our spirit is not so easily broken. Our enthusiasm is as high as ever. The threats of the judges, of the bosses will not interfere with our fight until it is won.

"Our only regret is that we are unable to help you during the time that we are jailed. Our slogan is: 'From prison to the picket line'."

Reign of Terror in Spadra.

SPADRA, Ark., July 5.—This mining camp, in the semi-anthracite fields of Arkansas is undergoing the organized terrorism, of armed scab herders imported from the slums and back country of West Virginia. They rush up and down the roads in high powered cars, waving their sawed off shot guns, cursing and villifying the miners' pickets. They swagger thru the camps, great pistols swinging at their hips, and continue the provocations. They commit indecent exposures before the miners' wives and children. They colonize prostitutes, imported by the coal company, amongst the shacks in which the miners' families have to live.

Miners fear to leave their houses to go on the picket line, for fear of attack on their families by the scabs and scab herders, and on the morning picket line is also breakfast time for all the decent elements in the community; young and old, men, women and children, gather around fires in the open and cook and eat their breakfast, while waiting for a chance to argue with the heavily armed scabs.

Police Shoot Matineers.

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., July 5.—A shooting and club swinging affray, with an unknown number of deaths, has taken place at Fitzhenry, Pa., a mining property of the Pittsburgh Coal Co. It followed a rally of the non-union miners employed as strike-breakers in which a demonstration was made against the low wages and unbearable working of scab labor.

Secrecy Prevails.

About fifteen non-union miners took part in the revolt. All the shootings are by the Coal and Iron police hired by the company. Every effort is made to hush up the details of what took place.

Seven miners escaped from the mine immediately after the affair and told union pickets who are constantly on duty that they would never work for the company again, that conditions are so bad that only those men known to be entirely loyal to the management are allowed to talk together.

At the non-union Crescent mines, a short time ago there was an explosion which demolished two bunkhouses. Statements of those who drove four wagons to the scene of disaster and picked up that many wagonloads of legs, arms, heads and other parts of the blasted non-unionists indicate that between forty and forty-five were killed.

The local paper recording the event said that only two were killed and three or four wounded had been sent to Brownsville General Hospital.

In this case also, a deliberate attempt is made to keep secret the horrors of a scab's life. Nobody but the wagon drivers was allowed on the scene until it was cleaned up.

Big Meeting July 8 In Chicago to Help Sacco and Vanzetti

The Sacco-Vanzetti conference is out to reach many more thousands of Chicagoans with the message "Justice and freedom for these innocent workers."

The drive for signatures to petitions is being speeded up, a conference of Italian organizations will be held July 8th and a special northwest side mass meeting will also be held on Friday night, July 8th.

Carpenters Union donates hall for Sacco-Vanzetti meeting.

On request of the committee, Local 181 of the Carpenters Union granted the use of Wicker Park Hall, 2040 W. North Ave. for the July 8th Sacco-Vanzetti mass meeting.

The speakers will include, F. W. Biedenkapp, of International Labor Defense, Dr. Paul Hutchinson, managing editor of "Christian Century" and Albert Wechsler, of Local 144, Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti conference of Chicago.

The committee has called upon all northwest side organizations and individuals to help Sacco-Vanzetti by supporting this meeting and renewing the petition-signature-getting activities.

of a government the country that is at war has whether the masses should fight for it or not. For instance, should the U. S. S. R. be attacked by one or more capitalist powers, it should be the duty of every worker inside and outside the Soviet Union to place his life at the service of the proletarian fatherland. Dr. Holmes is about as illogical as one could be.

AMONG the canny precautions taken by Calvin Coolidge to prepare himself for a successful political career was his decision to be born on July 4. It is quite possible that many 100 per cent Americans born on that day are now pining away behind prison bars in these United States; countless case of many being called but few chosen. Still, had Coolidge not broken the Boston policemen's strike he might still be an unknown quantity and the Boston policemen's strike he might still be an unknown quantity outside of the codfish state, and President Warren Gamaliel Harding might have eaten shell fish in vain.

SENATOR JAMES REED of Missouri may be obliged to take his slush fund investigation committee to Nicaragua. The United States government has appointed General Frank R. The voters took advantage of the holiday atmosphere to try their aim on their adversaries' coat buttons. But if the American system is introduced there, the voters will be drilled to repeat, vote tombstones, steel ballots—all for ten dollars a head. Southwards the march of democracy makes its way.

KING FUAD of Egypt did not visit London in order to make the rounds of the Leicester Square pubs or see the guards change shifts at Buckingham Palace. This king is merely a puppet of British imperialism. He was placed on the throne by the British and his visit is a public recognition of his loyalty to the empire. The reception to Fuad will serve the twin objects of impressing the British masses with the virility of the empire and impressing the visiting king with the grandeur and power of the imperial seat. Left to his own devices in Egypt and to the mercy of the Egyptian masses, his body would long ago have provided needy worms with enough calories to keep them in energy for a year.

WILL PLUNDER THE FEDERAL TREASURY TO SAVE CALVIN

Greatest Vote-Buying Plan Predicted

By HARVEY O'CONNOR.

WASHINGTON, (FP).—More dangerous than the challenge of Al Smith's Democratic candidacy to Calvin Coolidge's chances for a third term in the White House is the threatening economic depression.

The intimate circle of high Republican officials and politicians whose fortunes are bound up in Coolidge's bid for re-election look with more or less concern upon the New York governor, whose candidacy they believe will tear the Democratic party to pieces on the religious and liquor questions. But a bad slump in industrial production in 1928 coupled with the possibility that the Democrats might choose a standard-bearer like Owen D. Young, head of General Electric, would not only imperil Coolidge's chances for renomination but might defeat Herbert Hoover or any other candidate the Republican convention next summer might select.

Billions For Votes.

But the problem of an industrial depression with millions unemployed and bankruptcy in the doldrums has not completely flabbergasted the steerers of the Republican craft. Instead every indication points to the certainty that they have a solution ready made to stave it off. That is the accumulation of a tremendous reserve in Mellon's treasury vaults which they will throw into unemployment relief measures both here and abroad, increasing dangerously the productive capacity of the national and world industrial plant and thereby preparing for a tremendous crisis of over-production or under-consumption.

Borah For Coolidge.

Senator Borah, who has come out for Coolidge for a third term, backs up the new administration policy by calling for government development of the Great Lakes-to-Atlantic waterway and the deepening of the Colorado and Mississippi. Secretary Hoover is also a warm advocate of the public works in depression theory.

Coolidge's supporters, boasting now of the $600,000,000 surplus from the fiscal year just ended, are warning business not to expect big tax cuts next year. Instead they talk of the possibility of a decline in business activity, and more of accumulating hundreds of millions to throw into industrial breach if and when depression comes. Militarists take satisfaction out of the situation for they see an end of the economy regime with millions poured into the shipyards, armaments plants and steel mills as part of the new Coolidge program of stimulating flagging industry by bountiful federal expenditures.

A G.O.P. Weapon.

Progressive economists and radicals who have advocated the public works idea as a depression policy long before Coolidge dreamed of the presidency, may see a weapon devised to protect workers against unemployment turned into an instrumentality to prolong the political life of the dominant political party and assure another decade of business prosperity for the speculators in national resources and needs. Economy, Republican political password of 1921-26, thus finds itself in the discard in 1927 with a diametrically opposite policy pursued to keep Coolidge firmly seated on the throne for the 1928-32 reign.

Tourists to Visit Journey to U.S.S.R. On Bastile Holiday

Bastile Day, July 14, will be celebrated by one group of Americans by starting off from New York for Soviet Russia, on the first general tour to that country since it became a Workers' Republic.

Going direct to Leningrad, the party—which is being organized by the World Tourists, Inc., of 41 Union Square—will be met by representatives of the USSR Cultural Relations Society and by them taken to visit the old palaces where the former Czar lived, to the palaces which have now been converted into children's villages, to the great power plants and factories, the museums and art galleries. Then after an overnight's train journey, the party will start, under the same guidance, to see the wonders of Moscow.

Arrangements have been made by the Cultural Relations Society at all points on the itinerary for special service, and for all facilities to enable the tourists, to see the points of interest under the most favorable circumstances. Guides and interpreters will accompany the party and will do everything possible along the way to make the journey comfortable.

There are still a few days left in which applications for this tour may be filled but after next Saturday, July 9, it will be too late. The opportunity to visit Russia this summer will be gone. Those interested in this July 14 tour should act at once. Further information can be obtained by writing to the World Tourists, Inc., 41 Union Square, New York.

Economic Theory of the Leisure Class

by Nikolai Bukharin

Nikolai Bukharin, besides being the president of the Communist International, is one of the leading Marxian theoreticians in the world today. He has done a great deal of scientific work, and has written books, essays and pamphlets. And has published a number of outstanding contributions in these fields.

The "Economic Theory of the Leisure Class" is one of his most important works. It is now being translated for the first time into English. Just as Marx has studied the theoretical aspects of the classical economists (mainly Ricardo), so Bukharin tackles the dominant bourgeois political economy of today, such as the American school, Shearer, Bowley-Bagehot, Walras, Clark, etc. In a brilliant analysis of the Marxian teaching he analyses the laws of Surplus Value and Profit of the leading bourgeois economists, showing that the Marxian theory of Surplus Value is the actual psychology of the renter, the capitalist type.

Another Important Book by Bukharin

While Economic Theory of the Leisure Class" is a study in the field of political economy, Historical Materialism is the application of Marxism to the field of sociology. This book has already become the standard text book and is considered one of the outstanding Marxian classics. In fact, it is the only book available where the materialist method has been applied in an analysis of the various social phenomena

...T INTERNATIONAL LOOKS STRAIGHT AT THE GRAVE OF VOIKOV

(Special To The DAILY WORKER)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R. (By Mail).—The address made by J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, speaking for the Communist International, at the funeral of Comrade P. L. Voikoff in the Red Square was as follows:

Comrades:

...ty of the Communist International expresses its sympathy over the grievous loss of its fallen soldier of the world revolution. For Comrade Voikoff was a courageous fighter in the international struggle of the workers' class victory over capitalism. In all lands, the many National Sections of the Communist International express sympathy mourning. Everywhere, gay tributes to the memory of Comrade Voikoff, the first victim of the new war launched against the ...ldest of the social revolution—the Union of Soviet Republics.

For Comrade Voikoff belonged not only to the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union. He was a part of and belonged to the toiling masses of the whole world. The brutal murder of Comrade Voikoff has not only brought a heavy loss to the freed workers of the Soviet Union. His untimely death is a cruel loss suffered by all those workers still enslaved in the lands of capitalism.

Comrade Voikoff, as the official representative of the First Workers' Republic, the spokesman of the Soviet Power, stationed in Warsaw, the nest of the Polish reaction, was an able builder of the new social order. The bloody assassin's deed that struck him down was instigated by the supporters of the capitalist regime that organizes in every land relentless onslaughts against the aspirations of those who labor. Especially, it is very clear that behind the murderer at Warsaw, pulling at the trigger of the death-dealing revolver, was the British imperialist tyranny itself, that organizes and directs the new anti-Soviet war.

But the British reaction, that invaded and plundered the offices of Arcos in London, does not stand alone. At its side we see also the grasping Dollar Imperialism of America that beholds in the rule of the Soviets an enemy of its bitter exploitation of the workers and farmers in its own homeland—a foe of its relentless exploitation of the peoples of subject and semi-subject nations.

It was no accident that the American ambassador, Myron T. Harrick, at Paris, just the other day launched a vicious attack against the government of the Workers and Peasants, declaring it would never be recognised by the capitalist government of America. Herrick's utterances were in perfect harmony with those of Winston Churchill, the British chancellor of the exchequer, who has just visited, Mussolini in Rome, the chief of the fascist tyranny, declaring his admiration for the labor-crushing Italian fascism that enters into an alliance with British imperialism for the new anti-Soviet attack.

The gang of imperialist murderers who slaughtered the workers of Nanking, in China, who have joined in the raid on the Soviet embassy at Peking, who instigate and encourage the strangling and beheading of the best of the Chinese proletariat, wish to tighten the hangman's noose about the necks of the people of Nicaragua and Mexico, of Egypt and India, these are the real murderers of our comrade, Voikoff, who died that the cause of the workers might liva and triumph.

Before the open grave that will soon receive the last remains of our martyred comrade, the proletarian hosts of the world, enlisted under the banners of the Communist International, pledge themselves to new struggles. Against the workers of the two great English-speaking nations, the United States of America and Great Britain, the dominant imperialisms of today, must wage mighty battles against these powerfully entrenched foes of upward struggling mankind.

Today we also have in mind the service rendered the imperialist foe by the betrayers of labor, the support given by the MacDonalds, the Hendersons and the Thomases to the Chamberlains, the Joynson-Hickses, the Churchills; by the Greens, the Wolls and the Sigmans to the Coolidges, the Kelloggs and the Hoovers.

In Great Britain the Labor Party turns back from an open attack on the Baldwin tory government. It merely asks for an investigation of the attack on Arcos and the breaking off of relations with the Soviet Union. In the United States, Vice-president Matthew Woll, speaking for the reaction within the American Federation of Labor, applauds the raids on Arcos, and calls for more vicious assaults by the Coolidge-Kellogg reaction against the Soviet Union. In every other land the social-democracy and the reactionary trade union bureaucracy play the same Judas role. They all have their price that capitalism is willing to pay. The Communist International carries on a relentless exposure of these traitors before the eyes of international labor, so that these lackeys of capitalism will be stripped of their power and become impotent in their efforts to continue their treason.

The workers of the world must know that the traitor social democracy and the servile trade union bureaucracy, that were the instruments of the warring capitalist powers in 1914, and who now continue in that role, are stained equally with the guilt of the murder of our comrade, Volkoff. The social traitors of 1914 now rally in support of the war of their imperialist masters against the Soviet Union, which is also an attack on the cause of the workers in the capitalist homelands.

Today the International, that mourns its martyred dead by the hundreds of thousands, that has seen the most militant and courageous in its ranks fall in every land with the passing of the years, extends its consolation to the bereaved family, the comrades and friends thru the knowledge that Voikoff's deeds will be inscribed on the most glorious page of all in the history of the age-long struggle for the deathless heritage that records the last triumph against class rule; tha final conquest of power and the complete liberation of the oppressed.

Today the International glories in the fact that from the masses of the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union there will spring hundreds and thousands of others to take the place in its ranks made vacant by the bullets of an imperialist assassin that struck down our comrade, Volkoff.

As the earth closes over the casket that contains the last remnins of our slain comrade, the Communist International raises its standards for renewed struggles. Voikoff is dead. But the banner under which he fought and died still stands, more challenging than ever. Mightier than ever the growing army of the International proclaims:

Down with the oppressors of the workers! Down with the white terror! Down with imperialism!

Long live the Dictatorship of the Proletariat! Long live the Soviet Union! Long live the World Revolution!

The Labor Press in Poland

WARSAW, (By Mail).—The Polish Labor Press having revolutionary tendencies, is forced like all the revolutionary groups in the Polish Labor movement to engage in a prolonged and obstinate struggle with the bourgeoisie, the "defensive" (Secret Police), and reformism.

The Polish Labor Movement is united since 1920. Its leading body, the Central Commission of Trade Unions, like almost all the Central Committees of individual trade unions, is reformist. The revolutionary elements organized in the Red fractions compose in almost all the trade unions a small but influential minority. The revolutionary elements at the present moment have only been able to keep the administration in their own hands in o few unions—Commercial Employers', Chemical Workers'. Glass Workers'—where, however, they hold their own despite police and reformist repression.

THE first central organ of the revolutionary minorities was created in 1920 by the supporters of the "Red" trade unions: the builders, leather workers, chemical workers and commercial employes. This was "Mysl Robotnicse" (Labor Thought), a fortnightly. In spite of persecution, arrests of editors and staff, etc., it continued to come out under different titles for almost two years. The Warsaw Trades Council, at that time the center of the revolutionary Trade Labor Movement, publishes a fortnightly "Przeglad Zwiastowy" (Trade Union Education) afterwards called "Wiasomicel Zwiaszkowe" (Trade Union News), which was however shut down in 1921 by the police. After this the journal was once again revived for a short time, but this time as a monthly. In the end of 1924 the leaders of the revolutionary Trade Union Movement in Gollcia, taking advantage of the fact that Austrian press laws allowed of slightly greater liberty than the Csarist laws, still in force in former Russian Poland, began to publish their "Sycia Kwiaszkowe" (Trade Union Life), which was kept going until May, 1925.

THE reformists for the same period (1918-1922) published their organ "Zwiozkowiec" (The Trade Unionist), also a fortnightly, appearing somewhat irregularly, and in 1922 coming to an end owing to lack of funds.

The new central organ of the revolutionary trade union minority arose in connection with the intensified opposition in the beginning of 1926. The treacherous policy of the PSPers, joining the coalition Government at this time, evoked strong opposition in the ranks of the party, leading to a split and the formation of a new group "PSP Left," a group consisting largely of trade unionists from former Austrian Poland, chiefly Teshin Silesia, imbued with a revolutionary spirit. This group put forward the slogans of the irreducible class struggle, the united Labor front, single mass trade unions. It began to publish a weekly trade union Opposition organ "Glos Pracy" (Voice of Labor) a proposition to the development and determination of the ideology of the group its organ was more significant and went deeper into trade union movement questions in all their aspects, becoming the central organ of the revolutionary minority.

THE uplift in the Polish Labor Movement, caused by Pilsudski's coup d'etat and a favorable industrial boom during the last half of 1926, was vividly reflected in the columns of "Gos Pracy." While the reformist press systemotically ignored those facts and phenomena in the Labor Movement "Gos Pracy" gave its readers exact and full information, showed all manifestations of working class life from the point of view of the class struggle, thus assisting solidarity and unity among the Polish working masses, the putting forward of slogans common to the whole working class of the common revolutionary struggle.

THE reformists and the Government understand perfectly well the role of the revolutionary press in the Labor movement and taking corresponding measures. The Central Commission of the trade unions prohibits the circulation and sale of "Gos Pracy" on trade union premises. The Public Prosecutor confiscates literally every number, so that each time it has to be issued all over again, while it is usually speckled with white spaces by favor of the censor.

Despite all these repressions "Gos Pracy" was able to lost out more than a year, and only a few weeks ago, during the last wave of fresh repressions sweeping over the revolutionary section of the working class the "Gos Pracy" was also swept away.

AS well as the above-mentioned central organs some trade unions or Red Fractions of trade unions have published and are still, if but irregularly, publishing their own organs, also, of course, just as zeolously persecuted by trade unnun bureaucracy and the authorities. Thus the chemical workers' union publishes a monthly "Robotnik Chemiszny" (The Chemical Worker); the Commercial Employees' Union published "Glos Pracownita" (The Voice of the Worker); the Red fraction of the Railwaymen's Union published in 1919 and 1920 illegally "The Railway Communist," from 1926 "The Signal" has been legally published, although its circulation among railwaymen is prohibited by decision of the Central Committee of Trade Unions.

As well as the Polish Press there is a trade union press with revolutionary tendencies in the Ukrainian language. "Trade Union News" the organ of the Trade Union Minority is published in Eastern Galicia, the centre, as is wall known, of the oil industry, and one of the centres of the lumber industry; the paper is very popular there among the Ukrainian oil and lumber workers.

THE political press having revolutionary tendencies is of course subjected to still greater persecution than the trade union. The political labor organs during the short time which they are allowed to exist naturally give as much space as possible to questions of the trade union movement. The journal outlasting all the others, to be exact, from 1920 to 1924, was the revolutionary, educational organ known as "Culture."

A considerable section of the political revolutionary press is of course published and circulated illegally.

THE monthly journal "Robotnicyy Przeglad Gospodarczy" (Labor Economic Review), published in 1925 is the central organ of the reformist Central Commission of Trade Unions. This journal is of an informative character. Besides colorless articles of a general nature and official communiques from the Central Commission it prints data on the state of industry, the position of the working class, etc., drawn exclusively from Government and bourgeois sources.

MOST of the trade unions—miners, metal workers, lumber workers, agricultural municipal, railway workers, etc. publish monthly organs "The Railway Trade Unionist," the big and pre-perous weekly of the railwaymen's union, comes out very regularly. Most of these organs are conducted in reformist spirit in accordance with the makeup of the bureaucrat union administrations.

"Robotnik" (The Worker), organ of the PSP, "Naprzod" (Forward), Cracow organ of PSP, "Gazeta Robotnicza" (Labor News), Upper Silesian PSP organ, and other political press mouthpieces, of course devote some of their columns to questions of working class life and the Labor Movement, while as we have already shown the reformist tendencies show themselves much more clearly in the formation given and the light thrown on it, than in the flowery insincere editorials.—S. Belskaya.

Mexican Workers Rap U. S. Imperial Policy in South America at Meet

MEXICO CITY, July 5.—The Anti-Imperialist League which is carrying on intensive propaganda directed against Wall Street and the American Department of State staged a Fourth of July mass meeting here yesterday at which speakers drew sharp comparisons between the Americo of 1776 and the Americo of today.

Prior to the mass demonstration the city was flooded with the League's posters which heod as follows:

"1776 — Washington, Frapklin; liberty, independence.

"1927 — Coolidge, Sinclair, Morgon; petroleum, Woll Street.

"Texas in 1847; Panama in 1903; Nicaragua, Santo Domingo, Sacco-Vonzetti, Imperialism, Kellogg, robbery."

Chile Deportations Go On Under Ibanez

MENDOZA, Argentina, July 5.—The wholesale deportation of political leaders suspected of opposing the Ibanez dictatorship continues at full blast.

Among those forced from the country recently ore Enrique Matte-Figueroo, nephew of the former president, und Eliodoro Yanez, who sponsored the coming international press conference at Geneva.

The Ibanez dictatorship which overthrew constitutional government is believed to have been engineered by the Guggenhaim Interests, which have invested heavily in Chilean copper and nitrate.

10,000 Chinese Wounded In Nationalist Capital; Call for Workers to Aid

CHICAGO, July 5.—A telegram just received by the International Workers' Aid states that 10,000 Workers and Peasants lie wounded in the Lazarett at Wuchang, while the Revolutionary army continues its victorious onward march toward Peking.

The Chinese workers and peasants are paying a price that staggers humanity. Governments are supporting counter-revolutionary forces with finances and war ammunition, but giving absolutely no support or relief to the Chinese Revolutionary fighters.

In spite of this, a new China is arising, a China that will not be a menace to the workers of other countries, because of cheap coolie labor that lives on rice and hard tack.

The following telegram should receive the whole hearted support of every liberty-loving man or woman; they need medicine, bandages and food.

International Workers' Aid,
Chicago, Ill.

Ten thousand wounded in the Wichang-Lazarett—we need immediate help. Non-Chinese doctors and nurses from all parts of China are aiding the wounded. Money is urgently needed to carry on the relief work. We anxiously await your assistance. (Signed)—Madam Sun Yat Sen.

New England Pledges Aid to Daily Worker

clubs, this will result in helping spread this struggle for a free press over the other states in New England, as well as Massachusetts.

The last time that Engdahl attempted to speak on Boston Common, during the congressional election campaign last fall, he was stopped by the police. Nevertheless a meeting was held at that time at Scully Square in another section of the city.

Engdahl was given a big ovation Sunday, however, when he appeared and when it was announced by Chairman Harry Cantor that he would give the news of the latest developments in the Union of Soviet Republics as well as expose the vicious attack by the government against The DAILY WORKER.

This is not the first time that the editors and business managers of labor publications have been sent to prison," said Engdahl, "and it will certainly not be the last. But it is absolutely necessary that all workers acquaint themselves with the vital issues involved in this fight. This is not only an attack on The DAILY WORKER. It is a blow being struck against the whole workingclass."

Engdahl told of the necessity of strengthening the workers' press in this country to voice labor's viewpoint during the present world crisis that grows out of the Chinese revolution and the new war being launched against the Soviet Union.

Engdahl told of the growth of Soviet industry and agriculture, giving details of his visit to "Amo," the big automobile plant in Moscow.

"I spoke at the May Day demonstration in the textile center of Ozery, 125 miles south of Moscow," said Engdahl. "They asked me to carry a message to you, the textile workers of the United States. These textile workers in the Soviet Union have a 100 per cent union. In greeting the workers in the textile industry in this country, they give voice to their hopes that you will also develop your 100 per cent Textile Workers' Union. They hope that the time will come when the textile workers in all countries will beenme united in a really International Textile Workers' Union." I take this opportunity to carry out my pledge to the Russian textile workers to extend this greeting to you."

The large audience received this greeting with considerable enthusiasm. The response grew as Engdahl pointed out the growing war danger contained in the new imperialist threats against the Soviet Union.

Against the New Capitalist War.

"Do not allow one penny of your money to be spent, nor one drop of workers' blood to be shed in the new war being planned ogoinst the Soviet Union," urged Engdahl. "Refuse to support this new capitalist war." And the oudience thundered its approval.

Numerous questions were osked towards the close of the meeting, during which an appeal was made for members for the Party.

The gathering at Worcester was one of the largest of the kind ever held in New England. The three-day conference included a delagation that had come from New York City in a huge auto-bus hired for the occasion. Among the other speakers, in addition to Engdahl, was J. O. Bentall, who told of the most recent developments in the Sacco-Vanzetti case. Resolutions were adopted protesting against the death sentence imposed against these two workers. These resolutions will be forwarded immediately to Governor Fuller.

Bert Wolfe addressed gatherings held by Finnish workers at Gardner, Mass., and by the Workers (Communist) Party at West Roxbury.

Paper Bullets

"One propagandist is worth 20 armed soldiers," says Li He-lin, director of the Central Propaganda Bureau of the Chinese Nationalist Army.

"Our enemies could have well withstood our steel bullets."

Before the 150,000,000 paper bullets they are powerless.

Benefitting from the experience of the Chinese Revolution and the Russian Revolution The DAILY WORKER Army will wage a relentless campaign against the enemy using the most destructive weapon known—the paper bullet. In this attack, the bullets employed will be particularly dangerous, in view of the fact that they have been carefully manufactured to conform with the conditions peculiar to this country.

The DAILY WORKER has been rated by military experts as the most destructive weapon yet produced in the class war in America.

"Open fire" is the order of the day from every proletarian fortress, from every shop, mine, mill and farm. Every new subscriber, every new reader secured for The DAILY WORKER, is a casualty for the army of capitalism. "Open fire with your paper bullets."

A Segregation to the Harassed Farmers and Stockmen in and Around Rapid City.

There is taking place in and around Rapid City, South Dakota, a contemptible farce of the most nauseous kind.

A New England president, whose every act and utterance has shown that he despises the more liberal West, is cavorting in grotesque attire to prove that he is "one of the boys."

Not less disgusting than the antics of Coolidge, is the truckling attitude of the local politicians who are herding—no other word describes the methods used—large sections of the populace into the proximity of the presidential premises to be beguiled with speeches which for sheer inanity set a new record.

Consider the situation. Coolidge slapped the whole agricultural and stockraising sections of the population in the face when he vetoed the McNary-Haugen bill. But more insulting than the veto itself were the reasons given for his opposition to it. The language of the president's statement in this connection seemed to be chosen for the express purpose of humiliating its supporters. In almost so many words he told the farmers that they did not know what they wanted and if they did there was no particular reason why it should be given to them.

The wave of resentment which arose following the veto scared the Coolidge advisers. Rumors of the strength of the Lowden following in the Middle West and West were responsible for the choice of the Coolidge vacation site.

Now the stiff and clammy Cal is trying to act like Teddy the Cowboy and cuts a pitiful figure. There is no real glamor to be cast around this juiceless individual above whose peaked face a "ten-gallon hat" brings joy to the heart of the most mediocre cartoonist.

The cynical comments of the correspondents fit in well with the rest of the picture. They do not even trouble to conceal the sneering attitude of the presidential circle toward the farmers and stockmen. Contemptuously they state in so many words a good crop and good prices will allay the discontent provided that the campaign hokum is dished up in rich enough doses.

Meanwhile the drab figure of Coolidge goes thru its paces. The somber environment of the New England farm is replaced by the gaudy glitter of a period which the westerners themselves barely remember. The stage coach period passed long ago. Barbed wire fences have replaced the open ranges. The "cowboys" ride in flivvers and not on plunging cayuses. The ranches have become farms and the farmer's margin between income and expenditure has been wiped out. Mortgages have replaced bank accounts.

The stageplay in and around Rapid City has no connection with reality. It is simply a crude attempt to make the population of this section forget its problems, forget the connection between the banks, trusts and railroads and Calvin Coolidge—who represents these interests, and not farmers and workers, as president of the United States.

500,000 leaflets, summarizing the issues which affect the farmers and stockgrowers, exposing the real role of Coolidge and putting forward its practical program, distributed in the "vacation area" by the United Farmers' Educational League, would give his campaign managers something to think about.

Geneva, China and War.

. . . A small American band is keeping in secret conclave at Geneva, preparing to meet the gravest issue that has loomed athwart the horizon of the tri-power conference . . . the American delegation is pleased to consider the 600,000 ton total presented to the technical committee as "unofficial" . . . the British will have time to present new proposals more in harmony with the American invitation to limit naval armament. . . . In the event that the British again present the same figures, American opinion, as expressed today, will be that "Great Britain is playing a dangerous game." (Geneva dispatch to the New York Times July 3.)

Taken in connection with the news that president Coolidge and his advisers are devoting much time to the consideration of the problems arising at Geneva, that strong pressure is being brought to bear for the speedy recognition of the anti-labor Nanking government by the United States, and we have a fairly complete picture of the manner in which the question of naval armament and Chinese policy dovetail in the secret chambers of the state department.

So widely does the British proposal for a 600,000 ton cruiser allotment differ from what the American representatives are instructed to agree to that, in a situation wherein such questions as the attitude of Japan and the British naval base at Singapore are decisive, it seems hardly possible for an agreement to be reached.

As the control of the Pacific area is the immediate prize and as the Nanking government apparently is quite willing to make big concessions to American imperialist policy, in fact has already shown by its slaughter of workers and suppression of labor unions that it is following the best established American procedure, there is a strong likelihood that recognition of Nanking may follow because of the necessity of American imperialism for an instrument which it can wield in China against both Britain and Japan.

The recognition of the Nanking government by America would place it in a position where it could talk decisively to the other powers, and to Great Britain especially, in view of her huge interests in the sections under its control, recognition would be a severe blow.

It is easy to understand, that with the present proofs of antagonism showing themselves at Geneva, such an act by the United States could be interpreted as practically a declaration of war.

These speculations are made, and they are by no means far-fetched, in order to show that the logical result of American and British imperialist policy is the creation of a war situation.

It is possible, of course, that some formula will be found at Geneva which will serve to conceal for some time longer the fact that they have really no time for questions of high policy! It is much more important for them to put their own house (sadly needing a spring cleaning) in order.

In the first place their financial affairs are in a disastrous condition. Of 24 organizations affiliated to Amsterdam, 11 have paid no entrance fees and 6 have paid no membership dues for many years. Even England failed to pay two-thirds of their membership dues during the last years. The International's income for the last year did not exceed 100,000 guldens. Their expenses were, however, much higher than this. The funds of the International which were 114,510 gulden in the beginning of 1926 were only 43,000 by the end of the year. Thus in one year 71,000 gulden in addition to the 100,000 received from membership dues have melted away. This is a situation tottering on the brink of ruin. The Bureau has had to mortgage the International's house in Amsterdam, as well its typography and face the question of the cutting down of expenses in the most serious manner.

WHAT turn was taken by this cutting down? The first thing to feel the axe was cultural work, and it was resolved not to organize the International Summer School this year and to cut down the already trifling amount of publishing that was done. The International's monthly has been reduced to a thin pamphlet of 16 pages, containing only official notices and it was decided to cease the publication of the pamphlet in French and English.

All this cannot, however, save the situation. The International's funds go rather on administrative expenses than on cultural work, assistance to members on strike and victims of government repression. Even before the Vienna Congress it was stated that administrative expenses swallow the lion's share of their funds. The secretariels of the International (of whom there are three) get 10,000 gulden a year each, members of the General Council get 25 gulden a day for their expenses. The International maintains a staff of well-paid technical employes.

AND there is yet another point which costs the Amsterdam International dear. National hatred between the trade unionists in hostile countries roused by the war made itself so strongly felt at the first post-war congress that the International was forced to choose as its headquarters a neutral country. The choice of Holland involved unnecessary expenditure on interpreters, and translators since all documents had to be translated into Dutch as well as into the three European languages. Holland is, moreover, one of the most expensive countries in Europe.

IT turned out, however, not so easy to overcome all these difficulties. As soon as the question of cutting down the number of secretaries arose, the fur began to fly. The business affairs of the International are actually carried out by Oudegeest, with some assistance by Sassenbach. But the British who form the biggest section of the International will not hear of the withdrawal of the British secretary, Brown. Sassenbach, moreover, has definitely stated that he will in no event agree to act as assistant secretary. At the last meeting of the bureau (25-26 April) an agreement was arrived at on this question according to the official report, but it has not yet known who is to be sacrificed on the altar of economy.

THINGS became still worse when the question of cutting down the secretaries' salaries was brought forward. Oudegeest refuses to take less than 10,000 guldens a year and the members of the Bureau are afraid to insist, for Oudegeest in order to become secretary of the International refused a seat in the Dutch Parliament, from which his earnings would have been much greater.

WHAT was to be done? The Netherlands Federation of Trade Unions suggest to raise the dues in the International from 12 to 18 guldens per 1,000 members. This suggestion, however, has met with determined resistance. The Austrians and the Swiss have already definitely declared that membership dues cannot be raised; the British, whose financial affairs are at present anything but brilliant, also to refuse to agree to this; the French membership fees are as it is difficult to collect, and they cannot possibly pay more.

A great struggle went on behind the scenes with regards to the alteration of the International's headquarters. At the previous meeting of the Bureau the question of its transference to a more central country was discussed. The whole labor press unhesitatingly interpreted this as an intention to transfer the International's headquarters to Berlin, to which the Germans whose influence in the International is ever on the increase, have long aspired. The British and the French, however, were against this. It appears their argument won the day. At the last session of the National Council of the reformist General Confederation of Labor in France Jouhaux declared that the headquarters of the International would remain in Holland.

THE official reports of the International are generally speaking meagre and terse. Most of our information on the misunderstandings and complication going on in the International has been gained from the left socialist press (Paul Levy's paper, the organ of the Swiss Federation of Trade Unions and others), so daring as to criticise Oudegeest's economy and endeavor to mend matters. Even the most favorable criticism, however, angers the Amsterdamites. They have not the slightest desire to carry their difficulties into the open, for the judgment of their working class members, hoping to smooth everything over in camera. But truth will out and the crisis in the Amsterdam International is already being shouted from the roof-tops.

Break Altitude Record.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—A new world's altitude record for seaplanes was written in the records today.

Lieut. C. C. Champion took a Wright Apache plane 37,500 feet above the capital yesterday, breaking his own world's record of 33,455 feet established two months ago.

THE WORKER WHO CELEBRATES AIR FLIGHTS

Labors of the Amsterdam International

By OLGA FALK.

BERLIN (By Mail).—The Amsterdam International is now chiefly busy with its internal affairs. The impending Congress in August brings forth questions of finance, the question of the Secretariat, headquarters of the International, and many others. Questions occupying the foreground in the life of a true International—the economic struggle of the working class, the struggle with threatened war, the fight against imperialism—which have always played a very modest role in the life of Amsterdam, have now been pushed right into the background. The fact that a month ago during the Italo-Jugoslavian conflict the meeting of the Amsterdam International's Executive which should have worked out the question of the International's action in regard to this conflict, was postponed is extremely characteristic. Oudegeest, questioned by the correspondent of the Dutch paper "Het Volk" whether such postponement implied that the danger of war had become less, replied phlegmatically:

"The danger has not become less, but it would be better to hold the Executive meeting in two weeks' time." Better or worse we do not know, but certainly it came to the same thing—nothing will be altered by their resolution being passed sooner or later.

THE recently passed resolution with regard to the unsuccessful work of the provisional commission to the Disarmament Conference bears precisely such a character—that of a hastily drawn up official document. A document had to be produced, since, try as Amsterdam might to advertise the League of Nations, the sterility of its work in this as in all other spheres was a little too obvious. The International issued on this occasion an appeal to all affiliated organizations for an energetic campaign against the reactionary and military powers. But no one need be alarmed by these pugnacious words—the campaign proposed is to be carried on chiefly in the press.

THE Amsterdamites contented themselves with yet another appeal—this time to the League of Nations—on the question of the danger of war. As for the still more urgent question of modern political life—the question of the Chinese Revolution—Amsterdam took up a position of blatant mockery. They intend to set up connections with the Chinese trade unions and embark upon a campaign in their favor only after everything is settled down and smoothed over in China, recommending the Chinese workers in the meantime to cease collaboration with their bourgeoisie in the national emancipatory struggle. Chiang Kai-shek's betrayal of the Chinese revolution evoked nothing but malevolent glee from the Amsterdamites.

Those who say that there is no danger of war today are either blind fools, dupes, or conscious agents of imperialism.

growing breach between America and Britain. It is quite probable, for instance, that the international bankers now in conference here, have met to devise a policy to meet the present situation.

But the mere fact that capitalist governments and various powerful sections of the capitalist class are engaging in a whole series of international conferences which have accomplished nothing so far to ease the growing tension, is an unfailing sign that war plans are being made as the political instability of capitalism forces itself more and more upon the attention of the foreign offices.

DRAMA

Woe to the Vanquished, "The Streets of Sorrow"

Review By VERN SMITH

Another play of post war Vienna, starving, sick, corrupt, and yet heroic. Just usual, since the power of censorship is still in the hands of the bourgeoisie, the interest centers around the trials and tribulations of the newly poor, not of those who have been "always with ye."

I am informed that the play, as originally produced, had a much more definite working class emphasis, and that the censorship here resulted first in a good deal of this being cut out, and then that after consultation among themselves, those whose business it is to make the world safe for Babbit cut out most of the rest of the "labor angle," and in general made a mess of the thing, giving it a peculiar confused and faltering aspect. However, it is in its final form as a product of censorship that it has to be reviewed, since it is in that form that the public sees it.

This is the story of the sadness of the "shabby genteel," the steady decline and painful corruption of the old ruling class and of the bureaucrats especially. Councillor Rumfort has two daughters, and is so proud that he turns out of his house a paying American roomer when his youngest daughter is charged with stealing two tins of canned meat. Of course she did steal the meat, and the other daughter, Greta (played excellently by Greta Garbo) nearly becomes an inmate of a disorderly house in her efforts to keep the family going.

That is half of the interest. The other half centers around the rise of the greedy new bourgeoisie: those who, like the butcher of Melchior Street, make Greta stand in line all night for the chance to buy meat, and then call the police to chase her away, only because the meat is sold out, and the higher elements of this new capitalism, like the profiteers Canez and Rosenow, who loot on a huge scale, stealing mines, swindling in the stock market, swilling in the night clubs and clutching down the daughters of the old ruling class for their pleasure.

The proletarians who appear in the story are not, as such, essential to the plot but serve as background for the crimes and degeneration of their "betters." Chief of the proletarian characters is the murderess, Maria Lechner, who might as well have come from any other class in the rotting Vienna society. In the end there is a brief riot by those who do not, as do the Rumfort family, worry over the change from a meat diet to one of cabbage, but suffer under a constant dimunition of their accustomed cabbage rations. This is treated as an elemental outburst, without leadership, merely the hand of fate which punishes certain of the filthiest of the rich.

There is an indirect slap at the American Red Cross, the officers of which complain that all they see in Vienna is misery. There is a definite touch of anti-semitism, all the worst villains, especially the profiteers, being given Jewish faces. The play is in the European tradition, which holds that an actress should do something more than merely pose beautifully, and that scenery, instead of being the chief attraction in a film should be an appropriate background for the action.

Revival of "Madame X" at Earl Carroll Tonight

Ben Smith last seen in the role of Neill Sykes in "The Field God," has been engaged by Jed Harris to play opposite Helen Hayes in "Coquette," the joint work of George Abbott and Ann Preston Bridgers.

Sam H. Harris' first production of the season, "Among The Married," the new comedy by Vincent Lawrence opens in Atlantic City next Monday. The cast includes Louis Calhern, Warren William, Helen Flint, Kathryn Givney, William David and Milano Tilden.

Murray Phillips will present a revival of "Madame X," the Alexandre Bison's drama which was so popular here many seasons back, at the Earl Carroll theatre tonight. Carroll McComas will play the title role and Rex Cherryman the leading male part.

Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, now appearing in "The Second Man," will leave for a European vacation Friday night. Earle Larimore and Emily Stevens will take over the roles.

Valerie Wyngate co-adapter of "Her Cardboard Lover" at the Empire has withdrawn from the cast. The part of Albine is now being played by Virgina Chauvenet, last seen in "The Woman of Bronze."

Junkers Build Concrete Runway.

BERLIN, July 5.—Discussion of a Berlin-to-New York non-stop flight was given marked impetus today by the announcement of the Junkers airplane works that they are constructing a concrete runway for planes with especially heavy loads that would attempt record flights. Ever since Clarence Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine made their great flight from New York to Kottbus, Germany, there has been considerable talk of a flight from this country to the United States.

Progressive Merit Of Americanism

By CARL HARRISON (Fed. Press)

CHICAGO, July 5 (FP).—The 11th annual convention of the American Federation of Teachers, which came to an end July 1 in Chicago, maintained and improved upon the record of past years in its progressive attitude on educational and social questions. About 60 delegates, very many of them in all parts of the country, were labor colleagues. In Knoxville in West York and Commonwealth in Arkansas were represented. Pres. Mary C. Barker of Atlanta and Secy-Treas. Florence Curtis Hanson of Chicago were reelected. Mrs. Hanson was also chosen delegate to the American Federation of Labor convention to be held in Los Angeles in October. Miss Barker will be A. F. of L. delegate of the Atlanta Trades Council.

Particularly striking in the large number of resolutions adopted by the convention are those on militarism in education and on the right of teachers to freedom from outside interference, within the limits permitted to any other citizens, both at work and in leisure hours. War was denounced as ruinous of good citizenship, brutalizing and savage. Compulsory military training in schools and colleges was condemned as perpetuating the warmind. Withdrawal of American armed forces from China was demanded. Children should be taught not only to cherish the American revolutionary and constitutional tradition but to become pioneers of a new social order based on justice, the resolution declared.

On the freedom of the teacher the convention took the position that matters of conduct should be regulated by the professional opinion of the teachers as a body and not by outside authorities. The teacher's political and personal freedom, the resolution stated, is as clearly a matter of citizenship right as that of other people, with the additional consideration that free citizens cannot be the product of schools in which the teachers are not free. Infringements of teachers' academic and personal freedom by superintendents and school boards in the past year were scored. Resistance by the University of Wisconsin and the University of Utah to attempts to check academic freedom were lauded.

Achievements in the halting progress of American teachers toward security on the job and in old age were noted by the convention, including the passage of legislation in Minnesota and California making it harder to remove teachers, except for proved cause, and improvement in old age pension legislation in Illinois and New York.

Elect Council.

Many education problems such as the all-year school, junior high schools, size of classes, intelligence testing, etc., were made the subject of further research to be reported on to the 1928 convention. St. Paul was the liveliest bidder for the next convention. The place is selected by the incoming executive council. The new council consists of the two officers and in addition F. G. Stocker, C. B. Stillman, Lucie L. Allen, all of Chicago; Abraham Lefkowitz and Henry R. Linville, New York; Selma Borchardt, Washington; E. E. Schwarztrauber, Portland, Ore.; Florence Rood, St. Paul; Amy A. Fox, Minneapolis; W. J. Scott, Atlanta; A. J. Muste, Brookwood.

Brookwood's summer labor and teacher institutes were indorsed. Manumit School and worker nursery schools received favorable attention.

Denounce "Red" Scares.

Red scares, the convention pointed out, are engineered by the special interests that profit from antisocial conditions.

Patriotcering organizations like the Daughters of 1812, who called the federal children's bureau communistic, were branded by the convention and will be fought by the federation.

Creative education in the ideal of teaching, it was resolved, in contrast to the "police concept" of schooling now favored by the influences that largely control education in the United States.

Harvester Companies Bid for Huge Soviet Market; Printers Busy

CHICAGO, (FP) July 5.—The International Harvester Co., the International Machinery Co., and other large corporations are keeping Chicago printing and engraving concerns busy with orders for catalogs in the Russian language to be distributed in the Soviet Union.

The harvester trust recently obtained a huge consignment of catalogs of farm machinery. Its catalog has about 100 pages and is expensively gotten up with many cuts. The Sullivan concern has a lively market for its mining machinery in Russia. Its catalog has 150 pages and is also richly illustrated. Sullivan mining machinery is the standard make in American mines.

Six Pressmen Hurt.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 5. — Six employes of the Pittsburgh Press were rushed to a hospital after an explosion wrecked the engine room of the newspaper plant late this afternoon.

Glenn Day, engine room worker, and an unidentified employe were perhaps fatally injured, it was reported. The others were suffering from cuts and shock.

Plate glass flew in all directions when gasoline being delivered to the newspaper by a tank-truck exploded.

IDLE RICH RAKE IN ALMOST THREE BILLION IN DIVIDENDS IN SEVEN MONTHS' HAUL THIS YEAR

Annual report that midyear dividend and interest payments to the investor class will approximate $850,000,000 indicates that the grabbers are getting their share in spite of the weak talbot of high wages and declining prices. This is the largest midyear disbursement to investors in the history of the country, being fully $50,000,000 above last summer's record.

The total unearned income received by investors so far in 1927 exceeds the total for any full year prior to 1919. It exceeds by more than $1,000,000,000 the dividend and interest total of either 1913 or 1914.

Dividend and interest payments the first 6 months of 1927 amounted to $2,317,049,000, compared with $2,168,737,000 in the same period of 1926. The July 1st payments bring the total to $2,867,000,000, compared with $2,167,853,000 in the first 7 months of 1926. In 1916 and 1917, years of maximum war profits, dividend and interest payments for the full 12 months brought the investing class only $2,135,028,000 and $2,389,140,000.

The dividend and interest payments the first 7 months of 1927 and 1926 were:

Dividends and Interest	1927	1926
Jan.	$679,850,000	$511,722,000
Feb.	242,350,000	218,716,000
March	546,970,000	332,525,000
April	466,100,000	426,975,000
May	322,706,000	338,650,000
June	863,173,000	341,350,000
July	556,000,000	491,215,000
Total, 7 mos.	$2,867,049,000	$3,660,652,000

The report for the year so far includes a flock of increased dividends, initial dividends and extra dividends. In June alone there were 18 increased dividends, 27 initial dividends, and 59 extra dividends. The 2nd quarter U. S. Steel dividends are increased as a result of the recently declared 40 per cent stock dividend, being raised to $12,483,411.

New Securities.

These enormous dividend and interest payments were chiefly responsible for the purchase of nearly $4,000,000,000 of new securities in the first 6 months of the year. The exact total was $3,965,114,000 and compares with $2,973,470,000 new capital floated the first half of 1926. It includes $600,384,000 in state and municipal bonds, $927,583,000 in public utility bonds, $799,090,000 in foreign bonds, $425,785,000 in railroad bonds, $849,822,000 in corporate stocks and the balance in miscellaneous bonds.

This means that the tremendous flow of dividends and interest is enabling the owning class to secure a rapidly increasing mortgage on the world's economic life.

UNION RULES BROKEN BY CLOTHING BOSSES WHO FAIL TO KEEP CONTRACT; CONDITIONS WORSE

By NORMAN SILBER.

Last summer there was a general stoppage in the man's clothing industry by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. All shops registered in the union settled under the following conditions:

5 per cent increase in pay; limitation of contractors; reduction of insurance charged to the contractor from 1½ per cent to 1 per cent.

These terms were never lived up to. Instead of increased pay we have seen nothing but reductions since last summer. Instead of limiting contractors, the manufacturers work with all kinds of contractors—union and non-union—in, town and out-of-town. No attempt is being made to check these jobbers in any manner. Instead of reducing the insurance charge, many manufacturers have arbitrarily increased it to 2 per cent in direct violation of the specific terms of their agreements with the union. The actual insurance rate should be not over ¾ of 1 per cent.

Violation of union rules permeate the entire industry. Cutters cut 70 to 80 lays of goods with the full knowledge that the maximum union lay is about 45. Non-union cutters are allowed to lay up the goods, to cut the lays and to trim and fit the garments. A house which should employ three cutters gets along with one union cutter and two boys classed as "shipping clerks." Cutters' reports are "not turned into the union." Union expressmen take lays of double the union height to scab shops. The garments are ticketed and snatched in by non-union labor—a good deal of child labor being employed for these operations. I know a concern that turns out 2000 men's suits a week and employs only one union man, and it is supposed to be a "strict union house."

The conditions under which clothing is manufactured are intolerable. "Poorly ventilated lofts" would not do the places justice. Dark non-ventilated lofts containing seventy years of dust accumulations would come nearer the mark. The only water available comes from a rusty tank on the roof. This stagnant, rusty water is not fit to drink, but there is no other water in the left and workers must wash their hands and throats. Dust so thick in the air that noses bleed frequently and the dust eats its way to the lungs. No towels are supplied and the toilet rooms are odorous, dark and unfit for use.

The boys who match the clothing and pack the cases work at a break neck speed during the season and $12.00, $15.00 and $18.00 a week. They work until late at night without any pay for overtime. They receive no holidays but the firms usually contain a religious Jew who is under the erroneous impression that they have "off" on the Jewish holidays and therefore insists that they work on the legal holidays.

Fire rules are not observed. Red lights are not lit at fire exits. Fire escapes are not un-obstructed. Fire pails are not filled. A first aid kit is not on hand.

Sure, inspectors come around. Police inspectors come around to sell the boss tickets to their social affairs. Fire inspectors come around on similar missions. Inspectors from the Dept. of Labor come around too, but union officials are very seldom seen or heard of.

BRITISH CLOTH EXPORTS FALL 40% SINCE 1913

By LELAND OLDS (Federated Press).

Signs of decay in the world's most far-flung capitalist empire come to light in a U. S. department of commerce report on present and pre-war British cotton cloth exports. The department's figures indicate that growing hostility to English exploitation, coupled with expanding industrialism in the empire's provinces, is sapping the vitality of industry at home by drying up its markets.

British cotton cloth experts, according to the report, totaled 7,075,252,000 square yards in 1913. By 1925 they had fallen to 4,436,610,000 yards while in 1926 they fell to 3,834,448,000 yards. The quantity exported in 1926 was 31½ per cent less than in 1925 and 41% per cent less than in 1913.

The prosperity of English cotton manufacturing hinges on the orders from foreign markets. In contrast with the cotton industry in the United States, which finds a home market for more than 90 per cent of its production, the British industry must export 80 to 90 per cent of its production to avoid chronic depression.

Prior to the war British cotton manufacturers found their principal markets in the so-called backward countries on which England had forced its economic yoke. India alone took 3,-067,351,000 yards in 1913. China came second with 716,533,000 yards of English cotton. South America took 538,-923,000 yards and Turkey 360,742,000.

The government figures showing exports of cotton cloth from the United Kingdom to principal world markets in 1913 and 1926 are:

English exports of cotton cloth	1913	1926
India	3,067,351,000 yds	1,565,243,000 yds
China	716,533,000	177,466,000
South America	538,923,000	321,435,000
Turkey	360,742,000	56,208,000
Dutch East Indies	304,929,000	121,745,000
Mexico, Central America, West Indies	276,088,000	113,003,000
Egypt	266,623,000	120,874,000
British Africa	231,174,000	134,180,000
Australia, New Zealand	210,744,000	218,310,000
British Malaya	131,785,000	89,204,000
Canada	110,499,000	43,711,000
Europe	294,626,000	391,650,000
Other	586,333,000	497,121,000

Argentina provides the largest market for British cottons in South America. Its demand has fallen from 199,-118,000 yards in 1913 to 112,576,000 yards in 1926, due in part to increased imports from the United States, but more to its own growing textile industry. The chief European markets for British cottons are Switzerland, Germany and the Netherlands.

The table shows the Indian market for British cotton goods cut almost in half. The British have lost 75 per cent of their pre-war market in China. Turkey is taking about 15¼ per cent of the British cotton cloth it imported in 1913. The Dutch East Indies have reduced their demand about 60 per cent.

In England these figures are reflected in chronic unemployment and part time; they are reflected in writing down the capitalization of old established cotton mills. The heart of a capitalist empire is failing.

Cleveland Printers Face Sharp Struggle Against Open Shop

CLEVELAND, July 4.—The Master Printers Association of Cleveland is an organization of the printing bosses which aims at breaking down the organization of the workers, with headquarters at 811 Prospect Ave., Cleveland.

To win over the workers this Association periodically sends literature into the homes of the printers and Allied Trades, enlightening them as to the advantages of "open shop conditions" as against the un-democratic policies followed in the closed shop. Such phrases as "Be your own boss; don't let anyone dictate to you" (meaning not to listen to union leaders.)

The bosses association maintains a blacklist, each employer sending a report to headquarters giving in detail reasons for dismissal or quitting. A card for aame is furnished the forsman or superintendent on which he is to check off various queries. An example of one reason for quitting is "dissatisfied with rate." One cause for "firing" is under a caption "personal reasons."

Any worker going out on strike is of course automatically listed as undesirable and all such workers are referred to as "rebels."

The association also runs an employment bureau. When a place is open the secretary, Paul H. Robbins, immediately sends out a letter notifying the applicant, also enclosing a circular containing such anti-union propaganda as "Report to this office when out of employment. Help maintain the open shop. Keep agitators out. Your cooperation is necessary for the best results."

That their activities are dangerous to the organized workers is shown by the fact that within the last year several shops have broken with the union, prolonging the week from forty-four to forty-eight hours.

The leadership in the printers' union and allied trades have been too weak-kneed to counteract this tendency to lower the standard of living and it behooves them to put up a vigorous battle, now that it becomes a neglible factor in the industry and many years' work of organization will have been wasted.

A stalwart line and the writer is experienced in at least one instance), the rank and file came out in a man from printshops where the union label still obtains, and lost them for not showing the strikers the way by militant picketing, publicity, etc. Instead the leaders were satisfied, they had done their duty by showing the bosses they controlled the situation, but never took advantage of the opportunities afforded them.

Yet soon these workers will realize as some have already done, that their leaders must be forced to adopt a "build the union" policy instead of a stagnant plan; or to supplant these self satisfied and inefficient misleaders with able, uncompromising officials to give combat to the challenge of the bosses and bring victory to the producers.

There was a time when Cleveland was practically a hundred per cent organized printing city, and tho it is now to a great extent open shop, we hope that the time will not be long before the Master Printer Association will cease to exist for lack of auditors; for the workers will have learned to listen to their own organization and once more Cleveland will be a hundred per cent union print city.

Grafting Officials of Local No. 3 Electricians Reinstated by Referee

(Federated Press)

Seventeen former officers of Local No. 3, electrical workers, ousted on charges of corruption six months ago, have won a verdict from the referee appointed by the state supreme court that their removal was illegal. Officers elected by the local union have been occupying the place of the removed.

International Vice President Broach who led the first attack on the seventeen, accused them of refusing to organize more than one third of the local electrical workers and of using the offices for their own financial advantage by grafting on employers and workers.

Richard L. O'Hara is the former president of the local the referee orders reinstated. Reelection will precipitate a new fight within the union.

Negro Children Barred From Southern Schools

WASHINGTON, (FP) July 5.—Negro parents in Baltimore suburbs are finding it impossible to get a decent education for their children. Not one graduate of Baltimore County colored schools will be able to get a high school education. The county has no separate colored high school and refuses to pay tuition for Negro students in the city's Negro high school. A colored pastor who protested to the school superintendent against this was thrown out of the room.

In a neighboring county the school board has just awarded contracts for six white brick schools to cost $380,000 and 11 colored schools, frame construction, to cost $86,000. The white schools range in cost from $14,000 to $52,000 and the colored schools from $2,168 to $4,500.

The Baltimore school superintendent points out that Baltimore Negroes are fortunate compared with Alabama, which has not one colored high school. In all the 15 southern states there are but 205 colored high schools against 5,140 for white children. Florida has two and Georgia, Arkansas and Louisiana three each. North Carolina ranks highest with 25.

Negroes Move North.

Negro workers coming to Baltimore from the south report an exodus in progress. In New Orleans the situation has reached a "crisis," says the labor commissioner, especially in the building trades. The director of industrial relations of the Chamber of Commerce has appealed to Negro workers to remain. In Birmingham the Chamber has appointed agents to watch all outgoing trains in an effort to dissuade colored workers from leaving the city.

Fifteen Are Killed in Philadelphia in "Safe And Sane" 4th of July

PITTSBURGH, July 5.—Fireworks and automobile accidents combined to take a toll of 15 lives in Pennsylvania over the holiday, a survey today by International News service showed. In addition, 151 persons were injured in similar accidents.

Charles Little, 50, his wife and two small children were killed near here, when a speeding express train hit their auto. Little's four other children, all under 12 years, were critically injured and may die.

Death Rate On East Side Greater Than Ever, Says Report

That the mortality rate from pneumonia in the "Mulberry Bend" district of the city is 93 per cent higher than normal city rate was revealed recently when the Association for Improving the Conditinn of the Poor issued a report on a survey into the health conditions of the district.

The Mulberry Bend district extends from Houston to Canal Street and from the Bowery over to Broadway and has a predominantly large Italian population.

According to the report, Mulberry's mortality rate from pulmonary tuberculosis was 48 per cent higher than the city rate in 1920 but in 1926 it was 77 per cent higher than the city rate.

The pneumonia mortality in the district although 31 per cent lower in 1926 than in 1920 was 93 per cent higher than the city rate.

The diseases rank in degree of mortality with pneumonia heading the list followed by tuberculosis, organic heart disease, and puiternal mortality.

Bad housing conditions is largely responsible for the pulmonary diseases, reports the association.

How the Frame-Up Works on Henry Ford's 'Model' Ships

An Amazing Tale of the Methods Used By the Underpaid Strikebreakers and Legal Lackeys of the Great "Philanthropist" To Stamp Out All Protest Among Seamen—This Story Is A Document of the American Class Struggle of Interest Not Only To Seamen But To All Workers.

THE following story concerns itself with the experiences of two sailors, George Loomis and James Fitzgerald, both employed by the Ford Motor Company on one of their boats, the tug "Bali Camp," used to tow the vessels which the Ford Company purchases and uses in the process of creating its economical "lizzy".

These sailors, both of whom have proven their competence and ability seamanship by years of work at their trade, had absolutely no doubt voiced as to their ability as able seamen when they were employed by the Ford Motor Company. Fitzgerald, who, besides his able seaman's ticket, also holds a third mates license, has been going to sea for nine years. Loomis had, besides his merchant marine service, a three-year navy training, totaling altogether eight years.

The Ford Company is very careful in its choice of men and they are carefully investigated as to ability, seamanship and character before they are signed on for the "model ships."

Publicity Bank.

THE publicity agents of the Ford Motor Company paint the picture of working conditions on the Ford boats in the rosiest of colors. "These are the boats where the sailor never suffers as he does at the hands of other shipowners; here the sailor gets the best of chow and living quarters; working conditions on the job are the easiest and most lucrative."

These systematic drive-houses that keep the workers going at top speed under a constant check and belt system where exactly as much work is calculated to be turned out per minute and failure means the gate, are not able to keep workers for more than a few months, unless they are tied down by such unfortunate circumstances as families that are dependent on Ford and his commissary houses.

HENRY FORD has gained control of the stores and middlemen's trade patronized by the workers in these plants; and now it seems as though Ford were extending his systematized tyranny to the high seas and inland waters, and entering into the lives of the workers on the ships in his drive for more profits and greater control and power.

Faulty Seamanship.

THE tug "Bali Camp" on which these two sailors signed in the month of November, 1925, was a badly mastered ship so far as seamanship was concerned. She had a fifteen to twenty degree list all the way from New York to Quezec due mainly to the incompetence of the captain and the chief engineer. These officers had neglected to properly ballast the vessel and in the course of the trip they had made no real attempt to correct this fault. Because of this list the seas ran into the quarters of the crew causing them untold misery and lack of sleep.

During this time all hands worked long hours shifting bunker coal to right the ship and avoid a disaster. Along with this difficulty the heating system was out of order and the crew suffered cold as well as the damp and wet of the water that was shipped aboard. This defect in the heating system also affected the manipulation of the vessel due to leaking steam in capstans, winches, etc.; in fact the vessel was absolutely unseaworthy.

THE men were left in misery below, but the officers lived amidships in comfortable quarters above the water line. The dry stores, kept in the crew's quarters against regulations, were wet when the seas came in, and had rotted away in the crew's quarters from the salt and filth; then after the ship had made part of its run it ran short of ice and the meat for the crew's consumption became foul; such ice as there was being reserved for the officers' choice cuts.

These were some of the conditions with which the crew had to contend, so that when the boat came into port over night, they were only too glad to run ashore for a breathing spell and rest somewhere else to break up the grinding monotony of the miserable trip.

Captain Incensed at Complaint.

WHEN the ship arrived at Quebec the crew asked the captain for half of their wages, to which they are entitled at any port according to the seamans' act, after five or more actual days of work.

The captain, fearing to lose the crew who were indignant and angry at this shabby treatment, refused to pay them off. Thereupon the men went in a body to the American Consul at Quebec and placed a complaint against the vessel on the basis of its being unseaworthy and improperly provisioned. In this they were entirely within their rights as an American crew and American citizens. The consul, after hearing the men, came aboard ship, spoke to the captain and ordered him to improve all conditions. This should have been enough to indicate that the conditions aboard ship were really bad; yet there was no immediate attempt to rectify them or to fulfill the promise made to the consul by the captain.

WHILE the crew were still assembled at the office of the consul he followed the usual procedure and picked out two men to act as spokesman for the crew. It happened that these two were Loomis and Fitzgerald. The captain heard of this and became incensed at the action of these two militant workers. When the consul came aboard ship at five that evening, the captain claimed that he did not have the money with which to pay off the men but that he would pay them off the next day. At two o'clock that morning the captain made preparations to leave and by five had pulled out, leaving Loomis and Fitzgerald on the beach. With them was also left a fireman by the name of Gormely, who had also been active in the previous evening's experience.

These men had the right to go ashore by virtue of the fact that they were not on watch at the time of leaving ship and were off watch for the entire period of the night. They had also been authorised by the chief engineer under whose watch they came.

Listed As "Deserters."

WHEN the "Bali Camp" arrived at Montreal the Captain reported to the American Consul and listed the three men, Loomis, Gormely and Fitzgerald, as deserters. He also took the dastardly line of hiring three other men in their places, and the ship left port.

In the meanwhile these three seamen were left in Quebec without money, food, shelter or friends to whom they might turn in the midst of bitter cold weather. They wandered the streets penniless, and hungry for a while and then turned their steps to the American Consul. This worthy official, after four days finally gave them their fare to Ogdensburg, N. Y., where they hoped to catch the "Bali Camp" on its way to Detroit and the Ford works.

When the men arrived in Ogdensburg they found that the ship had not yet arrived as they were forced to make for Cornwall where they caught up with it. Upon arrival aboard ship they reported to the captain, who told them that they would be paid off in Ogdensburg the next day.

During this time the marooned men stood ready to assume their routine duties aboard ship, the captain, however, purposely did not allow them to return to work on any occasion, thus proving not only his prejudice against these militant workers but also the fact that he had some preconceived plan of meting out revenge to those who had stood up and demanded their rights as seamen. It turned out that when they did arrive in Ogdensburg, the United States Deputy Marshal came and read the list and read the names of Loomis, Fitzgerald and Gormely from a slip of paper which has been furnished him by the captain. "You are under arrest," the marshal told the three seamen, "come along."

Arrested Without Warrant.

FITZGERALD demanded that he be shown the warrant for their arrest, but the marshal refused to do this saying that they must come along; that their arrest would be explained at the proper time and that he didn't know the reason for it.

Railroaded to Jail.

He took them to the Ogdensburg police station where they were kept outside of the inner door while he talked to the chief of police who refused to hold them or have anything to do with their case, on the basis of there being no specific charge against them, but the marshal continued his bluff and took the men along with him. This time he took them to the Owetachie House Hotel in Ogdensburg. He forced them to register and told them that they had to stay there until the captain came back from Detroit. Even at this time he didn't show them any warrant or tell them the reason for this arrest.

Held Three Weeks.

THEY were kept at this hotel for a period of three weeks, during which time the captain, on his return, came up to see them in company with the deputy marshal, and tried to make them accept various sums far under the actual amount due as the full payment of their wages. The men refused to take this offer as there was about three hundred dollars due them collectively and they were legally entitled to the full amount.

They were told to get a lawyer, and got one by the name of Watterman, who made a demand upon the captain for the full sum of their wages; but the captain refused again to pay them.

WAR—THE PANHANDLER

War is useful to the exploiter. When the lives of workers are not being demanded for battle sacrifices, the earnings of workers are being wasted in "preparedness" for battle.

What's What in Washington

WASHINGTON, July 5 (FP).—War in the air, Transatlantic and Pacific flights, diplomatic threats at Geneva of armament races, rumblings in European foreign offices, the restiveness of the colonial peoples, excited harangues by the home generals and admirals, superheated congressmen tossing threats of billions for "defense" through the receptive press, all give confirmation to General Lassiter's warning on his return from Europe:

"The whole world is in a state of unstable equilibrium. Life nowadays is like living in a high explosives factory. From what I have seen abroad and from what I know of world conditions, I am of the opinion that an explosion is almost sure to come."

Lindbergh and the War-Mongers.

Young Lindbergh, winging his solitary way across the Atlantic, probably could not foresee that his feat would start the war hounds on a rampage which will cost American workers billions in added military expenditures in the next few years. But the military crowd in Washington and their Congressional friends, including heads of the military and naval affairs committees in the House, see it.

Chairman James of the military committee, in his perfervid plea for the immediate creation of a Department of National Defense to meet the emergency, cries: "Every time a Lindbergh goes to France or a Chamberlin to Germany, or more especially if a British or Italian or Frenchman or German comes over here, it brings the Department of National Defense that much nearer."

That is the paradoxical effect of Lindbergh's effort to bring the nations closer together; of the Geneva conference which started out to disarm and is ending up with American threats to spend $250,000,000 to smoke parity with the British fleet. All Washington, except for the small voices of a few peace-seekers, has joined the war cry.

What Congress will do about it is indicated pretty clearly by the sentiments of Chairman Butler of the house naval affairs committee, who predicts appropriations to enable the American navy to command the seven seas and tear down Britain's superiority, and Chairman James of the military affairs committee, who demands that economy be thrown to the winds so we can have a bigger army and air force. Within five years he predicts 5,000 first line fighting planes with 25,000 enlisted airmen.

Houghton Ruins Chance.

Of all the sorry fast pan executed since the last blue moon, none has approached Ambassador Houghton's outrageous slip in suggesting that the people be allowed to vote on the next war. Horror, and cautious suggestions that the Ambassador to the Court of St. James had "gone bolshevik" was the official reaction. One thing is pretty certain in the minds of any number of higher-ups: Houghton will never succeed Kellogg as secretary of state. No secretary of state, cooped up in the same building with the secretary of war, could ever have a thought like that and function successfully as head of American foreign affairs.

Houghton was speaking before Harvard when he suggested a constitutional amendment to take the warmaking power away from president and congress and lodge it with the people. He made a closely-reasoned analysis of national slipping into war through the maneuvers of their rulers. He asked for an international agreement practically outlawing war for 100 years. Washington gasped, and then drew the curtain down. Maybe that's why you have heard nothing of the Houghton plan through the press.

The ladies of the ritzy Washington Democratic club are sloganizing. Having produced such corkers, through a private contest, as Eight years of Wall Street—now give Main Street a chance; Lorimer, Newberry, Smith and Vare, what next will the interests dare; Let's bust the power trust; Can we can Cal—I'll say we can, the ladies have thrown the contest open to the nation.

63-Hour Journey From Moscow, U.S.S.R. to Paris Touches Four Countries

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

PARIS, France (By Mail).—It is 63 hours as the train goes from Moscow, U. S. S. R., to Paris, capital city by the River Seine of imperialist France.

One travels over Poland breath the bloody oppression that is begging Wall Street for a loan to bolster its tottering tyranny.

One passes over Germany, thru Berlin, where the workers are being lashed to the point of extreme exhaustion in order to fulfill the demands of the Dawes Plan, and at the same time create a new "place in the sun" for the present capitalist ruling class of the Vaterland.

One even passes thru Belgium where the battlefields are being well preserved for the sightseers who bring money from other lands principally the United States, to give nourishment to the toppling franc.

Then France, where the franc sells more than 25 to the American dollar, "The Dollar" that is accepted gladly everywhere in lieu of the national currency in every capitalist land of Western Europe.

The Contrast in Europe.

It did not take the nearly two months that I spent in the Union of Soviet Republics to get the inspiring feel of the huge optimism of the workers and peasants there. Tremendous contrast with the despair of the workers in Western Europe groaning under their many burdens.

It was on a pleasant Sunday afternoon (June 19th) that I started on my return journey. One of my last visitors at the Hotel Bristol was a Chinese comrade, who had just arrived from Canton, with the latest news of the revolution in China.

It would have been pleasant and instructive to spend hours with him, but trains in Moscow depart punctually, more punctually I found than in those lands where the initiative that is supposed to grow out of private ownership is charged with paving the way toward perfection.

The pavements of the Tverskaya glistened in the sun as we sped along to the White Russian-Baltic Railroad Station. In spite of the huge throngs that had yesterday and early this day departed for "the country," the streets were nevertheless crowded. Men, women and children in large numbers joined in the promenade along the Tverskoy Boulevard, where only the day before other crowds had gathered to witness the start and finish of the Moscow Marathon run around "the Boulevard Ring." Moving picture machine operators had worked zealously as a bakery worker, an official in his union, a fine specimen of an athlete had won the contest.

Reminder of Voikov's Martyrdom.

The afternoon was quiet at the station. It was the lull between the morning rush of those leaving the city, and the rush that would be repeated on their return in the evening.

This was the station at which the Funeral Train carrying the body of Comrade Peter L. Voikov, Soviet ambassador assassinated at Warsaw, had arrived from the Polish capital. Moscow, with the entire Soviet Union, was still in mourning for Voikov. The workers of the Soviet Union do not forget.

This train that was to carry me to the Polish border was as comfortable and modern as any in the world. It had well-oquipped sleeping cars and it carried its dining car that boasted an elaborate menu card in two languages —Russian and English.

"Good Bye!" to Moscow.

On an adjoining track a local train arrives, well filled with early returning excursionists. They wave an enthusiastic "Good Bye!" as our "Express" begins to move out of the station at 4:10 on the second. Our route leads directly west, the route that is followed for a time by the air service on its way to Berlin.

As we pass one station after another ,without stopping, it is clear to be seen that the railroad depot in the rural districts of the Soviet Union, as in rural America, acts as a sort of social center, where great numbers gather to meet acquaintances and "to see the trains go thru."

Often one saw knots of hikers along the roads, not "hitch hikers," since the automobile is not as prevalent in the Soviet Union as in America, not yet. These hikers, in knickers or the much shorter "trunks" of the athlete, showed that these Russians took hiking seriously as a "sport" that was an aid to physical development. There were many parties in the luxuriant forests thru which we passed. White was a predominating color in the clothes of the women. Thus afternoon passed into evening until the lateness of the hour ended the day and turned into a memory, these gay and discussing throngs of the cities thru which we had passed, of Vyasma, Smolensk and Orsha.

We Approach the Border.

The early morning found us at Minsk. It was on June 7th, the same day that Voikov was assassinated at Warsaw, that a military conference was organized between the stations Smolensk-Orsha and Minsk, which resulted in the death of the military representative of the "G. P. U." for the White Russian Military District, Opanski, who was a monarchist and a secret Polish spy, an officer. In addition to Opanski, a counselor was killed and two other persons wounded.

This outrage was followed by a virulent anti-Soviet campaign of terror, in which official communique of the Soviet Government revealed made it "completely clear that the British government, which is feverishly preparing for war against the Soviet Union, is using all the means in its power to interfere with the peaceful constructive work of the workers and peasants of our State."

There is no political question on the platform of the railroad station at Minsk, that there is any increasing tenseness close to the border. To be sure there are a few soldiers of the Red Army about. But there are usually one or two at every station. The official of the Soviet Government who comes thru to take up our passports has but one document with him. This indication of a feeling of security was another contrast with the extreme nervousness to be found in Poland, in Germany and even as far west as Belgium, where a regular stream of soldiers appeared every time that we reached some new border.

Land of Timothy and Clover.

We leave Minsk behind. The country is hilly. The fields of timothy and clover bend before the breeze. It is not much unlike the farming districts of Minnesota, for instance, in the United States.

I was reminded of the figures that I had been shown, revealing the fact that this year would again give an abundant harvest to the peasants of the Soviet Union. Between the fields came the pastures where herds of cows and flocks of sheep were grazing. Many spirited horses were also enjoying the freedom of the open.

Thus we came to the border town of the Soviet Union, Wolkowysk, where the passengers have their baggage taken into the station for examination before leaving the country.

Little interest was shown in my baggage. The Soviet officials looked a little bit regretfully, however, at my portable typewriter. Machinery of any kind is treasured in the Soviet Union. They didn't like to see even a portable typewriter leave the country. Finally a long document was made out and I was taxed one rouble (50 cents) for the privilege of taking the machine with me.

When the examination was completed we returned to the train with our baggage. Soon we could see in the distance the outpost of the Red Army. It looked like a comfortable clubhouse with Red Army soldiers lounging about, a few on duty. We rolled slowly past it.

Not many yards beyond was the frontier and a short distance beyond that the guard house of the Polish Army. Around this Polish outpost and stretching in both directions, North and South, was one of the most elaborate barbwire entanglements that I have ever seen. There was the usual network of barbwire. But on each side were three additional rows of entanglements stretched on long, sharp spikes driven in the ground.

More Soldiers Than Passengers.

Our train halted at this barbwire frontier. I was on the last car. A soldier of the Polish army, with rifle and revolver and plenty of ammunition, with bayonet fixed and the Polish eagle glaring from his helmet, took up his position on the end platform. In another few moments what appeared to be a regular army came pouring thru our coach I counted more Polish soldiers than there were passengers.

There were officers in three different kinds of uniforms. Some carried revolvers with long barrels, others had little toylike appearing automatics. So we passed over into Poland surrendering our passports to the Polish officials of the Polish government. We pass the Polish frontier town of Baranowicze and then on to Stolbsy where our baggage is searched, the main lookout of the customs officers being for "Bolshevik propaganda." Some passengers possessed Russian literature, books and pamphlets, or newspapers. It was carefully scanned. The customs officers were somewhat puzzled by my latest copies of The New York Times, the pamphlet and the Wall Street Journal. They couldn't read them. All they knew was that it was not Russian. So they turned it back to me.

Tomorrow:—The journey thru Poland and Germany.

International Bankers Confer

By BERT MILLER.

If the seriousness of the illness of a patient may be judged by the number of doctors' visits, then the degree to which international capital is concerned about its own internal disorders, may be judged by the number of conferences which are being held to find a remedy for the suffering organism. Flush upon the heels of the futile Economic Conference at Geneva and in the midst of the growing dissensions between the Powers at the so-called Disarmament Conference, comes the announcement of a mysterious meeting of the leading figures in world finance, to be held at the Federal Reserve Bank in New York City, headed in this gathering are Sir Montagu Norman, Governor of the Bank of England; Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, President of the German Reichsbank; Charles Rist, Governor of the Bank of France, and Benjamin Strong of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, a consultation of specialists indeed.

It is not yet clear as to just what problems this highly important and well-guarded conference will tackle, but certain features are significant. Says the New York Times: "While each of these foreign bankers had visited America within the last few years, it was the first time that the 'Big Three' of European finance had assembled here at the same time."

It is to be noted that America has the decided advantage of playing the host during the "conversations." One is left to wonder whether the foreign guests came in response to an invitation or as an order to be present. Whether or not the pending negotiations on these shores will affect the outcome of the present Disarmament Conference, which by some hare-brained gain may be struck between the United States and Great Britain, remains to be seen. Various reports are current as to the purpose of the conference, although the conferees maintain a discreet silence on this point. The question of the interallied debts, the raising of reparation funds, a European federal reserve system, the regulation of international gold shipments all these are suggested as the possible topic of this conference.

Though hidden in an atmosphere of mystery, the conference of four of the leading figures in the world of international finance is something which the workers of the world had better follow with the utmost attention. Whatever may come out of it will be nothing more or less than a new yoke upon the necks of workers of the world.

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

MATTHEW WOLL has developed into a fully-fledged "internationalist." From now on Matty should experience difficulty in working up moral indignation over the activities of "those subversive forces that are trying to undermine our constitution by injecting into our social anatomy the political poison of internationalism." Woll proposed the organization of a "world trade union cartel" as a counter move to the organization of capitalist cartels. What is Mr. Woll getting excited about? Surely he has not suddenly changed his position and is now in favor of international trade union unity.

THERE is a nickel under the heel we suspect. Unless one examined Woll's statement on the subject the following excerpt from it might create the impression that Matty had gone to the devil and was corrupted by "Moscow gold." Look: "The time is here when international labor forces should no longer be divided because of considerations relating solely to political theories and political governments. Now is the time for the workers everywhere to rally themselves internationally on the economic and industrial field, rid their labor movements of the political follies of the past and unite in improving the working conditions of the wage earners the world over." The emphasis is mine.

MR. WOLL is the favorite capitalist labor lieutenant on the executive council of the A. F. of L—the favorite of big business. Green is considered more or less of a dumbbell who is loyal but lacking in originality. What Woll means by "political follies" is radicalism. His object in proposing a world trade union cartel is to serve the imperialistic program of the American capitalists on a world scale as the Pan-American Federation of Labor is designed to serve those aims in Central and South America. The policy of the A. F. of L. follows that of Wall Street as diligently as buzzards follow a retreating army.

WOLL calls attention to the giant steel combination that was organized in Europe between France, Belgium and Germany. The United States Steel corporation looks on this development with a cold and fishy eye. So Woll thinks it would be well for American business to have a labor auxiliary to hold the fort against the labor fakers of Europe, who are serving the interests of their own capitalists. Woll would eliminate every vestige of "folly" from the intgrnational labor movement. It would be transformed into a gigantic lash to whip the workers into submission to imperialism and the workers of the various sections of this trade union cartel would be used to aid the employing classes of their own countries in the latter's clashes with their foreign rivals. Woll would have the American section of this international trade union cartel carry out whatever policy Wall Street adopted in its drive for world regemony.

THIS is the brand of internationalism that Woll favors. It is perfectly safe. No doubt Woll talked the matter over with his cronies in the National Civic Federation. Internationalism is a wicked thing when it means the unity of the workers of all lands to fight for more food, clothing and better now and for their ultimate freedom from wage slavery. When it means class-collaboration on an international scale it is a noble idea.

THE workers should not be fooled by this specious plea of Woll's for unity to improve the conditions of the workers all the world over. The man who plays the role of strikebreaker in the United States cannot be expected to be anything better in some other part of the world. The man who is urging the police and the courts to use more violence against the striking furriers and inflict severer sentences on them cannot be other than an enemy of the workers. The British miners have just conferred the Order of the Hobnailed Boot on Frank Hodges, a capitalist tool, with a record remarkably like that of Matthew Woll. When will the American workers do the same to the scabby Woll?

JOHN HAYNES HOLMES is nothing if not optimistic. He thinks loyalty to one's country should end when that country goes to war. This "is about as silly as the threatened sex strike of the feminists some years ago when the wild and woolly male was opposed to letting them play with the vote. But boys will be boys and so with Mr. Holmes's pacifists. When the war comes, they will either go to war or to jail, sell liberty bonds or be tarred and feathered. We hasten to add that it all depends on what kind

Picket Arrests Continue

AND WOLL WANTS VIOLENCE

STRIKERS RALLY BY THOUSANDS IN FURRIER MARKET

Sixty More Workers to Be Tried Today

Thousands of fur workers poured into the market yesterday morning and held one of the largest demonstrations since the beginning of the strike called to advance the wages and working conditions of the unionists that have been perilled by the scab tactics of the right wing.

As usual hundreds of police were on hand eager to provoke the peaceful workers. Thirteen pickets were arrested and fined $3 each by Magistrate Abraham Rosenbluth in Jefferson Market Court.

Did Not Interfere With Traffic.

Jacob M. Mandelbaum, attorney for the strikers made the police who were pressing the charges admit on the witness stand that the workers were not interfering with traffic, and that the only reason that they were taken into custody was because they were picketing.

The arrested workers are Nathan Meilef, Joseph Crane, Alexander Brucker, Nathan Noodelman, Joseph Zucker, Jacob Brafman, Dora Rubinstein, Rose Wortis, Anna Llebowitz, Reba Dorn, Dora Halpern, Rose Kuntes and Kate Talfman.

Snitkin Is Lawyer.

The case of the seven right wing gangsters who two weeks ago brutally ent np four fur pickets, was postponed until Thursday when it came up for a hearing before Magistrato Rosenbluth yesterday morning. Former Judgo Leonard A. Snitkin, who was disbarred several years ago and later reinstated, appeared as their lawyer.

It is the opinion of many close observers that Snitkin will attempt to have the case squashed before it is sent to a higher court. In this way the story of the right wing practices of engaging gangsters to cnt and brutally beat up strikers will not be exposed to the light of day.

To Give Farther Evidence.

At a meeting of the general strike committee held last night action was taken to give to the city authorities further proof of the unfair methods used by the police department in their arresting of pickets, when the only "crime" they are guilty of is peaceful picketing. It was pointed out that when picketing, every means is taken not to interfere with the traffic, and in that way give the police another excuse for arresting them. But in

Soviet Syndicate Signs Contract With Standard Oil for Sale of Output

Contracts for selling Soviet oil to the Vacuum Oil Company and the Standard Oil Company of New York have just been arranged by V. N. Kalnin, vice president of the Soviet Naptha Syndicate who has been on a visit to this city. The oil will be marketed by the American companies principally in the Far East.

According to the contract the Soviet syndicate will supply fuel oil to the Standard Oil Company for five years at a rate of 100,000 tons a year. The latter will pick up the products in Bakn and bunker it in Turkey, Port Said, Colombo and Ceylon.

The arrangement with the Vacuum Company extends last year's contract until 1931, and gives the firm a concession to sell Soviet oil in Egypt.

WORKERS IN NEW ENGLAND PLEDGE THEIR SUPPORT TO DAILY WORKER

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

BOSTON, Mass., July 5.—Enthusiastic support of The DAILY WORKER in its fight for its life against the forces of reaction, was shown by the workers of Massachusetts in two meetings addressed by J. Louis Engdahl, the first on Boston Commons, Sunday, and the second on July 4th, at Worcester.

ALL CHINA LABOR CONGRESS CLOSES DENOUNCE CHIANG

General Tang Betrays Nationalists

HANKOW, July 5.—The Fourth All China Congress of Trade Unions closed today.

Representing more than nine million organized workers, a representative of the Soviet Union delegation presented the Congress with a banner at the closing session. The Congress was also presented with banners in the name of the Red International of Labor Unions and by a Javanese delegate in the name of the All Pacific Labor Union Congress.

Ask War Against Chiang.

The Congress adopted an appeal to the Central Committee of the Kuomintang demanding a punitive expedition against Chiang Kai-shek. The Congress also adopted a resolution asking that conditions of women and child labor be bettered.

An appeal to the workers of all countries, calling upon them to join in a united struggle against reaction, was also adopted at the Conference.

Tang Betrays Revolution.

HANKOW, July 5.—General Tang Sheng-chi, who directed the Nationalist drive along the Hankow-Peking railway in Honan Province last month, has betrayed the Nationalist Government and will join Generals Feng Yu-hsiang and Chiang Kai-shek in their counter-revolutionary alliance, it is said. He has left Hankow for Changsha.

In a counter-revolutionary telegram to the Wuhan Government, General Tang declares that he considers correct the removal of all Communists from power in Hunan and recommended to the Wuhan Government that no Communists be put forward by the Nationalist Government for posts in the new Provincial Government or for the new committee of the Kuomintang. Declaring that he would permit "open labor unions," Tang declares in his telegram that he deems it necessary to reelect their leaders.

Tang Won't Punish Traitor.

In conclusion General Tang states that it is "impossible" to severely punish the officers responsible for the counter-revolutionary putsch in Changsha. In his telegram to the Executive Committee of the Kuomintang, Tang Sheng-chi declares:

"While negotiations for a united front were under way, the realization of the front became impossible and a class struggle was encouraged. Seeing that the local organization of the Kmomintang and public organizations transgressed the limits of the

Engdahl, Just Returned From Moscow, to Report at Party Meeting Tonight

J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER and members of the Central Executive Committee who was present at the Executive Committee of the Comintern which has just ended in Moscow, will report at the membership meeting tonight at Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East Fourth St. on the work of the Executive relating to the international situation, danger of war against the Soviet Union and the Chinese revolution. The meeting of the Executive Committee of the Comintern was called specifically to discuss these questions. Our Party must now mobilize for the campaign in defense of the Soviet Union and against war. This meeting will be a mobilization meeting of the Party membership for this campaign.

Comrade Manuel Gomez, head of the anti-imperialist work of the Party, will also report on the general anti-imperialist work of the Party and particularly on our campaign in behalf of the Chinese revolution.

Admission by membership card only. All members of the Party and the Young Workers League are asked to attend this most important meeting.

Former Dry Chief and Assistant Asked About Third Degree Tactics

Former prohibition administrator Chester Mills and his former assistant Major August Heise were witnesses yesterday before a federal grand jury investigating alleged 3rd degree methods declared to have been used by Major Heise in an effort to get unwilling witnesses to testify against law violators.

The inquiry is the result of testimony given by Edward Briggs, recently acquitted as a collector for alleged drafting dry agents, who charged he had been tied to a chair and beaten over the head.

Save Sacco, Vanzetti! Strike Thursday, July 7

PAINTERS BEATEN UP BY POLICEMEN AS THEY PICKET

Four Arrested and Held Without Bail

Scores of striking painters were brutally attacked by the police yesterday when they broke up a mass picketing demonstraton in Brooklyn. Many of the strikers are in a serious condition while four of them who were arrested are being held without bail for arraignment today.

At Ocean and Foster avenues the police were most vicious. Using their night sticks they struck left and right, felling workers so quickly that they piled one on top of the other. When the butchery was over medical attention was necessary for many of them.

At Brighton Beach the police again got into action slugging many workers and arresting the four of them who were nearest. The picketing demonstraton was held in front of all Brooklyn jobs under the control of the employers' association.

At a meeting of the Painters' Union held Saturday at Lorriane Hall, Broadway, Brooklyn, a motion was passed that those employed in independent shops should divide their work with the strikers, also that all those working must immediately pay their $5 tax. Those who do not pay will not be allawed to return to work Thursday morning.

The meeting also went on record to continue the strike until victory is achieved. It was pointed out that the bosses are aided by the Building Trades Employers' Association which is doing its utmost to break the strike.

Refuses Injunction.

Supreme Court Justice Ingraham decided yesterday that Harry Bloom, president of Local 1011 of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America was not entitled to an injunction against Allen J. Fischer and other officers of the District Council of the same organization.

Bloom asked that the officers be restrained from interfering with the criminal proceedings pending against certain members of the council.

We Must Meet the Conspiracy Charge

"The defendants, continuously thruout the period of time from March 1st up to and including the date of the filing of this indictment, at the Borough of Manhattan in the Southern District of New York and within the jurisdiction of this Court, unlawfully and feloniously conspired, combined, confederated and agreed together with divers other persons to the grand jurors unknown, to commit an offense against the United States." Quoted from the Grand Jury Indictment, Southern District of New York.

By this charge the Federal government shows clearly its very evident purpose to proceed against The DAILY WORKER on account of its Communist character and activity. This should be clear proof to those who were under the impression that The DAILY WORKER was being prosecuted simply because it overstepped the bounds of bourgeois morality.

The present attack is part and parcel of the offensive against the entire labor movement, the offensive which is now being waged to destroy the Miners' Union, to cripple the Needle Trades Unions, and to shackle the labor movement with arbitration machinery. The persistence and viciousness manifested by those prosecuting the case is due to the determination of the forces of capitalism not to be defeated in their drive against labor's most militant weapon, The DAILY WORKER.

Comrades, we must show a similar determination. We must meet the attack in such a firm manner that not only will the enemy be repulsed and defeated, but we must emerge from the battle more powerful and influential than before. We can do this if you are with us. Show that you are by your contribution to the Defense Fund.

MINERS' RANK AND FILE UNITES FOR STRIKERS' RELIEF

Armed Scabs Try Terror On Spadra Miners

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 5.—Fifty-eight delegates representing thirty-four striking local unions of U. M. W. A. District five met in conference at the Walton Hall, Pittsburgh, Pa., Friday, July 1st to consider the question of raising funds for the relief of the striking miners and their families. The conference was called by the Miners' Relief Conference of Alleheny Valley, an organization consisting of a number of miners' locals of Sub-district Seven, District Five U. M. W. A.

Struggle More Serious.

In district five the struggle between the miners and the coal operators is assuming a more and more serious character. Iron fences are being built by the companies thruout the district in order to protect the scabs. Evictions, shutting off of the water supply and electricity, tearing off of roofs of the houses in order to compel the miners to move, are but few instances of the bitterness with which the coal companies are carrying on their attacks against the miners' union. It is to be expected that the struggle will last for some time. The miners realize this and are preparing for a determined struggle to the finish. Their splendid response to the call for the Relief conference leaves no doubt that the miners are ready and are preparing for a fight until victory is won.

The conference organized itself into a permanent organization to be known as "The Miners Relief Conference of Western Pennsylvania," and adopted an elaborate plan for raising and distributing of relief. The headquarters of the relief conference are to be established in Pittsburgh. Victor Kamenovich of Daisytown was elected secretary. An Executive Committee of eight was elected and the District Executive Board of the U M. W. A. District Five was asked to add a representative to this committee.

Appeal to A. F. of L.

A resolution was adopted appealing to President Green of the A. F. of L. to levy an assessment on all members of the American Federation for the purpose of supplying the striking miners with relief.

It was also decided to appeal to all

Saturday Holiday Thru Hot Months Urged for Worker in Trade Unions

Urging all trade union headquarters in New York to set the 5-day week example in their own offices by giving their clerical workers a Saturday holiday during the hot summer months Leonard Bright, president of the Bookkeepers, Stenographers and Accountants' Union, is holding up the painters' brotherhood as a fine exhibit.

Clarence E. Swick, international secretary-treasurer of the painters, has notified his members through the brotherhood's monthly journal that the 5-day week is in effect in the brotherhood's office, as well as on construction jobs. And members are requested not to send him telegrams that would arrive on Saturday. 25 local offices have already met his proposal.

CITY WORKERS IN SACCO - VANZETTI STRIKE TOMORROW

5,000 Protest Sentence In Mexico City

MEXICO CITY, July 5.—Carrying banners protesting against the threatened execution of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, 5000 Mexican workers today staged a demonstration before the United States Consulate-General.

The demonstration was preceded by a parade through the streets of the downtown section of the city.

Attend Demonstration.

In an appeal to the organized workers of the city by the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee calling for a united front in the one-hour general strike and mass demonstration which is to take place tomorrow the committee says:

"Friends of Sacco and Vanzetti must not be lulled to sleep by the rumor that is being cautiously circulated that Governor Fuller, in whose hands the final decision in these two militant workers is placed, may commute the death sentence to one of life-long imprisonment.

This rumor is being spread so that the enemies of Sacco and Vanzetti, the Keymen of America and other labor-baiting organizations, may feel out the reaction to this plan among the defenders of the two tortured workers. They want to know if the splendid show of working class solidarity which has struck such heavy blows at the Massachusetts legal hierarchy, will succumb to the sop of a commutation.

Must Be Freed.

We will not rest until these heroic workers are set free and restored to their families and loved ones. Until that time the fight must be waged relentlessly.

The workers who have by their great show of power and solidarity prevented the execution of our brave comrades must continue the fight for their liberation with greater spirit and more grim determination.

The hearts of the Massachusetts executioners have not softened with kindness, and their desire to murder our comrades has not changed. They are merely seeking for new methods of torture.

Workers of New York! Do not weaken at this critical moment. Agitate for the immediate release of Sacco and Vanzetti. Do not permit the New England textile barons to bury our comrades alive in a Massachusetts bastle.

Support your comrades who have been subjected to seven years of prison torture, by downing tools at 4 o'clock sharp tomorrow. Go to Union Square and join in the mass demonstration for the liberation of capitalist bloodlust."

USSR BARES NEW WHITE GUARDIST PLOT IN MOSCOW

MOSCOW, July 5.—That a Russian white terrorist attempted to blow up the headquarters of the political police on the night of June 3rd and succeeded in killing one man and wounding two others before she was shot by Red Army soldiers at Smolensk was revealed in an official communique issued today.

The attempt to blow up the headquarters is the latest of a series of terrorist attacks attempted by white guards within the last few weeks. A communique issued several weeks ago cited evidence proving that white terrorists have attempted to assassinate Stalin, Bukharin and Krassin. A bomb explosion in Leningrad, engineered by white guards, supported, it is said by British agents, killed more than twenty persons a short time ago.

The plot to blow up the headquarters by a woman terrorist named Zakhartchenko Shultz, who entered the Soviet Union from Finland. After the failure of her plot to blow up the police headquarters, she fled with two male companions. The terrorists killed one man and wounded two others for refusing to assist them in escape. They were finally shot by Red Army troops as they were trying to escape after the murder.

Evereson, Ex-Minister of Rumania, Cleared On Treasury; Arrest Ruled

BUCHAREST, July 5.—Before his dismissal from office, ex-Premier Averescu and his colleagues completely accounted to the treasury, according to charges in local newspapers. On his last day in office he disbursed the sum of twelve billion lei.

Newspapers charge that the huge disbursements went into the pockets of Averescu and his supporters. An audit of the treasury books showed that most of the money handed out was unaccounted for. Local newspapers demand the immediate arrest of the ex-premier.

Averescu's government carried on one of the most brutal reigns of terror against workers and peasants. His fascist government also joined Britain in its war against the Soviet Union thru its annexation of Bessarabia.

spite of all these precautions on their part, the strikers are continuing to be arrested in large numbers.

That the long sentence given to the 182 strikers last Thursday was decided before their trial, is the charge of several of the pickets who have just been released from Welfare Island. They claim that when several hundred workers were arrested a week ago Monday, the court officials immediately notified Welfare Island to prepare for about 60 women prisoners. On Wednesday, one day before the trial, the Welfare Island authorities were preparing to receive their new "guests."

60 On Trial Today.

Sixty workers who were arrested last week and had their cases postponed, due to the crowded calendar in the court, will appear before Magistrate Rosenbluth this morning for trial.

A membership meeting of the strikers will be held tomorrow, right after the Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration at Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East Fourth St. Important questions will be taken up including a reduction of the strike assessment.

Forty women strikers now confined on Welfare Island have sent the following message of greetings to their fellow workers:

"We send our greetings to the Joint Board of the Furriers and the Joint Board of the Cloak and Dressmakers' Union. The prison walls are unable to separate us from you comrades. Our spirit is not so easily broken. Our enthusiasm is as high as ever. The threats of the judges, of the bosses will not interfere with our fight until it is won.

"Our only regret is that we are unable to help you during the time that we are jailed. Our slogan is: 'From prison to the picket line'."

Fire On Manufacturers' Estate.

TARRYTOWN, July 5.—Without offering the slightest evidence to substantiate his charge, Morris Hessel, New York fur manufacturer, today accused "striking fur workers" of setting fire to a number of outbuildings on his estate here.

The shop chairmen's council of the furriers yesterday adopted a resolution calling upon all furriers to join tomorrow's strike at 4 p. m. for Sacco and Vanzetti.

MINEOLA, N. Y., July 5.—Eight persons escaped injury when a huge Sikorsky biplane crashed into and wrecked a Curtiss training airship at Curtiss field here today.

The Sikorsky plane, fitted out as a traveling cigar store, was taxiing into position with Captain Roscoe Turner, pilot, and Mrs. Turner and six others aboard, when it was caught in a sudden gust of wind and hurled against the other machine.

Rumanian Envoy In New Loan Effort

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Rumania, undaunted by Queen Marie's unsuccessful loan tour, yesterday made another bid for American "good-will" when the Rumanian ambassador in Washington, George Cretziano, conferred the highest military honor of his country upon two members of the 106th Infantry, New York National Guard at Peekskill.

The recipients were Sergeants Joseph Tracy and Joseph E. Miccio, of companies C and H respectively.

organized labor and sympathisers to proceed with the formation of relief conferences wherever possible for the purpose of assisting in the relief work for the striking bituminous miners. Steps will be taken to turn this movement into one of a national character.

Reign of Terror in Spadra.

SPADRA, Ark., July 5.—This mining camp, in the semi-anthracite fields of Arkansas is undergoing the organized terrorism of armed scab herders imported from the slums and back country of West Virginia. They rush up and down the roads in high powered cars, waving their sawed off shot guns, cursing and willfying the miners' pickets. They swagger thru the camps, great pistols swinging at their hips, and continue the provocations. They commit indecent exposures before the miners' wives and children. They colonize prostitutes, imported by the coal company, amongst the shacks in which the miners' families have to live.

Miners fear to leave their houses to go on the picket line, for fear of attack on their families by the scabs and scab herders, and so the morning picket line is also breakfast time for all the decent elements in the community; young and old, men, women and children, gather around fires in the open and cook and eat their breakfast, while waiting for a chance to argue with the heavily armed scabs.

Police Shoot Mutineers.

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., July 5.—A shooting and club swinging affray, with an unknown number of deaths, has taken place at Fitahenry, Pa., a mining property of the Pittsburgh Coal Co. It followed a mutiny of the non-union miners employed as strike-breakers in which a demonstration was made against the low wages and unbearable conditions of scab labor.

Secrecy Prevails.

About fifteen non-union miners took part in the revolt. All the shooting was done by the Coal and Iron police hired by the company. Every effort is made to hush up the details of what took place.

Seven miners escaped from the mine immediately after the affair and four were picked up who are constantly on duty that they would never work for the company again, that conditions are so bad that only those men literally in the power of the management are allowed to talk together.

At the non-union Crescent mines, a short time ago there was an explosion which demolished two bunkhouses. Statements of those who drove four wagons to the scene of disaster and picked up that many wagonloads of legs, arms, heads and other parts of the blasted non-unionists indicate that between forty and forty-five were killed.

The local paper recording the event said that only two were killed and three or four wounded had been sent to Brownsville General Hospital.

In this case also, a deliberate attempt is made to keep secret the horrors of a mine's life. Nobody but the wagon drivers was allowed on the scene until it was cleaned up.

Commercial Plane Crash; 2 Dead.

CINCINNATI, July 5.—Two men were dead and another suffering from serious injuries today, as the result of the crash of a commercial airplane on Laugherty Island, near Rising Sun, Ind., yesterday afternoon. Harry Danbury, 24, and Raymond Hodges, 30, both of Rising Sun, passengers, were killed, and Edward Roefling, Cleveland, O., the pilot, was being treated at the Jewish Hospital here today.

Big Meeting July 8 In Chicago to Help Sacco and Vanzetti

The Sacco-Vanzetti conference is out to reach many more thousands of Chicagoans with the message "Justice and freedom for these innocent workers."

The drive for signatures to petitions is being speeded up, a conference of Italian organizations will be held July 8th and a special northwest side mass meeting will also be held on Friday night, July 8th.

Carpenters Union donates hall for Sacco-Vanzetti meeting.

On request of the committee, Local 181 of the Carpenters Union granted the use of Wicker Park Hall, 2040 W. North Ave. for the July 8th Sacco-Vanzetti mass meeting.

The speakers will include, F. W. Biedenkapp, of International Labor Defense, Dr. Paul Hutchinson, managing editor of "Christian Century" and Albert Wechsler, of Local 144, Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti conference of Chicago.

The committee has called upon all northwest side organizations and individuals to help Sacco-Vanzetti by supporting this meeting and renewing the petition signature-getting activities.

of a government the country that is at war has a better than the master should fight for it or not. For instance, should the U. S. S. R. be attacked by one or more capitalist powers, it should be the duty of every worker inside and outside the Soviet Union to place his life at the service of the proletarian fatherland. Dr. Holmes is about as illogical as one could be.

AMONG the canny precautions taken by Calvin Coolidge to prepare himself for a successful political career was his decision to be born on July 4. It is quite possible that many 100 per cent Americans born on that day are now pining away in the height prison bars in those United States; another case of many being called but few chosen. Still, had Coolidge not broken the Boston policemen's strike he might still be an unknown quantity outside of the codfish state, and President Warren Gamaliel Harding might have eaten shell fish in vain.

SENATOR JAMES REED of Missouri may be obliged to take his slush fund investigation committee to Nicaragua. The United States government has appointed General Frank R. McCoy to supervise the 1928 elections in that country. Hitherto elections in Central American countries were only cheap imitations of such proceedings in Cicero, Illinois, a suburb of Chicago. The voters took advantage of the holiday atmosphere to try their aim on their adversaries' coat buttons. But if the American system is introduced in Nicaragua the voters will be drilled to repeat, vote tombstones, steal ballots—all for ten dollars a head. Southwards the march of democracy makes its way.

DR. ROACH STRATON is busy denying that his son threw a pennecostal fit or that his own interest in Aline Utley, the sixteen-year-old evangelist, is more than spiritual. The Dr. has his hands ful't but he likes the work. He frankly admits he wants publicity and justifies the hunt for it on the ground that the cause is worthy. Quite logical. Straton was peeved at the newspapers during Queen Marie of Roumania's visit here. The papers ignored the religious mountebank, calculating the queen was better mental moron food. Now, the Doc is clicking nicely, between trans-Atlantic airplane feats and regal visits.

KING FUAD of Egypt did not visit London in order to make the rounds of the Leicester Square pubs or see the guards change shifts at Buckingham Palace. This king is merely a puppet of British imperialism. He was placed on the throne by the British and his visit is a public recognition of his loyalty to the empire. The reception to Fuad will serve the twin objects of impressing the British masses with the virility of the empire and impressing the visiting king with the grandeur and power of the imperial seat. Left to his own devices in Egypt and to the mercy of the Egyptian masses, his body would long ago have provided needy worms with enough calories to keep them in energy for a year.

WILL PLUNDER THE FED'L TREASURY TO SAVE CALVIN

Greatest Vote-Buying Plan Predicted

By HARVEY O'CONNOR.

WASHINGTON, (FP).—More dangerous than the challenge of Al Smith to Democratic presidency to Calvin Coolidge's chances for a third term in the White House is the threatening economic depression.

The intimate circle of high Republican officials and politicians whose fortunes are bound up in Coolidge's bid for re-election look with more or less tolerance upon the New York governor. Coolidge, they believe will tear the Democratic party to pieces on the religious and liquor questions. But a bad slump in industrial production in 1928 coupled with the possibility that the Democrats might choose a standard-bearer like Owen D. Young, head of General Electric, would make impossible Coolidge's chances for renomination but might defeat Herbert Hoover or any other candidate the Republican convention next summer might select.

Billions For Votes.

But the problem of an industrial depression with millions unemployed and business in the doldrums has not completely flabbergasted the steerers of the Republican craft. Instead every indication points to the certainty that they have a solution ready made to stave it off. That is the accumulation of a tremendous reserve in Mellon's treasury vaults which they will throw into various public works the moment the dangerously inflated credit situation shows signs of deflation.

Gigantic Corruption Plan.

Big business sees the possibilities in throwing federal millions—billions if need be—into the breach to stimulate industry when the crisis arrives. That explains the favorable talk beginning to run through the Wall Street press in favor of dumping a cool billion into the Nicaragua canal, another billion into the St. Lawrence-to-the-sea waterway, $400,000,000 for Mississippi flood control. In fact Wall Street sees clearly that the Mellon-Big Business tax-shifting policy, which has resulted in throwing $15,000,000 a year in surplus values wrung from labor's toil on the market for investment, is in danger of capsizing the ship of industry.

The President's financial advisers have warned him that too much of the nation's wealth is going into the hands of the few, who are dumping it into capital expenditures both here and abroad, increasingly dangerously the productive capacity of the national and world industrial plant and leading with certainty to a tremendous crisis of over-production or under-consumption.

Borah For Coolidge.

Senator Borah, who has come out for Coolidge for a third term, backs up the new administration policy by calling for government development of the Great Lakes-to-Atlantic waterway and harnessing of the Colorado and Mississippi. Secretary Hoover is also a warm advocate of the public works in depression theory.

Administration supporters, boasting of the $600,000,000 surplus from the fiscal year just ended, are warning business not to expect big tax reductions. Instead there is some talk of the possibility of a decline in business activity, and more of accumulating hundreds of millions to throw into the industrial breach if and when depression comes. Militarists take satisfaction out of the situation for they see an end of the economy regime with millions poured into naval shipyards, armaments plants and steel mills as part of the new Coolidge program of stimulating flagging industry by bountiful federal expenditures.

A G.O.P. Weapon.

Progressive economists and radicals who have advocated the public works in depression policy long before Coolidge dreamed of the presidency, may see a weapon devised to protect workers against unemployment turned into an instrument to prolong the political life of the dominant political party and assure another decade of business prosperity for the speculators in national resources and needs. Economy, Republican political password of 1921-26, thus finds itself in the discard in 1927 with a diametrically opposite policy pursued to keep Coolidge firmly seated on the throne for the 1928-32 reign.

Newark Furriers.

The Newark Furriers have won their strike, but they have not forgotten that they still belong to the Furriers Union. Now that they are back on the job they are commencing to prove their solidarity with the striking furriers of New York. A group of five decided to contribute their share to the Strike Fund and Relief Committee at once and as they had no money they borrowed $250 and sent it in to the office. The Newark furriers are all pledging themselves to help the New York workers during the entire period of the strike by donating a percentage of their pay every week.

Tourists to Begin Journey to U.S.S.R. On Bastile Holiday

Bastile Day, July 14, will be celebrated by one group of Americans by starting off from New York for Soviet Russia, on the first general tour to that country since it became a Workers' Republic.

Going direct to Leningrad, the party—which is being organized by the World Tourists, Inc., of 41 Union Square—will be met by representatives of the USSR Cultural Relations Society and by them taken to visit the old palaces where the former Czar lived, to the palaces which have now been converted into children's villages, to the great power plants and factories, the museums and art galleries. Then after an overnight train journey, the party will start, under the same guidance, to see the wonders of Moscow.

Arrangements have been made by the Cultural Relations Society at all points on the itinerary for special service, and for all facilities to enable the tourists, to see the points of interest under the most favorable circumstances. Guides and interpreters will accompany the party and will do everything possible along the way to make the tourists comfortable.

There are still a few days left in which applications for this tour may be filled but after next Saturday, July 9, it will be too late. The opportunity to visit Russia this summer will be gone. Those interested in this July 14 tour should act at once. Further information can be obtained by writing to the World Tourists, Inc., 41 Union Square, New York.

COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL LOWERS STANDARDS AT THE GRAVE OF VOIKOV

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R. (By Mail).—The address made by J. Louis Engdahl, editor, of The DAILY WORKER, speaking for the Communist International at the funeral of Comrade P. L. Voikoff in the Red Square was as follows:

TODAY the Communist International lowers its standards over the fresh grave of another fallen soldier of the world revolution. For Comrade Voikoff was a courageous fighter in the international struggle of the workers for victory over their oppressors. In all lands, the many National Sections of the Communist International, their crimson standards mourning-bordered, pay tribute to the memory of Comrade Voikoff, the first victim of the new war launched against the citadel of the social revolution—the Union of Soviet Republics.

For Comrade Voikoff belonged not only to the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union. He was a part of and belonged to the toiling masses of the whole world. The brutal murder of Comrade Voikoff has not only brought a heavy loss to the freed workers of the Soviet Union. His untimely death is a cruel loss suffered by all those workers still enslaved in the lands of capitalism.

Comrade Voikoff, as the official representative of the First Workers' Republic, the spokesman of the Soviet Power, stationed in Warsaw, the nest of the Polish reaction, was an able builder of the new social order. The bloody assassin's deed that struck him down was instigated by the supporters of the capitalist regime that organizes in every land relentless onslaughts against the aspirations of those who labor. Especially, it is very clear that behind the murderer at Warsaw, pulling at the trigger of the death-dealing revolver, was the British imperialist tyranny itself, that organizes and directs the new anti-Soviet war.

But the British reaction, that invaded and plundered the offices of Arcos in London, does not stand alone. At its side we see also the grasping Dollar Imperialism of America that beholds in the rule of the Soviets an enemy of its bitter exploitation of the workers and farmers in its own homeland—a foe of its relentless exploitation of the peoples of subject and semi-subject nations.

It was no accident that the American ambassador, Myron T. Herrick, at Paris, just the other day launched a vicious attack against the government of the Workers and Peasants, declaring it would never be recognized by the capitalist government of America. Herrick's utterances were in perfect harmony with those of Winston Churchill, the British chancellor of the exchequer, who has just visited Mussolini in Rome, the home of the fascist tyranny, declaring his admiration for the labor-crushing Italian fascism that enters into an alliance with British imperialism for the new anti-Soviet attack.

The gang of imperialist murderers who slaughtered the workers of Nanking, in China, who have joined in the raid on the Soviet embassy at Peking, who instigate and encourage the strangling and beheading of the best of the Chinese proletariat, who tighten the hangman's noose about the necks of the people of Nicaragua and Mexico, of Egypt and India, these are the real murderers of our comrade, Voikoff, who died that the cause of the workers might live and triumph.

Before the open grave that will soon receive the last remains of our martyred comrade, the proletarian hosts of the world, enlisted under the banners of the Communist International, pledge themselves to new struggles. Especially the workers of the two great English-speaking nations, the United States of America and Great Britain, the dominant imperialisms of today, must wage mightier battles against these powerfully entrenched foes of upward struggling mankind.

Today we also have in mind the service rendered the imperialist foe by the betrayers of labor, the support given by the MacDonalds, the Hendersons and the Thomases to the Chamberlains, the Joynson-Hickses, the Churchills; by the Greens, the Wolls and the Sigmans to the Coolidges, the Kelloggs and the Hoovers.

In Great Britain the Labor Party turns back from an open attack on the Baldwin tory government. It merely asks for an investigation of the attack on Arcos and the breaking off of relations with the Soviet Union. In the United States, Vice-president Matthew Woll, speaking for the reaction within the American Federation of Labor, applauds the raids on Arcos, and calls for more vicious assaults by the Coolidge-Kellogg reaction against the Soviet Union. In every other land the social-democracy and the reactionary trade union bureaucracy play the same Judas role. They all have their price that capitalism is willing to pay. The Communist International carries on a relentless exposure of these traitors before the eyes of international labor, so that these lackeys of capitalism will be stripped of their power and become impotent in their efforts to continue their treason.

The workers of the world must know that the traitor social democracy and the servile trade union bureaucracy, that were the instruments of the warring capitalist powers in 1914, and who now continue in that role, are stained equally with the guilt of the murder of our comrade, Voikoff. The social traitors of 1914 now rally in support of the war of their imperialist masters against the Soviet Union, which is also an attack on the cause of the workers in the capitalist homelands.

Today the International, that mourns its martyred dead by the hundreds of thousands, that has seen the most militant and courageous in its ranks fall in every land with the passing of the years, extends its consolation to the bereaved family, the consolation that comes thru the knowledge that Voikoff's deeds will be inscribed on the most glorious page of all in the history of the age-long struggle of the downtrodden; the page that records the last triumph against class rule; the final conquest of power and the complete liberation of the oppressed.

Today the International glories in the fact that from the masses of the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union there will spring hundreds and thousands ready and eager to take the place in its ranks made vacant by the bullets of an imperialist assassin that struck down our comrade, Voikoff.

As the earth closes over the casket that contains the last remains of our slain comrade, the Communist International raises its standards for renewed struggles. Voikoff is dead, But the banner under which he fought and died still stands more challenging than ever. Mightier than ever the growing army of the International proclaim:

Down with the oppressors of the workers! Down with the white terror! Down with imperialism!

Long live the Dictatorship of the Proletariat! Long live the Soviet Union! Long live the World Revolution!

The Labor Press in Poland

WARSAW, (By Mail).—The Polish Labor Press having revolutionary tendencies, is forced like all the revolutionary groups in the Polish Labor movement to engage in a prolonged and obstinate struggle with the bourgeoisie, the "defensive" (Secret Police), and reformism.

The Polish Labor Movement is united since 1920. Its leading body, the Central Commission of Trade Unions, like almost all the Central Committees of individual trade unions, is reformist. The revolutionary elements organized in the Red fractions compose in almost all the trade unions a small but influential minority. The revolutionary elements at the present moment have only been able to keep the administration in their own hands in a few unions—Commercial Employers', Chemical Workers', Glass Workers'—where, however, they hold their own despite police and reformist repression.

THE first central organ of the revolutionary minorities was created in 1920 by the supporters of the "Red" trade unions the builders, leather workers, chemical workers and commercial employes. This was "Myel Robotniese" (Labor Thought), a fortnightly. In spite of persecution, arrests of editors and staff, etc., it continued to come out under different titles for almost two years. The Warsaw Trades Council, at that time the center of the revolutionary Trade Labor Movement, publishes a fortnightly "Proeeglad Zwiasskowy" (Trade Union Education) afterwards (1924) "Wiasomiesd Zwiasskowy" (Trade Union News), which was however shut down in 1927 by the police. After this the journal was again revived for a short time, but this time as a monthly. In the end of 1924 the leaders of the revolutionary Trade Union Movement in Galicia, taking advantage of the fact that Austrian press laws allowed of slightly greater liberty than the Czarist laws, still in force in former Russian Poland, began to publish their "Syete Kwiazkowe" (Trade Union Life), which was kept going until May, 1925.

THE reformists for the same period (1918-1922) published their organ "Zwiazkowiec" (The Trade Unionist), also a fortnightly, appearing somewhat irregularly, and in 1922 coming to an end owing to lack of funds.

The new central organ of the revolutionary trade union minority arose in connection with the intensified opposition in the beginning of 1926. The treacherous policy of the PPSers, joining the coalition Government at this time, evoked strong opposition in the ranks of the party, leading to a split and the formation of a new group "PPS Left," a group consisting largely of trade unionists from former Austrian Poland, chiefly Teshin Silesia, imbued with a revolutionary spirit. This group put forward the organ of the implacable class struggle, the "Walka" (The Struggle). In the front, single mass trade unists began to publish a weekly trade union opposition organ "Nasz Prond" (Our Force) at Lodz, a proposition to the development and determination of the ideology of this group its organ became more "Sage Gesaz" and went deeper into trade union movement questions in all their aspects, becoming the central organ of the revolutionary minority.

THE split in the Polish Labor Movement, caused by Pilsudski's defeat and a fictitious industrial boom during the last half of 1926, was vividly reflected in the columns of "Gos Pracy." While the reformist press systematically ignored those facts and phenomena in the Labor Movement "Gos Pracy" gave its readers exact and full information, showing all manifestations of working class life from the point of view of the class struggle, thus assisting the clarity and unity among the Polish working masses, the putting forward of slogans common to the whole working class of the common revolutionary struggle.

THE reformists and the Government understand perfectly well the role of the revolutionary press in the Labor Movement and are taking corresponding measures. The Central Commission of the trade unions prohibits the circulation and sale of "Gos Pracy" on trade union premises. The Public Prosecutor confiscates literally every number, so that each time it has to be issued all over again, while it is usually speckled with white spaces by favor of the censor.

Despite all these repressions "Gos Pracy" was able to last out more than a year, and only a few weeks ago, during the last wave of fresh repressions sweeping over the revolutionary section of the working class the "Gos Pracy" was also swept away.

AS well as the above-mentioned central organs some trade unions or Red Fractions of trade unions have published and are still, if but irregularly, publishing their own organs, also, of course, but no zealously persecuted by trade union bureaucracy and the authorities. Thus the chemical workers' union publishes a monthly "Robotnik Chemiszny" (The Chemical Worker); the Commercial Employees' Union published "Gos Pracownika" (The Voice of the Worker); the Red fraction of the Railwaymen's Union published in 1919 and 1920 illegally "The Railway Communist," from 1926 "The Signal" has been legally published, although its circulation among railwaymen is prohibited by decision of the Central Committee of Trade Unions.

As well as the Polish Press there is a trade union press with revolutionary tendencies in the Ukrainian language. "Trade Union News," the organ of the Trade Union Minority is published in Eastern Galicia, the centre, as is well known, of the oil industry, and one of the centres of the lumber industry; the paper is very popular there among the Ukrainian oil and lumber workers.

THE political press having revolutionary tendencies is of course subjected to still greater persecution than the trade union. The political labor organs during the short time which they are allowed to exist naturally give as much space as possible to questions of the trade union movement. The journal outlasting all the others, to be exact, from 1920 to 1924, was the revolutionary, educational organ known as "Culture."

A considerable section of the political revolutionary press is of course published and circulated illegally.

THE monthly journal "Robotniczy Przeglad" ("Labor Review"), Labor Economic Review, published in 1925, is the central organ of the reformist Central Commission of Trade Unions. This journal is of an informative character. Besides colorless articles of a general nature and official communiques from the Central Commission it puts out data on the state of industry, the position of the working class, etc., drawn exclusively from Government and bourgeois sources.

MANY of the trade unions: miners, printers, metal workers, leather workers, agricultural, municipal, railway workers, etc., publish monthly organs ("The Railway Trade Unionist," the "Red Printers' Journal," "Weekly of the Metal Workers," etc.). All these organs are published illegally, consist not only of communiques with regard to the affairs of trade union organizations.

"Przeglad" (The Worker), organ of the P.P.S. "Nasz Przeglad," (Our Review), organ of the P.P.S. "Robotnik" (Worker), organ of the P.P.S. "Naprzod" (Forward), Glanon organ of the P.P.S., "Nowe Robotnik" (Labor News), Upper Silesian P.P.S. organ, and other political and general organs, of course do not contain any information in regard to the economic life of the working class, and the Labor Movement, while as we have already pointed out, the reformist press systematically ignored those facts and phenomena in the Labor Movement "Gos Pracy" gave its readers exact and full information, showing all manifestations of working class life from the point of view of the class struggle, thus assisting the clarity and unity among the Polish working masses, the putting forward of slogans common to the whole working class of the common revolutionary struggle.

Mexican Workers Rap U. S. Imperial Policy in South America at Meet

MEXICO CITY, July 5.—The Anti-Imperialist League which is carrying on intensive propaganda directed against Wall Street and the American Department of State staged a Fourth of July mass meeting here yesterday at which speakers drew sharp comparisons between the America of 1776 and the America of today.

Prior to the mass demonstration the city was flooded with the League's posters which read as follows:

"1776 — Washington, Englishing liberty, independence.

"1927 — Coolidge, Sinclair, Morgan; petroleum, Wall Street.

"Texas in 1847; Panama in 1903; Nicaragua, Santo Domingo, Sacco-Vanzetti, Imperialism, Kellogg, robbery."

Chile Deportations Go On Under Ibanez

MENDOZA, Argentina, July 5.—The wholesale deportation of political leaders suspected of opposing the Ibanez dictatorship continues at full blast.

Among those forced from the country recently are Enrique Matte-Figueroa, nephew of the former president, and Eduardo Yanez, who sponsored the coming international press conference at Geneva.

The Ibanez dictatorship which overthrew the constitutional government is believed to have been prompted by the Guggenheim interests, which have invested heavily in Chilean copper and nitrate.

10,000 Chinese Wounded In Nationalist Capital; Call for Workers to Aid

CHICAGO, July 5.—A telegram just received by the International Workers' Aid states that 10,000 Workers and Peasants lie wounded in the Lazarett at Wuchang, while the Revolutionary army continues its victorious onward march toward Peking.

The Chinese workers and peasants are paying a price that staggers humanity. Governments are supporting counter-revolutionary forces with finances and war ammunition, but giving absolutely no support or relief to the Chinese Revolutionary fighters.

In spite of this, a new China is arising. A China that will not be a menace to the workers of other countries, because of cheap coolie labor that lives on rice and hard tack.

The following telegram should receive the whole hearted support of every liberty-loving man or woman; they need medicine, bandages and food.

International Workers' Aid,
Chicago, Ill.

Ten thousand wounded in the Wichang-Lazarett—we need immediate help. Non-Chinese doctors and nurses from all parts of China are aiding the wounded. Money is urgently needed to carry on the relief work. We anxiously await your assistance. (Signed)—Madam Sun Yat Sen.

New England Pledges Aid to Daily Worker

Clubs, this will result in helping spread this struggle for a free press over the other states in New England, as well as Massachusetts.

The last time that Engdahl attempted to speak on Boston Common, during the congressional election campaign last fall, he was stopped by the police. Nevertheless a meeting was held at that time at Scully Square in another section of the city.

Engdahl was given a big ovation Sunday, however, when he appeared and when it was announced by Chairman Harry Cantor that he would give the news of the latest developments in the Union of Soviet Republics as well as expose the vicious attack by the government against The DAILY WORKER.

"This is not the first time that the editors and business managers of labor publications have been sent to prison," said Engdahl, "and it will not be the last. But it is absolutely necessary that all workers acquaint themselves with the vital issues involved in this fight. This is not an attack on The DAILY WORKER. It is a blow being struck against the whole working class."

Engdahl told of the necessity of strengthening the workers' press at the present time as one other vital point during the present war. He told of the struggle of the textile workers in the Soviet Union and the new war being launched against the Soviet Union.

Engdahl told of one project, [illegible] at industry and an exhibit, [illegible] details of his visit to Amo, the automobile plant in Moscow.

[illegible] at the May Day demonstration in the textile center of Ivovo, 125 miles south of Moscow," said Engdahl. "They asked me to carry a message to you, the textile workers of the United States. These textile workers in the Soviet Union have a 100 per cent union. In greeting the workers in the textile industry in this country, they give voice to their hopes that you will also develop your 100 per cent Textile Workers' Union. They hope that the time will come when the textile workers in all countries will become united in a really International Textile Workers' Union." I take this opportunity to carry out my pledge to the Russian textile workers to extend this greeting to you."

The large audience received this greeting with considerable enthusiasm. The response grew as Engdahl pointed out the growing war danger contained in the new imperialist threats against the Soviet Union.

Against the New Capitalist War.

"Do not allow one penny of your money to be spent, nor one drop of workers' blood to be shed in the new war being planned against the Soviet Union," urged Engdahl. "Refuse to support this new capitalist war." And the audience thundered its approval.

Numerous questions were asked towards the close of the meeting, during which an appeal was made for members for the Party.

The gathering at Worcester was one of the largest of the kind ever held in New England. The three-day conference included a delegation that had come from New York City in a huge auto-bus hired for the occasion. Among the other speakers, in addition to Engdahl, was J. O. Bentall, who told of the most recent developments in the Sacco-Vanzetti case. Resolutions were adopted protesting against the death sentence imposed against these two workers. These resolutions will be forwarded immediately to Governor Fuller.

Bert Wolfe addressed gatherings held by Finnish workers at Gardner, Mass., and by the Workers (Communist) Party at West Roxbury.

Paper Bullets

"One propagandist is worth 20 armed soldiers," says Li Ho-lin, director of the Central Propaganda Bureau of the Chinese Nationalist Army.

"Our enemies could have well withstood our steel bullets."

Before the 150,000,000 paper bullets they are powerless.

Benefitting from the experience of the Chinese Revolution and the Russian Revolution The DAILY WORKER Army will wage a relentless campaign against the enemy using the most destructive weapon known—the paper bullet. In this attack, the bullets employed will be particularly dangerous, in view of the fact that they have been carefully manufactured to conform with the conditions peculiar to this country.

The DAILY WORKER has been rated by military experts as the most destructive weapon yet produced in the class war in America.

"Open fire" is the order of the day from every proletarian fortress, from every shop, mine, mill and farm. Every new subscriber, every new reader secured for The DAILY WORKER, is a casualty for the army of capitalism. "Open fire with your paper bullets."

A Suggestion to the Harassed Farmers and Stockmen in and Around Rapid City.

There is taking place in and around Rapid City, South Dakota, a contemptible farce of the most nauseous kind.

A New England president, whose every act and utterance has shown that he despises the more liberal West, is cavorting in grotesque attire to prove that he is "one of the boys."

Not less disgusting than the antics of Coolidge, is the truckling attitude of the local politicians who are herding—no other word describes the methods used—large sections of the populace into the proximity of the presidential premises to be beguiled with speeches which for sheer inanity set a new record.

Consider the situation. Coolidge slapped the whole agricultural and stockraising sections of the population in the face when he vetoed the McNary-Haugen bill. But more insulting than the veto itself were the reasons given for his opposition to it. The language of the president's statement in this connection seemed to be chosen for the express purpose of humiliating its supporters. In almost so many words he told the farmers that they did not know what they wanted and if they did there was no particular reason why it should be given to them.

The wave of resentment which arose following the veto seared the Coolidge advisers. Rumors of the strength of the Lowden following in the Middle West and West were responsible for the choice of the Coolidge vacation site.

Now the stiff and clammy Cal is trying to act like Teddy the Cowboy and cuts a pitiful figure. There is no real glamor to be cast around this juiceless individual above whose peaked face a "ten-gallon hat" brings joy to the heart of the most mediocre cartoonist.

The cynical comments of the correspondents fit in well with the rest of the picture. They do not even trouble to conceal the sneering attitude of the presidential circle toward the farmers and stockmen. Contemptuously they state in so many words a good crop and good prices will allay the discontent provided that the campaign hokum is dished up in rich enough doses.

Meanwhile the drab figure of Coolidge goes thru its paces. The somber environment of the New England farm is replaced by the gaudy glitter of a period which the westerners themselves barely remember. The stage coach period passed long ago. Barbed wire fences have replaced the open ranges. The "cowboys" ride in flivvers and not on plunging cayuses. The ranches have become farms and the farmer's margin between income and expenditure has been wiped out. Mortgages have replaced bank accounts.

The stageplay in and around Rapid City has no connection with reality. It is simply a crude attempt to make the population of this section forget its problems, forget the connection between the banks, trusts and railroads and Calvin Coolidge—who represents these interests, and not farmers and workers, as president of the United States.

500,000 leaflets, summarizing the issues which affect the farmers and stockgrowers, exposing the real role of Coolidge and putting forward its practical program, distributed in the "vacation area" by the United Farmers' Educational League, would give his campaign managers something to think about.

Geneva, China and War.

> A small American band is keeping in secret conclave at Geneva, preparing to meet the gravest issue that has loomed athwart the horizon of the tri-power conference . . . the American delegation is pleased to consider the 600,000 ton total presented to the technical committee as "unofficial" . . . the British will have time to present new proposals more in harmony with the American invitation to limit naval armament. . . . In the event that the British again present the same figures, American opinion, as expressed today, will be that "Great Britain is playing a dangerous game." (Geneva dispatch to the New York Times July 3.)

Taken in connection with the news that president Coolidge and his advisers are devoting much time to the consideration of the problems arising at Geneva, that strong pressure is being brought to bear for the speedy recognition of the anti-labor Nanking government by the United States, and we have a fairly complete picture of the manner in which the question of naval armament and Chinese policy dovetail in the secret chambers of the state department.

So widely does the British proposal for a 600,000 ton cruiser allotment differ from what the American representatives are instructed to agree to that, in a situation wherein such questions as the attitude of Japan and the British naval base at Singapore are decisive, it seems hardly possible for an agreement to be reached.

As the control of the Pacific area is the immediate prize and as the Nanking government apparently is quite willing to make big concessions to American imperialist policy, in fact has already shown by its slaughter of workers and suppression of labor unions that it is following the best established American procedure, there is a strong likelihood that recognition of Nanking may follow because of the necessity of American imperialism for an instrument which it can wield in China against both Britain and Japan.

The recognition of the Nanking government by America would place it in a position where it could talk decisively to the other powers, and to Great Britain especially, in view of her huge interests in the sections under its control, recognition would be a severe blow.

It is easy to understand, that with the present proofs of antagonism showing themselves at Geneva, such an act by the United States could be interpreted as practically a declaration of war.

These speculations are made, and they are by no means far-fetched, in order to show that the logical result of American and British imperialist policy is the creation of a war situation.

It is possible, of course, that some formula will be found at Geneva which will serve to conceal for some time longer the growing breach between America and Britain. It is quite probable, for instance, that the international bankers now in conference here, have met to devise a policy to meet the present situation.

But the mere fact that capitalist governments and various powerful sections of the capitalist class are engaging in a whole series of international conferences which have accomplished nothing so far to ease the growing tension, is an unfailing sign that war plans are being made as the political instability of capitalism forces itself more and more upon the attention of the foreign offices.

Those who say that there is no danger of war today are either blind fools, dupes, or conscious agents of imperialism.

THE WORKER WHO CELEBRATES AIR FLIGHTS

Labors of the Amsterdam International

BY OLGA TALS.

BERLIN (By Mail).—The Amsterdam International is now chiefly busy with its internal affairs. The impending Congress in August brings forth questions of finance, the question of the Secretariat, headquarters of the International, and many others. Questions occupying the foreground in the life of a true International: the economic struggle of the working class, the struggle with threatened war, the fight against imperialism which have always played a very modest role in the life of Amsterdam, have now been pushed right into the background. The fact that a month ago during the Balk-Jugoslavian conflict the meeting of the Amsterdam International's Executive which should have worked out the question of the International's action in regard to the conflict, was postponed is extremely characteristic. Undegeest, questioned by the correspondent of the Dutch paper "Het Volk" whether such postponement implied that the danger of war had become less, replied phlegmatically:

"The danger has not become less, but it would be better to hold the Executive meeting in two weeks' time." Better or worse we do not know, but certainly it comes to the same thing nothing will be altered . . . then resolution being passed sooner or later.

THE recently passed resolution with regard to the unsuccessful work of the provisional commission to the Disarmament Conference bears precisely such a character that of a hastily drawn up official document. A document had to be put united, since, try no Amsterdam might to advertise the League of Nations, the sterility of its work in this as in all other spheres was a little too obvious. The International issued on this question an appeal to all affiliated organizations for an energetic campaign against the reactionary and military powers. But no one need be alarmed by these pugnacious words: the campaign proposed is to be carried on chiefly in the press.

THE Amsterdamites contented themselves with yet another appeal—this time to the League of Nations—on the question of the danger of war. As for the still more urgent question of modern political life—the question of the Chinese Revolution—Amsterdam took up a position of blatant mockery. They intend to set up connections with the Chinese trade unions and embark upon a campaign in their favor only after everything is settled down and smoothed over in China, recommending the Chinese workers in the meantime to cease collaboration with their bourgeoisie in the national emancipatory struggle. Chiang Kai-shek's betrayal of the Chinese revolution evoked nothing but malevolent glee from the Amsterdamites.

BUT they have really no time for the fight began to fly. The business affairs are in a disastrous condition. Of 23 organizations affiliated to Amsterdam, 11 have paid no entrance fees and 6 have paid no membership dues for many years. Even England failed to pay two thirds of their membership dues during the last year. The International's income for the last year did not exceed 160,000 guldens. They expenses were, however, much higher than this. The funds of the International which were 113,510 gulden at the beginning of 1926 were only 43,000 by the end of the year. Thus in one year 71,000 gulden in addition to the 100,000 received from membership dues have melted away. This is a situation bordering on the brink of ruin. The Bureau has had to mortgage the International's house in Amsterdam, to sell its typographic and face the question of the cutting down of expenses in the most serious manner.

WHAT turn was taken by this cutting down? The first thing to feel the axe was cultural work, and it was resolved not to organize the International Summer School this year and to cut down the already trifling amount of publishing that was done. The International's monthly has been reduced to a slim pamphlet of 16 pages, containing only official notices and it was decided to cease the publication of the pamphlet in French and English.

All this cannot, however, save the situation. The International's funds go rather on administrative expenses than on cultural work, assistance to members on strike and victims of government repression. Even before the Vienna Congress it was stated that administrative expenses swallow the lion's share of their funds. The secretaries of the International (of whom there are three) get 10,000 gulden a year each, members of the General Council get 25 guldens a day for their expenses. The International maintains a staff of well-paid technical employes.

AND there is yet another point which costs the Amsterdam International dear. National hatred between the trade unionists in hostile countries roused by the war made itself so strongly felt at the first post-war congress that the International was forced to choose as its headquarters a neutral country. The choice of Holland involved unnecessary expenditure on interpreters, and translaters since all documents had to be translated into Dutch as well as into the three European languages. Holland is, moreover, one of the most expensive countries in Europe.

IT turned out, however, not so easy to overcome all these difficulties. As soon as the question of cutting down the number of secretaries arose, the fears of the International are actually carried out by Oudegeest, with some assistance by Citrine. But the British who form the biggest section of the International will not hear of the withdrawal of the British secretary. Brown. Snowden however, has definitely stated that he will in no event agree to act as assistant secretary. At the last meeting of the bureau (25-26 April) an agreement was arrived at on the question according to the official report, but it is not yet known who is to be sacrificed on the altar of economy.

THINGS became still worse when the question of cutting down the secretaries' salaries was brought forward. Oudegeest refuses to take less than 10,000 guldens a year and the members of the Bureau are afraid to insist, for Oudegeest in order to live, some secretary of the International, retired a seat in the Dutch Parliament, from which his accruements would have been much greater.

WHAT was to be done? The Netherlands Federation of Trade Unions suggest to raise the sole in the International from 12 to 15 guldens per 1,000 members. This suggestion, however, has met with determined resistance. The Austrians and the Swiss have already definitely declared that membership dues cannot be raised; the British, whose financial affairs are at present anything but brilliant, also to refuse to agree to this; the French membership fees are as it is difficult to collect, and they cannot possibly pay more.

A great struggle went on behind the scenes with regards to the alteration of the International's headquarters. At the previous meeting of the Bureau the question of its transference to a more central country was discussed. The whole labor press unhesitatingly interpreted this as an intention to transfer the International's headquarters to Berlin, in which the Germans whose influence in the International is ever on the increase, have long aspired. The British and the French, however, were against this. It appears their argument won the day. At the last session of the National Council of the reformist General Confederation of Labor in France Jouhaux declared that the headquarters of the International would remain in Holland.

THE official reports of the International are generally speaking meagre and terse. Most of our information on the misunderstandings and complication going on in the International has been gained from the left socialist press (Paul Levy's paper, the organ of the Swiss Federation of Trade Unions and others), so daring as to criticise Oudegeest's economy and endeavor to mend matters. Even the most favorable criticism, however, angers the Amsterdamites. They have not the slightest desire to carry their difficulties into the open, for the judgment of their working class members, hoping to smooth everything over in camera. But truth will out and the crisis in the Amsterdam International is already being shouted from the roof-tops.

Break Altitude Record.

Lieut. C. C. Champion took a Wright Apache plane 37,500 feet above the capital yesterday, breaking his own world's record of 33,455 feet established two months ago.

DRAMA

Woe to the Vanquished, "The Streets of Sorrow"

Review By VERN SMITH

Another play of post war Vienna, starring, sick, corrupt, and yet heroic. And as usual, since the power of censorship is still in the hands of the bourgeoisie, the interest centers around the trials and tribulations of the newly poor, not of those who have been "always with ye."

I am informed that the play, as originally produced, had a much more definite working class emphasis, and that the censorship here resulted first in a good deal of this being cut out, and then that after consultation among themselves, those whose business it is to make the world safe for Rabbit and Co. cut most of the rest of the "labor angle," and in general made a mess of the thing, giving it a peculiar confused and faltering aspect. However, it is in its final form as a product of censorship that it has to be reviewed, since it is in that form that the public sees it.

This is the story of the sadness of the "shabby genteel," the steady decline and painful corruption of the old ruling class and of the bureaucrats especially. Councillor Rumfort has two daughters, and is so proud that he turns out of his house a paying American roomer when his youngest daughter is charged with stealing two tins of canned meat. Of course she did steal the meat, and the other daughter, Greta (played excellently by Greta Garbo) nearly becomes an inmate of a disorderly house in her efforts to keep the family going.

That is half of the interest. The other half centers around the rise of the greedy new bourgeoisie: those who, like the butcher of Molchie Street, make Greta stand in line all night for the chance to buy meat, and then call the police to chase her away, only because the meat is sold out, and the higher elements of the new capitalism, like the profiteer Caner and Rosenow, who loot on a huge scale, stealing mines, swindling in the stock market, swilling in the night clubs and clutching down the daughters of the old ruling class for their pleasure.

The proletarians who appear in the story are not, as such, essential to the plot but serve as background for the decline and degeneration of their betters. Chief of the proletarian characters is the murderess, Maria Tober, who might as well have come from any other class in the setting Vienna society. In the end there is a bread riot by those who do not, as the Rumfort family, worry over the impending meat diet to save the cat, but suffer under a continual diminution of their accustomed cabbage rations. This is treated as a joyful event, without leader, ship, merely the hand of fate which punishes certain of the filthiest of the rich.

There is an indirect slap at the American Red Cross, the officers of which complain that all they see in Vienna is luxury. There is a definite touch of anti-semitism, all the worse because, especially the profiteers, are given Jewish faces. The play is in the European tradition, which holds that no actress should do something more than merely pose beautifully, and that scenery, instead of being the chief attraction in a film, should be an appropriate background for the action.

Junkers Build Concrete Runway.

BERLIN, July 5.—Discussion of a Berlin-to-New York non-stop flight was given impetus today by the announcement of the Junkers airplane works that they are constructing a concrete runway for planes with especially heavy loads that would attempt record flights. Ever since Clarence Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine made their great flight from New York to Cottbus, Germany, there has been considerable talk of a flight from this country to the United States.

Reds Rout New Jersey

JERSEY CITY, N. J., July 5.—Trouble is brewing for Teddy Brandle, known as the "czar" of the building trades of Hudson County. Recently it was reported that he had resigned as head of the Iron Workers' International Union. No reason was given for his retirement.

At the last meeting of the Cement Workers' Union, Local 225 it was announced that President J. V. Merchant of the International-Union of Hod-carriers and Common Laborers of America, in a communication from its headquarters reported that Teddy Brandle and Jerry Donnelly suspended from the International.

Patriots' Plot Foiled.

NEWARK, N. J., July 5.—At a Workers Party open air meeting at the Market Plaza a few self appointed patriots, who are out to guard the workers from being injected with class-conscience, attempted to disturb the gathering.

They tried the stunt of sending "drunks" to the meeting to start a rumpus but there scheme failed. However one of these 100 per centers worked overtime and scabbed after the meeting.

NEWARK, N. J., July 4.—The Public Service Corp. has announced that its gross earnings for the fiscal year ending May 31 amounted to $109,712,628.75 an increase of almost 10,000,000 over the year of 1925. This corporation that fights the city, county and state on its tax assessments, that has the political power to have bills passed in the state legislature relieving it of millions of dollars of expenditures thru saving of paving costs, only recently caused the arrest of one of its bus drivers because he was short 50 cents. The shortage was due to a fault in the register. But this made no difference to the company. The worker arrested is out on bail now. This corporation that is trying to put over an increase in bus rates and fare rates makes millions and is attempting to impose on the passengers of New Jersey a scheme that will relieve the state and its residents of millions of dollars, always pleads poverty when it appears before any utility commission or public body for relief.

NEGLECT CAUSED WOMAN'S DEATH, INTERNE PROVES

Rabbi Says Confidence in Hospital Shattered

In the course of the testimony offered by three Jewish internes of the Kings County Hospital yesterday it was disclosed that patients in a state of coma were left to lie unattended and without the benefit of medical aid for periods as long as three hours. One case in particular, that of a Mrs. Kessler, who was admitted to the institution last December in a state of diabetic coma was unattended until the time of her death three hours later. This testimony was offered by Dr. Edwin Leibee.

Confidence Shattered.

During the hearing of charges of racial and religious discrimination which exists at the hospital, Rabbi Gross of Union Temple, Brooklyn, arose and asked that testimony of patients be heard in executive session because they were of such a nature that if they were made public they would "shatter public confidence in the institution."

Cases in which the Jewish doctors were sabotaged by gentile nurses and internes were cited time and again in the course of the afternoon. When patients under the care of the Jewish interne were in danger of dying they were, not notified by the nurses on duty so that it would appear that they were guilty of professional neglect.

Useless To Complain.

Epithets such as "damned Jew," "kike," "sheeney," and similar anti-Semetic by-words were of common usage in the wards and staff rooms in the hospital. When asked by the mayor if the Jewish internes complained of this treatment to any of the officials in charge of the institution, Dr. Aaron H. Tripnin, one of the internes said, "The heads of the hospital were well aware of conditions, it would have been useless to complain."

Tammany Politics.

Mayor Walker, who is conducting the "investigation," took advantage of every opportunity to rip into Commissioner Bird S. Coler, of the department of public welfare. The Kings County Hospital is under his charge. Sight was never lost of the fact that Coler is not a Smith-Tammany man but was appointed to his position by ex-Mayor John F. Hylan, who is on the "outs" with the regular Tammany gang.

Vandalism.

Dr. Hyman L. Solovay, another of the Jewish internes, who held the stand for the greater part of the afternoon, stated that organized raids were conducted by the gentile internes on the rooms occupied by the non-gentile doctors. According to Solovay's testimony his books were destroyed, his clothes torn and "stink bombs" were thrown into his room, all calculated to make life unbearable for him and his co-religionists.

He further stated that medical reports were withheld from him in spite of the fact that they were required in the treatment of patients.

"If it were left in your hands," the mayor asked Dr. Katasee, "how many internes would it be necessary to remove to exterminate the anti-Semetic feeling which exists at the Kings

Al Smith Orders Leave With Pay to Delegates To Legion Convention

ALBANY, N. Y., July 5.—Governor Smith today issued a proclamation calling on the heads of all state departments, boards and bureaus to permit their employees who belong to the American Legion to attend the state convention of the Legion at Troy on August 4, 5 and 6.

The delegates should be permitted to attend the convention without any loss in compensation, the governor ordered.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Millionaire Denies Promise.

August Heckscher, millionaire real estate dealer and philantropist, asked the supreme court yesterday to dismiss his complaint filed against him by Frieda Hempel, the opera singer in which she claims that he agreed to pay her $48,000 a year for life. The motion is scheduled to come before Justice Alfred H. Townley on Monday.

At the time the diva brought suit she said: "In April, 1926, at the special request of Heckscher, I agreed with him and promised him that during my natural life I would sing for charity and the sick and the halt and the blind whenever he desired me to do so, for which he said he would pay me $12,000 quarterly, after paying the first installment, he apparently had a change of mind."

Plane Crashes.

The huge Sikorsky plane that was fitted up as a travelling cigar store as an advertising stunt by the United Cigar Stores was blown by a sudden gust of wind into the Curtis training ship at Curtis Field, L. I.

Both planes were wrecked but no one of the eight persons aboard were injured.

36 Die Here Over Fourth

Fourth of July deaths mounted to the appalling figure of 250 in addition to many hundreds injured during the "safe and sane" celebration. New York led the country with 36 fatalities. The holiday, however, came to take on the characteristics of a national calamity due to the high death toll.

Sacco and Vanzetti Shall Not Die!

County Hospital?"

"None," replied Katsee. "The internes are not at fault. I would remove the heads of the hospital and the department responsible for the institution." Which was exactly what Mayor Walker wanted to hear. It was now open for Coler's exit. There is going a regular Tammany orgie. Coler could well fill the job hour-by-hour.

At regular intervals Hanover indulged himself in anti-political speeches all calculated to conceal the two hundred thousand Jewish votes which reside in the city. He spoke of "tolerance," "our most loyal citizens," etc.

The hearing is scheduled to be continued today at 2:30.

BRITAIN AND U. S. IN DEADLOCK AT ARMS CONFERENCE

All Meetings Off; May Never Meet Again

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—The state and navy departments are at odds over the offer of the political heads of the American delegation to the British of a raise in total cruiser strength from 300,000 tons to 400,000. The navy department fears that even this limit does not give the American navy enough advantage in the next war. The offer may be withdrawn.

GENEVA, July 5.—A state of complete deadlock developed today, as all observers expected it would, when the naval expert's committee of the "disarmament" conference received the two contradictory proposals by the British and American delegates as to cruiser strength and the size of cruisers.

Britain's interests lie in having an enormous navy of small boats her enemies can have the same, but they can't effectively use them because they do not possess England's wide-flung net of naval fueling stations and small cruisers are not useful without them. On the other hand, the United States proposition for a lesser number of big cruisers is abhored by the British delegation, because of England does not have a naval superiority in the beginning of a war the superior building power of U. S. shipyard will make Britain a loser.

U. S. Offers More Tonnage.

The American proposition represented a compromise between the United States' first proposal of 250,000 to 300,000 cruiser tonnage each for Great Britain and the United states, and the British demand for nearly 600,000 tons. This American economic proposition was presented at the expert's committee meeting, and almost immediately the world of the committee was adjourned without a set date for another meeting. The proposal of the U. S. was for 10,000 ton ships while England wants the limit 7,500

This action left the arms conference with the committee standstill scheduled, with the members of the various delegations conferring independently within their own ranks.

Final Hypocrisy.

Following the adjournment, the experts committee issued a communique saying the adjournment was taken with a view to permitting the various delegations to seek a means of reconciling the views of the different powers."

The communique also declared an

NEWBURGH, N. Y., July 5.—Five persons were killed and twenty severely injured in a wooden car wreck yesterday of the New York, Ontario and Western Railroad near Iona Island, just below the Bear Mountain district.

The wrecked train consisted of a baggage car and eight passenger coaches filled with New Yorkers returning from a Fourth of July vacation at the island. It struck an open switch, shunting the train at forty miles an hour, into a siding where a switch-train of twenty empty passenger coaches and freight cars stood.

Grafting Officials of Local No. 3 Electricians Reinstated by Referee

Seventeen former officers of Local No. 3, electrical workers, ousted on charges of corruption six months ago, have won a verdict from the referee appointed by the state supreme court that their removal was illegal. Officers elected by the local union have been occupying the place of the removed.

International Vice President Brosh who led the first attack on the seventeen, accused them of refusing to organize more than one third of the local electrical workers and of using the offices for their own financial advantage by grafting on employers and workers.

Richard L. DiMaria is the former president of the local the referee orders reinstated. The decision will precipitate a new fight within the union.

How the Frame-Up Works on Henry Ford's 'Model' Ships

An Amazing Tale of the Methods Used By the Understrappers and Legal Lackeys of the Great "Philanthropist" To Stamp Out All Protest Among Seamen—This Story Is A Document of the American Class Struggle of Interest Not Only To Seamen But To All Workers.

THE following story concerns itself with the experiences of two sailors, George Loomis and James Fitzgerald, both employed by the Ford Motor Company on one of their boats, the tug "Ball Camp," used to tow the vessels which the Ford Company purchases and uses in the process of creating its economical "lizzy".

These sailors, both of whom have proven their competence and able seamanship by years of work at their trade, had absolutely no doubt voiced as to their ability as able seamen when they were employed by the Ford Motor Company. Fitzgerald, who, besides his able seaman's ticket, also holds a third mates license, has been going to sea for nine years. Loomis had, besides his merchant marine service, a three-year navy training, totaling altogether eight years.

The Ford Company is very careful in its choice of men and they are carefully investigated as to ability, seamanship and character before they are signed on for the "model ships."

Publicity Bunk.

THE publicity agents of the Ford Motor Company paint the picture of working conditions on the Ford boats in the rosiest of colors. "These are the boats where the sailor never suffers as he does at the hands of other shipowners; here the sailor gets the best of chow and living quarters; working conditions on the job are the easiest and most lucrative."

These systematic drive-houses that keep the workers going at top speed under a constant check and belt system where exactly so much work is calculated to be turned out per minute and failure means the gate, are not able to keep workers for more than a few months, unless they are tied down by such unfortunate circumstances as families that are dependent on Ford and his commissary houses.

HENRY FORD has gained control of the stores and middlemen's trade patronized by the workers in these plants; and now it seems as though Ford were "extending his systematized tyranny to the high seas and inland waters, and entering into the lives of the workers on the ships in his drive for more profits and greater control and power.

Faulty Seamanship.

The tug "Ball Camp" on which these two sailors signed in the month of November, 1925, was a badly mastered ship so far as seamanship was concerned. She had a fifteen to twenty degree list all the way from New York to Quebec due mainly to the incompetence of the captain and the chief engineer. The officers had neglected to properly ballast the vessel and in the course of the trip they had made no real attempt to correct this fault. Because of this list the seas ran into the quarters of the crew, causing them untold misery and lack of sleep.

During this time all hands worked long hours shifting bunker coal to right the ship and avoid a disaster. Along with this difficulty the heating system was out of order and the crew suffered cold as well as the damp and wet of the water that was shipped aboard. This defect in the heating system also affected the manipulation of the vessel due to leaking steam in capstans, winches, etc; in fact the vessel was absolutely unseaworthy.

THE men were left in misery below, but the officers lived amidships in comfortable quarters above the waterline. The dry stores, kept in the crew's quarters against regulations were wet when the seas came in, and had rotted away in the crew's quarters from the salt and filth; then after the ship had made part of its run it ran short of ice and the meat for the crew's consumption became foul; such, ice as there was being reserved for the officers' choice cuts.

These were some of the conditions with which the crew had to contend, so that when the boat came into port over night, they were only too glad to run ashore for a breathing spell and rest somewhere else to break up the grinding monotony of the miserable trip.

Captain Incensed at Complaint.

WHEN the ship arrived at Quebec the crew asked the captain for half of their wages, to which they are entitled at any port according to the seamans' act, after five or more actual days of work.

The captain, fearing to lose the crew who were indignant and angry, at this shabby treatment, refused to pay them off. Thereupon the men went in a body to the American Consul at Quebec and made a complaint against the vessel on the basis of its being unseaworthy and improperly provisioned. In this they were entirely within their rights as an American crew and American citizens. The consul, after hearing the man, came aboard ship, spoke to the captain and ordered him to improve all conditions. This should have been enough to indicate that the conditions aboard ship were really bad; yet there was no immediate attempt to rectify them or to fulfill the promise made to the consul by the captain.

WHILE the crew were still assembled at the office of the consul he followed the usual procedure and picked out two men to act as spokesmen for the crew. It happened that these two were Loomis and Fitzgerald. The captain heard of this and became incensed at the action of these two militant workers. When the consul came aboard ship at five that evening, the captain claimed that he did not have the money with which to pay off the men but that he would pay them off the next day. At two o'clock that morning the captain made preparations to leave and by five had pulled out, leaving Loomis and Fitzgerald on the beach. With them was also left a fireman by the name of Gormely, who had also been active in the previous evening's experience.

These men had the right to go ashore by virtue of the fact that they were not on watch at the time of leaving ship and were off watch for the entire period of the night. They had also been authorized by the chief engineer under whose watch they came.

Listed As "Deserters."

WHEN the "Ball Camp" arrived at Montreal the Captain reported to the American Consul and listed the three men, Loomis, Gormely and Fitzgerald, as deserters. He also took the dastardly line of hiring three other men in their places, and the ship left port.

In the meanwhile these three seamen were left in Quebec without money, food, shelter or friends to whom they might turn in the midst of bitter cold weather. They wandered the streets penniless and hungry for a while and then turned their steps to the American Consul. This worthy official, after four days finally gave them their fare to Ogdensburg, N. Y., where they hoped to catch the "Ball Camp" on its way to Detroit and the Ford Works.

When the men arrived in Ogdensburg they found that the ship had not yet arrived so they were forced to make for Cornwall where they caught up with it. Upon arrival aboard ship they reported to the captain, who told them that they would be paid off in Ogdensburg the next day.

During this time the marooned men stood ready to assume their routine duties aboard ship. The captain, however, purposely did not allow them to return to work on any occasion, thus proving not only his prejudice against these militant workers but also the fact that he had some preconceived plan of meting out revenge to those who had stood up and demanded their rights as seamen. It turned out that when they did arrive in Ogdensburg, the United States Deputy Marshal came board the ship and read the names of Loomis, Fitzgerald and Gormely from a slip of paper which has been furnished him by the captain. "You are under arrest," the marshal told the three seamen, "come along."

Arrested Without Warrant.

FITZGERALD demanded that he be shown the warrant for their arrest, but the marshal refused to do this saying that they must come along; that their arrest would be explained at the proper time and that he didn't know the reason for it.

Railroaded to Jail.

He took them to the Ogdensburg police station where they were kept outside of the inner door while he talked to the chief of police who refused to hold them or have anything to do with their case, on the basis of there being no specific charge against them, but the marshal continued his bluff and took the men along with him. This time he took them to the Oswetachie House Hotel in Ogdensburg. He forced them to register and told them that they had to stay there until the captain came back from Detroit. Even at this time he didn't show them any warrant or tell them the reason for this arrest.

Held Three Weeks.

THEY were kept at this hotel for a period of three weeks, during which time the captain, on his return, came up to see them in company with the deputy marshal, and tried to make them accept various sums far under the actual amount due as the full payment of their wages. The men refused to take this offer as there was about three hundred dollars due them collectively and they were legally entitled to the full amount.

They were told to get a lawyer, and got one by the name of Watterman, who made a demand upon the captain for the full sum of their wages; but the captain refused again to pay them.

WAR—THE PANHANDLER

War is useful to the exploiter. When the lives of workers are not being demanded for battle sacrifices, the earnings of workers are being wasted in "preparedness" for battle.

63-Hour Journey From Moscow, U.S.S.R. to Paris Touches Four Countries

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

PARIS, France (By Mail).—It is 63 hours as the train goes from Moscow, U. S. S. R., to Paris, capital city by the River Seine of imperialist France.

One travels over Poland 'neath the bloody oppression that is begging Wall Street for a loan to bolster its tottering tyranny.

One passes over Germany, thru Berlin, where the workers are being lashed to the point of extreme exhaustion in order to fulfill the demands of the Dawes Plan, and at the same time create a new "place in the sun" for the present capitalist ruling class of the Vaterland.

One even passes thru Belgium where the battlefields are being well preserved for the sightseers who bring money from other lands, principally the United States, to give nourishment to the toppling franc.

Then France, where the franc sells more than 25 to the American dollar, "The Dollar" that is accepted gladly everywhere in lieu of the national currency in every capitalist land of Western Europe.

The Contrast in Europe.

It did not take the nearly two months that I spent in the Union of Soviet Republics to get the inspiring feel of the huge optimism of the workers and peasants there. Tremendous contrast with the despair of the workers in Western Europe groaning under their many burdens.

It was on a pleasant Sunday afternoon (June 19th) that I started on my return journey. One of my last visitors at the Hotel Bristol was a Chinese comrade who had just arrived from Canton, with the latest news of the revolution In China.

It would have been pleasant and instructive to spend hours with him, but trains in Moscow depart punctually, more punctually I found than in those lands where the initiative that is supposed to grow out of private ownership is charged with paving the way toward perfection.

The pavements of the Tverskaya glistened in the sun as we sped along to the White Russian-Baltic Railroad Station. In spite of the huge throngs that had yesterday and early this day departed for "the country," the streets were nevertheless crowded. Men, women and children in large numbers joined in the promenade along the Tverskoy Boulevard, where only the day before other crowds had gathered to witness the start and finish of the Moscow Marathon run around "the Boulevard Ring." Moving picture machine operators had worked zealously as a bakery worker, an official in his union, a fine specimen of an athlete had won the contest.

Reminder of Voikov's Martyrdom.

The afternoon was quiet at the station. It was the lull between the morning rush of those leaving the city, and the rush that would be repeated on their return in the evening.

This was the station at which the Funeral Train carrying the body of Comrade Peter L. Voikov, Soviet ambassador assassinated at Warsaw, had arrived from the Polish capital. Moscow, with the entire Soviet Union, was still in mourning for Voikov. The workers of the Soviet Union do not forget.

This train that was to carry me to the Polish border was as comfortable and modern as any in the world. It had well-equipped sleeping cars and it carried its dining car that boasted an elaborate menu card in two languages—Russian and English.

"Good Bye!" to Moscow.

On an adjoining track a local train arrives, well filled with early returning excursionists. They wave an enthusiastic "Good Bye!" as our "Express" begins to move out of the station at 4:10 on the second. Our route leads directly west, the route that is followed for a time by the air service on its way to Berlin.

As we pass one station after another ,without stopping, it is clear to be seen that the railroad depot in the rural districts of the Soviet Union, as in rural America, acts as a sort of social center, where great numbers gather to meet acquaintances and "to see the trains go thru."

Often one saw knots of hikers along the roads, not "hitch hikers," since the automobile is not as prevalent in the Soviet Union as in America, not yet. These hikers, in knickers or the much shorter "trunks" of the athlete, showed that these Russians took hiking seriously as a "sport" that was an aid to physical development. There were many picnics in the luxuriant forests thru which we passed. White was a predominant color in the clothes of the women. Thus I formed a picture into evening until the lateness of the hour ended the day and turned into a memory these gay and discussing throngs of the cities thru which we had passed, of Wiasma, Smolensk and Orsha.

We Approach the Border.

The early morning found us at Minsk. It was on June 7th, the same day that Voikov was assassinated at Warsaw, that a railway catastrophe was organized between the stations Shtanovitchi and Minsk, which resulted in the death of the proletarian representative of the "G. P. U." for the White Russian Military District, Opanski, who was accompanying an arrested Polish spy, an officer. In addition to Opanski, a chauffeur was killed and two other persons wounded.

This outrage was merely one incident in a whole campaign of terrorism which an official communique of the Soviet Government declared made it "completely clear that the British government, which is feverishly preparing for war against the Soviet Union, is using all the means in its power to interfere with the peaceful constructive work of the workers and peasants of our State."

There is no mistake here, on the platform of the railroad station at Minsk, that there is any increasing tenseness close to the border. To be sure there are a few soldiers of the Red Army about. But there are usually one or two at every station. The official of the Soviet Government who comes thru to take up our passports has but one assistant with him. This indication of a feeling of security was another contrast with the extremo nervousness to be found in Poland, in Germany and even as far west as Belgium, where a regular stream of soldiers appeared every time that we reached some new border.

Land of Timothy and Clover.

We leave Minsk behind. The country is hilly. The fields of timothy and clover bend before the breeze. It is not much unlike the farming districts of Minnesota, for instance, in the United States.

I was reminded of the figures that I had been shown, revealing the fact that this year would again give an abundant harvest to the peasants of the Soviet Union. Between the fields came the pastures where herds of cows and flocks of sheep were grazing. Many spirited horses were also enjoying the freedom of the open.

Thus we came to the border town of the Soviet Union, Wolkowysk, where the passengers have their baggage taken into the station for examination before leaving the country.

Little interest was shown in my baggage. The Soviet officials looked a little bit regretfully, however, at my portable typewriter. Machinery of any kind is treasured in the Soviet Union. They didn't like to see even a portable typewriter leave the country. Finally a long document was made out and I was taxed one rouble (50 cents) for the privilege of taking the machine with me.

When the examination was completed we returned to the train with our baggage. Soon we could see in the distance the outpost of the Red Army. It looked like a comfortable clubhouse with Red Army soldiers lounging about, a few on duty. We rolled slowly past it.

Not many yards beyond was the frontier and a short distance beyond that the guard house of the Polish Army. Around this Polish outpost and stretching in both directions, North and South, was one of the most elaborate barbwire entanglements that I have ever seen. There was the usual network of barbwire. But on each side were three additional rows of entanglements stretched on long, sharp spiked driven in the ground.

More Soldiers Than Passengers.

Our train halted at this barbwire frontier. I was on the last car. A soldier of the Polish army, with rifle and revolver and plenty of ammunition, with bayonet fixed and the Polish eagle glaring from his helmet, took up his position on the end platform. In another few moments what appeared to be a regular army came pouring thru our coach. I counted more Polish soldiers than there were passengers.

There were officers in three different kinds of uniforms. Some carried revolvers with long barrels, others had little toylike appearing automatics. So we passed over into Poland surrendering our passports to the officials of the Polish government. We pass the Polish frontier town of Baranowicze and then on to Stolbzy where our baggage is searched, the main lookout of the customs officers being for "Bolshevik propaganda." Some passengers possessed Russian literature, books and pamphlets, or newspapers. It was carefully scanned. The customs officers were somewhat puzzled by my latest copies of The New York Times, the Annalist and the Wall Street Journal. They couldn't read them. All they knew was that it was not Russian. So they turned it back to me.

Tomorrow:—The journey thru Poland and Germany.

What's What in Washington

WASHINGTON, July 5 (FP).—War is in the air. Transatlantic and Pacific flights, diplomatic threats at Geneva of armament races, rumblings in European foreign offices, the restiveness of the colonial peoples, excited harangues by the home generals and admirals, superheated congressmen tossing threats of billions for "defense" through the receptive press, all give confirmation to General Lassalter's warning on his return from Europe:

"The whole world is in a state of unstable equilibrium. Life nowadays is like living in a high explosives factory. From what I have seen abroad and from what I know of world conditions, I am of the opinion that an explosion is almost sure to come."

Lindbergh and the War-Mongers.

Young Lindbergh, winging his solitary way across the Atlantic, probably could not foresee that his feat would start the war hounds on a rampage which will cost American workers billions in added military expenditures in the next few years. But the military crowd in Washington and their congressmen, including heads of the military and naval affairs committees in the House, see it.

Chairman James of the military committee, in his perfervid plea for the immediate creation of a Department of National Defense to meet the emergency, cries: "Every time a Lindbergh goes to France or a Chamberlin to Germany, or more especially if there arrives a British or Italian or Frenchman or German comes over here, it brings the Department of National Defense that much nearer."

That is the paradoxical effect of Lindbergh's effort to bring the nations closer together; of the Geneva conference which started out to disarm and is ending up with American threats to spend $250,000,000 to achieve parity with the British fleet, and Washington, except for the small voices of a few peace-seekers, has joined the war cry.

What Congress will do about it is indicated pretty clearly by the sentiments of Chairman Butler of the house naval affairs committee, who predicts appropriations to enable the American navy to command the seven seas and tear down Britain's superiority, and Chairman James of the military affairs committee, who demands that economy be thrown to the winds so we can have a bigger army and air force. Within five years he predicts 3,000 first line fighting planes with 25,000 enlisted airmen.

Houghton Ruins Chances.

Of all the sorry faux pas executed since the last blue moon, none has approached Ambassador Houghton's outrageous slip in suggesting that the people be allowed to vote on the next war. Horror, and cautious suggestions that the Ambassador to the Court of St. James had "gone bolshevik" was the official reaction. One thing is pretty certain in the minds of any number of higher-ups: Houghton will never succeed Kellogg as secretary of state. No secretary of state, cooped up in the same building with the secretary of war, could ever have a thought like that and function successfully as head of American foreign affairs.

Houghton was speaking before Harvard when he suggested a constitutional amendment to take the war-making power away from president and congress and lodge it with the people. He made a closely-reasoned analysis of nations slipping into war through the maneuvers of their rulers. He asked for an international agreement practically outlawing war for 100 years. Washington gasped, and then drew the curtain down. Maybe that's why you have heard nothing of the Houghton plan through the press.

The ladies of the ritzy Washington Democratic club are sloganizing. Having produced such workers, through a private contest, as Eight years of Wall Street—now give Main Street a chance; Lorimer, Newberry, Smith and Vare, what next will the interests dare; Let's bust the power trust; Can we can Coal; I'll say we can, the ladies have thrown the contest open to the nation.

Democratic politicians who are trying to stem the Al Smith tide by boosting Owen D. Young, the General Electric chief, as Democratic candidate to oppose Coolidge, smile patronizingly at the ladies' efforts. Particularly the third slogan.

International Bankers Confer

By BERT MILLER.

If the seriousness of the illness of a patient may be judged by the number of doctor's visits, then the degree to which international capitalism is concerned about its own internal disorders, may be judged by the number of conferences which are being held to find a remedy for the suffering organism. Flush upon the heels of the futile Economic Conference at Geneva and in the midst of the growing dissension between the Powers at the so-called Disarmament Conference, comes the announcement of a mysterious meeting of the leading figures in world finance, to be held at the Federal Reserve Bank in New York City. Included in this gathering are Sir Montagu Norman, Governor of the Bank of England; Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, President of the German Reichsbank; Charles Rist, Governor of the Bank of France, and Benjamin Strong of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, a consultation of specialists indeed.

It is not yet clear as to just what problems this highly important and well-guarded conference will tackle, but certain features are significant. Says the New York Times: "While each of these foreign bankers had visited America within the last few years, it was the first time that the 'Big Three' of European finance had assembled here at the same time." It is to be noted that America has the decided advantage of playing the host during the "conversations." One is left to wonder whether the foreign guests came in response to an invitation or an order to be present, whether or not the pending negotiations on these shores will affect the outcome of the present Disarmament Conference, whereby some basis may be struck between the United States and Great Britain, also remains to be seen. Various reports are current as to the purpose of the conference, although the conferees maintain a discreet silence on this point. The question of the inter-allied debts, the raising of reparation funds, a European federal reserve system, the regulation of international gold shipments, all these are suggested as the possible topic of this conference.

Though hidden in an atmosphere of mystery, the conference of four of the leading figures in the world of international finance is something which the workers of the world had better follow with the utmost attention. Whatever may come out of it will be nothing more or less than a new yoke upon the necks of workers of the world.

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

LET those who do not keep abreast of the times meditate on the sad story of the dodo. This unfortunate bird passed out of history about the year 1681. The dodo was slow on his feet, could not fly and was so darned lazy that he laid only one egg, which he had to drop in the grass, being unable to use his wings or climb up a tree. Trade unionists should take a lesson from the dodo. While the capitalists are amalgamating the big industries of the nation the comparatively few workers that are organized into unions are separated by craft barriers, thus weakening their power.

OF course the workingclass will not pass out like the dodo. Without the workers society would be as barren as a desert. The wheels of industry would cease to hum and starvation would stalk the land. But the producers are not content to carry the burdens of society on their shoulders for the benefit of the parasite class. They want to create an economic order which will confront the parasite with the alternative of starving or working for what he puts in his belly or on his back. And in order to accomplish this purpose they must have organizations built on modern lines.

THE day of the craft union is gone. With the growth of giant industry the form of union organization based on the tool used and not on the product has become passe. The development of proletarian class consciousness and the trustification of industrial and financial power makes it possible and renders it necessary for the workers to organize in a mass Labor Party. The dodo passed away because he ignored evolution. The dodo must not be the symbol of the American labor movement.

THE convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers chopped off several heads, that once reared proudly on the shoulders of high officials of that organization. Misfortune befell them and woe unto those who fall by the wayside. Trade union officials who were going to save the workers one by one from wage slavery by turning them into capitalists have lived to see their pipe dreams fade in the cold light of the morning after. Even the grandiose schemes of the trade union bandits, scab coal operators and real estate pirates went the money of the boys at the throttle. They are now sweeping up the floor after the debacle and there is nothing in the rubbish heap more valuable than promissory notes of bankrupts.

THE DAILY WORKER is not prone to chortle over the stunning blows dealt by unkind fate, even to its adversaries. Meaner spirits might be driven by irresistible force to say: "Too darned good for them; we warned them of the perils of class-collaboration." The fact is we sympathize with the engineers who invested their savings in schemes they hoped would enable them to quit their hazardous jobs and spend the evening of their lives in ease and security, smoking their pipes on secluded porches and relating their thrilling experiences to their trusting and loving wives. We draw the line, however on those brotherhood members who invested their savings in the scabby Coal Rivers Collieries.

WE hope the entire trade union movement will take a lesson from the disaster that befell the business operations of the railroad engineers. Trade unionism and business ala capitalism will not mix except to the detriment of labor. The co-operative movement must be the substitute of labor for the debauching and degenerating trade union capitalism, that the labor lieutenants of imperialism have been saddling on the workers for several years past. And the clever proponents of labor banking and other forms of business unionism must go to work now and dig up excuses for the B. of L. E. debacle.

ANOTHER big hearted fellow is Henry Ford. He is perfectly willing that his employes should organize labor unions as long as they will not interfere with his business. We are taking Henry's statement with a large pinch of salt. What are unions good for unless they interfere with industry to the extent of extracting more pay and better working conditions from the owner? And if Ford takes the unionization of his slaves so lightly, why the army of stool-pigeons engaged in spying on those of his employes who are suspected of being sympathetic to trade unionism?

JAPAN RUSHES 4,000 TROOPS TO SHANTUNG

Bodies of Communists Murdered in 1919 Are Excavated in Berlin

BERLIN, July 6.—The bones of more than twenty Communists murdered in the counter-revolution of 1919 have been excavated by workers on an elevated railroad in Berlin.

Examination of the corpses disclosed that the skulls showed traces of brutal murder. Buttons from modern uniforms brand as lies the claim of reactionary members of the Reichstag that the skeletons are victims of an epidemic fifty years ago.

The Communists threaten to bring the issue into the Reichstag. Thousands of radical workers were slaughtered thru Noske, Ebert and Scheidemann in the 1919 counter-revolution.

To Try Doheny and Fall for Bribery; Overrule Demurrer

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Albert B. Fall and the two E. L. Dohenys, father and son, lost another round today in their protracted legal fight to escape trial on the ground of bribery, growing out of the Elk Hills Naval oil lease.

Justice Wm. Hitz, in District Supreme Court, overruled the demurrers to the bribery indictments against the ex-cabinet officer and the oil magnates, and declared the indictments "good and sufficient."

The Fall-Doheny demurrer was based upon the Supreme Court's decision that the famous executive order of president Harding in 1921, under which Fall proceeded to lease Elk Hills to Doheny's Pan-American Dome to H. F. Sinclair, was invalid. If this order was invalid, their attorney's contended, then subsequent events based upon that order also were tinged with invalidity, and bribery could not be based upon them.

This contention Justice Hitz denied. He cited numerous precedents to support his over-ruling decision, and concluded by saying that the president's order "had the force of law until it was held invalid, and these defendants acted under the assumption that it was valid.

Never was the role of the Federal government as the Executive Committee of the capitalist class more clearly demonstrated than in the present Federal Grand Jury indictment against The DAILY WORKER. While the bosses are engaged in an offensive against the trade unions, in the mining industry, in the needle trades, and in other industries, aided at every turn, by the government, through the police, the courts and the legislative bodies, efforts are being made to suppress The DAILY WORKER, the only newspaper which supports the workers in these struggles. The policeman's club, which is being used against the workers on the picket line, finds its concrete expression on a broader scale in the Federal Grand Jury indictment against The DAILY WORKER.

The effort to crush the labor movement and degrade its standards on a world scale, is bringing closer the danger of a new World War. This danger, The DAILY WORKER is constantly fighting.

The power of The DAILY WORKER, its influence in the struggles of labor on a national and international scale, brings down upon us the sharpest enmity of the ruling class, and finds its most recent expression in the last Federal Grand Jury indictment. Simultaneously, however, there is growing a new appreciation of the significance and importance of The DAILY WORKER to the workers in their struggles. The attack upon The DAILY WORKER will arouse the workers throughout the country to renewed efforts to protect their vital organ, to defend it from the onslaughts of the ruling class, and to maintain it until it final-ly becomes the official organ of the American proletarian revolu-tion.

14000 MORE MINERS LOCKED OUT THRU ATTACK ON WAGES

Company Tears Roofs of Miners' Houses Off

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., (FP) July 6.—Joining forces with the 150,000 coal diggers on strike since April 1st another 14,000 men have downed tools in the central Pennsylvania field that runs north and south along the Alleghany Mountains a hundred miles east of Pittsburgh.

With nearly all the union men out of the pits from Altoona to the coal towns of Illinois and Iowa the strike now begins to take on national proportions. The new recruits will aid the hopes for success of the United Mine Workers to the extent of the two to four thousand tons a week they cut off from the national production.

Reject Wage Slash.

This central Pennsylvania strike was forced on the union by the operators' ultimatum for a 20 per cent reduction by July 1st. The international union's policy was to keep the district operating as long as the old scale could be obtained. But this policy was doomed by the breakup of the second district conference in Philadelphia recently.

The bigger union operators, led by the New York Central R.R. interests, are holding to the wage cut policy. As yet the Central managers and the other big union concerns have not attempted to advertise for strike-breakers to fill the places of the U.M.W. of A. men. And the union is permitting maintenance men to stay at work—engineers, pumpmen, etc., as long as union rates are paid for this class of work.

Severe Endurance Test.

The coming months will be a severe endurance test—all the harder here, as in the Pittsburgh district, because the district is spotted with non-union operators. It is expected that a call will be issued to the non-union men to join the struggle for a union wage for all.

U. S. Students on Tour Praise Efficiency of USSR; Urge Friendship

LENINGRAD, July 6.—The workers and peasants of the Soviet Union have made few mistakes in "their gigantic attempt to revive the life of the nation on the basis of justice and humanity." That is the conclusion of the group of students from Syracuse University and Bates College who have been visiting here.

The students hope that their visit may lead to a better understanding between the Soviet Union and other nations. They were here for ten days and have already left for Moscow.

5,000 FURRIERS WITH FAMILIES PETITION MAYOR

Demand Investigation of Mass Arrests

Pouring into City Hall Park from all directions at 2.30 yesterday afternoon more than 5,000 striking furriers, their wives, children, sisters and brothers, gathered to petition Mayor James J. Walker to take some "action in regard to the systematic persecution of the fur strikers."

Yesterday morning the picket line was in the market as usual, but there were no arrests. Arrangements are being made to have thousands of workers out again this morning.

During yesterday afternoon's demonstration the mass of workers marched up and down in front of the City Hall, and a committee of seven selected from the demonstrators entered the building to present their grievances to the chief executive of the city.

Committee of Three.

When they got inside, they were requested to reduce the size of their committee to three. Mrs. Elizabeth Bandil, Mrs. Sarah Gross, wife of Aaron Gross who was almost killed several weeks ago by right wing gangsters, and Max Ackerman, were picked to appear before the mayor.

The other four members of the committee were A. Emeneth, A. Maguire, Issac Green and Frank Gaal.

See Mayor's Secretary.

The committee did not see the mayor, being ushered into the presence of his secretary, Edward L. Stanton, who promised to "do the best that can be done" to see that Mayor Walker hears of it. While Stanton was telling this to the committee, the mayor was one flight up waiting for the opening of a committee hearing. He kept himself out of sight during the entire time the furriers and their families were in the neighborhood of City Hall. There was a slight suspicion that he occasionally peeked out of a side window.

To Return Tuesday.

Stanton also told the committee that they should return next Tuesday with representatives of the Joint Board, when the mayor will give them an audience.

"Please take your pickets away," begged Stanton, "and we will be able to get together. Take them anywhere—to a hall or wherever you desire, but don't leave them outside of the City Hall!"

Battle Practice Turns Real When Plane Crash Kills Two Army Fliers

DEFERIET, N. Y., July 6.—Captain Curtis Wheeler and Lt. Karl Sack, both members 27th Division Air Service died as a result of a fall in an army plane, plane at Pine Camp this morning. Sack died enroute to Watertown Hospital. This is the latest of a long list of fatal accidents to army fliers.

Wheeler was dead when Captain Herman L. Von Laejum, medical officer of the squadron, a passenger in another plane flying near, swooped down to render first aid. Sack, pilot and Wheeler, observer, were taking part in a battle problem with 105th Infantry advancing underneath.

JAPAN UNABLE TO ENGAGE IN BIG NAVY RACE

Washington Sees Rocks Ahead for Geneva

GENEVA, July 6.—Japan, although supporting Britain against the United States in objecting to the American proposal to extend the 5-5-3 capital ship ratio of the Washington conference to include all naval armaments, let it be known that she likewise opposes Britain's proposal to enter into a cruiser building program. Admiral Saito, of the Japanese delegation, stated that either the proposal of the United States or Britain would force her into a disastrous competition in cruiser building.

While the United States is in a position to build any sized navy, as far as her economic resources are concerned, Japan is facing serious financial problems, due to the fact that she has pursued a policy of liquidating her loans contracted because of the earthquake of 1923. These loans are about all taken up and an armament race at this time would again result in financial distress.

Britain's Demands High.

W. C. Bridgeman, head of the British delegation told newspaper men today that the very lowest Britain would go in its cruiser demands is 590,000 tons, as compared with the 400,000 tons which the United States has set as the extreme limit for such ships.

Washington Sees Smash-Up.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The Geneva naval conference is dangerously near the rocks.

This ouch was candidly admitted today in official quarters here, although the admission was tempered by the remark of one state department official that "there is still reason to be hopeful that an agreement may be reached."

Seemingly, however, only a backdown by Great Britain in her demand for approximately 600,000 tons of cruiser strength can save the conference. For it was emphasized here that this government will under no circumstances sign an agreement at Geneva which will establish a 600,000 ton cruiser ratio for the United States and Great Britain. This is twice the maximum tonnage proposed by the American government at the outset of the conference, and, in the opinion of administration officials, would devitalize the whole American program.

Believe It Unprofitable.

Naval experts and air experts have advised the government that only a limited number of cruisers will be advantageous and that besides the danger from the air the question of destroyers and submarines should be taken up seriously instead of devoting all the time to the question of cruisers.

It is thought that the question of cruisers will eventually be abandoned at Geneva and that the delegations, to save the faces of their various governments, will agree to some sort of meaningless agreement confined to destroyers and submarines. Gibson's proposal at Geneva for 300,000 tons is said to have been made without the consent of the United States government in the nature of a "feeler" and is in no sense to be taken as official.

Proposition to Cover Federal Reserve Heads With Judicial Dignity

WASHINGTON, July 6. (FP).—Efforts to invest the Federal Reserve Board with the sacrosanct dignity and authority of the supreme court are seen in the bill sponsored by Senator Thomas, Democrat, Oklahoma. He proposes $25,000 salaries, indefinite tenure of office and elevation of board members in prestige to the level of the president and supreme court justices.

"In the scheme of the American government," says Thomas, "the board is more important to the individual American than all of the other functions of the three divisions of government —the legislative, executive and judicial. I believe the board is the most important government establishment in the world. An appointment to the board should be coveted by the greatest of American financiers.

Lindbergh to be Used by U. S. War Lords For An Airplane Tour of World

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh would like to lead a "good will" aerial tour of European countries, with army airplanes.

The Trans-atlantic pilot has just suggested such a venture.

The proposal coincides happily with the plan of the U. S. war department to use his spectacular flights as the basis of a gigantic preparedness campaign for the next war, the rumblings of which are already being heard.

Straton Got Much Cash for Articles Done by Secretary

Rev. Dr. John Roach Straton, noisy pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, apparently agrees with Henry Ford that it is always more convenient to hire someone to write newspaper articles.

Yesterday, Walter Soderstrom, who was Straton's secretary from 1925 to 1927, said that he had written a large number of syndicated articles which were merely signed by the pastor.

"Many of the checks which Straton received for my articles were for $2,000 and $3,000," Soderstrom stated.

Likes Klukers.

Johnston Now Head of Loco Engineers Union

CLEVELAND, (FP) July 6.—Present indications in the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers convention in Cleveland point to the re-election of Al Johnston as grand chief engineer. By abolishing the presidency, 2 vice-presidencies and the secretaryship, the convention has made the grand chief engineer head of all it's brotherhood activities as in the old days.

Johnston, as chief engineer under the 1924 reorganization which is now scrapped, was in charge only of the labor activities of the brotherhood and had 4 other officers senior to him.

To End R. R. Receivership.

WASHINGTON, July 6. Steps to end the receivership of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad, said to be one of the largest foreclosures in financial history, were taken today when the Interstate Commerce Commission began hearings on the application of the recently organized Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific to acquire the property.

Straton Suspends 500.

Rev. John Roach Straton, pastor of Calvary Baptist church here, has caused the suspension of approximately 500 members from the church's membership lists, his secretary, C. C. Fitch, said today.

Fitch explained that they were members from whom nothing had been heard for many years and that "it was just a matter of cleaning out the dead wood."

Chang Plans Seizure of Sino-Soviet Railroad

TOKYO, July 6.—The Japanese Government is making preparations to rush 4,000 additional troops to Shantung, it was learned today. Two thousand troops will be sent from Tsingtao to Tsinanfu, it is believed, and an equal number from Port Arthur.

The dispatch of additional troops to Shantung will arouse the greatest indignation among the Chinese, it is expected. The concentration of Japanese troops in Shantung several weeks ago resulted in the organization of an anti-Japanese boycott and widespread protests in the press and from the Wuhan Government.

Wuhan Leaders Waver.

MOSCOW, July 6. Organized workers and peasants are now attacking the Wuhan Government for its failure to dismiss right wing elements and for its refusal to arm the forces of the agrarian revolution, according to despatches from Hankow. The Pravda says:

"The National Government declines to paralyze the actions of the right wing generals and traitors and did nothing to liquidate the nest of internal counter-revolution. On the contrary while refusing to prevent the disarmament of the workers and refusing to mobilize the masses the Nationalist Government protects generals who are aiming at the counter-revolution. Such a policy of the Nationalist Government means the elimination of Wuhan.

N. Y. WORKERS DOWN TOOLS TODAY AT 4 P. M. FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI

500,000 Organized Workers Back Hour Strike Demonstration at Union Square

Today at 4 o'clock New York workers will demonstrate precisely what they think of the attempt to railroad Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti to the electric chair at the Massachusetts state prison, Charlestown, during the week of August 10.

At that time hundreds of machines will stop, and Union Square, where a huge protest demonstration on behalf of the framed-up workers will be held, will rapidly be filled with those who for seven years have been fighting to stay the hand of the Massachusetts executioner.

Thousands Will Join.

Arranged by the Sacco Vanzetti Emergency Committee the Union Square meeting promises to be one of the most impressive in the history of labor in this city. Confident of the response to the strike call and the demonstration, the committee has also arranged for over flow meetings at Cooper Union and Webster Hall where the speakers at the seven years of persecution of Sacco and Vanzetti will be related to those who will point out the class nature of the Massachusetts crime.

Labor Behind Protest.

In view of important unions in the city declared that the one hour strike to be one of the largest demonstrations ever held here today in the Sacco Vanzetti case, the Emergency Committee feels that the great danger that the ruling class of the United States may succeed in their threat to execute the workers who have been persecuted for their activities on behalf of the labor movement.

Recent Removal.

The unexpected and brutal transfer of Sacco and Vanzetti from the county jail at Dedham to the state prison at Charlestown where the death house is located has heightened the efforts on the part of workers everywhere who realize that unless the solidarity of labor is demonstrated in the most effective manner the Massachusetts legal oligarchy may yet make good their threat to kill the two framed-up radicals.

Ben Gold, manager of the Joint Board of the Furriers' Union, said:

Lively Program Is Expected at Phila Picnic on Saturday

PHILADELPHIA, July 6.—Hundreds of Philadelphia workers here will greet each other Saturday when they attend the annual picnic at Maple Grove park.

Arranged under the joint auspices of the Workers (Communist) Party, Young Workers' League, the Proletkult, and the DAILY WORKER, the affair will be the gathering point for those who like to participate in field games, listen to a speech by Albert Weisbord, and join in a hot dog feast.

Prizes for various competitions in the field events will be awarded, it is announced.

Directions: Take No. 5 eastline, and get off at Olney Ave.

British Work Up Strife Between Moslem, Hindu

LAHORE, India, July 6.—British authorities here are tacitly encouraging a revivalist movement among Moslem fanatics, directed against the Hindus.

Needle Trade Defense

There are now less than two weeks left to the Coney Island Stadium Concert which will take place on Saturday evening, July 16th. This concert will prove to be a great demonstration against gangsterism, Sigmanism, McGradyism and the Forward in the ranks of the working class movement, in addition it must be made an expression of the workers against the persecution of the arrested furrier pickets.

Many thousands of tickets are being sold. It is beginning to look as though the spacious Stadium will be packed on the night of July 16th and hundreds of workers turned away. Buy your tickets immediately and assure yourself of a seat. If you have not provided yourself in advance, you will be compelled to stand in line and if the Stadium is filled, you take a chance of not getting in. Tickets are $1.00 for general admission and $2.00 for reserved seats. They can be bought at the Joint Defense Office, 41 Union Square, Room 714; Joseph Lidsky Book Store, 202 East Broadway; Sazer's Restaurant, 78 Second Avenue; Health Food Vegetarian Restaurant, 1690 Madison Avenue; Sollin's Restaurant, 222 E. 14th Street; J. What Will Be the Answer?

In one day 170 workers were arrested and sentenced to jail for terms ranging from 15 days to 8 months, for picketing. This arbitrary action on the part of the Courts shows clearly the true character of capitalist justice. In the face of the decision by the Supreme Court made several weeks ago, legalizing picketing, they take this action relying upon it to break the strike after which the Supreme Court will again give a decision. The pickets are being jailed simply because they are faithful to the working class movement. The Joint Defense Committee is compelled to raise ever larger sums of money with which to defend the arrested workers and to free those who were brutally sentenced to six and eight months imprisonment for picketing. The working class movement must rally more than ever around the Defense Committee. Everything must be done to stop the shameful attacks on the furrier pickets. Has every worker bought at least a $10 Roll for the Furriers Strike Fund? Send your money immediately to the Furriers Relief Committee, 41 Union Square, Room 714 New York City.

union. Nearly 2000 miners employed by this company in the Pittsburgh district were locked out April 1st, along with the rest of the union men in the central competitive field.

The company is having little success in its attempt to operate its mines at Coverdale and Castle Shannon with strikebreakers. At Coverdale only 4 men out of 800 went back at the company's terms. And of every load of strikebreakers shipped in large numbers go away when they learn there is a strike.

Stop Water and Light

The company has been making desperate efforts to break the spirit of the men. At Castle Shannon it has turned the water supply off, so that the strikers must carry water nearly a mile. At Coverdale it has turned off the electricity so that the strikers must use oil lamps. At both places the company is evicting families from their houses, but not so many as it intended. The union's legal battle has halted many of the evictions.

Last week six families happened to be away from home for a few days, and on their return found that the company had taken advantage of their absence to break into their houses and throw out all their furniture. These families have not been able to recover their clothes, much less their furniture.

Foiled in its move to drive the miners out by evictions the company announced that it could not be stopped from carrying away its own property. So it had the roofs of six houses torn off, exposing the women and children to wind and rain.

Yesterday when I attempted to see a friend at Coverdale I was forced away by deputy sheriffs, and coal and iron police, as no outsiders, except friends of the strikebreakers, are allowed to enter.

Despite all the company's moves the strikers are as determined as ever.

CLARKSVILLE, Arkansas, July 6.—Evidence accumulates to connect the biggest bank here with the explosion of a tear gas bomb in a crowd of miners and miners wives listening to a speaker here recently.

The miners are on strike thruout District 21 of the United Mine Workers of America against a drive to destroy their union and institute the open shop, the horrors of which all old miners remember.

A meeting of miners and miners' families was listening to an address in favor of unionism by Covington Hall of Commonwealth College, when a bomb exploded. Of the same type as those in the stock recently purchased by the largest bank here was thrown into the audience. Pandemonium resulted. In the group of women and little children. No one was injured by fragments, but the children shrieked with pain as the tear gas temporarily blinded them. Indignation runs high.

New York Workers Down Tools Today For Sacco and Vanzetti

"The fur workers will be out en masse to show their strength to the enemies of labor who would railroad our two comrades to the electric chair. Sacco and Vanzetti must be freed."

"Today it is Sacco and Vanzetti, tomorrow it will be anyone who dares oppose the reigning capitalist class," declared Pascal Cregorio, organizer for the Amalgamated Food Workers Union. "On behalf of our union I pledge its support to the one hour strike and mass demonstration today. Let us hope that the New York workers will show militant labor thruout the world that we are in the fight to effect the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti."

Crime To Working Class.

Louis Hymar, manager of the Joint Board of the cloak and dress makers union, urged: "Every man and woman of the working class should rally to the defense of Sacco and Vanzetti. Down tools at 4 o'clock and go to Union Square to demonstrate labor's condemnation of this latest capitalistic outrage in the series of crimes."

Characterizing the case as "one of the most infamous frameups in the annals of working class history," A. Rosenfeld, secretary of the Arbeiter Ring, Branch 169, and Stockholm Workers' Home, promised the same demonstrations support in connection with the strike.

Hyman Lesser of the Workers' Protective Union also pledged the support of his organization, a committee of which has been elected to report.

Reprieve 50,000

Thirty unions with a combined membership of half a million workers are behind the one hour strike and demonstration today. Included among the organizations are the Amalgamated Metal Workers of America, Typographical Union, Local 6, Brotherhood Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers, Paper Box Makers' Union, Joint Board of the Furriers' Union, Amalgamated Food Workers' Union, Joint Board of the Cloak and Dress makers' Union, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, United Textile Workers, Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, and others.

Fraternal and political organizations include the Anti-Fascist Alliance of North America, Finnish Cooperative Trading Association, International Labor Defense, and Council for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers, United Council of Working-class Housewives, Workers Communist Party, Young Workers League, and others.

Included among the speakers at the Union Square, Cooper Union and Webster Hall demonstrations are Clarence Darrow, Upton Sinclair, William G. Thompson, counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti; Archaus Giovannitti, Forrest Bailey, Congressman F. H. La Guardia, and others.

Sentence Is on April 9.

The attorney in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti by Judge Webster Thayer on April 9 was the technical climax of seven years of agitation on behalf of the two men by international labor everywhere.

Vanzetti's Speech.

Never did a capitalist judge listen to such contemptuous, searing and pitifully ironic speech as that made by Vanzetti, an "unlettered" worker as Thayer heard that morning in the Dedham court. That speech is conceded one of the most eloquent in the history of the labor movement. Clearly and directly he explained the class basis of the verdict against himself and Sacco and defied the forces of capitalist reaction and cowardice to take his life as vengeance for activity in the cause of labor.

The sentence followed the denial of the seventh motion of defense lawyers to obtain a new trial for Sacco and Vanzetti. The last motion was based upon two sets of evidence.

First a confession by Celestino Madeiros, a convicted murderer, that he was a member of the payroll robbery gang for whose crime the two radicals were convicted, and that neither Sacco nor Vanzetti took part in that crime.

Second, affidavits by two department of justice officials employed in Boston at the time of the arrest and conviction of the two workers to the effect that the federal authorities were working hand in hand with the Dedham attorneys' office to "get" them as one way of ridding themselves of two "reds."

Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti were arrested on May 5, 1920, nearly seven years ago. Their conviction a year later elicited no international working class protest which prevented their electrocution until Death in the electric chair is the only possible penalty under the Massachusetts law for the crime on which Sacco and Vanzetti were framed.

Upon their arrest these two workers, who were active in the New England radical movement, assumed that they were part of the government's "catch" in the general roundup of reds then in progress under Attorney-General Palmer. Not until days later did they learn that they were being prepared for a speedy indictment on a special charge. Their trial, at Dedham, Mass., attracted world-wide attention. It was conducted in an atmosphere of hatred and prejudice against foreigners and radicals.

Flimsy Evidence Produced.

The accusation against them specifically was that they had taken part in a payroll robbery at South Braintree on April 15, in which two of the payroll guards were killed. The only specified direct evidence against Sacco and Vanzetti were a number of "identifications." These were palpably weak and lying, but they were supported by indirect evidence—to the effect that upon their arrest and subsequently the prisoners showed "consciousness of guilt." The jury refused to accept the explanation that the guilt of which they were conscious was that of being reds, the "crime" of which they thought themselves accused.

Motions Foe New Trials.

The first motion for a retrial argued in October, 1921 was based on the claim that the verdict was not in accord with the evidence. It was denied.

The second motion for a new trial was based on testimony of one named Louis Pelzer. Prior to the trial, according to the defense's affidavits, Pelzer said he witnessed the shooting of the paymaster and his guard but that he was too far away to take in the exact situation. On the witness stand, however, he made a "positive" identification of Sacco as one of the bandits. Four months later he signed an affidavit saying that his original statement was true, and that the testimony he gave at the trial was untrue and that he gave it because he was coerced by the district attorney. This motion was also denied.

The defense, in its third motion for a new trial produced affidavits to show that Charles E. Goodridge, one of the prosecution's important witnesses, had a criminal record in several states.

Witnesses Coerced.

The fourth motion for retrial was concerned with the testimony of Lola E. Andrews. According to affidavits submitted by the defense, Mrs. Andrews was interviewed by them five months before the trial. She said she did not see Sacco, and her description of the man she saw was not that of Sacco, according to the defense. "He is not the man," she said when shown photographs of Sacco. Next day she made a positive identification of Sacco at the trial.

In an affidavit sworn by Mrs. Andrews nine months after the trial she declared that her original statement before trial was true, and that her trial testimony was untrue and had been given under the coercion and intimidation of the district attorney's office.

The fifth motion for a new trial was concerned with the exceedingly interesting gun-and-bullet testimony. The commonwealth held that the bullet found in the body of one of the slain men was fired from Sacco's pistol. Two gun experts—but the defense said it was not.

Last Plea Denied.

The last plea for a new trial was based upon two sets of evidence first, a confession by Celestino Madeiros, a convicted murderer, that he was a member of the payroll robbery gang for whose crime the two radicals were convicted, and that neither Sacco nor Vanzetti took part in that crime; secondly, affidavits by two department of justice officials employed in Boston at the time of the arrest and conviction of the two workers to the effect that the federal authorities were working hand in hand with the district attorney's office to "get" Sacco and Vanzetti, for their radical activities.

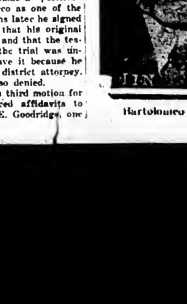
Rarely has the vital importance of international solidarity of the working class been so decisively shown as in the world campaign in defense of Sacco and Vanzetti. Through the activities of the International Labor Defense, thousands of meetings were held throughout the United States in protest against the official lynchings of the two radical workers.



Workers of World Protest.

Not only the workers of this country, but those of Latin-America and Europe, by their tireless work in behalf of the two defendants, placed a wall between them and the death chair of the commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Mass meetings have been held in every large city in the United States, and in New York City alone some 18,000 workers came to the Madison Square Garden to protest against the proposed assassination. Hundreds of leaflets were distributed by the International Labor Defence, Posters, buttons, articles for the press, The Labor Defender, the organ of the I. L. D., and every means of publicity and agi-

U. S. Ruling Class Had Prosperity In 1925, Report Says

(By Federated Press.)

WASHINGTON, (FP), July 6.—America's owning class basked in the golden sun beams of 1925's prosperity as in no other year in history, income tax returns for 1925, released today by the Bureau of Internal Revenue indicate.

The number of owners acknowledging taxable annual incomes of $1,000,000 and over tripled to 207 over the 1924 figure of 75. These figures exceed even the wild war baby profiteers days of 1916. Corporations also experienced their greatest year since the El Dorado of 1916. They reported profits of $5,500,000,000, a clear two billion jump over 1921.

Although manufacturers and public utility stockholders reported softest velvet in their cushions of prosperity, the financial interests rang the bell for the greatest absolute gains. Banking, insurance and related business reported profits of $1,200,000,000, a 50 per cent increase over the preceding year.

Wealth Concentration.

Two tendencies, toward the concentration of wealth and also its wider distribution among the middle classes, are shown in the tax reports. One per cent of those taxed made 50 per cent of the total. But more than 800,000 persons reported net incomes between $5,000 and $50,000, a substantial increase over any previous year and in striking contrast to the total of but 200,000 in 1914.

The invaluable services rendered to the owning classes by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, blueprint of the republican regime, is nowhere better attested than in the rates of taxation on the wealthy class reporting incomes of more than $1,000,000 a year. Mellon is a member of this class. In 1925 they were taxed only 15 per cent of their reported income, against 20 per cent in 1924, 35 per cent in 1922 and 62 per cent in 1921, the year Mellon went into office. Their rate of taxation is now near the 1916 pre-war level.

Cure Boy By Radio.

LOS ANGELES, July 6.—Treatment of an eight-year-old boy, dangerously ill on a tramp steamer, 1500 miles at sea, through a doctor's instructions sent by radio may add another triumph for science over disease.

An "SOS" message from the steamer Nora, 1500 miles south of Wilmington, on the California coast, telling of the lad's distress and asking for medical advice, was picked up by a radio operator and relayed here.

The stricken lad was said to be suffering from a grave intestinal disorder.

Radio communication was utilized in the campaign The Sacco-Vanzetti Conference, into which hundreds of thousands of workers were organized, made the names of the two Italian workers the symbol of solidarity and united efforts.

Protest Meetings in Europe.

In Europe the campaign has received the greatest support from Germany, Italy, Soviet Russia, and England. The International Class War Prisoners' Aid (the British counterpart of the I. L. D.) did some remarkable work in agitating for Sacco and Vanzetti, and literally hundreds of local labor organizations throughout England were listed by the I. C. W. P. A. as having adopted protest resolutions.

In Italy, despite the bloody reign of the fascisti, meetings have been held wherever possible to protest against the conviction of the two radicals. Demonstrations were also held in front of the American embassies in Paris, Sofia, Lisbon, Buenos Aires, Berlin, Montevideo, and Mexico.

In the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, literally millions of workers and peasants have recorded their protest against the verdict.

Report Fascist Split; Mussolini Robbed Own Sheet, States Tribune

Fascism in Italy is threatened not only by the discontent of under-paid workers and the half-starved peasantry but by a wide split in the ranks of the fascisti themselves. Despite the iron-clad censorship which Mussolini exercises, news of violent disputes within the fascist ranks is gradually seeping out.

Yesterday the New York Herald-Tribune carried a first page article, smuggled mysteriously past the fascist censor, describing the fascist split. The fact that the Herald-Tribune has consistently and fervently been a booster of the fascist dictatorship lends added interest to the article.

A startling disclosure made in the story is that Mussolini, as editor of "Il Popolo d'Italia," which was raising funds for the jingoist march on Fiume, appropriated 300,000 lire from the fund for personal use.

New Light On Imperialist Plots Against the USSR

LONDON, July 6.—Further light is thrown on the activities of Sydney Reilly, British spy and counter-revolutionary agent of Churchill and Lockhart who was recently executed by the U. S. S. R. for high treason, in a pamphlet published by Rene Marchand in 1919, entitled "Why I support Bolshevism".

Marchand, a conservative journalist at that time, was the Moscow correspondent of one of the most reactionary Paris newspapers, — the "Figaro". There is a descriptive passage in this pamphlet, concerning Reilly, which leaves no room for doubt as to the character of this blackguard imperialist agent who would stop at nothing, murder, arson or the deliberate starving of Russian workers and their children, for the chance of strangling the proletarian state and reinstating the murderous regime of imperialist capitalist exploitation in Russia. Marchand says:

"At the end of August a meeting was held at the American Consulate-General, now flying the Swedish flag. . . . No doubt the meeting of which I speak was not official. It rather resembled a private conversation. But nothing can detract from the significance of the fact that in the presence of the official representatives of the United States and of France, in the presence of the Consuls-General Poole and Grenard.

"A British officer, without interruption, and therefore without the smallest expression of disapproval from the consuls, talking loudly, though in a sort of aside, with a French agent, gave a detailed exposition of a plan for blowing up a bridge by which, just before the station of Zvanka, the railway crosses the river Volkhoff. The extraordinary commission subsequently identified the officer in question as Lieutenant Reilly.

"A peculiar significant fact is that Reilly was far from attempting to conceal the gravity of the consequences that would result from the successful carrying out of his scheme. In the coolest possible way he explained that the destruction of this bridge would cut off Petrograd from communication, not only from the north, but also with the east by the Volonda-Vintka line.

"By this line alone Petrograd received the greater part of its food, and the supply was already insufficient for the population.

"Reilly ended by pointing out that the blowing up of the bridge would immediately result in an absolute famine for Petrograd.

To Starve Workers.

"Those who would be starved would not be the fortunate minority of rich bourgeois, who would always be able to make their way southward. The sufferers would be, chiefly or exclusively, the manual workers, employees in the lower grades, women, children and old men. But this terrible prospect caused no uneasiness to Reilly, who continued to discuss the details of his scheme. Not for a moment, either, did it disturb the equanimity of Pool or Grenard, to whom the plan, it seemed, was no novelty.

"The French agent to whom Lieutenant Reilly was speaking was M. de Vertamond. At an earlier date he had been introduced to me in the French consulate, by Mr. Grenard, who informed me that he was a French naval officer engaged in "destructive work" in the Ukraine.

Tory War on USSR in Afghan Mask to Drive Out Soviet Officials

MOSCOW, July 6.—The unofficial tory war against the Soviet Union is being carried on in Afghanistan as well as in Europe and the Far East.

The USSR Military Attache in Afghanistan recently reported to the foreign department of the war council that the Afghan government was proposing to request the Soviet Union to recall from Kabul, the Soviet aviation fleet and broadcasting station, and its members.

The action of the Afghan government is attributed by the Soviet Attaché to British influence.

"At the meeting in the American Consulate-General M. de Vertamond did not, in point of cynicism, allow himself to be outdistanced by Lieutenant Reilly.

"The French officer declared that he had already attempted to blow up the Cherepovets bridge. Had he been successful, the consequences would have been no less appalling than those which would have followed the successful carrying-out of Reilly's scheme; for the Cherepovets bridge is essential to the Zvanka-Vologda-Vintka line.

"Finally, M. de Vertamond referred in considerable detail to his plans for the destruction of rolling stock and for the blocking of the main lines of railway. . . . Let me reiterate that this astounding conversation aroused absolutely no protest either from Mr. Poole or M. Grenard.

"At its close, Lieutenant Reilly, addressing M. de Vertamond, said that there ought to be a division of labour between them. They must, said Reilly, keep constantly in touch, but communications between them required caution.

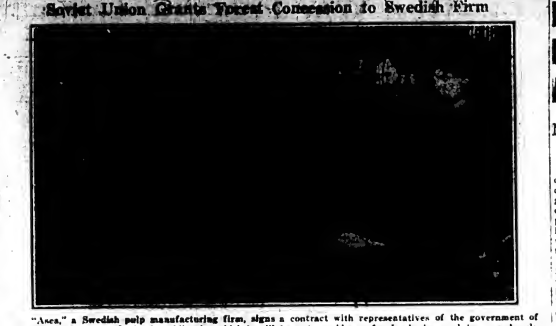
"Women would be the best intermediaries, being much less open to suspicion than men".

"For his own part, added the Lieutenant, he felt perfectly safe, for he was working under an assumed name 'in a Soviet institution'".

Anti-Soviet Plottings.

Captain Jacques Sadoul, a member, at that same period, of the French Military Mission in Moscow, who later became a Communist, bequeathes another illuminating item in an entry made in his diary on July 26, 1918:

"In the interior of Russia, our counter-revolutionary manoeuvres multiply with unbelievable cynicism. Not a White Guard taken prisoner, not a counter-revolutionary arrested, no Anglo-French gold is found on them, or documents establish his cooperation with our agents."



Capitalists Stop At Nothing.

In its panic over the growing peaceful development and internal stability of the U. S. S. R., international imperialism, led by the arch-plunderers of Britain, has again had recourse to the Russian White Guards: the parasite nobles, the bankers and factory owners, the mercenary officers, the prostitutes, criminals, and degenerates of Russian whom the workers and peasants flung out of Russia in 1917. Rykoff quotes a report of Ukrainian 'Whites' which states that destructive work by the White elements must precede any attack from the outside. Hence the assassination of Voikov, the murder of workers in a Leningrad club, the derailing of trains at the Soviet frontier, the burning of buildings, oil stores, factories, etc.

The Soviet government has pursued a consistent police of peace; but it will not tolerate the crimes of traitors sold to foreign imperialism.

The White Russian Socialist Soviet Republic

By GEORGE GRIGORIEV.

For a long time past, from the times of the czarist and Pan (Pan-Polish noble) yoke, White Russia was called the country of Lapatsonu. A Lapatson is a White Russian peasant who for centuries worked for the Pan, wore lapti (shoes made from the bark of a tree) and lived under a straw roof. This name was given to the White Russian peasant by the Polish magnates.

The Lapatson has thrown off the Pan yoke, the Lapatson is already discarding the lapti and is beginning to wear boots. The Lapatson is substituting the roof made of straw by a thatched or iron roof.

This is what the October Revolution has done for the Lapatson. Soviet White Russia has given the world wonderful examples of state, cultural, economic and national renaissance.

The Republic of Many Languages.

In Soviet White Russia there are four state languages, all of them with the same rights.

There are over 50 national, village and local Soviets which are as many small autonomous brother "republics."

There are national—Latvian, Polish, Jewish—courts of justice, national peoples' palaces, and village reading rooms—to every nation its own—and no national antagonism whatever.

In Seltsy, in the Mogilev district a Jewish national Soviet was elected. Eighty per cent of the Seltsy population are Jewish peasants and 20 per cent White Russian peasants. The White Russians got alarmed and protested: We will not form part of the Jewish village Soviet, we will join the adjoining White Russian soviet. But the dispute was not of long duration. An agreement was arrived at very quickly and voting proceeded in a friendly manner Jews voted for White Russians and vice versa. Six Jews and five White Russians were elected to the Jewish village soviet. One of the White Russian speaks Jewish and he is sure to become vice-chairman of the Jewish village soviet.

Jewish Schools.

In Dubrovna, a Jewish settlement, there are two schools with seven years' course: a White Russian and a Jewish, side by side in an adjoining park. In the Jewish school ten of the pupils are children of White Russian peasants. The White Russian peasants of Dubrovna found it advisable to send their children to the Jewish school.

The Lithuanian and Latvian villages have their own national schools which are, however, attended also by children of White Russian peasants.

In there in Kovno (capital of Fascist Lithuania) an association of Lithuanian proletarian poets and writers! Certainly not. But in Minsk such an association exists and—a strange coincidence—it sprung up during the days when the Lithuanian Fascists in Kovno were mercilessly shooting down the leaders of the Lithuanian proletariat.

Such is Soviet White Russia, the republic of "Lapatsons and Serfs," the former slaves of the Polish magnates and czarist generals.

Revolution In Marsh.

Soviet White Russia has 1,650,000 dessiatins of marsh land. This constitutes nearly 20 per cent of the total territorial area of the country. Shortage of land and agrarian over-population, together with the marshes, are throttling peasant farming. The marshes make work very difficult, cutting off whole villages from the outside world during several months.

In 1921, 13 peasant reclaiming associations began draining the first dessiatins of marsh land. In 1927, 600 reclaiming associations are draining over 50,000 dessiatins. An army 25,000 strong armed with spades, hatchets and buckets is digging ditches, making canals and doing drainage work. Considering that in the course of six years the number of reclaiming associations increased nearly 50 times, one can feel assured that the time is not far distant when the 1,650,000 dessiatins of marsh land will become fertile land, and when 300,000 new peasant farms will spring up in White Russia possessing on an average eight dessiatins of land each.

Fuel Wealth.

What can marsh land produce? Here are the harvests on the drained marsh land: In the "October" reclaiming association of the Bobruisk district the highest was: Oats 170 poods, barley 110 poods, millet 120 poods per dessiatin. In Berezovaya Kladka, of the Kalinin district the first ploughing of the wild marsh land yielded 100 poods of oats and 190 poods of millet per despiatin. Never before has White Russia experienced such harvests! Following in the footsteps of the reclaiming associations, there spring up like mushrooms machinery, seed, dairy, fire-proof building and peat using factories.

There are huge deposits of peat in the marshes, over 7 milliard cubic metres, enormous fuel wealth guaranteeing to the White Russian industry cheap fuel for hundreds of years.

Strange Legends.

The future of the White Russian peasantry lies in the marshes, partial salvation from landlessness and destitution, a sphere of work for an enormous surplus of human energy. Strange legends were told about the marshes; they were supposed to be inhabited by devils, the marshes infected the population with "marsh" fever. Now legends are told by the White Russian villages about the marshes which are kept in subjection by the hand of man, on which steel oxen march to and fro, which yield miraculous harvests.

Past and Present.

White Russia has always been a country of home industries. It had very few factories and works and also very few skilled workers.

At present this little Jewish locality is gradually dying. The local Jews are looking for new sources of existence, they go to the factories and are on the land. At present 40,000 Jews are working on the land, have become cultured peasants, for out of the 360 agricultural collective farms in White Russia, 126 are Jewish, provided with tractors, modern machinery and are model farms. They come from the adjoining villages to the Jewish peasants, White Russian peasants, who, as of old, keep to the three-crop system. They come to see and learn, to adopt what is useful. In the Borisov district the young peasants have decided that it would be a good thing to establish White-Russian-Jewish mixed villages.

Jewish Center.

Dubrovna is a peculiar patriarchal Jewish labor center. For decades Jewish workers bent their backs over primitive looms, manufacturing "talesim" (special garments which Jews put on when they pray). Two rubles a week were the earnings on which the workers did not live but vegetated in semi-starvation, losing their eyesight at the loom on which the thin silk thread was transformed into a holy shroud. Out of hundreds of workers thus employed, only a few have remained. Who stands in need of such shrouds now?

Textile Workers.

But there is in Dubrovna, side by side with the dying out talesim industry, a big textile factory. The founder of it was Baron Hirsch. At present it is the Soviet Dubrovna textile factory which produces material for the peasants. The Jewish textile workers are experienced skilled workers, model Jewish proletarians. In Soviet White Russia industry is developing, new factories are being built and the old factories are again put into working order. From the dying out little self-employed, from shops and private jobs Jews throw themselves into new enterprises "non-working" elements now enter upon a new life of labor.

Towards Light and Culture.

A curious phenomenon is witnessed at present at the Soviet elections in the villages. Peasant men and women living beyond the demand for schools with a seven-years' course. The thirst for knowledge and study has taken such a stronghold of the rural population that schools with a four years' course no longer satisfy.

More Schools.

There are at present in White Russia 264 schools with a seven years' course and 1,000 schools with a four years' course. But this does not satisfy the rural population. It demands more and more schools with a seven years' course, including agricultural school.

There are at present four universities in White Russia—the University in Minsk, the Agricultural Academy in Gorki, the Veterinary Institute in Vitebsk, and the Communist University in Minsk, with 4,866 students, including 42 per cent peasants and 20 per cent working class elements who are preparing themselves for work among the toilers of White Russia. The 688 pedagogues, lawyers, economists and practitioners, who graduated from White Russian universities, are already scattered throughout White Russia. Three workers' faculties, 24 polytechnics, and 30 trade schools provide cadres of fully trained workers.

No Illiteracy.

270 village reading rooms, 95 people's palaces, 50 clubs, 400 centres for the liquidation of illiteracy, 12 peasant homes, 8 educational institutes, 35 schools for adult and adolescent workers, three White Russian theatres and one Jewish—such are the cultural and educational centres of White Russia.

The institute of White Russian culture, the "Genin" scientific research agricultural institute, the state library, a book repository, constitute the sound basis for the development of scientific thought in White Russia.

An overwhelming majority of the White Russian intelligentsia has recognized the October Revolution, has returned from the countries which it had emigrated, and promotes now culture and education in Soviet White Russia.

And all this taken together constitute the White Russian S. S. R.

Grocery Grafter Caught.

DETROIT, Mich., July 6.—John Grafino, 52, said to be the last of 13 men sought in connection with the collapse of the International Wholesale Grocery Company two years ago was held by the department of justice agents today. Grafino is alleged to have concealed assets of the bankrupt Economy Wholesale Grocery Company in 1919.

LIBERALS HIT AT U. S. IMPERIALISM; ASK FREE SPEECH

Nicaraguan Liberal to Address Conference

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Secretary of the Navy Curtis D. Wilbur, today drew upon himself the ire of delegates attending the anti-imperialism conference called here by the Peoples Reconstruction League by refusing to attend on the ground that it was called "to promote hostility to the American Government."

A letter of invitation to the Navy Secretary to speak and Wilbur's reply were made public without comment, but it was indicated that some of the liberal leaders would discuss the incident tonight.

Civic Rights Suppressed.

The two-day conference has for its general subject: "How civil rights have been suppressed to further American imperialism." Wilbur was asked to speak on the use of marines abroad to protect American lives and property. In replying he said:

"It is obvious that the purpose of this meeting is to promote hostility to the United States Government and I have no desire to participate in such a conference."

Vaca to Speak.

Speakers on the program include Morris L. Ernst, Charles E. Rowe, and Arthur Garfield Hayes of New York; Miss Esther Van Slyke of the Women's Peace Union; Norman Thomas, Director of the League for Industrial Democracy; Dr. Albert H. Putney, National University Law School, Washington; Dr. T. S. Vaca, representative of Nicaraguan liberals and Joseph N. Bejarano, secretary of the Mexican Chamber of Commerce.

Ask Investigation of Imperialism.

John Lauck, League treasurer, presiding at the opening session, called for an investigation by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee of American concessions abroad.

Assailing the allocation of radio wave lengths, Morris L. Ernst declared that "censorship of the press to the extent of the present censorship of the air would create a rebellion."

Ernst charged that liberal speakers cannot get time on the programs of high-powered stations.

Radio Restrictions.

"Control of the air means control of thought," he asserted. "The political significance of this censorship is very great as the party in office will have greater power to perpetuate itself. The present commission does pretty well with a hard job under a rotten law which is full of jokers. The law needs revision as to non-discrimination against minority parties, control over assignments of licenses, trading in licenses and trust features."

Wavering Wuhan Heads Scored for Treason

follow the path pointed out by the Chinese Communists and the Communist Internationale.

"These actions have been directed not to hastening the agrarian revolution, but its suppression. Such compromise must be considered treason."

Hit At Tang Pin-hsiang.

Referring to the diplomatic "leave of absence" to which Tang Pin-hsiang, Communist Minister of Agriculture in the Wuhan Government was granted leave of absence that he requested for reasons of "health."

In his request for a leave of absence, Tang says "The political situation is so serious that I cannot bear the responsibility for directing the peasant movement in the correct manner."

According to certain information Tang's statement was made with the agreement of the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party.

Chang Plans Soviet Raid.

PEKING, July 6.—Chang Tso-lin, Manchurian war lord, who raided the Soviet embassy compound at Peking several months ago, is planning the confiscation of the Chinese Eastern Railroad, which is owned jointly by China and the Soviet Union.

The proposed seizure of the Chinese Eastern is regarded both as a move on the part of Great Britain to goad the Soviet Union into war and a move on the part of Japan, which owns the South Manchurian railroad, the Chinese Eastern's chief competitor.

WAR With Cartoons

FRED ELLIS, the world famous labor cartoonist, has just been added to The DAILY WORKER forces, as a daily contributor to the paper. Readers of The DAILY WORKER will remember Comrade Ellis' powerful cartoons.

The addition of this noted artist to the staff of The DAILY WORKER gives us a weapon of the most formidable character.

The Reds rely to a large extent upon propaganda, to destroy the morale of the enemy and to win new recruits for the revolutionary cause. This holds true for Soviet Russia and China as well as capitalist America.

More powerful than any other propaganda is the appeal of the cartoon, with its simple, direct message.

The addition of this new, powerful weapon to our arsenal will make The DAILY WORKER even more dangerous to the capitalist class of America, than ever before.

Realizing the strength and power now behind it, The DAILY WORKER Army will step forward with new vigor in its march toward the goal of Five Thousand New Readers. The modern methods of warfare will be carried far into the enemy's territory.

On with the War —WITH CARTOONS.

Inaction Aids Reaction in China.

Instead of facing the dangers confronting the Wuhan government and the revolution by launching a terrific drive against all the reactionaries, spies and semi-spies it now becomes clear that even the most advanced of the responsible members of that government have succumbed to a defeatist policy—a policy of despair. After the defection of the Feng Yu-Hsiang, an eventuality easily to have been perceived, which left the revolutionary government without a powerful army, there was but one strategy possible: to immediately unleash the peasant revolution, to strive to incite mutiny among the widest possible forces of the liberal bourgeois counter-revolutionary forces of Feng Yu-Hsiang and Chiang Kai-shek as well as among the openly imperialist and feudal forces. Only by striving toward the armed uprising of the workers and peasants (who, if sufficiently aggressive would gain the support of the small bourgeoisie) can the revolution be saved from a disastrous set-back.

At the very moment when the most decisive action was demanded the nationalist nucleus of the government at Hankow debated with itself while the workers in the unions were being disarmed. While the forces of reaction were being armed they did nothing to prevent it. In other words they failed to disarm the reaction and arm the revolution. Even Tang Ping-siang, Communist minister of agriculture of the Wuhan government, adopted an inexcusable folded-arms policy and requested a long leave of absence on the ground that his health was poor.

Teng, in a statement on his resignation, asserted that the "political situation is so serious that I cannot bear responsibility for directing the peasant movement the correct way." If the political situation was such that he could no longer work with the government that is no excuse for yielding to panic.

When such situations arise Communists should proceed relentlessly to exterminate the last vestiges of counter-revolution among their associates in such a government and dominate it, or openly quit the thing and carry on the revolution under other forms through taking advantage of the tremendous mass discontent that has thus far been directed by Communists even while participating in the nationalist movement with elements that were bound, because of their social position, to leave the revolution at a certain stage compatible with their economic interests.

The Chinese revolution has entered upon a new stage, a stage in which the Communists, by pursuing a correct Leninist policy, will crystallize the mass movement into the labor and agrarian revolution against imperialism, its feudal agents and the miserable liberal bourgeoisie following Chiang and Feng into the camp of imperialism.

A United Front in Spite of the Yellow Socialists.

The magnificent demonstration in Philadelphia last Sunday in behalf of the movement for freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti was a splendid tribute to the effectiveness of united front policies followed by the Workers (Communist) Party and a staggering rebuke to those yellow socialists who tried in every way to sabotage the demonstration.

Fully 20,000 workers, representing labor unions, Italian labor and fraternal benefit organizations, and the Workers Party, Young Workers League and the International Labor Defense, paraded through the streets of Philadelphia, while thousands upon thousands lined the streets for blocks, cheering the demonstrators. The mass meeting on the Sesqui-Centennial grounds was one of the most inspiring yet held in this country to demand freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti.

The yellow socialists had no part in the demonstration. Neither did the union they try to dominate in Philadelphia, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. This yellow combination tried to sabotage the Sacco and Vanzetti agitation in that city by calling a conference at which they at first invited the Communists. The invitation was only a maneuver to get a chance to refuse to seat the Communists who always respond to invitations for joint action on the part of labor.

But the Philadelphia Communists did not abandon the idea of a united front demonstration just because the socialists, the Jewish Daily Forverd gang and the Amalgamated fakers tried to sabotage it. Instead the Communists approached the Italian organizations, then preparing for a demonstration. The Italians accepted, with the result that the Workers (Communist) Party mass meeting of Thursday evening was supported by Italian labor and fraternal organizations. The climax of the demonstrations came with the great parade and demonstration of Sunday, July 3. The socialists had cynically predicted that the demonstration would be a failure. But in spite of lowering clouds and threatened rain it surpassed anything staged in the Quaker City since pre-war days.

The success of the demonstration proves that effective united front work can be carried on without the yellow socialists and, if necessary, in spite of and against them.

Already reports indicate that the few workers that were with the socialist gang until last week have sworn to desert it and henceforth will devote their activities to supporting the policies and campaigns of the Workers (Communist) Party.

The united front tactic has such a fundamental appeal to intelligent workers that not all the dirty conspiracies and lies of the Socialist Party leaders can defeat it.

Mr. Frayne's Political Discourse

Hugh Frayne, who draws pay as organizer of the American Federation of Labor, but who has never been known to organize anything except assaults upon militant labor, came forth with a radio discourse upon the defunct and discredited political program of the A. F. of L. Repeating the familiar and dreary monolog about the condition of the American worker being above that of any other worker in the world he attributed this alleged prosperity to the fact that the A. F. of L. followed the policy of refusing to launch an independent labor party in the United States. Indulging in low bombast, Mr. Frayne asserted that the American labor movement has been more successful and made more progress than any other labor movement in the world.

It was safe for Frayne to indulge in such palpable falsehoods within the walls of a broadcasting station, but certainly even the most backward trade unionist among the highly-paid workers could refute him on this point. It is a matter of common knowledge that labor has been beating a steady retreat for a number of years and that many of the formerly most powerful unions are being wrecked by the open shoppers without and their agents of the type of Green, Woll, Lewis, Frayne within. The radio orator was careful not to attempt to give statistics of the membership of the labor unions and the extent of the spread of the non-union fields in the mining sections, nor to refer to his own union-wrecking activities in the needle trades situation in New York.

Furthermore Mr. Frayne only indulged in the most evasive generalities about the success of the "non-partisan" political policies of the A. F. of L. There is not one piece of legislation passed since the adoption of the non-partisan policy that has benefited labor; every piece of legislation that was hailed by the labor lieutenants of the capitalist class, such as the Clayton Act, as a victory for labor, was turned against labor with devastating effect.

But there no one can expect the agents of the employers in the ranks of labor to advocate a labor party, for the simple reason that such a party would force them to break their political ties that bind them definitely to the capitalist class. In New York Tammany Hall is the connecting link between the labor fakers and Wall Street. John L. Lewis, head of the miners' union, aligns himself with Andrew Mellon's republican machine, which directly connects him with the steel trust and the anthracite coal combination.

These creatures know that a labor party will force them openly to serve the master class they now secretly serve while posing as labor leaders, which is one more valid reason why the rank and file of labor should fight for the creation of such a party.

Toward a War Policy at Geneva

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

CHINA has dropped to the front again at Geneva.

The struggle at Geneva continues to develop along the main line already noted—open cleavage between British and American imperialist interests.

But on one point there is tacit agreement. It is that both nations need more war vessels. There is a great show of indignation by the American delegation at the British demand for 600,000 tons of cruisers. But Britain, having placed her figure for cruisers much higher than she expected to find agreement for, now signifies willingness to reduce it to 460,000 tons.

The American maximum was originally 300,000 tons, but there appears now a disposition of a part of the delegation at least to boost this to 400,000 tons, according to dispatches.

THIS would mean 40 cruisers apiece of 10,000 tons each—a juicy plum for the armament manufacturers of both nations.

On the question of the allotment of tonnage—the number and tonnage of the vessels which will make up the 400,000 tons—there will probably be no more formal agreement which will mean nothing and there is a possibility of the conference even failing to reach formal agreement.

But overshadowing the bickerings of the American and British representatives is the declaration made by the Chinese representative to the league of nations.

Speaking in the name of the Nationalist government—and not in the name of the fictional Peking government—the Chinese delegate served notice upon the conference that "the Government and people of China" would refuse to recognize as binding upon them any decisions or agreements dealing with China "arrived at by the present or any other conference in which China is not represented and participating equally in the deliberations."

ALTHO rather belated, there can be little doubt but that this is the reply of American imperialism to the Anglo-Japanese bloc which made brief appearance in the earlier days of the conference.

This conclusion seems the more plausible as we read carefully the interpretative and semi-official dispatches from Geneva. The New York Times correspondent says:

"Accompanying the foregoing declaration is an assertion to the effect that it is loaded not alone on rumors, but on facts tending to show a line-up of great powers against the United States, whose persistent attitude toward China, it is said, is now regarded as 'a nuisance' and also as 'a stumbling block' to the plans of both Great Britain and Japan."

In addition to the sensational statement of the Chinese representative there is also the fact that the Japanese delegation seems to have gone into temporary retirement—at least it is saying nothing at present in support of Great Britain.

AS we stated day before yesterday, the possibility of the recognition of the Nanking government by the United States is increasing. There are two principal reasons for this.

One, the fact that the Nanking government has convinced the American imperialists by its war upon the labor unions, the peasantry, left wing of the Kuomintang and the Communists, that it is willing to make huge concessions in return for recognition, that is, it is willing to become the slave driver for American capital.

Second, the events at Geneva have shown American imperialism that the most effective way of establishing hegemony over a substantial a part of China and hampering its two principal rivals, is by taking the counter-revolutionary Nanking government under its wing.

THE possibilities are stated here in their most simple terms while the situation is far from simple. But it is certain that there is being considered in the highest official American circles some such bold move to confound Great Britain and Japan.

Japan is in no position to openly join hands with Great Britain on a common Chinese program. To do so would mean to jeopardise her credit (huge Japanese loans have been made by the house of Morgan) and to add to her already bad reputation the odium which attaches to all things British in China. If in spite of the obvious dangers, Japan lines up with Great Britain, it will mean that a definite war policy will disclose itself in British, Japanese and American foreign offices.

THE openly sneering dispatches to a paper like the New York Times, long considered Anglophile, is further indication of the increasing tension. Its dispatch of July 4th for instance stated that the Geneva crowd at the celebration of Independence anniversary "laughed over the orchestra's rendition of 'It Ain't Gonna Rain No More,' which was considered a sly allusion to the British Navy."

To save our readers trouble we state that to understand this, one reads "rain" as "reign."

This unnecessary insult is typical of the recklessness with which a war atmosphere is being created around and by the Geneva conference, the struggle for control of the Chinese masses, and the enormously rich natural resources of their country.

TO make clear to the American masses the danger which they face from their ruling class and to arouse the American labor movement to action against the increasing menace of imperialist war is the main task of our party at the present time.

There is the equally pressing danger that the probability of a drive on the Soviet Union from the east is increased by recent developments and that on this program the three great imperialist nations could reach agreement.

Not since the organization of our party has there been a situation which demanded such clear thinking and energetic and effective action.

SPOILED BY WAR

The imperialist powers are preparing a new world war. Every inducement will be held out to the workers of every nation to rally to their flag and defend their future. The picture shows the future of the warriors.

Another Breach in the Line

By BERT MILLER.

A good general makes it his business to take a bird's-eye view of his battle front from time to time, so that he may secure the proper perspective of the entire battle area. This holds true also in the present struggle between the right and the left wing, a struggle which is in fact a fight for the most elementary and basic rights of the trade unions to organize, strike and picket. An observer close to the picture, and involved in the thick of the conflict, is apt to feel overawed by the combination of powerful forces against the left wing, i.e., the right wing, the A. F. of L. officialdom, the underworld, the police and the employers. But certain developments indicate that the ferocity of the attack against the left wing is to some extent an indication of the deepening differences and the weaknesses in the ranks of the opponents to the left wing, of the new wave of progressivism in the ranks of labor and the revival of the time-honored trade union fighting traditions which revival constitutes a new threat to the American employing class. This is exemplified by the recent fight on the floor of the New York Central Trades and Labor Council, in which the treacherous policy of Matthew Woll against the striking furriers was completely repudiated. It is exemplified anew by the ditching of William B. Prenter, $25,000 a year president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. These are the first warning drops of the new wave of progressivism, in the American labor movement, which will be born out of the new struggles against the capitalist attack on the trade union movement.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers has long been considered as being in the front ranks of the labor aristocracy, and therefore immune from any taint of progressivism. The removal of one of the most powerful bureaucrats of this organization is distinctly a milestone in the path of the march of the progressive element. The fact that the ousting of one of the most outstanding notorious "labor lieutenants of the capitalist class" comes at a time when the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers has decided to repudiate the attempt which was being prepared to place the control of the Brotherhood's banks in the hands of the Mitten interests, adds to its significance.

From these few indications there is reason to believe that beneath the stratified shell of the labor bureaucracy, which has been crushing the life and vigor of the American labor movement, there is slowly but surely gathering an upheaval of the most far-reaching proportions a progressive revolt under the pressure of the growing offensive of the American capitalist class. These indications are clear portents of the coming development of a broad, fighting left wing in the American labor movement in the not distant future.

Social Science Pub. to Give All Profits for Daily Worker Defense

Before liquidating the Social Science Publishers, the Executive Board at a meeting held Tuesday night voted to donate all of its surplus funds to The DAILY WORKER. The total, it is estimated, will exceed $400.

Social Science Publishers was organized for the publication and the distribution of books and pamphlets by Scott Nearing. Last fall its policy was altered to include the distribution of other revolutionary literature.

In the year and a half of its existence, Social Science Publishers sold and distributed close to a hundred thousand books, most of them by Scott Nearing.

DRAMA

Hampden to Open Season With "Enemy of the People"

"Allez Oop," a new revue, is scheduled to open Aug. 1, at the Earl Carroll Theatre. The book is by J. McEvoy, who was responsible for the clever and satirical "Americana" of last season, and the lyrics and music are by Leo Robin, Phil Charig and Richard Myers. Carl Hemmer, the producer, has engaged Helen Broderick for a principal role.

A new edition of "Merry-Go-Round" was introduced at the Klaw theatre Monday night. The Saturday matinees, discontinued a few weeks ago, are again being given.

"Ex-Officer," a new play by Samuel Spewack and Bella Cohen opens out-of-town August 1st, and in New York, a week later at one of the Chanin houses.

"Rang Tang" the new Negro revue, with Miller and Lyles starring, will opening next Tuesday night at the Royale theatre.

Walter Hampden may open his season in September with Ibsen's "An Enemy of the People." He is also planning a stage version of Joseph Conrad's novel "The Rescue."

Daily Worker Builders Of Oakland, Calif., Busy

OAKLAND, Calif.—On Sunday evening, June 25, there gathered here a noteworthy audience. The plutocrats, thirsty for the life of the most fearless English daily mouthpiece of the wage earners of this country, may well clamor for its death. The bosses and their lackeys may try to clamp the lid down upon the seething rebellion which they themselves bring about, but the "kettle" keeps on boiling, and boiling with greater and ever greater power—the lid won't stay put.

This gathering was not an overwhelming crowd. It was not a crowd come to be excited and amused, a crowd greedy for sensationalism, it was not a crowd that sees, listens, and soon forgets, but it was a crowd of workers who have been put to the acid test time and again, and found not wanting. It was a crowd of about 54 workers, but 54 workers who never tire of work, drudgery, or giving till it hurts. These 54 are always on the job, they never lag behind. On this evening, altho many of them are of the army of the unemployed, and the rest as poor as a wage earner can be, $70 was collected right on the spot for The DAILY WORKER.

Builders' Club.

Besides this collection, arrangements were made to organize a DAILY WORKER Builders' Club which is to cover the entire Alameda County. Good results are expected from The DAILY WORKER Builders' Club of Alameda County, for each member present at this gathering pledged to constitute himself, or herself, a brick in the building, and to bring another "brick" (which other brick will eventually bring in another) to the organization of The DAILY WORKER Builders' Club which is to be formed on July 10.

PAINTERS BEATEN UP BY POLICEMEN AS THEY PICKET

Four Arrested and Held Without Bail

Scenes of striking painters were brutally attacked by the police Tuesday when they broke up a mass picketing demonstration in Brooklyn. Many of the strikers are in a serious condition while four of them who were arrested are being held without bail for arraignment today.

At Ocean and Foster avenues the police were most vicious. Using their night sticks they struck left and right, felling workers so quickly that they piled one on top of the other. When the butchery was over medical attention was necessary for many of them.

At Brighton Beach the police again got into action slugging many workers and arresting the four of them who were bearest. The picketing demonstration was held in front of all Brooklyn jobs under the control of the employers' association.

At a meeting of the Painters' Union held Saturday at Lorriane Hall, Broadway, Brooklyn, a motion was passed that those employed in independent shops should divide their work with the strikers, also that all those working must immediately pay their $5 tax. Those who do not pay will not be allowed to return to work Thursday morning.

The meeting also went on record to continue the strike until victory is achieved. It was pointed out that the bosses are aided by the Building Trades Employers' Association which is doing its utmost to break the strike.

Supreme Court Justice Ingraham decided yesterday that Harry Bloom, president of Local 1011 of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America was not entitled to an injunction against Allen J. Fischer and other officers of the District Council of the same organization.

Bloom asked that the officers be restrained from interfering with the criminal proceedings pending against certain members of the council.

Ousted Engineers' Head and Successor

Above Alvanley Johnston, who, as grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers becomes the actual head of the organization now that the offices of his former superiors have been abolished. Below, Wm. D. Pratter, president of the union until the convention last adjourned. The convention found that Prenter and associates had grossly mismanaged the labor banking and real estate investments which he had much to do with persuading the union to make.

5 Dead, 20 Hurt in Wooden Train Wreck

The wrecked train consisted of a baggage car and eight passenger coaches filled with New Yorkers returning from a Fourth of July vacation at the island. It struck an open switch, shunting the train at forty miles an hour, into a siding where a switch-train of twenty empty passenger coaches and freight cars stood.

ORGANIZED LABOR—TRADE UNION ACTIVITIES

STRIKERS RALLY BY THOUSANDS IN FURRIER MARKET

Sixty More Workers to Be Tried Today

Thousands of fur workers poured into the market Tuesday morning and held one of the largest demonstrations since the beginning of the strike called to advance the wages and working conditions of the union-ists that have been perilled by the scab tactics of the right wing.

As usual hundreds of police were on hand eager to provoke the peaceful workers. Thirteen pickets were arrested and fined $25 each by Magistrate Abraham Rosenbluth in Jefferson Market Court.

Did Not Interfere With Traffic.

Jacob M. Mandelbaum, attorney for the strikers made the police who were pressing the charges admit on the witness stand that the workers were not interfering with traffic, and that the only reason that they were taken into custody was because they were picketing.

The arrested workers are Nathan Meilef, Joseph Crane, Alexander Brucker, Nathan Noodelman, Joseph Zucker, Jacob Brafman, Dora Rubinstein, Rose Wenik and Rosenbluth.

Snitkin Is Lawyer.

The case of the seven right wing gangsters who two weeks ago brutally cut up four fur pickets, was postponed until Thursday when it came up for a hearing before Magistrate Rosenbluth yesterday morning. Former Judge Leonard A. Snitkin, who was disbarred several years ago and later reinstated, appeared as their lawyer.

It is the opinion of many close observers that Snitkin will attempt to have the case squashed before it is sent to a higher court. In this way the story of the right wing attacks of organizing gangsters to cut and brutally beat up strikers will not be exposed to the light of day.

To Be Further Evidence.

At a meeting of the general strike committee held last night action was taken to give to the city authorities further proof of the unfair methods used by the police department in their arresting of pickets, when the only "crime" they are guilty of is peaceful picketing. It was pointed out that police practically always arrest those not to interfere with the traffic, and in that way give the police another excuse for arresting them. But in spite of these provocations on their part, the strikers are continuing to be arrested in large numbers.

That the long sentence given to the 132 strikers last Thursday was decided before their trial, is the charge of several of the pickets who have just been released from Welfare Island. They claim that when several hundred workers were arrested a week ago Monday, the court officials immediately notified Welfare Island to prepare for about 60 women prisoners. On Wednesday, one day before the trial, the Welfare Island authorities were preparing to receive their new "guests."

60 On Trial Today.

Sixty workers who were arrested last week and had their cases postponed, due to the crowded calendar in the court, will appear before Magistrate Rosenbluth this morning for trial.

A membership meeting of the strikers will be held tomorrow night, after the Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration at Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East Fourth St. Important questions will be taken up including a reduction of the strike assessment.

Forty women strikers now confined on Welfare Island have sent the following message of greetings to their fellow workers:

"We send our greetings to the Joint Board of the Furriers and the Joint Board of the Cloak and Dressmakers' Union. The prison walls are unable to separate us from you comrades. Our spirit is not so easily broken. Our enthusiasm is as high as ever. The threats of the judges, of the bosses will not intefere with our fight until it is won.

"Our only regret is that we are unable to help you during the time that we are jailed. Our slogan is: 'From prison to the picket line!'"

Fire On Manufacturers' Estate.

TARRYTOWN, July 5.—Without offering the slightest evidence to substantiate his charge, Morris Hessel, New York fur manufacturer, today accused "striking fur workers" of setting fire to a number of outbuildings on his estate here.

The shop chairmen's council of the furriers yesterday adopted a resolution calling upon all furriers to join tomorrow's strike at 4 p. m. for Sacco and Vanzetti.

Our Letter from Australia

The Nationalist-Labor Party is still in a state of chaos and is rapidly becoming worse. Both factions (I have explained the cause of the split in previous letters) nominated a Candidate for the By-election in the Federal Constituency of Warringah, the seat which was rendered vacant by the appointment of Brigadier-General Sir Granville Ryrie to the position of Agent General for Australia in London.

It was recognised that there was absolutely no chance of labor winning this seat, because it was a conservative constituency, but both factions regarded it as a battle ground for determining which faction the rank and file supported. The result of the By-election was that the Nationalist Candidate won the seat by a large majority and the Lang-Scale Candidate defeated the Conroy-Carey Candidate by a substantial margin.

Mr. Lang, Premier, created consternation among his opponents by handing in the resignation of the Government to the Governor. The Governor recommissioned Mr. Lang to form a few Government, which he duly did, leaving out of the Cabinet those members of the Party who were opposed to him. Mr. Lang promised the Governor that he would hold a general election in September of this year. The position is now, that the Parliamentary Labor Party is evenly divided; the Federal Executive is supporting the Conroy-Carey faction, and the vast majority of the rank and file of the movement stands solidly behind the Lang-Scale faction.

Fined For "Illegal" Strike.

For two months past, the Cane and Hoist Drivers working on building construction in Sydney have been on strike for an increase in wages. This strike which shows the ineffectiveness of Craft Unionism has thrown about four thou-and building workers out of work. The Master Builders' Association summoned the Union before the industrial commissioner and the Union was fined $2500 for indulging in an illegal strike, also their award was cancelled. At the time of writing the strike is still in operation.

About 3000 seamen and large numbers of stokers have been thrown out of work as a result of a strike of the coal trimmers at Newcastle. The coal trimmers were engaged on trimming a vessel which had inflammable cargo on board, the men demanded a 1/- an hour extra for this dangerous work. The employers offered them 6d an hour, which they accepted, but demanded payment for the time they had been kept waiting. This the employers would not agree to and the ship was taken from the port.

The men then demanded that they retain their places on the roster, but the employers would not agree to this, hence the strike. This dispute also demonstrates the futility of craft unionism, because although the strikers are displaying fine spirit, the other men effected have had absolutely no say in the conduct of the dispute; this sort of action will inevitably breed dissension.

Strike to Stop Victimization

A fine fighting spirit was displayed recently by the workers engaged at the Lithgow Ironworks. A boy broke his arm and another boy was asked to do the injured boy's work as well as his own. The boy refused and was dismissed. A thousand men came out on strike, because of the boy's victimization, and after a brief fight the boy was reinstated.

Labor "Leaders" Cringe.

Empire Day was celebrated here last week, and some of the Labor politicians disgraced themselves by their crawling cringing speeches about the greatness of the British Empire. Even the children in the schools were subjected to some of the slimiest speeches ever made by men who are alleged to be workers' representatives. Platforms were erected in prominent parts of Sydney, and capitalists, capitalist politicians, and Labor politicians declared their undying devotion to the British Empire. Their unquenchable hatred to the subversive and disintegrating forces, meaning of course, the Communists.

Question Sing Sing Guards on Drowning Of Three Canoeists

OSSINING, N. Y., July 6.—Dr. Raymond F. Kinkle, state commissioner of corrections, began an investigation today into the action of Sing Sing prison guards in refusing to permit prisoners among 1,200 convicts to save three canoeists who were drowned in the Hudson River a few feet from the prison wall when their craft overturned.

Both Dr. Kinkle and warden Lewis E. Lawes were in question the guards, who held the convicts at bay with guns while the three canoeists went down before their eyes.

"The right kind of a man would risk his job to save a human life," the warden declared.

Meanwhile, search was continued for the bodies of two of the youths. One was recovered yesterday afternoon. It has not yet been identified.

Frayne Against a Labor Party, He Says; Likes Less Effective Methods

In spite of the failure of the "reward-your-friends and punish-your-enemies" policy of the American Federation of Labor, Hugh Frayne, general organizer, asserted in a radio speech Tuesday night that "there is no reason for a Labor Party in this country."

He declared that he is in favor of trusting to the "time-tried trade union methods and to the ballot only in so far as results are to be forseen as a positive certainty."

NEGLECT CAUSED WOMAN'S DEATH, INTERNE PROVES

Rabbi Says Confidence in Hospital Shattered

In the course of the testimony offered by three Jewish internes of the Kings County Hospital Tuesday it was disclosed that patients in a state of coma were left to lie unattended and without the benefit of medical aid for periods as long as three hours. One case in particular, that of a Mrs. Kessler, who was admitted to the institution last December in a state of diabetic coma was unttended until the time of her death three hours later. This testimony was offered by Dr. Edwin Kutsbee.

Confidence Shattered:

During the hearing of charges of racial and religious discrimination which exists at the hospital, Rabbi Gross of Union Temple, Brooklyn, arose and asked that testimony of patients be heard in executive session because they were of such a nature that if they were made public they would "shatter public confidence in the institution."

Cases in which the Jewish doctors were sabotaged by gentile nurses and internes were cited time and again in the course of the afternoon. When patients under the care of the Jewish interns were in danger of dying they were not notified by the nurses on duty so that it would appear that they were guilty of professional neglect.

Tammany Politics.

Mayor Walker, who is conducting the "investigation," took advantage of every opportunity to rip into Commissioner Bird S. Coler, of the department of public welfare. The Kings County Hospital is under his charge. Sight was never lost of the fact that Coler is not a Smith-Tammany man but was appointed to his position by ex-Mayor John F. Hylan, who is on the "outs" with the regular Tammany gang.

Vandalism.

Dr. Hyman L. Soloway, another of the Jewish internes, who held the stand for the greater part of the afternoon, stated that organized raids were conducted by the gentile internes on the rooms occupied by the non-gentile doctors. According to Soloway's testimony his books were destroyed, his clothes torn and "stink bombs" were thrown into his room, all calculated to make life unbearable for him and his colleagues.

He further stated that medical reports were withheld from him in spite of the fact that they were required in the treatment of patients.

"If it were left in your hands," the mayor asked Dr. Katzkee, "how many internes would it be necessary to remove to eliminate the anti-Semetic feeling which exists at the Kings County Hospital?"

"None," replied Katzkee. "The internes are not at fault. I would remove the heads of the hospital and the department responsible for the institution." Which was exactly what the mayor wanted to hear. The way is now open for Coler's exit. There's many a regular Tammany man who could well fill the job—hence the hearing.

At regular intervals hazzoner indulged himself in neat political speeches all calculated to corral the two hundred thousand Jewish votes which reside in the city. He spoke of "tolerance," "our most loyal citizens," etc.

The hearing is scheduled to be continued today at 2:30.

Progressive Official Of Machinists Resigns

WASHINGTON, July 6 (FP).—William Hannon, vice president of the International Association of Machinists since 1906, has resigned. At the first meeting of the international executive board following the recent general union election, Hannon handed in his resignation without formal comment.

Allied in the past with the progressive anti-administration bloc, Hannon had been re-elected, although at the bottom of the list of successful candidates. The board chose Fred Gilbert, of Roanoke, Va., general organizer, to fill the vacant seat.

The board went outside the list of unsuccessful candidates for the vice-presidency in the recent union election to select Hannon's successor. J. F. Anderson, at one time leading opponent of William H. Johnston, former president of the Machinists, was seventh in the recent election, but a few hundred votes behind Hannon.

Al Smith Orders Leave With Pay to Delegates To Legion Convention

ALBANY, N. Y., July 6.—Governor Smith today issued a proclamation calling on the heads of all state departments, boards and bureaus to permit their employes who belong to the American Legion to attend the state convention of the Legion at Troy on August 4, 5 and 6.

The delegates should be permitted to attend their convention without any loss in compensation, the governor ordered.

Soviet Syndicate Gets Standard Of Ice Stock in Output

Contracts for eight Soviet oil to the Vacuum Oil Company and the Standard Oil Company of New York have been signed by V. M. Kalnin, vice president of the Soviet Naptha Syndicate who has been on a visit to this city. The oil will be marketed by the American companies principally in the Far East.

According to the contract the Soviet syndicate will supply fuel oil to the Standard Oil Company for five years at a rate of 100,000 tons a year. The latter will pick up the products in Baku and bunker it in Turkey, Port Said, Colombo and Ceylon.

The arrangement with the Vacuum Company extends last year's contract until 1931, and gives the firm a concession to sell Soviet oil in Egypt.

B. M. T. Wooden Cars Cause of Injuries To 10 in Collision

Once more antiquated wooden cars on the B.M.T. were responsible for seriously injuring ten persons in a collision on the Myrtle Avenue elevated line at St. Edward Street, Brooklyn, Tuesday night.

Returning From Work.

The trains carried six cars each and were crowded with after-work passengers from Manhattan. The first train was bound for stations on the Myrtle Avenue line and the rear one was a Lexington Avenue local.

The second train, moving more rapidly than the first, struck it and telescoped into the rear car for six feet.

League of Nations to Be Conscripted by Industry As 'Big Business' Agent

BERLIN, July 6. — The British Federation of Industries and the National Association of German Industries sitting in conference here have decided to ask the League of Nations to provide for the direct participation of League committees of delegates representing industrial organizations.

In an official communique issued today, they state that it is imperative that the League consider industrial and commercial questions. The conferees also state that the time is ripe for the League of Nations to take up and facilitate the removal of export and import tariffs, the simplification of customs classifications and the improvement of commercial statistics.

Big business, both in England and in Germany, feels that the time is ripe for the League of Nations to lend itself openly as the battleground of conflicting industrial interests, and to permit its agents to work hand in hand by private capital as a matter of right in the accumulation and safeguarding of private profit.

U. S. Doctors Study In Germany.

COLOGNE, Germany, July 6.—Led by Dr. William Peck, 160 members of the American Medical Association arrived here today to inspect the Cologne Hospitals and other institutions. The American Physicians were guests of honor at a luncheon given by the mayor Herr Lonrad in the historic Courtenich Town Hall.

How the Frame-Up Works on Henry Ford's 'Model' Ships

An Amazing Tale of the Methods Used By the Understrappers and Legal Lackeys of the Great "Philanthropist" To Stamp Out All Protest Among Seamen—This Story Is A Document of the American Class Struggle of Interest Not Only To Seamen But To All Workers.

THE following story concerns itself with the experiences of two sailors, George Loomis and James Fitzgerald, both employed by the Ford Motor Cumpany on one of their boats, the tug "Ball Camp," used to tow the vessels which the Ford Company purchases and uses in the process of creating its economical "lizzy".

ON THE 24th of December, 1925, they were taken from the hotel to the commissioner's office and from the commissioner's office to the Canton jail, where they were kept for two days without receiving attention. On the 26th they were again taken to the commissioner's office. This time they were asked if they had anybody representing them. Their lawyer was not there somehow and could not be located at the appointed time. Neither the commissioner, the marshal or the captain would allow the seamen to be released so that they might go out and look for their lawyer. Instead, they held them prisoners in the office under grard and proceeded with the examination.

When the seamen demanded the right of examination and representation by counsel the commissioner told them that he had met their attorney in the street and that he had waived examination for his clients. No self-respecting lawyer would ever endanger a client in such a manner. It seems more like a deliberate frame-up than a trial, the commissioner taking it upon himself to waive examination ofer the protest of the seamen.

Immediately after this they were railroaded to jail. They were kept in the Canton jail without any legal process other than a simple commitment paper.

Ford Can Do No Wrong.

THE influence of Henry Ford seems to have a soothing effect upon the official conscience in order to cover such a heinous procedure.

Fitzgerald and Loomis were finally released on the 26th of February, 1926, after having served sixty days imprisonment without any charges or real trial other than the frame-up which has been described.

Their only gleam of hope during this period was a cort note from the District Attorney saying that he would shortly dispose of their case.

The entire process is a demonstration of the power of a capitalist corporation over the so-called instruments of justice, law and order in the shipping industry, and it should be instructive to other workers to note the value to them of these instruments in a capitalist social order.

I Record of Wages.

THESE facts were revealed without a cent of wage or any money paid to them at all; however, when the case of the wages of the seamen came up for trial in New York last week in the U.S. Court, the Ford Motor Company had miraculously procured evidence to the effect that Loomis and Fitzgerald were thieves, that they had wilfully destroyed property and were deserters.

The technical charges brought up amounted to the stealing of several firkins of butter, throwing meat overboard and disposing of cooking utensils in the same way. They were also charged with cutting rope and refusing to do work upon the request of the captain.

Manufactured Evidence.

THE Ford Company, in the course of the trial, introduced two witnesses.

These witnesses, Andraldy and Dane by name, had been kept by the Ford Motor Company for two years, their transportation paid to New York, and their running expenses taken care of. This is the extent to which the Ford people were ready to go to suppress the action of militant workers.

The evidence given by these witnesses was so crude that even the judge had to agree that no evidence had been shown at any time to indicate that the charges against the seamen were true. Ford went even one step further, taking the trouble of digging up the navy record of Loomis and finding some flimsy charge of speaking back to a superior officer. This was swept about the courtroom by the Ford lawyer with majestic gestures and triumphant red herring expressions about patriotism and loyalty to one's country in his attempt to discredit Loomis in the eyes of the jury.

Affidavits Manufactured.

IT WAS quite plainly pointed out and accepted that the affidavits of the Ford witnesses were manufactured in the office of the Ford lawyer.

Such conditions as the framing-up of sailors will continue and be a matter of everyday occurrence as long as the seamen do not realize that only in organization lies the secret of power to gain their elementary rights.

Organization Only Hope.

Seamen are entitled to good conditions aboard ship, decent living quarters intended for the proper housing of the crew instead of the economization of space for profit, four watches leave in every port of stop; better food and an increase in pay which is now far below the relative wage ashore.

The Ford workers especially should learn from this lesson the absolute need of organization.

DOPE AIDS DOMINION

By GEORGE H. SHOAF.

PORT SAID, (By Mail).—People of an inquiring turn wonder why the Orientals, especially those who inhabit India and Malaysia, have been so docile and abjectly submissive in the presence of their white conquerors. In common with disinterested investigators who seek the truth I believe I have found one reason why. The answer is dope religious, and that more immediately satisfying kind, opium and the betel-nut.

Buddhism and Mohammedanism are the two principal religions that obsess the minds and hearts of the inhabitants of Indian and Malaysia. Many Chinese endorse the philosophy of Confucius. Some few of them have embraced Buddhism and Mohammedanism, but as a rule the majority of the Chinese have no religious faith.

Indian Non-Resistants.

The Indian and Malay Buddhists and Mohammedans have been usually non-resistant. They did not believe in fighting. Fastly imposed upon, always they turned the other cheek.

Needless to say the British government not only countenances these enslaving superstitions and vile practices but encourages them. In every hand as one travels through the Orient, Buddhist temples and Mohammedan mosques are beheld. Multiplied millions of worshippers throng them daily. The mouths of nearly every native one meets are stained with the red of the betel-nut. This habit lulls to sleep the senses, stupefies the lemon and completely breaks down the will. In Singapore, Penang, Colombo, Calcutta and Bombay, opium joints flourish openly, and in some of the streets the fumes from these dives are quite overpowering. What a combination of lucky circumstances the British possess to aid them in keeping their subject peoples down!

Masters Use Opium.

What wouldn't the labor-hating masters of the American people give if some almighty power could and would come to their assistance with a nation-wide sweep of religious revival that would convict and convert the working classes and bring them all to the feet of the non-resisting Nazarine. How the ruling classes would rejoice at the spectacle of the workers voutedly rendering unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unresistingly turning the other cheek! No wonder the superstition-injecting Aimee Semple McPherson has been subsidized by the business interests of Los Angeles and given carte blanche to go out among the workers and corral them right and left. The preachments of a hundred McPhersons at strategic positions in the United States—with the criminal syndicalism laws operating against radical agitation—would quickly steep the workers in the right superstition and make them more obedient and law-abiding than they are at the present time.

Truly religion is the opium of the people. In the Far East the British use both!

FORD NOT INTERESTED NOW IN "PEACE SHIPS"; FINDS GREAT AERIAL WAR NAVIES PROFITABLE

In a press interview yesterday Henry Ford showed considerable pride in the operation of his own air lines. There are four flying from the Ford Airport here daily, and to date, the Ford lines have established a record of 6,517 flying hours and 580,933 flying miles with only one serious accident. The auto king's air services now connect Detroit with Chicago, Cleveland, Buffalo and Grand Rapids, Mich. The Ford planes, he said, "maintain a schedule of 1,582 air miles a day, six days a week."

"What will the plane of the future be like?" he was asked.

"The large multi-motored plane is the plane of the future," said Ford. "They will be of great size, carry many motors and hold a hundred passengers easily. These large planes will come because they can be more easily operated.

"The present machine is four-fifths man-operated. The operator must be on the job every second. Too much depends on the man. I think this ratio can be reversed by building larger ships, with more motors and less dependence on the human equation."

"What should America do to be prepared in the air for the next war?" he was asked.

"Work on aviation," he replied promptly. "I think aviation is coming as fast as it can in a commercial sense. I have a lot of faith in the United States and I think the commercial development of aviation helps the national defense by showing the way. The government should come along."

"Can airplanes ever displace battleships as Colonel Billy Mitchell says?"

"There is no question about it," Ford replied, very seriously. "Airplanes can destroy anything pertaining to war. Aviation, I believe, has started another cycle. Mitchell is right."

anese alliance current in Geneva are not without foundation is indicated in the significant statement issued by the Chinese member of the league of nations who keeps an apartment in the vicinity. The Chinese league member warned the delegates to the naval conference that they must not discuss the Chinese question. Because of the somewhat similar problems confronting Japan and Great Britain in China and the awakened rivalry between England and the United States an agreement hostile to both China and the United States between London and Tokio is considered quite possible.

THE Chinese league representative in Geneva as a representative of Peking he issued his warning on instructions from the Nationalist movement. It would not be a surprise to us to hear within a comparatively short time that Washington has decided to recognize the Nationalists leaving the British and the Japanese holding the bag with the northern militarists. It is also probable that the money bags of the American imperialists were used effectively in bringing about the switch of Chiang Kai-shek and Feng Yu-Hsiang from the Nationalist revolutionary cause and their adherence to the bourgeois anti-labor, pro-imperialist policy of Wall Street. While British imperialism led the imperialist attack on the Chinese revolution, it is now becoming clear that the underground methods of the United States were more effective in corrupting the right wing and bourgeois leaders than the more open methods employed by the British Empire.

Coolidge Fishes—But the Western Farmers Are Not All Suckers

WITH THE YOUNG WORKER

WHAT JULY FOURTH MEANS TO US

The American Revolution was a war for independence and self-determination; it was a war fought to free the American colonies from the rule of a foreign country that was oppressing them—Great Britain. We hail with pride the revolutionary traditions of this great struggle for colonial liberation.

Today, in 1927, there are millions of people groaning under the oppressive tyranny of American imperialist rule. There are millions of workers and farmers in the American Empire—the Philippines, Hawaii, Porto Rico, and so on—whose strivings for national self-determination are ruthlessly crushed by the bayonets of the Wall Street government. There are many millions of people whom the American government is trying to reduce to slavery and to keep in that condition. Nicaragua has now become practically an American colony. In their fight for freedom and independence the Chinese workers and farmers meet with no more bitter enemy than the U. S.

Just as in 1776 the British government sent troops to crush the American colonists who were striving for independence, so today the United States, the great imperialist tyrant of the twentieth century, is sending battleships and marines and soldiers to every part of the world, to Nicaragua, and to China, to crush the colonial revolutionaries of 1927. The American soldiers and marines in the Philippines, Nicaragua and China today are doing the same dirty work as the Hessians did for the British in 1776—they are helping imperialism fasten the yoke of slavery on the necks of the people of other countries.

To cherish and to pay honor to the great revolutionary traditions of '76 can not be done thru mere empty lip-service while at the same time violating them in everyday deed. This is what the Fourth of July orators do — the business men, the politicians, the teachers and the preachers—who grow very enthusiastic over the colonial revolutionaries of 1776 and very indignant over the colonial revolutionaries of 1927. For us the lesson of '76 is: Down with the imperialist rule of the U. S.! Help the leaders of the American colonies overthrow the yoke of Wall Street. Support the struggle of the Chinese workers and farmers for freedom and independence! Help them fight their Revolutionary War!

YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE COURSES

After anxiously waiting for the eventful day of June 19th, students from various places assembled at Main Hall for the third annual Young Workers League Courses of 1927. Forty seven students in all came from Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan and North Dakota. Thirty-eight different localities are represented at these courses.

The courses started off very well this year in spite of heavy rains during the first few days, but it soon cleared up and we started our work in earnest. One student had to leave because of threatened illness, but there has not been any other serious cases of illness. Only a few have been bothered by the rainy weather toothaches.

The students are all well acquainted with each other by now. Singing is every evening's program and dance, which was held by the Superior Young Workers League, helped to shake the blues away and to get acquainted with the rest of the students. We certainly did appreciate their thoughtfulness in giving us that reception we received.

Tuesday morning the lessons really started; and the work proved far more interesting than any one expected. Comrades Hayes and Williamson, the instructors, have put across Economics and History in such a way that the periods just seem to have wings. Sociology, Class Struggle Theory, Current Events, American History, and Marxian economics are regular daily subjects. Saturday morning's work proved to be the most interesting of all for "Model Nuclei" meetings are held.

Friday evening the student body held a meeting, and the various committees for carrying on the work of the school, were elected. The following Committees were chosen: entertainment, sports, discipline, press, wall, newspaper, and snapshot. A large part of the work and responsibility rests on the students and this are all trying to make the school a success.

Sunday we all went to the swimming place for our supper and a marshmellow roast. This ended our first week and the future work look very bright and promising to all.—Helmi Juntilain.

YOUTHFUL PATRIOTS

DETROIT, Mich., July 6.—As part of the whole campaign against the Party and Communist movement in this country, the plans for the organization of a new youth movement for the perpetuation of the American creeds of patriotism, and for a new struggle against the reds have been laid. This is being initiated in the state of Michigan under the direction of the Detroit National Defense Committee and acting for the District Board of Conference. Former representative Townsend of Detroit is in charge of the organization and committee, which has plans under way to spread out thru the country by special organizers.

It is very significant that the one sponsoring this organization is the Board of Commerce, which has already invited Wm. T. Page, clerk of the house of representatives, a notorious patriot, to begin this campaign with a speech and Legion is expected to address the first part of July and begin the campaign at Camp Custer, Michigan, and then begin to spread out from there. Many more rumors circle. Quoting the Detroit Free Press: "The 22nd it states the following day it is planned to undertake an extensive national campaign in every sense of the word. It is planned to establish new local chapters who will Americanize the youth of the entire country."

The press release further states: "The economic reasons for the importance of the youth and the launching of this campaign is in line with their general policy for militarizing and organizing the kids and the youth. These organizations when on footing becoming nothing but fascisti and are the factor used by the bosses in their struggles against the whole working class. At this period when affairs are becoming more and more acute it becomes a policy in this country of preparing and molding the youth into struggle against the working class. Our tasks are to counter these campaigns on the part of the bosses. To organize actively partners using their education, propaganda and organization against these efforts."

Young Workers School At Comeaut, Ohio.

CLEVELAND, July 6.—For a few months preparations have been made in District 2, Local 5 for the establishment of a school for young workers. Through the magnificent efforts of the English comrades in the locality, who collected more than $300, the school was organized. Although in the party and Y. W. L. for a short, even though some of the comrades were critical as to the possibility of opening the school.

On July 4, the school will be opened in Camp Comeaut on the beautiful shores of Lake Erie, with its ideal surroundings. The tent district of Cleveland will help to make the camp a success and all the ladies will do the cooking. The Finnish Workers Club will be in charge of the classes, while the surrounding units not only for Hungarian and Finnish workers.

The students comprise mine, steel workers, metal workers and others in the industry and a few students from school will last for 6 weeks, and promises to be one of the best that have been arranged in the country.

Letters From Our Readers

Editor, The DAILY WORKER.

When the owners of the Bechter and Messinger baking trusts set out to break the bakers' union they reckoned without the women.

The organization of the Women's Councils was a step that the bosses did not anticipate. They visited all the neighborhood groceries in an attempt to persuade the owners not to help in the sale of the scab bread.

When they were unable to make any progress with a given grocery, the committee would picket it from morning to night. They distributed leaflets, arranged open air meetings, etc., until they were victorious.

How were the wives of the workers able to accomplish all this? How did they manage with their housework and responsibilities? The answer is found in mutual aid, co-operation, and organization. They took care of each other's children, assisted each other in household chores, were also on the "Council" in the Bronx, especially, has been of great aid in the strike.

Against the strikers the bosses use injunctions, gangsters, and other weapons but they are helpless against the agitation of the women.

Let us hope that your women readers will profit by our example and organize neighborhood working class councils so as to help in time of strike.

Member, United Council of Working Class Housewives.

COMINTERN DEMANDS IMMEDIATE LIQUIDATION OF THE NATIONAL COMMITTEE OPPOSITION BLOC

The following cablegram was received yesterday from the Presidium of the Executive Committee of the Communist International by the national office of the Workers (Communist) Party of America, at Chicago. It is a rebuke to the Foster-Cannon-Weinstone opposition in the Party that is endeavoring to organize within the Party, under a "National Committee of the Opposition Bloc," to carry on a struggle against the present leadership. The cablegram was sent in reply to a letter being circulated throughout the Party urging the membership to create opposition committees in all units of the Party, practically paralleling the Party Organization itself. The following is the full text of the cablegram, published in response to the request of the Presidium of the Comintern:

THE CABLEGRAM OF THE COMINTERN

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., July 7, 1927.

"You should publish the following cable of the Executive Committee of the Communist International in the Party Press:

THE Comintern is categorically against the sharpening of the factional struggle and under no circumstances supports the statement of the "National Committee of the Opposition Bloc." The Comintern recognizes that in many political questions the Ruthenberg group followed a more correct line in the past than the Foster group. On the other hand the Executive is of the opinion that the Ruthenberg group had not understood how to estimate sufficiently the full significance of the trade union forces in the Party and that [illegible]ter at that time was more correct on many trade union questions. The line of the Comintern has been: On the whole for the political support of the Ruthenberg group and for bringing Foster nearer to the general political line of the Ruthenberg group, at the same time, however, following the course towards the correction of the trade union tactic of the Ruthenberg group on the line of Foster thru cooperation in the Party leadership. Now the previous political and trade union differences have almost disappeared. The Comintern condemns most categorically every attempt towards the sharpening of the situation in the Party, especially in the present objective situation as exemplified by the formation of a National Committee of the Opposition Bloc. The Comintern considers factionalism without political differences as the worst offense against the Party.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

WHILE hundreds of prisoners incarcerated in Sing Sing penitentiary looked on, three young men tumbled out of a boat and drowned within a few yards of the shore. Several prisoners wanted to go to their rescue, but the keepers leveled their guns at them and the waters of the Hudson river sucked three lives to death. This is one of the most cold-blooded incidents of indifference to tragedy that I have ever heard of.

REVOLUTIONISTS do not nourish a maudlin sentimentality for the professional criminal, who is a willing tool of the capitalists for any dirty work that is demanded of him for a consideration. The gangsters that are employed by the right wing in the furriers' union and by the socialists to beat and maim the strikers on the picket line, have served their apprenticeship in many a prison. But the great majority of prisoners are as clean morally as the great majority of their fellows on the outside and if one had to choose between the brutal, stupid keepers on guard on the walls of Sing Sing and the inmates who were ready to risk their lives to save fellow-humans from death, it would not be difficult to make the choice.

"L" CRASH DUE TO NEGLECT OF B.M.T., BIG PROBE SHOWS

Wooden Cars, No Safety Devices Used

Investigations were begun today in the crash of wooden elevated trains in Brooklyn and the Ontario & Western train wreck at Iona Island which caused four deaths and injured thirty-two persons.

District Attorney Dodd summoned witnesses to his office in Brooklyn to fix the blame for the "L" collision on B.-M. T. tracks at St. Edward Street, Brooklyn, in which ten persons were injured. One of the motormen, Michael Joyce, has been suspended pending the outcome of the investigation.

The state transit commission also is conducting a probe. The crash emphasizes the absolute need for immediate substitution of steel cars for wooden cars, according to John F. Gilchrist, chairman of the commission. Two of the cars in the collision were forty years old. It also has been revealed that the B.-M. T. failed to install automatic tripping devices, as ordered by the commission.

A joint investigation of the Iona Island wreck opened at Weehawken with the New York Central and Ontario & Western Railroads and the New York Public Service Commission and the Interstate Commerce Commission taking part.

Railroad officials blame William Brandt, engineer of the passenger train on which four were killed and twenty-two injured. Brandt claims that a flagman stood in front of a switch signal, hiding the signal from the engineer's view.

Threatens to Whip Negro; Starts Race Riot in Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH, July 7. — Police were rushed to the Hill District here today when a threat to whip a Negro precipitated a race riot.

James Laido, 24, white, was injured and many pedestrians were forced to run to shelter in the exchange of revolver shots.

Laido was taken to a hospital. He was reported to have received a fractured skull and internal injuries. Police were unable to determine the number of Negroes injured.

Police said the fight started when Laido announced he would whip a passing Negro.

Wall Street Bankers Back Pilsudski War On USSR; Grant Polish Loan

WARSAW, July 7.—Backing the Pilsudski regime in its unofficial war against the Soviet Union, a group of American bankers, headed by the Bankers Trust Company and Blair and Company, have completed arrangements for a $15,000,000 loan.

The $15,000,000 is part of the proposed loan of $60,000,000. The rest of the money will be made available to Poland when the market is favorable. The purpose of the loan is to stabilize the tottering finances of the Pilsudski regime. Negotiations for the loan have been going on for the past year and a half.

SEE FAILURE AND DISRUPTION AT GENEVA-CONFAB

Race for Naval Arms to Begin at Once

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The Geneva Naval Conference is teetering on the edge of disruption and failure.

This opinion was almost unanimously held in Washington today as Britain persisted in her demand at Geneva for a cruiser ratio of nearly 600,000 tons—a programme that would force the United States and Japan to spend billions of dollars if the 5-5-3 naval ratio is to be maintained.

If the conference is to be rescued from its present precarious situation, either Britain must abandon her fight for this amount of tonnage, or the United States must accord Britain cruiser supremacy of the seas until such time as the American navy can be built up to parity.

Kellogg-Howard Conference.

Some of the more optimistic officials, however, saw a ray of hope today in two developments of the past 24 hours. One is the whole-hearted support of the American position by Japan's delegation at Geneva. The other was a sudden and unexpected trip to Washington by Sir Esme Howard, the British ambassador. Howard and Secretary of State Kellogg held a long conference at the state department, after which complete silence was observed by both. It is, however, unusual for an ambassador to rush back to the capital in its mid-summer heat unless something of paramount importance is at stake.

Congress' most dramatic fight after the militarists' demand for $300,000,000 to bring American naval strength up to the British standard. With the American proposal at the Geneva naval conference for a 400,000 ton parity with England in cruisers likely of adoption if any treaty at all is signed, the big navy lobby is preparing to ask for appropriations to add 300,000 tons of cruisers to the American navy.

American cruiser strength is now below 300,000 tons, compared to Britain's 300,000 tons. The new vessels will cost $1,000,000 per thousand tons, necessitating American expenditures of nearly a third of a billion and Britain's expenditure of $150,000,000 to achieve parity as a result of the "limitation" agreement.

SOCIALISTS CALL IN MOUNTED COPS TO WRECK UNION SQUARE PROTEST

Act When Huge Crowd Calls for Ben Gold to Take the Platform and Speak

Leader of Furriers Kicked by Claessans While Horses Strike Down Audience

A squadron of mounted police cooperating with yellow socialists yesterday rushed through a crowd of over 20,000 workers gathered at a protest demonstration for Sacco and Vanzetti in Union Square and broke up the meeting.

Carried on the shoulders of cheering workers Ben Gold, manager of the Joint Board of the furriers' union, was brought over to the platform on the western end of the square. When he started to climb on the platform Abraham Weinberg, socialist chairman, started to kick him and call for the police. The great throng kept demanding "Gold! Gold!" at the same time booing the socialist chairman and the police.

But the police charged into the crowd, mounted men in the lead, and drove Gold and those nearest him back.

Followed by thousands of cheering workers, Gold was carried to the platform on the eastern end of the square, the great crowd continuing to demand "Gold! Gold!"

While Gold started his speech in response to thunderous demands of the great crowd that he take the platform, August Claessens and Sam Friedman, socialist lieutenants, yelped for aid from the police and ordered Gold arrested because he was not on their "official" list of speakers.

Not content with thus violating the spirit of the meeting and nullifying the overwhelmingly expressed desires of the thousands of workers there, Claessens and Friedman took part in the police assault on Gold, and Claessens personally kicked him in the chest as he went down before the massed rush of the New York bomb squad.

Immediately afterwards mounted police charged into the crowd, and rode over the members of the audience not able to get out from under their horses' hoofs. The meeting was broken up.

Samuel Friedman, one of the socialist speakers who was holding a platform when the furriers began to call for Gold to speak, afterwards said, "I'd rather have the meeting broken up than have Gold speak."

For over two hours yesterday, between 4 and 6 in the afternoon, twenty thousand New York workers had streamed into Union Square from all sides, to take part in what they thought was to be a united front demonstration of all workers' organizations to free Sacco and Vanzetti.

A number of large halls including Cooper Union and Webster Hall were jammed to overflowing a few minutes after the doors were opened. At Cooper Union over 1,500 men and women waited near Astor Square an hour before the speeches of protest were scheduled to begin.

Half Million Back Strike.

About thirty thousand persons were conservatively estimated to have participated, in the two halls and at Union Square, in what was, until changed by police the greatest demonstration on behalf of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, in the history of labor in this city and in the nation.

Nearly a half million workers of Greater New York answered the one-hour strike call, according to Rose Baron, acting secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee, which yesterday sent the following telegram to Sacco and Vanzetti, at the Massachusetts State Prison at Charlestown:

"In the name of 20,000 organized workers gathered at Union Square on Thursday, July 7, to demand your release we send our tidings and cheers to you. We will continue our fight to secure your unconditional release."

Some of the largest unions in the city were represented at the demonstrations yesterday, many of them displaying placards both at Union Square and at the various halls.

Represent 500,000.

Thirty unions with a combined membership of half a million workers were on record behind the one-hour strike and demonstration yesterday. Included among the organizations are the Amalgamated Metal Workers of America, Typographical Union, United Brotherhood Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers, Paper Box Makers' Union, Joint Board of the Furriers' Union, Amalgamated Food Workers' Union, Joint Board of the Cloak and Dressmakers' Union, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, United Textile Workers, Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, and others.

TAMPA, Fla., July 7.—Over 16,000 organized cigarmakers today joined in a 24-hour strike in protest against the threatened execution of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Huge mass meetings were held thruout the city. At the Labor Temple speakers in English, Spanish, and Italian denounced the verdict dictated by capitalists.

JAPANESE GOODS BOYCOTTED; FEAR SHANTUNG GRAB

Right Wing in Shanghai Outlaws Protest

SHANGHAI, July 7.—The anti-Japanese boycott that is being organized to protest against the dispatch of Japanese troops to Shantung is beginning to assume gigantic proportions.

Despite the efforts of the right wing adherents of Chiang Kai-shek to outlaw the boycott in Shanghai it is spreading rapidly, while in Swatow and Amoy Japanese trade has stopped entirely.

Reports from Canton state that Chinese stevedores refuse to handle Japanese goods. Workers and peasants refuse to purchase any materials made in Japan or handled by Japanese merchants.

The dispatch of thousands of troops to Shantung is regarded by Nationalists as an attempt on the part of Japan to reoccupy Shantung, which Japan seized in 1915 and was forced to relinquish at the Washington Conference.

PEKING, July 7.—Japanese troops today began occupying the Tsingtao-Tsinan Railroad.

Admiral Williams, present commander of the United States naval forces in Chinese waters, will arrive at Tsingtao tomorrow to confer with Gen. Smedley Butler, commander of the American marines upon Chinese soil, and United States Minister MacMurray.

Gen. Butler said to be confident that the Americans in North China are in no danger and that there is no likelihood of an anti-foreign outbreak.

Feng Betrayal.

(Special Cable To DAILY WORKER)

SHANGHAI, July 7.—According to reports in the Chinese press Feng Yu-hsiang, renegade Nationalist leader, has wired an ultimatum to Tang Sheng-chi (wavering leader of the troops at Hankow) demanding the dissolution of the Wuhan Government. Feng threatens an attack on Wuhan unless Tang complies with this order.

The Federal Grand Jury Indictment Is Part of the Attack on Our Anti-War Propaganda

The strategy of the Federal government is becoming more and more clearly exposed. The present period is one of intensified war propaganda. The Lindbergh flight and the other spectacular aviation feats are being used as the springboards for a renewed preparedness campaign. War is being prepared right now—against the Soviet Union, against the Chinese people, against Latin America. The fleets are now being built. The armies and poison are being prepared on a gigantic scale.

Part of the program for war preparations is the suppression of the only daily newspaper, which is fighting militantly against it. The Federal Grand Jury indictment is part and parcel of this program. Behind the scenes the most powerful forces of American capitalism are combining against us.

Comrades, you must open your eyes to the seriousness and importance of the fight we are waging. Thousands of dollars will be needed to maintain our paper against the present attack. We cannot fight without your help. Do your part in the fight against a new World War. Send in your contributions. Defend the Daily against the attacks of the war mongers and the Federal government.

of North America, Finnish Cooperative Trading Association, International Labor Defense, National Council for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers, United Council of Working-class Housewives, Workers (Communist) Party, Young Workers League and others.

Representatives of the unions carried conspicuous placards demanding freedom for the two framed-up workers. Among these were: "Stop the Crime of Legalized Murder"; "Long Live the Brave Proletarian Fighters"; "Sacco and Vanzetti Must Not Die"; "The Seamen Protest Against the Organized Murder of Sacco and Vanzetti"; "Today It Is Sacco and Vanzetti—Tomorrow Who"; "The Iron and Bronze Workers Demand Freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti," and many others.

Issue Statement.

In a statement issued yesterday the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee urged the selection of delegates from every union in the city to take part in a new program of agitation.

The statement reads:

"The Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee was established for the purpose of securing the freedom of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti and to arouse the workers of New York and vicinity to save these two labor men who are the victims of capitalist justice.

"The innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti is so well established as to leave no doubts as to the ghastly nature of the frame-up against them.

"The Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee has no other interest than to unite all workers and sympathizers of the labor movement in a common endeavor to secure the freedom of our two brothers and to expose the attempt to railroad them to the electric chair.

"We, the whole labor movement, irrespective of differences must present a united front for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti and demonstrate to the world and to the persecutors of our brothers the solidarity of labor which by its organized powers alone can save Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair and open the jail doors.

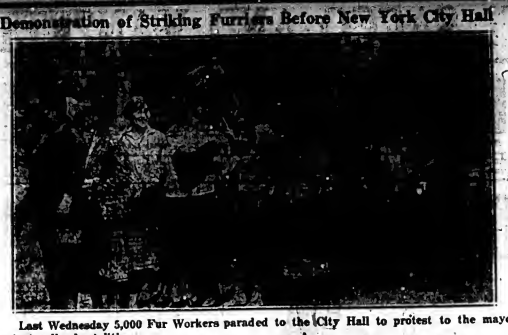
"The workers of the United States cannot lag behind the workers of the other countries in support of the victims of American justice.

"One solid front of American labor to free Sacco and Vanzetti!

"Let the world of capitalism know that American labor fights for its own and is determined to save Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair, and to restore these two brave workers to their friends, their families and to the labor movement.

"Agitation must continue until Sacco and Vanzetti not only are saved from the electric chair, but until they are freed.

"We therefore call upon all labor organizations and fraternal bodies to send delegates to the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee and to work with us for the complete freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti."



Textile Union Demands Freedom.

BOSTON, July 6.. (FP).—At the 12th annual convention of the American Federation of Textile Operatives, conservative union unaffiliated with the American Federation of Labor, it was unanimously voted to instruct Secretary William Batty to appeal to Gov. Fuller for freedom or a new trial for Sacco and Vanzetti.

A bitter attack on the prisoners, however, was made at the Lawrence Kiwanis Club by Frank A. Goodwin, registrar of motor vehicles for the commonwealth of Massachusetts. Goodwin loudly asserted the "two radicals are guilty." He assailed the American Civil Liberties Union and the professors of Harvard University, Wellesley College and other schools who have been demanding the prisoners' rights to justice.

Conservatives rejoiced that a state official placed himself on record in such an emphatic way.

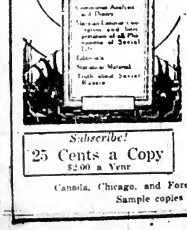
Asks For Release.

Chung P. Lum, segretary of the Chinese Seaman's Institute at 211 Park Row, will attempt to get a writ of habeas corpus today to release fifty-four Chinese seamen now being detained at Ellis Island.

The police apprehended the seamen at the instance of the Holland-American Line. The sailors, tired of a steady diet of beans and rice, quit the ship on which they were working.



Lum said that he has tried to get in touch with the sailors on Ellis Island, but Inspector Brough refused him permission to do so. Brough is in charge of Chinese at Ellis Island.

Bascom Slemp, Cal's Slush Fund Expert, to Start Va. "Institute"

WASHINGTON, July 7. (FP).—Bascom Slemp, expert salesman of southern post offices for republican slush funds, has been allowed to ally himself with Thomas Jefferson's University of Virginia, Ill., a to promote an "institute of politics" there this summer at which leading reactionary politicians of both parties will discuss domestic political issues.

Slemp, as secretary to President Coolidge, occupied a highly strategic position for years and was given his walking papers only after his corrupt methods to build up a coolidge machine in the southern states for use in Republican conventions, had been exposed.

Tea Growing In Georgia.

TIFLIS, June 26.—(By Mail)—According to the five years' plan of development of tea cultivation, the area of tea plantations in Georgia will be brought to 18,000 hectares by 1932, as against the actual area of 1,900 h. The total production at the end of the five years' period will be 25 million pounds of tea leaves, 10 mills are to be erected for the manufacturing of tea out of the leaves.

Montreal Called Unsafe.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Refusal on the part of the Montreal department to make public the seriousness of the typhoid epidemic which is prevelant in that city caused Surgeon H. S. Cummings of the U. S. Public Health Service to issue a statement yesterday warning Americans to steer clear of the Canadian city.

Officially reported cases since March 1st totalled 4,755 with over 500 deaths.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 7.—Governor Small today signed the bill sponsored by senator Charles Thompson of Harrisburg, which provides that electric current instead of strangulation shall be the legal form of execution in the state of Illinois.

The law takes effect at once and electric chairs will be installed at the Statesville penitentiary at Joliet, at the Southern Illinois prison at Menard and at the Cook County jail Chicago.

Montana State Fed. Convention Yields Before Big Bosses

HELENA, Mont., July 7.—C. O. Young of Washington represented Wm. Green, president of the American Federation of Labor at the thirteenth convention of the Montana State Federation of Labor just held here.

The reactionary Young carried out the orders of the equally reactionary Green and spent most of his time abusing the progressives in the unions, denouncing them for all possible crimes, but especially for disruption.

Reactionaries Disrupt.

These remarks came back upon the reactionaries like a boomerang, however, when further proceedings showed that the boycott of the Butte Cheese Union on the Struck Bohemian Cunnery was called off by one of the chief reactionaries in the local movement, E. H. Manson, Secretary of the State Federation of Labor, acting thru Sam Mitchell, the clerk's business agent. This destructive and disruptive act at least, Young had to admit his own group committed.

Resolutions were adopted against convict labor, against the appointment of federal judges for life, against the world court, and to appoint committees to investigate the laying off of investigators in mines, unfair contractors, etc.

Cautious Convention.

But a motion to ask all workers to help repeal laws which make conditions worse undergrouud for the miners, led to the appearance of an organizer of the United Mine Workers who talked like an agent of the employers, and insisted that President Lewis of the U. M. W. had ruled that the miners could do nothing, and must work under the present conditions.

A resolution consuming the Anaconda Copper Mining Co. and the Montana Power Co., for robbing the state of Montana of its natural resources was referred to committee and mutilated out of recognition.

Recover Body of One of 3 Boys Drowned Monday Near Sing Sing Prison

OSSINING, N. Y., July 6.—The body of one of the three boys who were drowned when the canoe overturned on the Hudson River yesterday in sight of a thousand convicts in Sing Sing prison, was recovered today by a member of the Ossining Police Force at the old lime kiln below the prison.

The body has not been identified, however. The chief of Ossining Police received word today that persons in Yonkers who believe they know who the three boys were, are on their way here to attempt to identify the body.

Soviet Oil Output For April.

Soviet oil output for April was 833,057 metric tons, divided among the three state oil trusts as follows (in metric tons):

Azneft	562,816
Groznefi	245,482
Embanefi	21,759
Total	833,057

Average monthly production for the preceding six months was 821,000 metric tons.

According to latest estimates, the Baku (Azneft) region contains close to one billion tons of oil, while Grozny resources are put at 100 to 150 million tons.

The unveiling was scheduled to take place on July 9th, which is Argentine's Independence Day.

New Victim In Chi Feud.

CHICAGO, July 6.—Another victim of the outbreak of a new gang war was found today beaten into unconsciousness and lying in a deserted roadway on the west side of Chicago.

Three men were murdered here last week in alcohol feuds.

Woman's Party On Warpath Again to Assist Employers

CHICAGO, July 7. (FP).—Stopping off in Chicago on their way to the National Woman's Party convention in Colorado Springs, delegates took the occasion to repeat their customary denunciation of protective legislation for women in industry. Ignoring the finding of the U. S. department of labor that the legal limitation of women's hours has in practice shortened the hours of men workers in the same industries, the delegates claim that such laws are a device to keep women out of occupations that men want to monopolize.

They have almost given up their former policy of wooing organized labor to their program of equal treatment of women and men in legislation, as labor has asked them to raise the legal standard of protection for men rather than tear down that already won for women.

Terrific Speed-Up and Unemployment in Ford Factories Described

(By Worker Correspondent.)

DETROIT, Mich.—Conditions in the Ford Motor Company were never worse than they are today.

On June 20th we were informed by our foreman that there would be no more work for two weeks. Since the first of June wages have been slashed as low as $2.20 a week. After the writer had worked in the factory eight days, for a total of sixteen hours, he discovered on going to the timekeeper for pay release, that his envelope was five dollars short. This he was told was "security" for the badge and store check. The writer received $9.40 for two weeks.

In the great and glorious U. S. A. in the factory the "golden hearted man Henry Ford" (as the Detroit Times describes him) men and women workers are worse off than they have ever been.

Terrific Speed-up.

"The money that he (Ford) has accumulated is not the product of downtrodden, underpaid, blood-sweat labor," a newspaper says. That is a lie. Ford is enjoying the millions stolen from workers.

In Department 927, Job F-7333 one man used to turn out 25 ¾ pieces in eight hours; Ford charged $1.65 for one piece, a total of $42.48; the worker got $7.2o; Ford made $35.28.

Later, when we were told that we would get six days' pay for five weeks' work, a terrific speed-up system was put into effect, each man being forced to turn out 76 pieces in eight hours, which meant $128.70 for Ford; eight dollars of which went to the worker.

Cheer Cal With Claim Third Term Not Issue

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The third term is far from being an issue throughout the middle west, Senator Curtis of Kansas, Republican leader in the senate, said today upon his return to the capital after three months in his home state and adjacent territory.

"In our section," Senator Curtis said, "I find no such thing as a third term issue. The people are too busy to talk politics. They are more interested in taking care of their crops and the resources of the state and nation."

Flood control legislation likely will be foremost among the major tasks confronting the seventieth congress when it assembles in December, Senator Curtis predicted.

Reform Mob Kidnaps Orphan Boy; Clubs Him Most Brutally

ONEONTA, Ala., July 7.—Indignation is rising and a tide of popular sentiment forming against the Ku Klux Klan because of several cases of mob violence here by masked, hooded and robed thugs who claim to be guardians of community morals. The latest is the case of Jeff Calloway, an orphan, 19 years old, and a self-supporting member of the community. He was snatched into a car by an armed and robed mob a few days ago while standing on the streets of Oneonta, taken to the foot of Mount Pinson and beaten with cable so that his body shows the stripes from head to foot.

Grand Jury Investigates Torture of Prisoners in 3d Degree PoliceMethod

Torture of prisoners by police officers and detectives by the "third degree" method of extorting information and confessions is now under investigation by the Federal Grand Jury insofar as it affects the methods used in Prohibition Headquarters.

Major Augustus Heise, Assistant Prohibition Administrator for this district, admitted on the stand that he had caused his men to rope Albert Briggs, an East Indian, to a chair, and had tied a towel about his head, which he threatened to twist according to the "old Chinese" custom of torture, if he did not "come through" with certain testimony.

Major Heide has been suspended as prohibition administrator, but the system of third degree torture is well intrenched as a police method, and has been winked at by the authorities for so long that it has almost acquired the dignity of legitimacy. Nor is it confined to prohibition prisoners. It is well known that workers on strike, arrested on the picket lines or suspected of radical activities, are subjected to similar brutalities.

Chase NationalNowHas Billion in Resources

The Chase National Bank has joined the class of the National City Bank. It was announced yesterday that the resources of the former institution has now reached over a billion dollars,—$1,042,513,999 to be precise.

The National City has already reached the one and a half billion dollar mark, thus becoming the largest banking firm in the world from the point of view of capital funds.

Through the National City Company, a subsidiary which has made huge investments in countries thruout the world, it molds war and peace policies.

Recall 2 Officers From Haiti Who Did Not Crush Workers

(By Federated Press.)

WASHINGTON, July 7 (FP).—Public curiosity over the summary transfer of two commanding officers of the Marine Corps from Haiti because they were too liberal in the treatment of Haitian workers is causing no end of anxiety in the War Department, Federated Press has learned.

Col. Julius S. Turrill, commanding officer of the marines with the rank of brigadier-general and Col. William C. Harllee have been withdrawn from Haiti and ordered to report to the war college while their places have been taken by officers who are more in accord with the policy of Brig.-Gen. John H. Russell, American high commissioner to Haiti. Russell, in effect the dictator of Haiti over President Borno, the puppet ruler put in power by the American state department, has followed a "strong" policy of crushing efforts by Haitian workers to form trade unions and fight for their economic betterment.

Fired for Liberalism?

Both Turrill and Harllee exercised leniency in carrying out their orders, in charge of Marine Corps activities, to police the Negro republic and preserve law and order. Harllee himself was a delegate to the Cleveland convention in 1924 which nominated the late Senator LaFollette for the presidency.

The incident, met at General Lajeune's office with the court comment that "officers obey orders," has aroused keen interest among congressmen who have recently visited Haiti. Reports from the island republic indicate that the successors of the two officers have followed the Russell policy abseuiously.

Plan Eight More Non-Stop Atlantic Flights

Eight non-stop trans-Atlantic flights, both from the American and European continents, were in sight today as the fliers, five men and three women, announced plans for the perilous crossing. They are:

Charles A. Levine, who hopes to obtain a French pilot to fly his monoplane Columbia back from Europe.

Lt. Paul Tarascon, who plans to fly in the near future from Paris to Chicago.

Rene Fonck, who is preparing for a non-stop flight from New York to Paris.

Mrs. Grace McClellan, of Austin, Tex., who is making ready for o flight over the route taken by Col. Charles Lindbergh.

Lloyd Bertaud, who has agreed to fly from New York to Rome, and return.

Mrs. Gladys Roy, who, with Lt. Delmor L. Snyder, is also an entry in the New York to Rome race.

Th20 Rasche, German girl stunt flier, who plans a "solo" flight across the ocean.

Another German, Udet, who hopes to complete the long crossing some time this summer.

Several other trans-Atlantic flights are in propect, but their plans have not yet reached a definite stage.

Many Allies of Arthur Henderson in Kremlin Wall Now Loom Tomb

(Special Cable to DAILY WORKER)

MOSCOW, July 7.—Thousands of workers filled the Kremlin Square yesterday to witness the burial of the ashes of Arthur Macmanus, member of the Central Committee of the British Communist Party. MacManus's ashes were immured in the Kremlin wall near the Lenin Mausoleum.

Bukharin and representatives of the British Communist Party and the Indian Communist Party were among the speakers.

First Transcaucasian Power Station in the Soviet Union Started

TIFLIS, June 26 (By Mail).—The Zemo-Avchalsk hydroelectric station (ZAGES), the first power station in Transcaucasia, has started operations. The station, whose construction began in 1922-23, is built on the left bank of the Kura, 18 kilometers from Tiflis.

Four three-phase alternating current turbo-dynamos, 4,000 kilowatt each, have been established at the station. The 6,400-volt current generated by the station is raised to a voltage of 37,000 v. and transmitted to Tiflis, where it is again decreased to a voltage corresponding to the nature of the consumption of electricity.

The present power capacity of the station is 18,000 horsepower, which is only one half of the station's full capacity, which will be 30,000 HP. The entire cost of the construction, including the line transmitting the electricity, four decreasing substations in the city and the city high tension network, amounts to 16 million roubles.

ZAGES supplies electric energy to the city of Tiflis and its environs and also serves to electrify the Suram mountain pass section of the Transcaucasian railway.

Mexican Labor to Back Morones in Forthcoming Elections, Is the Rumor

MEXICO CITY, July 7.—It is rumored, in well-informed circles, that the Mexican Labor Party, which will hold its convention in September, will enter the lists of the presidential elections with its own candidate, and that he will probably be Luis Morones, Secretary of Industry, Commerce and Labor.

The elections are still a year off, but the various parties are already girding up their loins for the fight, and at least three candidates have begun their electioneering campaign. General Obregon, of the Calles party, who stepped out to make room for Calles when confronted with the law which forbids the president to serve for two consecutive terms, hopes now to keep his party in power by stepping into Calles shoes. He has begun his campaign in the State of Sonora. General Arnulfo Gomez is busy in Vera Cruz, and General Francisco Serrano is opposing Obregon in Cuernavaca.

Morones is well known as a tool and toady of Wall Street.

Attack on Trade Union Rights in Germany

The reactionary anti-trade union bill in England has served as a sort of signal for a general attack by the European capitalists of the trade unions. The example of democratic England has been followed by super-democratic Norway. It goes without saying that Hindenburg's Germany could not sit by with folded hands and watch other countries carry off the palm in cutting down the rights of the workers' class organizations.

The limitation of trade union rights appeared to Germany the more necessary and timely in that the wave of strikes sweeping over the land beginning to replenish the capitalists' takings. The craven spirit of concession displayed by the reformists on all occasions towards the capitalist class convinced the latter that there would be no serious resistance from the trade union leaders.

Forgotten Hours.

The succession of reactionary legislative acts directed against the working class facts regarding hours, unemployment insurance, and arbitration courts) already passed have, however, caused such indignation among the masses of the workers that the German capitalists have not yet cared to bring a new trade union bill. Apparently the present co-ordination of class forces will not allow of this, and they are forced to resort to other means. Without introducing a trade union bill they are acting, with the help of the capitalist courts, as if such a law were actually in force.

We will allow facts to speak for themselves. It is more than two months since the breaking out of the textile workers' strike in the North German Cloth Concern, covering over 20,000 workers. The scope of the strike and the endurance of the textile workers on strike has already caused the employers considerable material loss. Unable to break down the resistance of the workers in an open struggle and unwilling to satisfy their demands for a shorter day, the employers applied for assistance to the Hamburg District Court. The latter hastened to bring a decision prohibiting the Textile Workers' Union to give any financial assistance whatever to the Hamburg Textile Workers on strike.

Courts Smash Strike.

The Labor Press immediately sounded the alarm. The employers' press asseverated with complacency that "there are still law courts in Germany." The German textile workers' union issued an appellation against this unprecedented Court decision. On the 27 of May the Hamburg Court turned down the appellation, and confirmed its first decision.

The action of the Hamburg Court was not without its reverberations. The Leipzig Court brought a similar resolution against the Leipzig strikers, although under pressure from the well-organized workers in Saxony, they were soon forced to withdraw it. The next attack on the right to strike was made by the Mainingen Court, which prohibited the textile workers union on pain of arrest of the trade union leaders and fines to give any assistance whatsoever to the Wemhausen spinners on strike.

Forced Strike Aid.

Such Court decisions signify nothing more or less than the prohibition of strikes, for without help from the trade unions strikes are doomed to failure. The very fact that these decisions have been passed almost simultaneously in various districts and aimed at strikes in the textile industry which is at present showing a very considerable boom, testifies to the systematic nature of the attack of the capitalist class on the indisputable time-honored rights of the trade unions. One more example will prove that it is not a matter of isolated facts, but of a general attack on principle on the workers' right by the capitalists.

In the beginning of May the great Communist paper in Chemnitz, "Der Kampfer" published an article calling on the workers to leave the factories after 8 hours continuous work. Such articles, coinciding with the whole of Communist Party policy in the struggle for the 8-hour day, are quite normal phenomena. The Chemnitz Public Prosecutor, however, found it necessary to institute immediate court proceedings against the editor of the paper, on the plea that the court sees in such agitation and "irresponsible" appeals to strike "criminal action." Thus the Chemnitz Public Prosecutor formulated and adopted the above-mentioned decisions of the district Courts, aimed against the Union.

Endow Fascist "Unions."

In connection with this undisguised limitation of trade union rights it is of importance to note the attempts of the capitalists to endow the yellow semi-company, semi-fascist "trade unions" with the right to conclude wage agreements. Up to the present only the free, reformist, Christian and Hirsch-Bunker (neutral) trade unions have enjoyed this right. In the recently published "Expert Opinion" of the Berlin Professor Kaskell, the conclusion is reached that the yellow unions might be given the right, on equal terms with the other trade unions, to take part in negotiations for Collective Agreements. In commenting on this "Expert Opinion" the "Kolnische Zeitung," the organ of heavy industry, writes: "The importance of Kaskell's Expertise is increased by the fact that both the ministry for Labor and the Trade Unions have many times recognized his authority in matters of Labor rights. It follows, therefore, that the Minority for Labor cannot afford to ignore this Expertise." The capitalist press is making propaganda for Kaskell's "Expertise."

Yellow Company Unions.

The acknowledgement of the yellow trades unions' rights to conclude wage agreements is pregnant with many dangers for the working class. In the yellow unions the employers will have their own hirelings acting for them in concluding wage agreements. The employers hope by means of the yellow unions to squeeze out the free unions and thus free themselves from "importunate" daily economic conflicts.

Although the reformists are doing nothing to resist the capitalist attack on the unions the employers will not be able to get away with these plans. The revolutionary wing of the working class, following with an eagle eye the manoeuvres of the capitalist class, has raised a campaign against attempts to limit trade union rights. The attack of the capitalists on trade union rights, still in its embryo stage, can only be beaten off by the mobilization of the broad masses of the workers for the defence of their class organizations.

Soviet Union Exports Timber to Argentina; Boycotts Tory Market

MOSCOW, June 24 (By Mail).—In reference to the rupture of relations with England, the White-Russian Timber Trust is proceeding with the export of faneer to Argentina, which heretofore was exported to England. The first consignment was despatched from Riga to Buenos-Aires.

Two teat parties of oak beams have been sent to the United States. These goods had so far been sold only in the British market.

Rebuild Leninakan, Hit by Earthquake

LENINAKAN, June 24 (By Mail).—Reconstruction work in Leninakan and the adjacent country having suffered from the earthquake is being carried on a broad scale.

Twenty-two large buildings, hospitals and official institutions have already been repaired, and repair work in all the school buildings is to be completed by the beginning of the school year. By autumn all the buildings left will be repaired and thirty big houses will be built. In the stricken villages there will be constructed 1,500 houses. Consequently, by winter the sharp housing crisis will have been ontlived.

New streets and squares are being laid. Besides, the committee on the reconstruction of Leninakan is completing the construction of a big hotel. Trade-union organizations are building a Palace of Labor.

Jingos Foiled; 'Defense' Day Called Off Because Of Wide-Spread Protest

WASHINGTON, July 7 (FP).—Thoroughly frightened by the widespread popular outcry against Prussian military displays in America, the War Department will not attempt to hold a "defense day" test this year.

The first test in 1924, with mobilization of the national guard, bellicose speeches from admirals and generals and militarist parades through many cities, aroused a determined opposition. The second test, in 1925, was advanced from Armistice Day to July 4 but was a fiasco, as most of the population called it a holiday and left the cities.

Last year the War Department considered the opposition from pacifist organizations such as the National Council for the Prevention of War so great that the "defense day" tests defeated their own purpose. The military display was called off. Despite General Pershing's warm support for holding a test this year, the department has decided that discretion is the better part of valor, and has indefinitely postponed the event.

Sheffield Won't Say Why Lost Job; Must Consult Coolidge First

RAPID CITY, S. D., July 7.—James E. Sheffield, American ambassador to Mexico, who is a guest of President Coolidge here, remained in seclusion today at the summer White House, with no statement forthcoming concerning his anticipated resignation.

The ambassador arrived late last night and immediately was driven to the state game lodge. He refused to be interviewed before he had talked to Mr. Coolidge.

Soviet Union Reply to USSR Protest on Trial of Voikoff's Murderer

WARSAW, July 7.—According to reports received here, M. Rosenholz, Soviet minister, has left for Moscow to present to Poland the answer to the note of the Soviet Union protesting against the trial of Kovcoda, murderer of Voikoff. Kovcoda was given an extremely light sentence, while the tribunal which tried him refused to await the arrival of M. Rosenholz, Soviet delegate who was to have attended the trial.

groups for two years, is now straddling a dilemma. No matter which side he favors he is certain to bring down on his head the wrath of the opposition.

THAT severe clashes are taking place all over Italy between the two groups is certain. There are ugly rumors of financial scandals leading up to Mussolini's palace. Two powerful fascist publications are tearing at each other with impunity, the according to blackshirt decree, nothing is permitted to be published that does not jibe with fascist policy. The boasted law and order and general satisfaction with things that is supposed to prevail in Italy is a mythical condition. The fascist regime is sitting on a volcano and even the newspaper supporters of fascism in the United States are forced to let the cat out of the bag.

THERE is no discussion permitted inside the fascist party in Italy. The rank and file have nothing to do but obey, or take a chance on prison or assassination. The few leaders at the top make the decisions and quarrel over the spoils. Compare this with the procedure in the Communist Party of the U.S.S.R. The program of the executive committee is submitted for the consideration of the party membership, and as long as the discussion period lasts, the humblest member in the ranks has a right to express an opinion on the party policy.

THE explanation of the success of the proletarian dictatorship in the Soviet Union and its failure in Italy is to be found in the fact that in the former the government is based on the workers and peasants who comprise the overwhelming majority of the population, while in Italy the fascist regime is based on the bourgeoisie, and used as an instrument of oppression against the workers and peasants.

THE capitalist papers usually have a plentiful supply of moral indignation on tap when the Soviet Government is obliged to execute some particularly vicious enemy of the workers' and peasants' regime. But when Soviet officials are assassinated there is not a frown of protest or a tear of sorrow. A female White guard terrorist and two accomplices failed in an attempt to bomb the headquarters of the G.P.U. in Moscow. Had the plot succeeded hundreds of people would have lost their lives. This is the kind of thing that the Soviet Government is always up against. Yet there are liberals who pretend to be friendly to the Soviet Union who give aid and comfort to the imperialists by roaring their indignation every time the Soviet Government is forced to punish one or more of those assassins.

THAT Great Britain is trying to line up Japan against the Soviet Union is revealed by Walter Duranty in a Moscow cable published in Wednesday's New York Times. Japan is determined to retain sovereignty over Manchuria. Chang-Tso-lin is being urged to seize the Chinese Eastern Railway, the property of the Soviet Union. Japan and Britain are to adopt an attitude of benevolent neutrality towards Chang's proposed act of brigandage.

GREAT BRITAIN realizes that a war with the Soviet Union is not something to be entered lightly into. So she is preparing the ground. In China she will try to consummate a deal with Japan whereby the latter will retain her foothold in Manchuria, in return for an anti-Soviet orientation. The visit of King Fuad to London is designed to fix things up in Egypt. No doubt a similar stunt will be tried in India. England may not be able to get her armed forces into action against the U. S. S. R. for some time yet, but that she is preparing for war, none but the most naive can doubt.

Floods in South England.

LONDON, July 7.—Southern England was flood-bound today.

Floods were reported in many sections following an all night rain storm during which there was more than a month's precipitation. It rained steadily for thirteen hours all over South England.

Crop damage was considerable. There were several landslides and one person was reported killed and several injured.

A War Memorial

Here is the $12,000,000 War Memorial being erected at Indianapolis, Ind. It is worth many times $12,000,000 to the capitalist class, thus to stimulate the youth of America to sacrifice itself again in the ? interests of Wall Street, in a new World War.

Those of us, who have learned the lessons of the last World War, demand that we erect a memorial which will insure the workers of America that no more of our youth will be crippled and shot to pieces in any capitalist war. We must erect a memorial which will speak daily and hourly to the workers of America, against a new World War in the interests of the capitalist class. The DAILY WORKER, with the enlistment of Five Thousand new readers will be the best memorial, and the best insurance against a new world slaughter. Help to build this memorial. Behind the Scenes at Geneva.

Wall Street's naval arms conference, called by the puppet president, Cal Coolidge, under the pretense of eliminating the necessity of building cruisers, will finally result in a decision to build dozens of new fighting ships of every variety. Pacifist slogans in this case can never conceal the frenzied race for military advantage that today impels every imperialist power on earth to amass ever more formidable armaments.

The reports that creep outside the Geneva conference rooms and into the public press are only the muffled echoes of the conflict that rages within. Not all the suave, polished deceptions of the diplomats can conceal the ever-widening breach between the two giant imperialist powers—the United States and Great Britain.

In this conference is also a third power that is, figuratively speaking, suspended between Britain and America. Japan entered the conference with orders from the Tanaka government, avowedly a defender of the policy of a revival of the Anglo-Japanese alliance against the United States, to identify her policy with that of Britain. For a number of days, while the question of extending the 5-5-3 ratio of the Washington conference to include all naval vessels was being discussed, Japan supported the policies of Britain. But behind the scenes the agents of Yankee imperialism, the mightiest financial power on earth, undoubtedly spoke very firmly to Japan; telling her agents that no loans would be floated in Wall Street to aid Japan in an ambitious program of naval competition.

While the threat of a financial boycott has had the effect of forcing Japan to support the United States against an increase of tonnage above the 400,000 tons mark, it by no means implies that Japan will become an ally of the United States instead of Britain in the impending conflict in the Pacific. Nations do not change political and economic policies that determine the general direction in which they move in response to one adverse wind, like ships without rudders.

Also, it is not at all improbable that Britain, finding herself at a disadvantage in the question of total tonnage of cruisers, has consented to permit Japan openly to oppose her demands, while secretly supporting other international policies that counteract the effect of abandoning the high tonnage demands.

In the struggle for the privilege of exploiting China the two dominant powers will bring all possible pressure to bear upon Japan, but in the last analysis she will rather take chances on sharing with Britain the exploitation of part of China than have to submit to the role of vassal of the United States, because Japanese imperialists know that, after all, the "open door" policy of Wall Street is designed to drive other powers out of China and secure the exclusive right to exploit that vast territory.

The struggle behind the scenes at Geneva is the prelude to the unleashing of a devastating war in the Pacific that will claim untold millions of the flower of the manhood of every continent in the world unless the imperialist monsters are crushed by the working class rising and refusing again to be cannon fodder in a struggle to decide a new redivision of the world by the imperialist powers.

Silence About Flood Victims.

Forlorn, bewildered, pathetically helpless victims of the Mississippi flood that submerged hundreds of thousands of acres of land in the south, are straggling back to the vicinity of their former habitations, to begin, bare handed and unaided by the government whose criminal neglect is responsible for their plight, again their struggle for existence. Most of the victims are poor agricultural workers, whites and blacks, who lived in small one-story crudely constructed hovels.

The recession of the flood brought the spread of malaria fever and other diseases that are today taking a steady toll of death. Many of the deaths, especially among children, are not recorded, because of the disorganized state of social life, and the parents are unable to obtain decent burial so they merely bury them where they perish and pass on. So protracted has been the horror that hundreds of thousands of poor inhabitants of the South can hardly respond to ordinary human emotions. Everything horrible that could happen seems to them to have happened.

Surely no more pitiful disaster ever befell a people. It is the more horrible because it occurs in a country whose government represents the most powerful ruling class on earth, wallowing in fabulous wealth, the recipient of a steady stream of profits from all over the world where it has investments.

Even the smallest percentage of the wealth that the ruling class of this country uses for investments abroad would be sufficient to save the lives of the perishing men, women and children of the flood areas. But instead of using a small part of the enormous surplus in their hands to save the victims of the neglect of their own government, these parasites and exploiters use their power to penetrate ever more remote corners of the earth in order that their profits may mount ever higher.

The sum and substance of the flood situation is that no profits can be realized off the expenditure of money to save human lives and so babies die and their poverty-stricken parents bury them in open fields without even a mark to indicate that they ever lived.

At the same time the Wall Street parasites, when they need cannon fodder for the next war, will demand that those of the south who survive the present ordeal shoulder arms and march to defend a government that did not raise a finger to save them in their darkest hours of need.

The "Coal War" and the Capitalist Offensive

By C. RUTSKI.

MOSCOW, (By Mail). The coal owners' offensive against all classes is loudly trumpeting increased coal reserves. These have been tripled since the beginning of the year in Belgium, according to March 1 million tons; in France coal reserves lie in the pit come to several million tons; in Germany, although reserves in the Ruhr basin are comparatively small—not much more than half a million tons—they are steadily on the increase; the United States has accumulated over 25 million tons, about 80 to 100 million tons, which vast stores, it is true, formed part of the intensified preparation by the American coal owners for the miners' strike in the bituminous regions, breaking out in April, although the coal reserves were rapidly increasing even before this.

British Competitors.

The growth of reserves may be attributed to the fact that the coal industry cannot find a market since the British coal-owners, having strangled the great miners' strike are able to win back the markets lost during last year's 7 months' struggle lowering their prices still more. The principal competition is with German coal by which British coal was chiefly substituted on the international market. At the same time British coal is crowding out of the market those countries whose output showed particular development during the British strike—Poland, Belgium, Czechoslovakia and America. Finally the cheap freight for British coal and its high quality enables it to compete with local coal in coastal regions and coal districts with river transport. This is the case not only in France and Belgium but even in Germany, also possessing first-class quality and very cheap coal.

All the coal-exporting countries are suffering from the consequences of this British competition and of the veritable coal war now going on between Britain and Germany. Naturally the less developed countries with dearer and inferior quality coal suffer the most. It is this that explains the accumulation of enormous reserves in all European countries.

Fresh Attack by Mine Owners.

In order to cope with British competition the coal owners have been forced in all countries to lower prices. All over Europe, with the single exception, of Germany coal prices have been lowered during the past months. Germany does not require to do this, having as it is the cheapest coal in Europe, the prices of British coal only quite recently approaching it.

Since wages play the greatest part in the price of coal in all countries and since the owners are out for being anxious to cut down prices by diminishing their own profits, they are endeavoring to lay the burden of competition on the miners.

This is achieved by the introduction of rationalization, the raising of labor intensity, the cutting of wages and the lengthening of hours.

The German coal owners during the British strike got rid of the vast coal reserves accumulated up to that time (in the Ruhr Basin alone there were about 8 million tons in the pits), and expended the great sums of money thus obtained in improving the equipment in mines. The enormous profits accruing from the increased export of German coal were spent on this; together with reparation coal, German exports were 56 million tons for last year; even deducting freight expenses Germany made about 200,000,000.

Germans Rationalize.

Other countries, however, could not show such a stupendous increase in output, and must have not introduced rationalization to the extent that Germany has. They are now not in a position to rationalize the industry so quickly and must perforce do nothing for them to do but to increase the pressure on the workers.

Everywhere the preparation of the owners for a fresh attack can be observed, and indeed in many countries this attack has already begun.

In France the wages of miners have been considerably cut and the "coming out" campaign is in preparation for the getting rid of the more belligerent, revolutionary elements from enterprises.

The owners in Belgium are preparing to lower wages and waging a campaign against working hours.

Wages have gone down in the Saar Basin.

In Spain wages are going down and the 7- and 8-hour day is threatened.

In Poland the owners are endeavoring to cut wages 8 per cent and to substitute the 10 hour for the 8 hour day (enjoying it is true, a purely nominal existence).

The German mine owners are forcing the workers in some districts to work 9½ to 10 hours and preparing for an attack on existing leave.

Great unemployment is rife in Czechoslovakia, the pits working only 5 or 4 days a week and a campaign being waged against the 8 hour day.

The 5 per cent rise given to the Dutch miners has been withdrawn.

In England, where the working day has been lengthened and wages lowered the miners are threatened with fresh wage-cuts in June, already introduced in some places.

In the United States over 150,000 miners are on strike as a protest against a wage cut of 25 to 30 per cent.

Even in South Africa and Australia great tension, bursting out in a succession of conflicts is increasing between owners and miners.

The Position of the Miners.

The miners are meeting the attack in very unfavorable conditions. During the British strike, when the miners might still have achieved something, the demand for coal was exceptionally great, the reformist leaders did nothing to struggle for the interests of the miners. On the contrary, they rejected all their energies to prevent the miners taking an active offensive. The miners everywhere, in consequence are not only unable to meet the attack of the owners from a vantage point, but are necessarily forced to defend the position which was theirs before the strike. The prophecies of the revolutionary miners have been completely confirmed: international blacklegging and reformist treachery of the British miners have become direct blacklegging of the miners in their own countries.

Unions Weaker.

Miners' organizations everywhere have become weaker. Except in France increase in membership is nowhere to be observed, indeed it is falling everywhere.

The spirit of the miners, after last year's defeat of their British comrades is far from the belligerence demanded by the developing attack of capital.

The reformists everywhere are pursuing the most shameless scab policy. In France they are loudly declaring that no strike is possible after the reverse in England, and substituting for class struggle parliamentary blathering. In Germany the reformists have as a matter of actual fact pledged themselves against strikes, the mine owners resorting to the arbitration courts, whose decisions are declared compulsory by the government in Belgium, Holland and Czechoslovakia the reformists are avoiding open, resolute conflict with the owning class, especially the Communist section of it.

In such circumstances the role and significance of the revolutionary miners becomes of the greatest importance, since it is only they who will honestly and mercilessly defend the interest of the miners.

Workers Suffer.

They are however in a minority, and the blows of the capitalists and reformists are showered upon them from every side. The employers turn them out of the pits; the trade union bureaucrats turn them out of the unions. The obstacles in their path are countless and the likelihood of their failure in such conditions great. At the same time the illusions sown by the reformists among the rank and file tryers to weaken the attack of capital, and they will follow those who summon them to true unity—the revolutionary leaders of the Labor Movement.

Letters From Our Readers

To The DAILY WORKER:

To the average family the motion picture house is one of the chief places of amusement; and as with other capitalist institutions it is well used in poisoning the minds of the masses rather than to educate them. The narrow standards that it symbolizes, the old prejudices, the rellin-ious morals, with the heroic love affairs that usually end well is usually the rule.

A new characteristic of the motion picture industry for the past few months is an intensified production of war pictures. It reminds one of the prewar days. The characteristic of these pictures is that they are represented under a comical appearance.

The "Better 'Ole," "Tell It to the Marines," "Lost At the Front, etc., are some of the many; as well as the tedious long pictures showing the new hero of the air "Our Lindy," or the extra show of "Coolidge Saluting the Cannons."

In all these pictures the class conscious worker can see through the hypocritical mask of capitalism and can read their vile intentions.

These pictures want to tell the masses that there is nothing frightful about war. That it is rather a pleasant adventure. Well, the earth is spitting fire! What of it? There's fun in it after all!

In spite of all the efforts to picture war in rose colors the public is not enthused. The bitter experiences of the last, but not least world war are still fresh in its mind. Sincerely yours,—Caroline Friedman.

As a newcomer in your midst, at least permit me to offer my heartiest congratulations for the excellent manner in which your Managing Editors have handled the publicity of the Sacco and Vanzetti case. To say the very least, these two men rightly deserve a new trial and a fair one-this time, not a framed one. More than that they should have an unconditional pardon and the State of Massachusetts should compensate these two so-called radicals, (I call 'em patriots of the highest order) for the inconvenience, embarrassment, the 7 years of their valuable lives that they were forced to spend behind prison bars. What a shame especially in this enlightened day and age, that two men such as Sacco and Vanzetti should have to suffer for a crime, practically unknow to them. I sincerely believe now, more than ever before, that the Shoe Trusts and other large combines have played a large part towards convicting these and other radicals in this much boasted free country of ours.—Anthony Probe.

To the DAILY WORKER:

There is an old saying that "every picture tells a story." This is quite true with regard to the tabloid newspapers of today. The capitalist class owning these sheets use them in perverting its interests, and always with an eye to shaping the opinions and ideas of the people. The master class is consciously and keenly aware of the fact that pictures have a tremendous effect on the minds of the great mass of the people. What plain, dry writing cannot say or do to cajole and deceive the masses and keep them in subjection, pictures are called upon to do effectively and fruitfully. The lives and pleasures of the rich parasite class are pictured as a goal which the worker may reach if he works hard enough and is submissive enough.

In New York City today, most of the newspapers are devoted to pictures. These pictures, of course, have little bearing on the life-struggles, sufferings and misery of the toiling masses. The ideology of the capitalist class, their pleasures, luxuries and weaknesses, is the usual theme. Besides this we get plenty of militaristic propaganda to make recruiting easier. This mental poison gains in strength and power every day.

The labor movement must face and fight this insidious menace, and work to counteract it. Why cannot the working class bring into being a tabloid labor newspaper devoted to its own; a picture newspaper that shall reflect and portray the many-sides activity of the toiling masses wherever the struggle may be,—in shop, mine or farm, and in the poverty-stricken home. This is a most propitious time at the present time for the working class.—Mark Stone, New York City.

Dear Comrade Miller:

I was very much delighted to read that The DAILY WORKER is starting a campaign for five thousand new readers. It would be a great thing if we could make these five thousand new readers our answer to the Federal indictment, just as the Russian workers are building their Red Army, Navy and Air Fleet, as their "Reply to Chamberlain."

On account of illness in my family I had been unable to do as much as I would like to do for our DAILY WORKER for the past month. Therefore I would like to help your campaign by making the following offer.

In order to stimulate the enlistment of new readers in the heavy industries, I will offer to pay free of charge for a two months' subscription for every young worker in the District 6 (Cleveland), on his eighteenth birthday. This is a challenge now to District 6, one of our most important industrial districts. All they have to do is to send in the names and addresses of young workers and the date of their eighteenth birthday and I will pay for a two months' sub for them. For this purpose I am inclosing a check for One Hundred Dollars.

Yours for The DAILY WORKER.—Leo Kling, New York, N. Y.

F. D. No. 3 is composed of a membership mostly of needle trades comrades. Our Party membership knows about the struggle that the needle workers are confronted with at the present time and it is understood that all the forces of money of the comrades are exhausted. But when the appeal for The DAILY WORKER came, it did not stop the comrades of F. D. No. 3 S.S. 2-A to collect about $90.00 of an attendence of about 20 comrades. Broadway Briefs

Sojin, the Japanese actor who introduced Shakespeare, Ibsen and other dramatic works to Japan for the first time in the native tongue of the Flowery Kingdom, is playing in "Foreign Devils," a new film production based on the Boxer uprising in China. The story is from the pen of Peter B. Kyne, and will have Claire Windsor in the cast.

The Fifth Avenue Playhouse is showing another German importation, "Shattered," with Werner Kraus playing the principal role. The film was directed by Lupu Pick. Beginning this Saturday the Little Cinema playhouse will present "Crima and Punishament."

The 55th Street Cinema is showing this week Emil Jannings in "The Last Laugh" and "Driven," a drama of the natives of the Carolina mountains, with Charles Emmett Mack and Emily Fitzroy.

Vanzetti in Letter Complains of Cruel Treatment in Jail

Vanzetti, writing to a friend here, commenting on his transference to the Charlestown State Prison says that prisoners there are subjected to "odious discomforts."

The letter reads in part: "In Dedham the prisoners have at least some air, light, a slice of land and sky to contemplate, a daily hour of sunshine and free air in the yard, and also some weekly visits."

"But in Charlestown it is different. The death house is a bad place in all seasons," the condemned worker writes, "but windowless, airless, lightless as it is, it is a terrible place in hot weather. One summer, I remember, a doomed man waiting for the end was kept there, and we heard that some guards fainted on account of the heat and suffocation of the place.

"If we are carried to Charlestown prison on July 1st we will agonize at once, because of the heat and want of air. Then, if a reprieve should be granted, we would be removed to Cherry Hill wing, where we would be kept in solitary confinement until the governor would have decided our fate."

This letter was dated June 25th and what Vanzetti feared has already taken place.

"Yet," he concludes, "I am confident, my heart is steady, and I will hope—in spite of all."

...OCK DODGE CHI. TAXES; TEACHERS CHARGES BACKED

Assessments High for Poor, Survey Shows

CHICAGO, July 7 (FP).—That the Chicago teachers' unions are amply justified in crusading against the big tax dodgers for the sake of the city's school children, becomes apparent from an unexpected source in a study of real estate values and taxation. The study is made by the Institute for research in land economics, an auxiliary of Northwestern University largely under the domination of real estate interests, which makes its revelations the more remarkable.

The gross inequality in assessments, repeatedly demonstrated by the Chicago Teachers' Federation, is striking by shown by Herbert D. Simpson, who compared for the institute the assessed valuation and the actual selling price of over 6000 properties all over Chicago.

Just as the teachers have said, the poorer residence districts are assessed higher, relatively, than the richer districts. In a few cases the full assessed value was more than the actual selling price and in other cases the selling price was 30 times the assessed valuation. Summarizing the 6105 cases studied, Simpson finds that the full assessed total was atound $68,-900,000 while the actual selling total was over $218,000,000.

Taxation equitably applied under present law would yield ample revenue to give every child a seat in school in permanent buildings instead of barracks, keep classes down to manageable size, pay decent wages to competent teachers and eliminate the speedup "conveyor" system of education that is making a factory out of the schoolhouse, the teachers have long contended.

Teachers Fight Taxdodgers.

The elementary teachers, organized in the Chicago Tearhers' Federation, have been making a fight against the big taxdodgers who own property, particularly downtown. The men high school teachers, Local 2 of the American Federation of Teachers, are getting after the corporations that are dodging their taxes on capital stock value. Their suit is well under way in the courts.

Not all of the Northwestern study is favorable to the contention of the teachers, as was to be expected from the auspices of the work. The institute for research in land economics has been formally condemned by the American Federation of Labor as assuming the guidance of private real estate interests under the fair banner of disinterested research.

JUDGMENT FOR $45,000 ISSUED AGAINST UNION

The suit of the International Union Bank, an right wing institution against the Joint Board of the Cloak and Dressmakers' Union has resulted in a judgment of $45,000 against the holding corporation of the Joint Board building.

Supreme Court Justice McCook reserved decision on another claim of the bank for $45,000 against the Joint Board direct, and in relation to a $12,000 note on money loaned to the right wing during the recent strike and which has been endorsed by the Joint Board.

Suits for additional sums totalling $300,000 against the Joint Board will come up for trial soon.

When a jury was being selected, Morris Hillquit, attorney for the bank objected to a member of Local 10 of the right wing International sitting in the box. Frank P. Walsh and Louis B. Boudin represented the Joint Board.

KINGS COUNTY HOSPITAL INQUIRY "CAVES IN"; DEAL WITH RABBI BRINGS COLLAPSE

Mayor Walker's so-called investigation into charges of racial discrimination which exists at Kings County Hospital collapsed Wednesday afternoon when Rabbi Louis Gross announced at the opening of the hearing that he had arranged with the six expelled gentile internes to withdraw against them the charges of assault if they in turn were prepared to promise never to indulge in anti-Semetic "hazings" again.

"The feelings of the four Jewish internes who were attacked," said the rabbi, "is that those guilty should not be punished but that conditions as they obtained at the hospital be corrected."

"It was decided to withdraw the charges," the rabbi said, "provided the gentile internes express regret and abhorrence at the occupience at the Kings County Hospital. This they have agreed to do."

The way is now clear for Walker in carrying on this "investigation" for the very purpose that it was called, which is to force the resignation of Burl S. Cider, commissioner of public welfare.

Immediately following the rabbi's statement the court declared a five minutes' recess.

When the hearing was resumed and witnesses were called all the anti-Jewish character of the hearing had disappeared. With a callousness which betrayed the sell-out, the mayor went after general conditions at the hospital. Relieved that the race issue, so-called, had been taken out of the hearing by the withdrawal of the charges, the mayor had a nice time proving that Kings County Hospital was badly administered, a fact that is true of all city hospitals.

The lawyers for the four Jewish internes were furious at the rabbi's summary action in urging the doctors to withdraw the charges. They felt that the rabbi had taken advantage to set himself up as a "good fellow" and at the same time to serve Walker's purpose in turning the alleged hearing into a political pillory post.

In his statement Gross mentioned the fact that altho he had not consulted the rabbinical board he felt that they would support him in his prevent action.

SLUGGED PAINTER PICKETS ARE IN GRAVE CONDITION

Five of the striking Brooklyn painters who were Wednesday brutally beaten by police are in serious condition, and a large number of the others are suffering from wounds inflicted when they were clubbed during the mass picketing demonstration.

Harry Leving, Isadore Abramovitz, Irving Kishkopsky, Philip Terby and H. Hoffman were so severely slugged during the attack by the cops that they had to be taken to the hospital.

Despite the police terrorism picketing will continue as usual, leaders of the strike declared.

The trial of the nine pickets arrested last Wednesday has been postponed until July 19. Meanwhile they are free in $500 bail each.

Sharp breaks in the ranks of the bosses were evident yesterday when a number of employers who usually get their painters from the Master Painters' Association applied to the union.

Stenographers' Union Sponsors Wisconsin Birth Control Plea

MADJSON, Wis., July 7 (FP).—Abolition of legal obstacles to birth control information is requested of the Wisconsin legislature in a petition introduced for the Bookkeepers', Stenographers' and Assistants' Union of Milwaukee by assemblyman William Coleman, socialist, of the same city.

The union holds that the methods of enjoying sex intercourse without the danger of pregnancy should be told to mothers by doctors in the interest of the children already born, of the health of mothers and of lightening the population pressure on international peace.

More Victims In Chi War.

CHICAGO, July 7.—(INS)—Gangland warfare broke anew in Chicago today claiming two victims.

Peter Sansone, 39, was shot to death by gangsters in the street and the body of S. R. Emma, 28, was discovered on a deserted highway, where police said he "had been taken for a ride."

Three bullets pierced Emma's body. Sansone had been shot six times.

The two deaths raised gangland-murders here in the last nine days to seven. All, police said, were highlights in a bootleg war.

Anthracite MinersFight To Free Sacco, Vanzetti At Pittston Conference

PITTSTON, Pa., June 5 (By Mail).—That the workers of the anthracite coal fields are solidly behind the move to free Sacco and Vanzetti is proved by an outstanding conference and mass meeting held Sunday July 3rd in Pittston, Pa.

The conference, initiated upon the call of two local miners' unions, brought together 288 delegates representing 83 different organizations. Of these, many were locals of the United Mine Workers of America. The conference heard rousing speeches by Albert Weishon, Boris William Montgomery Brown, Rev. William Brennan, ex-president of District No. 1 of the UMWA. Plans were laid for broadening the conference on a county basis, including every single miners' local and every workingclass organization of the entire upper anthracite region.

Speakers at the mass meeting which followed the conference included Carlo Tresca, Bishop Brown, Albert Weisbord, P. Toohey, Congressman Casey of Luzerne County, and others. From the determination and enthusiasm displayed by both the conference and the mass meeting it is plain that the coal miners are prepared to go to the limit of their strategic industrial power before they will see Sacco and Vanzetti murdered by the executioners of American imperialism.

National Security Head Sore at Young Worker's Anti-Military Pamphlet

Anti-military activities carried on by the Young Workers League have aroused the ire of major-general Robert Lee Bullard. As President of the National Security League he issued a statement yesterday calling attention to the fact that Communists are distributing leaflets urging workers not to join the so-called Citizens' Military Training Units.

The general was particularly incensed at a pamphlet which was circulated among a recent batch of student soldiers bound for Plattsburg. The general characterized the pamphlet as "un-American."

It read in part: "The Citizens Military Training Camps is one of the means to train the future cannon fodder that will fight and die on some far-off battle field. The slogans employed in order to attract you to the camps are nothing more than smoke screens to hide the real character of this war-breathing place."

Latest Flying Machine Return to Steam Engine

JERSEY CITY, N. J., July 7.—Gotthard Strohschein, former clergyman, is attempting to interest capital in an invention which he declares will revolutionize trans-Atlantic flying—A steam-driven bi-plane.

Strohschein, who as an evangelical minister preached in Chicago, St. Louis and other cities, declares his invention is feasible. It calls for a gigantic plane to be driven by steam power generated by crude oil or kerosene. Its speed would far transcend that of existing planes, and would be capable of reaching Paris in twenty hours, he claims. Strohschein claims the cruising radius of his plane would be 7,000 miles.

Largest Dye Works Struck in Angeles; Picket Is Arrested

(By a Worker Correspondent).

LOS ANGELES, Calif., July 7.—In this city—where "labor troubles are unknown," according to the Chamber of Commerce—a strike in the largest cleaning and dyeing plant, the City Dye Works, 3000 So. Central Ave., is now in effect.

The walkout of 98 per cent of some 100 workers took place June 28th, after all attempts of the union failed to make the boss, C. M. Brannon, 2510 Tenth Ave., listen to reason.

Arrest Made.

During the noon hour, June 30th, 20 autos, filled with strikers, were seen driving east on 5th Street and presumably south on Central Avenue to the struck shop—displaying white cardboards with inscription in black letters; such as: "Equal pay for men and women for equal work performed."

At the Dye Works, A. E. Bock, 2624 Michigan Ave., was arrested and charged with parading and picketing without a permit.

Mr. Brannon has absolutely refused to listen to any of the demands of the workers—preferring to stick to the M. & M. with its open shop program. On the front walls of Brannon's plant is painted an emblem with the inscription: "Member National Association Dyers & Cleaners." Why is it right for the bosses and wrong for the workers to organize, the workers like to know.

The strikers declare: "We will walk the streets and starve—but never go back to Brannon under the old conditions."

Right Spirit.

At night, June 30th, they had a special meating in the Labor Temple, conservatively estimated, 800 dye workers of Local 176 were present. They had been called on short notice over the telephone for the purpose of devising ways and means of carrying on the strike to a successful end.

Strike Funds Coming In.

Organizer A. S. Glassman spoke. He predicted the strike would be won, stating he had faith in the workers and stressing the necessity of having "Ammunition for War."

He asked for $1,000 and said he would pay from his wages $25 a week until the strike had been won. It seems to the writer that the $1,000 asked for must have been more than made up by the $25 contributions, not to mention the many many tens and fives.

A year or so ago, the dyers and cleaners of said Local 176 won their strikes both in Los Angeles and Long Beach, Cal.

Jerry Built Army Plane Crash "Investigated" by National Guard Officer

WATERTOWN, N. Y., July 7.—Two deaths caused by reconditioned "Jennie" army planes are being investigated by the national guard court in session here.

Lieutenant Carl J. Sack and Captain Curtis Wheeler were instantly killed recently when the jerry-built plane crashed to the ground. Both aviators were experienced flyers and no reason other than the condition of the craft is vouchsafed for the "accident."

Brigadier-General Gillette, acting for the government in the hearing, maintained that the plane was in good condition when it took off.

Sack was pilot and Wheeler was acting as observer when, for no apparent reason, the plane collapsed into a tailspin and crashed.

Vera Buch Speaker at Pittston, Pa., Women's Meeting Next Tuesday

PITTSTON, Pa., July 7.—Vera Buch will be the speaker at a mass meeting to be held here next Tuesday evening. While a general invitation is extended to all workers to attend, women of the working class are especially urged to be present to hear how they can help better conditions for themselves and their families by organizing and fighting together with the men workers.

Kill 2 Hi-Jackers.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 7.—Two Hi-Jackers were shot and killed in an attempted raid upon a bootlegging bottling plant in the warehouse district here today. The dead men are believed by police to be a former local boxer, Salvadore Carlomagno, and Salvadore's brother.

Chicago Labor Notes

By CARL HAESSLER.

CHICAGO, (FP) July 7.—The unlicensed teachers of the United States again demonstrated that they are the vanguard of the profession by their convention pronouncements in Chicago the past week. The American Federation of Teachers, though enrolling less than 1 per cent of the country's 800,000 or more teachers, has through its locals in the bigger cities and its members at large enlisted on imposing agrarian education workers for its progressive program in the field of better schooling as well as in the broader field of social justice, national and international. The convention reelected President Mary Barker of Atlanta and Secretary-Treasurer Florence Curtis Hanson of Chicago.

(A summary of the convention resolutions will appear in the July 6th Labor Letter).

Street Car Crisis.

The crisis in the differences between the Chicago Surface Lines and Division 241, Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes, has been postponed over the 4th of July holidays. Rumors are flying fast. Some hint at federal intervention as several of the roads are in receivarship, others that a compromise will be reached, denying the men the 13 cent hourly increase over the present maximum of 75 cents, but granting them insurance and changes in working conditions, while still others have it, according to a guard on the elevated lines, that "the men will run away from their officers" if some wage boost is not granted.

In case of a strike the elevated men, numbering 5000 and comprising Div. 308 of the union, will quit with the 15,000 surface workers, as was the case in the strike of 1922. In 1902, 25 years ago, the traction employes, who had just joined their present international, demanded a substantial raise over the then maximum rate of 22 cents an hour.

Mine Conference Fizzles.

No results were achieved in the conferences in Chicago between the Illinois Mine Workers and the coal operators of the state. The union refused to consider a wage cut from the Jacksonville national scale that expired April 1st while the operators, except those now employing about 3 per cent of the union membership, refused to run their mines under the old scale. It is understood that changes in working conditions, particularly with regard to machine loading and payment for non-productive work underground, were discussed.

The national bituminous coal lockout, except in isolated fields, is now in its 4th month. Indications are that it may drag on several months more until the demand for winter coal becomes too great for the nonunion fields now in operation to take care of.

The Illinois legislature has adjourned with most of organized labor's program scarcely recognizable in the wreckage of lost bills. The woman's 8-hour bill, the old age pension bill and the firemen's pension bill rest in the graveyard.

An agreed bill, with employer and labor backing, was passed amending the workmen compensation act, giving some concessions on each side. The mothers' pension law was improved. Labor defensive victories include the death of the state constabulary bill and of a while list of bills proposed by the corporation interests for giving criminal judges more power and taking away from trial juries many of their present powers.

Students of the First Moscow University Show Keen Interest in America

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R. (By Mail).—When hundreds of thousands of workers move thru the streets of Moscow in a May Day Demonstration, it may be asked how such an outpouring of the masses is organized and directed.

It is very simple. The fountain sources of the demonstration are the places of work. The marchers gather where they toil as builders of the new social order. Thus one section comes along. It is that of the Pravda, the central organ of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union. The employes of the Comintern (Communist International) building march together. But the great battalions come, of course, from the shops and factories.

The time and place of every section of the Great Red Parade is mapped out with Red Army military precision, the time to assemble, when to start moving and the streets along which to proceed to finally join with the great human flood pouring across the Red Square before the Kremlin. The parade does not break up, however, once the Red Square has been passed. To permit this would result in an uncontrollable human jam in one section of the city. Instead the workers march in orderly array back to the starting place, back to their places of work, where they disperse.

Church Holiday Is Abolished.

May 1st, this year, came on Sunday. But Monday, May 2nd, for that reason was also a legal holiday thruout the Soviet Union. The workers decided to take off Monday, thru the actions of their organizations, at the same time, however, voting to work on August 6th, which has been recognized as a religious holiday. This year, however, August 6th, is stricken from the map as a holiday. The workers enjoyed instead an extra May Day.

This switch in holidays was being explained to me as I stood watching the procession of workers move by in the Red Square. But the explanation was interrupted by a student from the First Moscow University who wanted "the American comrade" to come and make a speech for them at 12 o'clock. It was then 11:30 o'clock. The student, a Russian, spoke to a Finnish comrade who knows both Russian and English, and so I got the request and agreed.

On the minute I was taken away on the promise that I could return as soon as I had finished giving my greeting from America. A Chinese comrade, who had been to the Brussels Conference and had later addressed huge anti-imperialist demonstrations in Germany, came along with us. We worked our way thru the throngs, getting out of the Red Square near the Sobakina Tower. Then we had to break thru the line of soldiers that was coming up alongside the Alexander Garden, that now covers the Neglinka Rivulet, which is conducted thru a subterranean conduit and hidden from view.

Russia's Oldest University.

The buildings of the First Moscow State University are not far away in the Mokhovaya, shortly after it branches off to the left from the beginning of the Tverskaya. The buildings are to be found on both sides of Herzen street. This is the oldest of the Russian Universities, having been founded in 1755, due to the efforts of the scientist, Lomonossov. The building of the old university, at the northeast corner of Herzen street, was erected in 1817 by Dilarch in the Muscovite Empire style. On the building is a tablet bearing the inscription, "The task of science is to serve mankind." In front of the old University are two monuments, erected by Andreyev in 1922, one to the revolutionary thinker, A. Herzen, and the other to his friend Ogarev, who were both students of this university.

The new university occupies the southern corner of Herzen Street opposite the "Manege," formerly a riding school of the cavalry section of the czarist army, which has now been turned into a garage. On the corner wing of the New University we find the inscription, "Science Belongs to the Workers," which was put up after the revolution. In front of the new university is a monument to Lomonossov, professor at this university, erected by Ivanov in 1876. Several anthropological, ethnological and geographical museums are attached to the university. Next to it in the Mokhavaya Street is the building of the University Library crowned by a dome (this library contains about 600,000 volumes).

Scene of Horrible Massacre.

In October, 1905, a great concourse of over 150,000 people gathered on this Square between the University and the Riding School, on returning from the funeral of Baumen, a murdered revolutionary. This crowd was fired on by the czarist police, a horrible massacre resulting.

But today the youth of the workers and peasants are attending the First University of Moscow. It is theirs and they were anxious to get a greeting from the comrade from America. There were thousands of them gathered here, waiting their turn to start off in the May Day Parade. One of the students mounted the portico before the main entrance, which bluzes with crimson bunting, May Day slogans greeting everywhere. Cheers prevails. But it is quickly broken as I am presented as a member of the Central Committee of the American Communist Party and the editor of its Central Organ, The DAILY WORKER. What faith these workers, peasants, students of the Soviet Union have in our American Communist Movement! What interest they show in it! The applause grows and the Student Band breaks into "The International."

I reviewed at some length the grip of the capitalist reaction upon the educational system in the United States, upon the lower schools, the colleges and the universities. I told how the youth of America were being militarized in the schools, making them pliant instruments of the Dollar Imperialism.

But I also pointed out some of the hopeful signs. I told of the participation of students in various strikes, especially in New York City, where they had been jailed on the picket line, along with the striking workers. I told of the expression of radical views in practically every student conference held.

Greet Students of U. S.

Great applause greeted my statement that a large delegation of students was planning to come to the Soviet Union this summer from the United States. I urged the First Moscow University students to get in touch with them, so that at least some of them might return to the United States as good revolutionists. I pointed out the role of the students in the Russian revolution, the part the students are taking in the present Chinese revolution, and pointed out that we, too, in America were gradually winning allies for the workers among the students in American universities. Thus, I pointed out, that our American Communist Party was struggling against capitalist-controlled education and for Workers' Education, knowing that with the downfall of American capitalism, the doors of America's universities would only then be thrown open to the working class youth of the cities and the land in our country.

This great student mass listened attentively and ap-

Chester Textile Workers in Strike Ferment

CHESTER, Pa., July 7.—Chester has awakened from Rip Van Winkle sleep. The slaves in the mills have patiently suffered wage cuts for a number of years. So much so that the word "union" seemed to scare the workers with even the little respect one usually associates with the profit seekers. Anything was good enough for the "hands" who made the fortunes for the textile barons.

On Friday, 10th of June, one of the most arrogant millionaires decided to take another slice off the already disgraceful wages of his workers. Irvings Worsted Mill was the place—Mr. Irving the blatant Babbit. The workers came to the mills as usual and found to their great indignation that another 5 per cent wage cut was being enforced.

100 Percent Speed-up.

The workers in the mill are mostly young boys and girls many of whom receive a wage of $10.00 for TWO WEEKS work with an average wage of $11.00 per week for the whole mill. The little children in the mill range from 12 years upwards. The speed-up system is 100 per cent efficient; the conditions are hellish, toilets being particularly obnoxious.

The last wage cut was too much. The wool-sorters decided to protest and were met by the bosses with the usual class collaboration dope of, "Come and see me on Monday and we will discuss the question." Monday came and the workers went to see the boss. They were refused a hearing and all were fired at the end of the shift. There were only 17 wool-sorters implicated but the rest of the workers were very bitter about the left-handed action of the boss and decided to call a meeting for Wednesday, June 15th, to discuss the whole situation in the mill and support for the wool-sorters.

Pat Devine was called in by the Chester Taxtile Committee to handle the situation. Leaflets were printed for the meeting and three workers sent to distribute them. The police were on the job and arrested the workers on the charge of disorderly conduct. Workers who saw the arrest were shocked to see the arbitrary action of the police against workers who were merely distributing a meeting. Many ideas about democracy, free speech, etc, were shaken and showed themselves at the meeting that night. For practically the first time in years the workers of Chester gathered together to discuss the question of a ruggle.

Enthusiasm was at a high pitch. Especially the young workers were against any worsening of their conditions. In view of the fact that a majority of workers had not come to the meeting it was decided to call another meeting for Friday night.

Leaflets advertising the meeting were printed and Devine went to the factory gate early the two others to distribut them. The workers did not wait to be given the leaflets, they literally rushed to the distributers and asked for bundles of them to take into the mill.

Don't Want Another 1908.

Suddenly three men jumped at Devine and held him until the usual convenient police protection came on the scene. As the policeman came forward one of the scissorbills urged him to use his club—he did not however. The other workers were arrested simultaneously, with Devine. On the way to the police station the captain of police met the party and went almost crazy. "Had you any trouble?", he bawled. "Yes", said one of the assistants of law and order, "from this one here", pointing to Devine. "Did you use your clubs?", he barked and was very obviously disappointed when told no. "We've got to be severe on those birds", the captain then said. "We don't want another 1908." (1908 saw a big traction strike that was finally settled after the company had been bankrupted, the town tied up completely and the militia called in to repress the workers.)

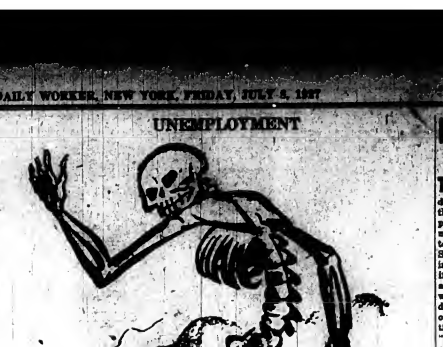
The police station was all excitement, and the prisoners were marched in. Foul language was bawled at the prisoners. Talk about Russians, Jews, etc., etc., predominated until the officers asked for names. Patrick Devine, the first name given seemed to upset the balance of the guardians of the law, who were mostly Irishmen themselves. After that things were not so bad.

Even the hard-boiled cops were surprised when the judge mentioned the case. A lawyer from the mill concerned demanded that substantial bail be imposed—and it was to the tune of $2000.00. At no time in the history of Delaware County had such terrible bail been imposed.

However the meeting had been well advertised and the bosses were wondering what to do. Before the workers left the mill that night they were given a lecture by the superintendant and then—invited to a free ice cream party. Nothing like it had ever happened in the history of the mill; an ice cream party by Mr. Irving, the toughest old nut in all Delaware County. Why was it given? The only answer was "to keep the workers away from the meeting." Every half-intelligent worker saw the hypocrisy of the whole affair.

At the meeting about 120 workers were present of whom 70 were from Irving Worsted Mill where the trouble was. Reports came to the meeting that only 50 workers had gone to the ice cream party.

Before the meeting opened some workers told the chairman that a few foremen and the superintendant's side-kick were at the meeting — and they would like to put them out.



The chairman opening the meeting scored the boards for their actions and asked their representatives at the meeting to leave the hall. "If this were a Chamber of Commerce meeting no outsiders would be allowed in and they are not going to be allowed here either", he said.

Not one of the erstwhile stool-pigeons made a move. A stranger rose and said he was here on a special mission and would like a talk with the chairman. This was allowed, during the conference it transpired the stranger was the personal representative of the Mayor of Chester who had sent him there to get a report. Credentials were shown and he was allowed into the meeting.

No Spies Wanted.

The chairman then urged the spies who were present (he had not mentioned names) to have courage and leave the hall. After a few seconds silence one foreman and then another stood up and asked leave to make a statement. They were told they were only small men and would be dealt within due time; the big cheese was still hiding. After another appeal during which the bosses were again scored heavily the superintendent's man "Friday" — who by the way is his intended son-in-law — gallantly rose and asked leave to make a statement. The chairman demanded that all three leave the hall—and go to the ice cream party where they would be more welcome. The leader appealed to the Mayor's representative for permission to remain in spite of the chairman's ruling but was turned down on the ground that the chairman was the supreme authority unless the meeting decided otherwise—and the meeting was unanimously behind the chairman.

UNEMPLOYED "STUFF"

By JENNIE PINCUS.

The place is crowded. "Stuff" we are called by employers as well as the agency.

"What stuff have you got for me?" a boss wants to know.

"A couple of waitresses, chambermaids, all-around help; look them over."

We sit there on benches and chairs, while the boss looks us over. His picks out four men, who look strong enough. "I want two more. Get me two more, so I can be off."

The boss of the agency asks him to be patient. He'll get him all the help that he wants. Soon the hotel keeper bursts out impatiently, "Can't you get me two more hands? I'm busy."

"What d'ya want—shall I make 'em for you?" General laughter.

Soon two more are found, for "stuff" in the human slave market is not lacking.

We sit and wait. Young and old, men and women, coming, going, waiting, waiting, waiting. We sit there for hours, days, weeks, and wait.

Some are less patient than others. One gets up to go. The boss of the agency stops her. "Don't go. We'll have something for you in a minute." A minute! Ah! how long that minute is.

My eyes wander. I look at the people. Some are in groups, talking and laughing, but with an eye on newcomers for prospective employers. They tell each other of their experiences with bosses and customers. In most cases they lie as to wages and hours of work, and they know they are not telling the truth to each other.

One waiter with "swell" hotel experience will tell his hearers that last season he made two thousand dollars; that he had one of the best rooms to sleep in and that he was treated with the greatest respect by employers as well as guests; he even went on outings with them, and the girls would beg him to come and dance (only he knew his "pinee" and always refused).

I smile as I hear this story. I have heard such stories before, and afterwards seen these braggarts in action. Working like slaves, they are busy from early morning till late at night. When the work is over (which is never before nine or ten and often eleven at night) they go to their "best" room in a damp cellar beneath the hotel dancing parlor.

Again my eyes wander. A woman with a face that tells of suffering, a face with lines of pain and hatred written all over it, whose every lilne and wrinkle shows a lifetime of struggle, of beating against the iron wall of economic necessity. And now at middle age, whea the life of a woman should be brightened by love of children and life, she sits there, and waits.

"Why don't you place me somewhere, anywhere?" she cries. "I must live." "What do you think? Can I make a place? What's the matter, can't you wait?" "Yes, wait. That's all I've been doing for the last two months is wait. Why don't you bury me, so I wouldn't be bothering you, waiting and waiting all the time."

She is a cook—ready to stand at the hot stove, burn her hands and arms; ready to work from dawn to setting sun. But she is not wanted, she is old "stuff."

The First Peasant University.

The White-Russian Soviet Republic is richer by one more cultural institution.

On the 1st of May in Gorky, in connection with the White-Russian Agricultural Academy amid a "throng of peasants the first Peasants' Sunday University of the U. S. S. R. was opened.

It has been decided that the professors of the Academy shall give free lectures at the University. The scientific workers of White-Russia have taken upon themselves the task of supplying literature to the University. The Direction of the Agricultural Academy have offered laboratories demonstrative institutions, etc., for the use of the University.

The White-Russian peasantry are deeply interested in the new University. A whole host of requests have been received at the university for admittance, many being from the local peasants.

At the First Moscow University.

plauded vigorously. But the First Moscow University has become a workers' University only thru long effort and great sacrifice. It is said that the huge czarist riding academy was purposely built ou the other side of the streets to cow the students, who might show any signs of revolutionary inclinations, into submission. It is sufficient to say that during the October (Nov. 7, 1917) Revolution there was hard fighting for this building. The vestiges of the damage then caused were only effaced by renovation undertaken in 1924. On the wall of the building opposite the Troitzkiye Gate, there is a tablet, fixed there by the order of the Soviet Government, with the sentence of Cicero, "When Socrates was asked what country he came from, he answered, 'I am a citizen of the world.' My native country ". On the corner of Mokhavaya and Vozdvishenka is a bas-relief representing a revolutionary fighter with the inscription, "Let Us Break Off With the Old World!"

Here are surroundings indeed to spur the oppressed, even in America, to new and greater struggles.

MESABA RANGE AND ITS INDUSTRIES

By ALFRED BACKMAN

TWENTY years ago the Mesaba Iron Range (so-called for its enormous deposits of iron ore) was known to the outside world only for its great mine centers at Hibbing and Iron mines. Thousands of workers flocked to the northern corner of Minnesota, St. Louis County, to seek employment in the mines or logging camps. Few, if any, at that time dreamed that about twenty-five years hence, one would see in the same territory hundreds of fine dairy farms, thousands of acres of the finest clover and timothy fields, wide, stretches of "man made prairie land" with valuable herds of dairy cattle.

One wonders when traveling in this peculiarly developed region how man transforms whole countries, even states, into a modern habitation for himself. These farmers at one time were employes of the various mining or logging companies. Due to the seasonal and subsaitny form of employment, hundreds of veteran miners and loggers, in their declining years, were forced to move out of this industry. The mining and railway compaules, who owned all the land, were also interested in deposing of their stump land to the miners at a comparatively low price. The timber being cut away, the land was worthless to thr former owners. A very distinct and radical change must have taken place in this particular industry if this vast number of men have left it to take up farming.

Fewer Jobs.

Upon careful investigation of the mining industry, we find that about a score of years ago, the mining industry needed a much greater number of men than at the present time. All the ore was brought to the surface by means of shafts (or vertical tunnels) as an average man would call them. Consequently this method of ore production required a tremendous amount of labor power, and the production was slower and costlier.

A Change In Production.

As we look at the mining industry today, we see but few shafts or tunnels. We only find great open pits measuring a mile across and hundreds of feet deep, reminding an observer of some canyons in the western Rocky Mountains. Huge steam or electric shovels sinking their iron jaws into the bowels of the earth, and a network of railroad tracks are built throughout the pits with strings of cars rumbling and puffing in every direction. These giant shovels filling fifty-ton cars in a few shovelsful, each train of cars moving slowly according to the requirements of the shovel operator. We do not see men working with picks and shovels, as ons imagines a miner would. A miner today on the Mesaba Range is either the driver or a steam shovel operator. Thus thousands of workers were deprived of a job as a miuer at the advent of these modern machines of production having only a very few dozen men at the machines producing more ore than several hundred or a thousand did before.

During this period, the lumber industry was developing equally as rapidly as mining. Millions of acres of the finest pine forest at one time covered the entire range. The logging industry developed with great strides. Armies of men emigrated every fall for the winter season's logging. Cities like Duluth, Cloquet, Virginia and Cloquet, developed, depending largely on the sawmills and pulp-mills.

Today one can travel within the radius of fifty to seventy-five miles of Virginia or Hibbing and not see an acre of virgin timber anywhere. This industry which once employed tens of thousands of workers has been practically wiped out of existence in this territory. Barren stretches of stump land resembling a desert greet the eye of the traveller who wonders where the millions of feet of timber has disappeared. Gradually this land is being cleared by hard working farmers who were compelled to resort to farming for a living. This particular "back to the farm" movement in this district was not voluntary by any means. On the contrary, the struggle for existence drove the industrial worker to take a step toward that which seemed to insure him and his family a more permaneut home.

Farming Industry.

Like a huge mower, the logging industry had cut-away the timber, leaving the stumps and rocks blazing in the sun, resembling skeletons in the wake of a horde of vultures. Later the ex-miner and logger arrived on the scene and developed practically all this into tillable soil. During the last two decades of back breaking toil, these stumps and rocks have gradually disappeared from view. Forty acres' forty has been cleared and rich soil is found under the debris of rocks, old timber and underbrush. This pioneer farming industry finally developed into dairying, which in turn brought with it the creamery industry. Several small creamery companies have sprung up throughout the Iron Range.

Co-operative Movement.

Farmers throughout the range have organised co-operative stores in practically every community. The farmers were compelled to establish these through the force of necessity. Often one was told when talking to the farmers, that they were forced to organize their own stores for the simply reason that there were no stores within their reach, so the co-operative idea was the logical solution. These co-operative associations answer every requirement of the farmer. There he buys his farm machinery, flour, feed, etc., in a word, every commodity he and the family require.

All these various stores have formed an organization, called the Mesaba Range Co-operative Federation. The members of the federation consist of boards of directors and managers of the co-operative stores. This federation meets once or twice a month to discuss joint buying, joint picnics and business matters of various kinds. About twenty associations have thus far taken active part in the work of the federation. This organization in some respects resembles a farmers' union.

Co-operative Creamery.

In the course of a few years of the existence of the Co-operative Federation, cream buying and selling was often discussed. These deliberations brought a plan to establish a central butter-making plant. After several meetings about a year ago, a small committee was placed in charge of a survey of the entire range country and its cream production. The survey showed that these co-operative stores handled several thousand gallons of cream weekly, which is shipped out to various creameries in Virginia, Duluth and Hibbing. The outcome was that at a meeting, two months ago, a concrete step was taken to organise a new institution called the Mesaba Range Co-operative Creamery Association, embracing the several thousand farmers living in the northern half of St. Louis County. An organiser was employed for one month, who would cover the entire district. Meetings were held in each community. Shares were issued for sale and share-selling committees were organised in each of the 20 to 25 different farming localities within the Mesaba Range Country.

The combined Mesaba Range Co-operative Creamery Organizational Committee met at Virginia Monday evening, June 27th. The organizer's report was heard and discussed. New life and enthusiasm was evident throughout the meeting. Nearly half of the needed sum for building the creamery is already in sight. Farmers left for their respective homes with a feeling that a new step in the co-operative field has been taken in this territory. An institution of their own is being born, which in the future will take care of all their cream produce co-operatively. This will in time do away with the private profiteer, who today is burdening the already over-worked farmer every-

This organization will be patterned after the 400 Co-operative Creameries in Iowa, Minnesota and North-west. Farmers have finally realised that through Co-operation, it is possible to efficiently fight the private profiteer and through their own co-operative organization, receive the full value of the products that he produces. To end speculation, adulteration, and all forms of exploitation off the face of the earth and in the final analysis transform all production for profit, production into the hands of those who produce. The farmers throughout are keenly interested in establishing their own Central Co-operative Creamery. They saw the rapid development and success in their own local store organization, which proved to them the logic of Co-operative effort. The Co-operative in each community is the center of all social activity. There the farmers and workers meet to discuss their daily problems, and there is where the Mesaba Range Co-operative Creamery Association was actually born. There can find its roots and foundation. Here the producers discuss their marketing problems, and the necessity of all the producers joining hands and uniting against the price fixers, speculators and all the elements, who are today taking a lion's share of the farmers' products. Here we find the creamery inducing his neighbor to join this gigantic movement of the Producer, and become a builder of the Cooperative Commonwealth.

National Educators Hit At Military Training

SEATTLE, July 7.—Denouncing state anti - evolution laws, the Resolutions Committee of the National Education Association was on record today against legislative interferences with course of study in public schools.

The resolutions committee also criticized the maintenance by law of certain required subjects, as compulsory military training and compulsory physical education.

The educational value of the movies was discussed in the visual instruction department of the N. E. A. "Leaving films out of teaching is like dropping the verbs from language," Ernest L. Crandell of New York City, told the visual instruction group. "Children are going to learn through the film whether we wish it or not—therefore, we had better take hold of the situation and use movies in our formal instruction."

Minneapolis was named the 1928 Convention City.

DRAMA

An International Theatre Exposition

THE city of Magdeburg, Germany, is holding an International Theatre Exposition, and which is to continue through the summer. The opening was marked by a festive performance of Wedekind's "La Feras del Diaztino," translated by the poet and dramatist Werfel, and conducted by Walther Reed.

The plan aims to trace the development of staging art, by means of plastic reproductions and models. The exhibition, which claims to cover the span from Shakespeare to the German Reinhardt Organization, the "stylized drama," to mention only a few of the degrees through which Germany has and is passing during the past few years, are detailed by examples of work.

The exhibition begins with the year A. D. C. From a model of the ancient Dionysian theatre, with its spectators' regarding a scene from "Agamemnon," there is a quick transition to the Middle Ages. Mystic and passion plays are covered with the conserved scenes and the Hans Sachs plays, which were robust and caustic criticisms of the times. Later the German troupe of strolling players established in the English court, were making way for the Court Theatre, leading up to the "classic" period of Goethe & Schiller. The largest space in the exhibition is the original scenery to the first performance of Schiller's "Räuber," in 1782.

Richard Wagner, Max Reinhardt is shown in models from its inception to the latest setting of the "Ring." But the most fascinating to the foreign visitor are the technical exhibits showing the latest devices used in the German theatre of today. All that can be done to produce illusion in the way of mechanical contrivances, lighting effects, and revolving stages, are evidently in interest when they are compared with the models of the highly developed German but "old-fashioned" theatre used in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries.

One important movement in the German theatre of today is very well represented. This is the political side of the two streams of organized amateurdom who form the great theatre-going public in the middle and lower classes of the people's theatre, a striking chart shows, has its affiliated societies of young people's theatre groups, who play in improvised theatres, also play in improvised theatres. The Karl Marx Hall, Berlin, has its counterpart in a "National" theatre movement, where the amateurs of conservatory turn of mind conduct productions of their own type. The only difference is in the type of play chosen. So highly organized is the political theatre-going movement in Germany that parties have been made up of members of these dramatic associations to visit this exhibition room, which provides for practically every phase of the theatre's life. The revue is now in its third month.

Rehearsals are now going on at the Martin Beck Theatre of Rosalie Stewart's revue "A la Carte," which is scheduled to open at that theatre in August. The cast includes: Yorke and King, Jans and Whalen, Hector and Holbrook, Karaveff, Maude Powers, Vernon Wallace, Little Billy, Jay Velie, Neree, Dora Duby and Helen Morgan.

Glenn Hunter, who made quite an impression in "Young Woodley," both in this city and on tour, will be seen this fall in a dramatization of Fulton Oursler's novel, "Behold This Dreamer."

Reinhardt Coming to America Next Season

Unless Max Reinhardt changes his plans again, New York may see the noted actor-manager at a Broadway theatre sometime this coming season. According to word received here from Berlin, Reinhardt has promised to play here with an ensemble from his Berlin and Viennese theatres. The engagement is announced for only two months, and this is to include some touring in the large cities.

The plays, which of course, will be given in German, will include, "A Midsummer Night's Dream," "Die Racuber," "Kabbala und Liebe," and "Don Carlos." The theatre where the company is to appear is not decided as yet.

Broadway Briefs

Grant Mitchell will head the cast of "Cyclone," the new farce by George M. Cohan, which will open August 8 in Atlantic City and then go to Boston before a Broadway showing. Spencer Tracy and Nan Sunderland have been engaged for the supporting cast. Cohan will not appear in the cast, but will direct the production.

James Thornton, the monologist, will make his first production appearance in "East Side-West Side," the Eddie Dowling-James Hanley musical which Charles B. Dillingham and A. L. Erlanger will present here this coming season. Ray Dooley, Barney Fagan and Eddie Foy will also be in the cast.

"Gridiron Gods," a college play by Benedict K. Goodman and Charles Conger Stewart, will be produced here by Sam Wallach.

Julia Sanderson and Frank Crumit will be co-featured in "The Love Pirate," a musical show, which Vaughn Glaser and Max Bretton will produce here in August.

Leo Carrille, recently seen here in a revival of "Lombardia, Ltd.," has been signed by Harry L. Cort and Clark Ross to play the lead in "The Brigand," by Paul Fox and George Tilton, which is scheduled to open August 22 at the Windsor Theatre in the Bronx. Betty Linley and Susanne Cauh will also be in the cast.

Arthur Byron has been signed by the Park Avenue Players, a new producing firm, to play the lead in "Black Velvet," by Willard Robertson, which Frank Keenan played last winter in Chicago.

"The Wild Man of Borneo," by Marc Connelly and Herman J. Mankiewicz, which Philip Goodman tried out last winter on the road and then shelved, will give it a second tryout in the fall, having booked to open on Broadway September 12.

Adele Hampel has replaced Estelle Bloch in the cast of "The Grand Street Follies" at the Little Theatre. The revue is now in its third month.

A new farce, "The Mating Season," by William A. Crew, is on its way to Broadway, and may be seen here the week of July 18. Gladys Feldman, Lillian Walker, Ethel Martin and Kenneth Manion head the cast.

Helen Shipman, Miriam Sears, Lester Vail and Mark Haight have been engaged by Alfred E. Aarons for "The Proud Princess," in which Hope Hampton will be starred.

Honorary degrees of Doctor of Letters were conferred by the University of Wisconsin, upon Maude Adams and Minnie Maddern Fiske.

Robert Milton will direct "People Don't Do Such Things," by Edgar M. Schoenberg and Lyon Mearson, which Jones & Green will do here ths coming season. Eric Blore has been engaged for a prominent part.

George M. Cohan has a musical play which he intends placing in rehearsal August 1. It is titled "The Merry Malones," and book, lyrics and music are all his own. The production opens out of town in September.

The premiere showing of "Rich Men's Sons" will begin Monday at Moss' Broadway Theatre. The film is adapted from a story by Dorothy Howell. Ralph Graves, Shirley Mason, George Fawcett, Robert Calu and Johnny Fox are the featured players.

On the Screen

"The First Auto," the Warner Bros. production starring Barney Oldfield, is now in its fourth week at the Colony Theatre. The Vitaphone presentations consist of Weber & Fields, Tha Happiness Boys, and Aunt Jemima.

"Old San Francisco," in which Dolores Costello is starred, now playing at the Warner Theatre, has in conjunction a new Vitaphone program consisting of Beniamino Gigli singing selections from "La Gioconda"; Willie and Eugene Howard in a comedy, "Pals"; Blossom Seeley, assisted by Bennie Fields; and Tom Brown and the Six Brown Brothers.

On the same program with "Streets of Sorrow" which the Film Arts Guild is continuing at the Cameo Theatre, is a short feature, "Heels Over Heads in Love," a French single reel in which the faces of the anouymous cast are not seen during the action, the little drama being enacted solely through the medium of the hands and feet. Another short film is enacted by Castleton Knight, a little experimental film, based on the Rachmaninoff E sharp minor prelude. It was directed, acted, and financed by himself.

The New Plays

MONDAY.

"RANG-TANG," a revue, will open Tuesday night at the Royale Theatre, with an all-Negro cast headed by Miller and Lyles. Kay Gunt wrote the book, Ford Dabney the music and Jo Trent the lyrics. The Industrial Squad—The Bosses' Cossacks

By JOSEPH ZACK

THE war has brought many innovations in its wake, various adaptations of fascism according to the varied needs the employers have in each country. In New York we have in the city's police force an institution called the Industrial Squad. This force is supposed to preserve "law and order" in industrial disputes and has under its authority the uniformed police whenever its activities call for it.

Perhaps many workers don't know that the underworld, that is that part of the population consisting of gangsters, thieves, murderers, etc., have anything to do with strikes, with employers' associations, or with anti-labor law enforcement and nowadays even with control of unions. If the workers don't know this they had better get acquainted, as this is the outfit that plays a very important role in all strike-breaking combinations. The Industrial Squad fits into this like a head into a body.

The law permits picketing, it permits organising, but just try and do it and you will find your pickets arrested under all kinds of subterfuges, restrictions will be imposed, the pickets will be clubbed or even gassed, as in Passaic. Injunctions or no injunctions, law or no law, the employers in control of the local and state or federal government will find a way to do it brutally and thoroly enough by indirect terrorization and if necessary, laws are passed or injunctions issued for the purpose. Quite often they do the job even without these formalities. The usual procedure in important strikes in big cities is in many ways different from methods used in smaller localities.

Let us give a brief illustration of what takes place: When a strike is brewing in any trade in New York the employers' association thru its law department gets in touch with certain detective agencies and the police captain of the territory. These detective agencies have their connections with organized professional bands of gangsters, who for the proper amount are ready to do all kinds of jobs on the pickets, the mildest being a plain ordinary beating. Stabbing, breaking arms, legs, jaw, or fingers have their extra prices. To break a workers' neck, smash his skull, or murder him, are specialties priced accordingly. Quite often the bosses' association is in direct touch with the gangs, without any intermediaries. Here is how a job is done.

The police having been properly instructed by "higher ups" and for special consideration given the cop on the beat, the eyes of the law enforcers look the other way or take a walk. Gangsters in automobiles come upon the scene, bounce on the pickets, slash, stab and leave them laying there bloody. Quite often such jobs are made one after the other. The gang in machines disappear as quickly as they come. Sometimes in the dark of night and quite often in open daylight and even in the most congested parts of the city, such jobs are done. If the pickets are not enough intimidated by this and if they still insist, there is the injunction, like in the last cloakmakers' strike, with wholesale arrests and open suppression of picketing by uniformed police. Arrests, fines, etc. do a great deal to empty the union's treasury.

All this used to be done in the past in an unsystematical, accidental and inefficient way. Moreover, the unions under reactionary leadership used to hire professional underworld gangsters to counteract the terrorizing tactics of the bosses. Quite often the bosses' gangsters were bought by the union or vice versa. In many cases on record the gangsters took pay from both sides. A regulator had to be put on this business. Particularly so with the rise of militant unionism the underworld arm of the bosses had to be systematized and made more reliable. Hence our bourgeois city fathers created this new institution, the Industrial Squad.

Big strapping fellows, comparable only to cossacks, with murky animal faces, guerillas in human form, some of them formerly union officials, other shady underworld characters, sluggers, former experienced patrolmen—this is the outfit. They are familiar with the underworld and know the leading gangsters that sometimes work for the union's side, "the Frenchies," "little Augies," "Jack Noys," e.

EDITOR'S NOTES

By ALEX BITTELMAN

COOLIDGE is wooing the farmers. Like a real practical man, he is combining pleasure with business. He has transferred his headquarters to South Dakota and is carefully spreading a net of political manipulations to catch the farmers' votes in the coming presidential elections.

There is, of course, a good deal of comedy in all this business. His political sermons, his fishing expeditions, his little interviews with so-called "dirt" farmers, the whole pastoral and idyllic atmosphere that has been created around the summer White House—all this presents excellent material for a first class humorist. But it would be a serious mistake to dismiss the entire matter as mere Coolidgeism. Because what is now taking place in South Dakota is a real political struggle, a class struggle, in which big capital is leading the offensive against the poor and working farmers of the United States.

There are really two big objectives that the Coolidge administration has set out to achieve through the president's expedition into South Dakota. One is to break down the farmers' opposition to Coolidge and the other is to kill the Lowden boom or the possibility of any other so-called western candidate against Coolidge. If the present incumbent of the White House succeeds in this, he and the republican party will undoubtedly receive the support of large sections of big and medium capital in the coming elections. If he fails, several things are likely to happen, none of which will be any too pleasing to Coolidge and to the present republican machine.

Coolidge must therefore work hard. And so he does. He is pursuing his old strategy of dividing the farmers by trying to conciliate the rich at the expense of the poor and middle farmers. He dangles before the eyes of the well-to-do farmers the promise of government aid to cooperative marketing societies and the extension of credit terms for marketing surplus crops. But he continues to resist stubbornly any of the basic provisions of the McNary-Haugen bill. He does so for the reason that the capitalist class is opposed to these provisions. In fact, the capitalists of the United States would resist any legislation tending to curb or even seriously regulate the handling of agricultural products on the home and world markets. All the friendly talk of Coolidge about cooperative marketing is hollow and meaningless because the basic condition that he attaches to it is that the grain speculators and big bankers continue to dominate the trade and its fortunes. And as long as this condition prevails, no real farm relief is possible.

Lowden's flirtations with the farmers are pretty clearly of the same kind as those of Coolidge. With this important difference that Lowden's agreement with the McNary-Haugen bill shows him to be more consistently in favor of the rich farmers than Coolidge is. In other words, the well-to-do elements among the farmers have in Lowden a more reliable friend than they can ever expect to find in Coolidge. Thus, as far as the rich capitalist farmers are concerned, Lowden is an incomparably better candidate for them than Coolidge.

But how about the middle, the poor and the working farmers? What do they stand to gain by Lowden as against Coolidge? This is the important question. And the answer to it is: Nothing. Lowden's agrarian program, assuming that he is a sincere adherent of the principles of the McNary-Haugen bill, would at best serve the interests of the rich and partly of the middle farmers. The great mass of these farmers that are seriously suffering from the effects of the agrarian crisis would not be relieved at all by the views and methods of Lowden. This must inevitably happen not only because of the total inadequacy of the measures championed by Lowden personally but also because he is a prominent politician of the republican party—the party of capitalists—which is not going to permit the strengthening of the farmers' position with respect to the grain speculators and big bankers.

The poor and working farmers must look for farm relief elsewhere. Neither Coolidge nor Lowden, neither the republican nor the democratic party, are means fit for the needs of the poor farmers. The way to actual agrarian relief is through the organized political struggle of the farming masses themselves, through their own organizations, and in alliance with the workingclass organized in a party of its own.

THERE is one good thing—and only one—about the three power "disarmament" conference in Geneva. It offers a splendid demonstration of the fact that the imperialist interests of the capitalists of the United States and England cannot be reconciled, but sooner or later, indeed a successful, proletarian revolution. In the meanwhile, these two capitalist powers will come to an armed clash precipitating a new world war.

In the conduct of the British delegation at the Geneva conference there is nothing particularly new except perhaps an unusual amount—unusual for the cool and composed British aristocracy—of heated antagonism directed undoubtedly by the desperate state of affairs of the declining British imperialism. The ruling classes of the British Empire seem to find it very hard to become accustomed to the fact that they are no longer holds the first place in world imperialistic politics. There is still a good deal of imperialist illusion in the minds of English capitalists. But these illusions are being knocked out pretty fast by the realities of the world situation and by the aggressive and militant self-assertion of American imperialism.

Study the conduct of the American delegates to the Geneva conference and you will find the other side of the present world picture—the growing ascendancy of American imperialism. These American delegates, comparatively unimportant and little known persons by themselves, speak the powerful and arrogant voice of American big monopolistic capital. This voice has already made its will known in Geneva quite plainly. It is that American imperialism is out to dominate the world and in order to accomplish this aim it is determined to become as strong a sea power as England and later on even stronger.

The technical discussion among the experts as to the present relative naval strength of America, England and Japan is of course important. It shows that none of these capitalist powers really abided by the so-called Washington agreement which established the 5:5:3 ratio for capital ships. Each one was trying to cheat the other two. The Japs which proved particularly guilty in that respect was England. That is why the United States government initiated the Geneva conference. And that is also why the American imperialists are not hesitant in their present attempt to reduce England's naval strength and to increase their own.

Those who expected real disarmament, or even a reasonable limitation of naval armaments, are bound to be severely disappointed. The Geneva conference is nothing more than another phase in the struggle between American and British imperialism for sea power and world domination. The conference may come out of it in some sort of a fake understanding under cover of which each of the parties concerned will continue to arm the others until such time as American imperialism finds the moment opportune to step out from under cover and take charge of the situation by sheer force of arms.

The American workingclass, the American farmers and all those exploited by the ruling classes of the United States must face the present situation frankly and honestly. Mere partisan of the old type should have left us long ago. It is more than futile to engage in pacifistic chatter. It is time to give up the struggle for world domination "merely" because it leads to war which more particularly inclined persons do not like. Nor will the cry against the Coolidge politicians accomplish anything substantial—a cry in which even the opponents of London's expansionary ambitions somewhere—unless this cry is backed by real and militant opposition of workers, farmers and poor middle classmen of the cities, waging a consistent and militant fight of a serious political nature not alone against Coolidge but also against all those forces whose will Coolidge is putting into effect.

The Letter in the Cement Barrel

A Story—By HAIAMA TOSAKI.

(Translated By Vera and Violet Mitkorsky).

MATSUDO TODZO'S work was opening barrels of cement. On opening the barrel, he measured the cement into boxes which a machine picked up and shot down a wooden slide. The machine waited for no man, and for eleven hours each day, this man stood between the boxes and barrels with a shovel in his hands; eleven hours in clouds of cement dust.

Matsudo Todzo was an ordinary laborer and during the eleven hours of his working day he had but one desire, to free his nose from dust. His head, shoulders and eyelashes and moustache were covered with cement dust, and in the nose the dust formed a sort of hard iron ore. He found no time to blow his nose. The machine spits out cement ten times per second and he must not miss a single time. At mid-day there was a half hour interval, occupied in consuming a handful of rice, cleaning the machine, and what could not be called rest, that instant when his numbed hands could reach his nose. The cement penetrated through the nose to the lungs, blood, the whole body.

So it was everyday, so it was today; but today, shovelling the cement from a barrel into a box, Matsudo Todzo saw a small box.

"Odd," he thought, but there was no time to think more, the machine waits for no man.

He picked up the box. It was light. He shoved it into the pocket of his apron and continued to shovel.

The day seemed long, and knocking out the bottoms of barrels of cement, crawling towards him on a belt, he reflected that there could be no money in the box, and so forgot all about it.

At sunset, the concrete was finished, the machine slowed down, the working day was ended. In the stream of a hose which supplied the machine with water Matsudo Todzo washed the dust from his hands and face, knotted the furoshiki round his neck, a kerchief in which he carried his meagre lunch, and set out to walk home—with precious thoughts of eating, drinking and sleeping.

The power house on which he was working would be finished soon, and then he would have to look for work again.

In the twilight, lifting its snows to the sky, loomed the majestic Fujiyama. At its foot, boiling and roaring, roamed the Kisogawa Matsuru, the same now as a thousand years ago. The evening cool chilled the tired body of Matsudo Todzo. The grandeur of nature made him think bitterly of the seventh child which his wife would shortly present to him, that it would come, not considering anything, in the coldest part of the year, as if to spite him, that his two yens would not buy enough rice, that he was tired of everything, that—that—

The thoughts of Matsudo Todzo were sombre, his spirits low.

Then he remembered the little box which lay in his pocket. He took it out and wiped it on his trousers. It was firmly fastened with nails and bore no address or inscription.

Matsudo dashed the box against a stone, but it did not break. He swore, and in that temper when one wants to trample the whole world underfoot, he kicked the little box violently.

The box fell open and rolled off. From it Matsudo took some old rags, and wrapped in them, found a folded paper.

This is what was written on the paper:

"I am a working woman in the cement factory where I sew sacks for the cement. My husband, my beloved, worked at the grinder, shoveling broken stones. On the morning of the seventh of November, he was lifting a large stone into the machine when he slipped and fell into the machine together with the stone. The machine was not stopped. He was buried in the stones and the machine chopped his body into pieces, and spit out bloody fragments. This machine pawed the pieces of his body on to another, where, between steel blades, and in a terrific roaring, his body was ground to powder. His flesh, his bones, and his soul became cement dust. His became cement, he, my beloved. Only the rags of his working clothes remained. I gathered these rags and wrote this letter and buried them in the barrel of cement which you have opened today.

"Are you a worker? If you are, have mercy and answer me. I want to know what happens to the cement of my husband's bones. Are you a stone mason or a carpenter? I want to know if my husband will become a theatre corridor or a prison wall? You are a worker, do not use this cement for such buildings.

"Write and tell me, where is my husband? In the West or in the East? Far or near? Where is he in cement, and how will he resurrect?

"These pieces of his working clothes are a gift to you. They are saturated with sweat and stone dust, such sweat as yours, and such dust as that in which you work."

Matsudo walked on. The sky had grown almost black and Kisogara roared in darkness. Only Enaisama dreamed among the stars.

Facial lines obliterated
Under sweat-ooze,
Pushing, grunting, trampling bodies.
Male and female,
Merged into one monstrous body,
Centipedal,
Caterpillar in its motions.
Slothful furor . . .
Breathings thick and warm and flavored
Dankly mingled,
Were sucked in, then exhalated
Freshly tainted,
To be breathed again and issue
Evil-odored.
Tight-embracing men and women
Wedged together
Faint with beast-heat; swayed together
As the long train
Tunnel-thundered; rocked together.
Soft and hard flesh.
The discomforting contortions
Of taut torsos
Ecstacised the primal surge
Erogenously;
A fantastic rite of Phallic

Oil and Exploitation in Persia

THE Persian oil wells are the natural continuation of a broad zone beginning in Turkish Armenia and stretching through the Mesopotamian oil fields to the southern extremes of Persia. Oil refining is at present chiefly carried on in the Maidan-I Naftun district, which lies 225 kilometres to the northeast of Mohammerl in the province of Arabistan. The quality of the Persian oil may be judged by the fact that twice as much petrol and kerosene can be extracted from it than from the American or even Mexican oil. Oil is produced in Persia by old fashioned methods of immemorial age. The population used it for fuel and medicine. Persian oil only began to be produced by modern methods in the beginning of the 20th century. The imperialists' zealous search for oil, intensified by war conditions, gave a violent impetus to the working of the rich Persian oil wells. In 1921 d'Arcy, an Englishman received a concession of the right to exploit a great territory for sixty years, the terms providing for 16 per cent net profit to the Persian government in return for the rights of exploitation.

The production of oil on a really large scale, however, was only begun in Persia in 1909, when work in the Maidan-I Naftun pools, already referred to, was embarked upon. Thus, one of the "57" wells has a capacity of 4,000 tons per day. With the formation in 1909 of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, with a basic capital of $2,000,000, big-scale work begon. The interest felt by British imperialists in Persian oil waxed ever greater. By the time of the Great War the British government had made up its mind to become the real master of the concession: it owns bonds to the sum of $2,000,000 and continued to increase its share, so as to achieve what is practically control by the British government over the Anglo-Persian Oil Company. The war gave a strong stimulus to the development of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company's concession.

The following statistics bear eloquent witness to this: the output of oil in the company's works increased from 233,962 tons in 1913-1915, to 1,106,416 in 1918-1919 and 3,714,216 in 1923-1924, these figures rising every year. We would note that the Anglo-Persian Oil Company is one of those powerful capitalist oil concerns controlling the whole of the world production of oil. The income of the company during the last two years has increased as follows: from the report read at the 17th annual meeting of the company's share-holders, held in London, November, 1926, we see that the assets for 1926 were £4,382,320 as against £3,571,966 in 1925. There are at present 700 miles of oil pipes in the possession of the company as against 145 in 1912, and 164 miles of railway and 253 oil freight vessels. While the oil company was in process of formation regular oil towns and stations sprang up in Persia, with a mining population. Such is the town of Abadan (on the island), converted into a regular oil town, sending petrol from its refinery to three continents: Africa, Asia and Europe.

During this time enormous contingencies of oil miners, employed in the enterprises of the Anglo-Persian Company made their appearance: there are now over 50,000 workers and employes working for the company, 83 per cent of whom are Persians, about 13 per cent Indians, a few British, Armenians and Chinese. What are the labor conditions of this contingent? These are described in the report presented by "The Society of Persian Southern Oil Workers" to the Persian parliament and printed in "Kabul-Mastin" of the 15th of March, the Persian paper issued in Calcutta. Moral oppression and physical violence are rife in the enterprises of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company. The workers live and labor in terrible conditions. Their working day is over 12 hours. Children from 12 to 14 are widely employed. The pay is miserable and consists of not more than 3 kran a day (a kran is less than 6d.). The report of the Persian workers is as follows:

"Who is there to see the miserable broken down hovels in which we have to live, to see how we go blind from working in the terrible heat of summer? Who cares that we die from noxious gases, who is there to pay any attention to our naked starving little ones?"

And side by side with these miserable slaves of oil capital dragging out their wretched existence flourish the foreign employes, receiving high pay and enjoying every sort of privilege. The workers have scarcely any federation or organizations, not being allowed to organise and are not yet capable of struggling for their rights.

WHY CHILD LABOR?

By MORRIS SPECTOR.

Why do children of workers go to work at an age when they really should be in school? Is it because they want to go to work or because their parents do not want them to go to school? No! All parents want their children to grow up into strong young men and women and not to have to slave in factories when they are young. But your parents cannot help it, the bosses do not pay them enough to support a family so they are forced to send their children into factories and mines in order to help them.

Especially now during the summer time, many children go to work, instead of going to a camp or farm for a vacation. But this does not mean that children do not work when there is school. They do—even though there are laws against this—the bosses find a way to get around these laws by bribing the inspectors. And it even pays them to do this, because they make plenty of profit from child labor, since they pay the children so little.

All workers, and especially children must fight against Child Labor.

Join the Young Pioneers and help them fight against this great evil.

ABOUT HENRY FORD

Dear Comrades: One day I was going to school. I was talking to a friend about Henry Ford's reduction of the working day and increase in pay. I told him that Henry Ford's workers work five days, but they put in seven day's work a week. The boy said that the workers should work five days a week and get paid for five days only. I told him that five days is enough but the workers should get paid six days' wages. That's why we must fight and make them pay good wages like the Russian workers fought for and got and like the Chinese workers are fighting for. That's what the working children should do too. Long Live the Chinese Revolution.

...ved they know how the game is played. Lately this ...branch of play ...ngles was amalgamated with another ...gang of cutthroats, called the Bomb Squad.

This also was a post-war innovation, created for the purpose of harrassing the political labor movement. The Industrial Squad employes a lawyer who ...ndles their business and there surely is plenty of ...work. Here is how it works. The squad has its eyes ...on the ground on any organization drive or strike ...that is about to happen. Connections are made with ...the employers' association and any employer who ...want police protection are recommended to this ...squad. If the employers are wise then an adequate ...and well posted ...ion will do a great deal to get ...the proper ...service."

...ere is what is meant by "proper service." This is ...one of the cases that ...ppened during the ...last strike of 1926. The ...ndustrial Rapid Transit Company decided to ...terrorize the strikers in order thus to perhaps crush ...their strike. Hence one bright day as the strikers, ...many of whom are ...ew gentle fighting Irishmen, were ...leaving their strike hall, they were pounced upon ...by the thugs of this big traction company, lead ...by the Industrial Squad. The strikers were black-...jacked right and left, kicked and stabbed, and one ...lad to be carried away in an ambulance with a ...broken skull. Uniformed police were standing by ...to see the striking motormen should get the upper ...hand, which of course ...ould see them. The strik-...ers, however, who had just held a peaceful meeting, ...were taken so completely by surprise that they ...finally rallied and in a fifty several of them were ...quickly scattered in the gutter wounded by the blows ...and ...ugglings. Those who put up a ...resistance were picked out and finally arrested. ...Praises to say the gunmen of the company were not ...used.

...Suppose the Industrial Squad had not been in exist-...ence? The company thugsers, if they had dared to ...do a job like this, would not have had such nicely ...arranged police protection and leadership. The mo-...ment fight! have got up a real fight and the police might have even made some "mistakes" and ...arrested the real offenders. A whole number of ...things might have gone wrong. In fact, as it was, ...it was a costly job.

The usual method of procedure is that the Indus-...trial Squad organizes, protects and in many ways ...leads the activities of the gunmen and sluggers of ...the employers and having command of the police ...in this work gives them virtually a free hand to do as they please against the union's ...pickets, members or special committees. The In-...dustrial Squad does it that the union's special ...committee carries no weapons of any kind, while the ...bosses' gunmen are free to carry guns, knives, black-...jacks, etc. If any member of the union committee puts up a fight, he or she is promptly arrested and sentences are handed out to in the Rosalsky cases, with the bosses' gunmen es...aping, and even if caught red-handed and a formal arrest must be made for appearance sake, the gunman is gotten out with very little trouble to himself.

The reader may have been wondering up till now what this article has to do with the title. And will perhaps be surprised to be told that all the ma-...chinery of "law" and the underworld thus described, plus the employers' associations, who are all solid with Sigman and Company, these are the real back-...bone and ...epresent Sigman's strength against the lefts. All this machinery of the employers is at the disposal and is being actively utilized by Sigman and Company against the left wing. We should re-...member that originally the Industrial Squad was created during the post-war open shop drive to fight the unions. But since nowadays the only unions who do put up a fight against the employers for improvement of conditions for the workers are unions led by the left wing, the Industrial Squad appears to be a creation for their special benefit.

The first entry of the Industrial Squad against the left wing was about two years ago, when A. Beckerman, manager of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Joint Board of New York, or rather the Industrial Squad in his name prevented the left wing from holding mass meetings. A meeting they hunted up in Cooper Union is the most outstanding illustration. Their method is to search any left winger who looks like a fighter for weapons, but the gangsters, led by Jack Noy could have carried machine guns under their overcoats without the Industrial Squad noticing it. It is thus that Beckerman for a while became the tin Mussolini in the needle trades, for which honor Sigman is now the candidate.

In the present struggle between the left and right in the needle trades if a worker is discharged for opposition to Sigman and a scab takes his place, this scab is taken down to the union office during work hours by the union's picket committee. Sigman just calls up the Industrial Squad and the detectives rush up the Joint Board offices and take the scab down and reinstate him in the shop as if they were Sigman's business agents.

If there are any pickets in front of that shop next day they run the risk of being beaten up by Sigman's gangsters under the supervision of the Industrial Squad. This is the farce of "socialism" in the trade unions in New York nowadays. Indeed workers by this time need not be surprised at Sigman and Company using the tools of the enemies of labor against the militant local unions that would dare to challenge his rule. Anyone who knows of his treacherous activities during the strike will look upon these methods as the logical outcome of a completely degenerated trade union bureaucracy.

It is no wonder, of course, that the employers who control these tools and use them against the labor movement take full advantage of the situation, and the agreement that was fought out in one of the bitterest strikes in the needle industry is not being observed by the employers. Workers are being discharged, overtime pay is not being paid, workers are speeded, and the situation in the shops is pretty much as if there was no agreement. Sigman, of course, is getting the services of the Industrial Squad and his underworld from the bosses, not to maintain unionism but to destroy it. Rule or ruin is Sigman's motto. He is getting this help for delivering these workers to his class enemies on the economic and political field.

It is the employers' associations and Tammany Hall that will be the masters of the needle trades unions, if Sigman and Matthew Woll wins. To get to that point, however, is a long, long way off in the needle trades, even after the exhaustion of a 5-months strike. Needle workers cannot thus be brow beaten for any length of time. Injunctions and court orders and Industrial Squads will not impose Sigman's leadership upon these workers and before this fight is through there will not only be a complete defeat for the Sigman type of leadership, but we will be so much nearer to a powerful Labor Party movement in New York that will make it possible to uproot Industrial Squads, injunctions and all these practices with which the labor bureaucracy in cooperation with the gangsters attempts to control the trade unions of New York.

Psychological Preparation for War

By E. H. HIMAUKA

WE have only to hark back a few years to recall how the American press, with its stories of German atrocities—outrageous lies, for the most—whipped the spark of public opinion into a roaring flame with but one idea—to crush that terrible monster beyond the seas and make the world "safe for democracy."

Now we see the British press casting about with its long talons and preparing the minds of British subjects for war on the U. S. S. R.

We see the press of England swinging public opinion into accord with the ideas of a certain few individuals whose one and only object is to quash the proletarian movement within their domain. They dare not proceed alone. The opinion of the public is too powerful a factor to be ignored.

Under the title "Nicholas II of Russia," by C. Hagberg Wright, we have the Quarterly Review of London, for the quarter ending April, 1927, praising the late tsar of Russia, and creating the impression that a more righteous and noble ruler never held power in any country.

The somewhat lengthy articles comes to a conclusion in this manner:

"Late one evening the president of the Soviet came up to his room followed by Red guards. He warned them that it was time to leave as the approaching "Whites" made it necessary. The whole family and the very few servants accompanying them dressed and descended the narrow stairs of the little house. The terrible tragedy that followed has left its lasting stain on humanity."

The subtle manner in which public opinion is being poisoned against the Soviet Union would pass undetected unless one were on the lookout for it.

Now we have The English Review (London) for May, loaning additional fuel to the flames without making any bones about it, under the title "Socialist Songs—a Twenty Year Anthology," by J. R. Raynes:

"Song makes a peculiar appeal to the emotions, and many causes have been carried on the inspiration of song. Accepting a general principle without developing illustrations at too great length, I want to remind readers of the English Review that history and song are moving together in these post-war days and to demonstrate that the songs which assisted Lenin and Trotsky in the Russian Revolution are being used sedulously in this country with a similar object."

This is fair warning to the individual who hopes that the white and blue on the Union Jack may never change into red. There is already too much red on the British flag as it is. He is therefore cautioned against giving tune to any song but that which is in praise of his flag and the land over which it waves.

Mr. Raynes does not forget to take a healthy kick at "The Red Flag"—but the first favorite in today's collection is that mournful dirge of Jim Connell's, "The Red Flag."

"Where all the dreadful things recounted in those neurotic verses occurred, or when, if ever, I have not discovered, but I have found positive evidence that the red flag of Communism has inspired the slaughter of thousands of untried and unoffensive persons who were not identified with the proletarian mob. Other favorites reveal a similar relish for the morbid expression of grief and oppression."

This leads the reader to believe that the proletarian cause is an unworthy one. The opinion naturally forms that hundreds of innocent persons are intentionally slaughtered in every clash for the proletarian cause. But let us bring Mr. Rayne's article to an end — " . . . It is only necessary in conclusion to emphasize the militant note of open challenge to society which is being sounded under the inspiration of Moscow. This is the "Song of the Red Army."

"Songs like these are being used to stimulate workers' defense corps in this country, to provoke direct action for political purposes, to spread disaffection in the Dominions, and to create a violent upheaval in India. What is to be done with such a disease in the body politic? It calls far prompt operation, and dalliance involves the danger of more serious consequences. There is no obscurity about their intentions. Should there be any hesitation about the reply?"

Now the reader has been thoroughly warned. His mind is prepared for almost any course of action that may be taken by the officials of the government.

But this is not all. The Contemporary Review (London), for June, does a little stirring among glowing coals of public opinion, with an article by Dorthea Hoare entitled "Moukden to Moscow,"—"Moukden" incidentally being the British manner of spelling "Mukden."

It is an outline of a trip from China over the trans-Siberian railway to Moscow, by two English ladies:

"When we passed the fir-clad Ural mountains with their brown trout streams and reedy pools, and settled down to the thousands of miles of rolling Siberian steppes, a Bolshevik lady of sincere convictions would invite a German and myself to her coupe for a symposium of the Bolshevik faith. He was a diplomat of liberal views, whose reputation for moderation had not been exaggerated; a big, quiet man, he would listen with a half smile."

Here we have a German diplomat smiling at the Bolshevik idea. The reader does not even stop to ponder over this. Yet it leaves an impression upon his mind which will some day rise to the surface. The German now turns to one of the ladies and remarks with a sigh: "The world owes Germany one debt at least; namely, that she stands as a buffer between Communism and western Europe."

"We were as interested in the evidences and practices of Bolshevism as in its faith. At Omsk we heard rumors of the new highway which General Feng Yu-hsiang was building from thence to the northwest corner of China—a road 'not to be trodden by imperialist feet.' Along it he can receive help from his Soviet friends without their having to reach him by way of Vladivostok or through Manchuria where highly organized Japanese opposition might supplement Marshal Chang Tso-lin's efforts."

The ladies were dissatisfied with Bolshevism. They failed to grasp the idea.

" . . . it seemed to mean that if everybody could not have a car, nobody could have a car; which did not sound like sense . . ."

However, Bolshevism has accomplished one thing upon which she must pass favorable comment:

" . . . No longer does the sigh of the political prisoner resound through these steppes or weigh on the heart, however many the other burdens may be."

She brings her article to an end which leaves the reader with a doubtful opinion of Russia's destiny: "The uncertainty is whether the toleration of other nationalities will last. It means so much, not only to Europe, but to Asia. For Europe and Asia are one. Russia, which used to divide is now setting herself to be the connecting link. And this be', she owes, whether she remembers it or not, to the past with which, she likes to imagine, she has broken forever."

There is nothing permanent about Russia today if the above is to be accepted literally. This helps the average reader who never bothers to read more than one side of the question to form his opinion of Russia.

Now that a large body of public opinion has been stripped of almost all ideas that had been contrary to the prevailing opinions of the press, we see the Scotland Yard operatives boldly dash up to the Soviet trade headquarters and with a crash that echoes around the globe, tear down the doors and enter.

Only a few resent these undiplomatic actions of British authority. The mind of the masses has been sufficiently poisoned to make any form of action against the Soviet Union and its proletarian ideas within English territory, a safe line of procedure for British diplomacy. London lost no time in requesting Moscow to withdraw the Soviet mission and trade delegation. Which has caused the London Nation (May 28th) to view the situation with misgivings:

"Manifestly these are grave decisions, which must do material injury to British trade, and which are fraught with serious potentialities to international relations. Are they wise or reasonable decisions?"

But the severing of diplomatic relations has only served to add volume to the increasing flame of public opinion against Russia.

It was with a shock that the press of the world received the news from Warsaw that Peter Voikoff, Soviet ambassador to Poland, had been shot down while standing on the platform of a railroad station, by a monarchist, advocate, Boris Koverda.

The situation has become critical.

Will the British press fan the flames until it is beyond control?

It is too early to know what the mass comment of the British press on the situation is.

We have but to wait to see.

The Knights of Labor In Belgium

THE "Knights of Labor" in Belgium, originating after the great miners' strike of 1921, as a result of the reformist policy of exclusion from the unions of all revolutionary elements, has set itself the task of struggling for the unity of the trade union movement in Belgium.

The "Knights of Labor" has at present about 9,000 revolutionary miner-members and is affiliated to the RILU. The "Knights of Labor" have made several applications to the reformists, and to the reformist miners' union in particular, proposing to amalgamate. They are ready for complete fusion with the reformist union so long as this will not be recommended by any onerous conditions for themselves. But the reformists have no desire for this. They demand that the Knights of Labor should only join them individually and not collectively and that communists should not be allowed into the reformist unions. Once more the reformists show how they are saturated with disruptive tendencies.

In the reformist unions themselves the policy of excluding Communists is systematically observed. On the basis of the notorious "Mo'ens Resolution," Communists are barred from all responsible posts in the trade unions. But this is not all: if a worker, so much as dared to vote at municipal elections for a Communist candidate he is immediately expelled from the union. Of late, however, the broad masses have begun to show their indignation at the policy of the reformists and in many places the expulsion of Communists is not allowed.

Tall spires benignly climbed the sky
And a sign over the doorway said:

OFFICE BUILDING

You have life! Fiery hard!
You perpendicular rush of ribbed steel and stone!
You imperturbable,
Stolid externally, inwardly hot-cratered
Reaper of destinies!
You, like another God, scourge your creators with Terrible penalties,
The brand of your deity burns deep your worshippers—
Frenzied, fanatical,
Moulding their lives in a matrix of clamping
Religious dementia!
Daily you swallow them, yawningly empty-mawed,
Daily you vomit them;
Then you rest bloated, like idol of orient,
Planning monstrosities;
Then you rest cat-like, an Old-China mandarin—
Placid, inscrutable.

CITY HEAT

Sun saturated air, and somnolent,
Slow-strolling, sun-drenched mass. The glare of noon,
Shed by facade, recoiled, hung in festoon,
Arose in enervating wreaths, and sent
Its seeping languor through all things replete
With life. From hips that swayed as weighted clods
Were swung thick-moving limbs, like piston rods
Cloyed with excess of grease. The brick-tarred street,
Convulsed with heat-cramps, writhed and oozed its pain
In clinging, glistening gelatin. The tall,
Lean forefingers of buildings opened all
Their panting, sucking ventricles to drain
The heat of stifled air. The sky, sun-curled,
Lay, like imprisoning lid on boiling kettle,
Atop the steaming street. Its scorching metal
Clamped tight its searing blight on all the world.

BEFORE THE END

Before the end, comrades, before the end,
How many of us alive today will stand
Helpless to press a sentenced comrade's hand,
Knowing we look our last upon a friend,
Comrades, before the end?

Comrades, before the end, before the end,
How many faithful known to us will fall
Lonely beside some unwindowed prison-wall,
And lie deprived of help or hope of friend,
Comrades, before the end?

Before the far-off end, the far-off end,
How many heads the careless eye now meets
Will lie fallen along the bloody streets,
With none to ease their struggles or attend,
Comrades, before the end?

Before we make an end, a bitter end,
How many faces looked upon today,
Will our own hands be called to make away,
Because a friend proved treacherous to a friend,
Comrades, before the end?

Comrades, before the end, before the end,
How many strong who swore they could defy
Reverse forever will slacken, fail and die?
How many will despair as friend by friend
Passes before the end?

Yet we who struggle on, today alive,
Let never for an instant our purpose bend,
The clubbed, the maimed, the shot, the prison-penned;
But let our merciless steadfastness survive
Our bodies at the end.

Mussolini's War Threats

ON the 26th of May Mussolini delivered a "great" speech, lasting several hours, in the fascist "parliament." He spoke exclusively for the fascist deputies. He began with the form of address: "Honorable fascist deputies!", whereby he wished ostentatiously to show that he took no notice of the few "liberal" deputies who had appeared at the sitting of the Chamber under the leadership of Giolitti.

The speech of Mussolini gives a really miserable picture of the "great achievements" of the "fascist revolution" in the sphere of public health, administration, police, etc.

In regard to the population question he stated, according to the official parliamentary report:

"I have introduced taxation of unmarried people which will, perhaps, be followed in the not distant future by the taxation of childless marriages. (Hear, hear!)

"The taxation of unmarried people yields a revenue to the state treasury of 40 to 50 millions lira a year. But do you really believe that I introduced this tax solely for this purpose? By no means! I have made use of this tax in order to accelerate the growth of the population.

Let us speak plainly. What are 40 million Italians compared with 90 million Germans and 200 million Slavs? Or let us turn to the West: what are 40 million Italians compared with 40 million French plus the 90 million inhabitants of their colonies? or compared with 46 million English plus the 400 million living in their colonies?

Gentlemen, if Italy wished to become a really great power in the world, she must in the second half of this century have more than 60 million inhabitants! For the past five years we have been saying that Italy has too many inhabitants. That is not true!

"If we wish to understand something of the history of Europe in the last fifty years, then we must bear in mind that from 1870 up to the present time France has increased the number of her population by two million, Germany, however, by 24 million and Italy by 10 million.

"If the number of the population declines we shall not be able to establish an empire, but we shall become a colony! It was high time this was said!"

This is how Mussolini deals with the population problem in his speech on "home politics." This extremely imperialistic attitude to the question, which is directed all too plainly against the French "sister nation," is confronted by the depressing fact, which Signor Mussolini had to admit in his speech, that the misery among the town population in Italy is so great, that the number of inhabitants of the biggest industrial centers, in spite of the rapid pace of industrialization, is stagnant and is even going back. We quote from his speech:

"In the year 1926 the population of Turin had declined by 538 compared with 1925. Milan in the same time increased its population by 221 (!) Genoa by 158. And these are the three most industrialized towns of Italy."

After this statement Mussolini consoles himself with the rapid increase of the rural population, in which he wishes to see the guarantee for the realization of his imperialist aims.

The second "home political" question dealt with in his speech was the question of the Brenner frontier. He spoke of the administrative reorganization of the province and referred to the creation of the province of Bolzen. Regarding this question Mussolini declared:

"That has nothing whatever to do with the Brenner-frontier. Even if there happened to be a hundred thousand one hundred per cent pure Germans living in the Upper Etch Valley, the Brenner frontier would be sacred and inviolable (Loud and prolonged applause. The deputies and also the public in the galleries rise from their seats). And if necessary we would defend it with a war. Even tomorrow! (Hear, hear.)

"The people living there are nothing but an Italian minority speaking a German dialect as their ordinary language, and this since only half a century. For the rest the problem of minorities speaking a foreign language is an insoluble problem; one can reverse it, but one cannot solve it.

"Those who believed that the creation of the province of Bolgiano constituted a present or a concession to the German elements, especially to those turbulent elements on the other side of the Brenner, made a big mistake. That is quite out of the question. The province of Bolgiano has been created in order to be able to Italianize this district more quickly!" (Applause.)

The Austrian and German "Fascists," and also Herr Stresemann, who in recent times has not been sparing in his demonstrations of sympathy with the Italian dictator, might take these words to heart!

But it is to Herr Stresemann in particular that Mussolini has addressed yet another message. He sought to prove the necessity of increased military armaments with the following words:

"The picture of Locarno is as follows: France and Germany mutually undertake not to attack each other, and there stands a gendarme on either side of them: England and Italy.

"But in Locarno they have made something more: a chemical preparation—the spirit of Locarno. Now gentlemen, the spirit of Locarno has today—in scarcely two years—considerably lost its color. (Laughter.)

"What has happened? The so-called Locarno powers are feverishly arming both on land and on sea.

"Then there are happenings which it would be a crime to close our eyes to. Gentlemen, the great Berlin parade of the Stahlhelm took place just recently. There were 120,000 present, which fact in itself would not be of particular interest to us if one of their standards had not borne the following inscription: 'From Trieste to Riga!' It is paradoxical and even idiotic, if you will, but it is a fact. And what follows? It follows that it is the present fundamental and foremost duty of fascist Italy to increase to the highest potentiality all its armed forces on land, on the sea and in the air! (Repeated and prolonged applause.)

"We must be able at a given moment to mobilize and to arm five million men. We must strengthen our navy. We must see that our air fleet is so numerous and so powerful that the noise of its motors shall drown every other sound on the Peninsula, and that its wings shall darken the sun over our whole country.

"Then, when between 1935 and 1940 we shall stand at the parting of the ways of European history, we shall be able to let our voice be heard and see our rights finally recognized. (Exceedingly enthusiastic and repeated applause.)."

We believe and are convinced that later events will confirm that the speech of Mussolini, at this moment, delivered two days after the breaking off of Anglo-Soviet relations is—along with the action of the English conservative government—the most serious threat of war against the Soviet Union.

One must not lose sight of the connections. The English conservative government has taken the first decisive step. The second step must be the setting up of the widest possible imperialist united front against the Soviet Union. The London conversations of the French president and foreign minister have probably not achieved those immediate positive results which are so urgently necessary for English imperialism. The attitude of Germany, too, is perhaps not such as could completely satisfy the English conservatives. In this situation, therefore, Chamberlain and Churchill send out in advance their ally, Mussolini, whose threatening speech, apparently directed against France and Germany, only serves the purpose of exerting a pressure on these governments, in order in this manner—and on the other hand by promises of England—to bring them finally into the anti-Soviet front.

Whoever wishes to deceive the European proletariat regarding these facts is an open or concealed ally of the imperialists in their campaign not only against the first proletarian state, the Soviet Union, but also against the proletariat of the whole world. He is the worst enemy of the world proletariat, which must rise like one man if it wishes to avert the immediately threatening danger of war before it is too late.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

EVEN the New York World's seemingly unlimited supply of optimism regarding the peace results that were to flow from the Geneva naval conference has dried up. There are no more editorial predictions that the boys will settle their differences around the conference table rather than by the roar of cannon and the shriek of shrapnel. England is not willing to share sea power equally with the United States and the latter does not see any reason why a power that is obviously drifting toward bumery, should be so impudent as to expect a solvent nation to be content with an inferior position.

BEHIND it all is the conflict between the capitalists of the United States and the capitalists of Great Britain over "ports to export prunes." The old gag that "blood is thicker than water" proves how rotten most old gags are. The blood of English and American sailors and soldiers may be reddening the waters of the Atlantic and other oceans before long, to settle this quarrel. Peace conferences under capitalism simply mean camouflage for war, and at best are maneuvers on the part of the conferees to steal a march on each other.

HOW to keep the creases in a well-groomed steed's trousers is one of the most puzzling problems confronting the society matron today. A young matron with a phobia against indecency, obscenity and free poetry felt that her undressed carriage horse ran the risk of being accosted by Mr. John S. Sumner and haled into court for appearing in public au natural. Fearing the effect of the resultant notoriety on her steed the lady called in her tailor and rigged the animal out in a pair of stylish pants.

EVERYTHING went smoothly until the steed started to move and as horses and even some humans have a tendency to hook the knee when walking, running or making humble obeisance to their superiors, the nag's trousers got baggy and the matron got so sick that she had to take a trip to Europe to recuperate. In the antime the horse got lonely and tried to commit suicide three times. Fellow workers, when you consider that the upper classes have to put up with you should not be so discontented with your lot. The poor ye shall have always with ye but supposing ye had to keep a nag's trousers creased!

"STOP! You may be this man!" Perhaps you have difficulty in expressing yourself. Not that we suggest you stutter your ideas to an expectant public or that you have taken the vows of silence, chastity and humility but perhaps you are not doing the kind of work that brings out your creative spirit and makes of the business of hunting food, clothing and shelter a living poem. A life insurance company, plus (what the plus means is a mystery to me) wants men who want to express themselves in a greater way in salesmanship. If you ever sold industrial insurance, sewing machines, insect powder or synthetic grape juice, you will understand what a new world this company has opened up for the ambitious.

CHARLES A. LEVINE, backer of the Chamberlin flight to Germany announces his intention of flying back to the United States in the airplane that winged her way to Europe. If Levine accomplishes this feat, the Ku Klux Klan and other worshippers of the Nordic myth will have a bad quarter of an hour. Levine, the exJunkman, was not the kind of a fellow to keep patriotic women awake all night during his hazardous trans-oceanic flight. He is bald-headed and not in the least romantic. And furthermore he is being sued by the government for $500,000 which he is alleged to have pocketed on his war contracts instead of turning it over to the government.

HAD Levine been a tried and true Nordic, this little matter might have been conveniently ignored and the newspaper would have injected his personality into the spiritual anatomy of the populace. But Levine did not go to Daugherty, Jess Smith, A. B. Fall or other prominent leaders of the G. O. P. to talk things over with them. A few thousand dollars—say about one hundred grand, in the language of the underworld, thrown into the campaign kitty of the G. O. P. would have fumigated Levine from the odors of junk and second hand clothing and rendered him fit for honors abroad and perhaps a congressional medal.

PARTY C. E. C. ISSUES STATEMENT ON THE CABLE FROM THE COMINTERN

THE Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party has issued a statement explaining the cablegram of the Presidium of the Executive Committee of the Communist International demanding the liquidation of the so-called "National Committee Opposition Bloc." The cablegram of the Comintern on the inner party situation was published in full in yesterday's issue of THE DAILY WORKER. The Comintern, in its cable, declared that it is "categorically against the sharpening of the factional struggle and under no circumstances supports the statement of the "national committee of the opposition bloc."

The Comintern declared that it "considers factionalism without political differences as the worst offense against the Party."

The statement in full of the Central Executive Committee is as follows:

The Statement of the Party's C. E. C.

"The Workers (Communist) Party today received a cable from the Executive Committee of the Communist International with instructions to publish it in the Party press. It deals with the internal situation in our Party. On July 1st the opposition began circulating documents signed: 'National Committee Opposition Bloc.'

"It is to these documents that the cable of the Communist International refers. The following quotations from and summary of the document in question ware before the Comintern when it made its decision: 'National Committee Opposition Bloc document declares Comintern completely upheld opposition on war danger, trade union work, internal situation and the China campaign. The document ends appealing to membership to rally to Communist International by rallying to opposition bloc. Document also contains statement principles opposition bloc declaring "Since Executive Committee Communist International endorsed political line opposition bloc, we proceed immediately organize opposition bloc nationality. We form immediately joint national committee equal representation from Foster and Weinstone-Cannon Groups, Unity Group Young Workers League, South Slavic Opposition, Finnish Opposition. Similar Committees shall be formed everywhere."

"We call upon the membership of our Party to support the decision of the Communist International to close the ranks of the Party and unify for the struggle against the war danger, the struggle to save and strengthen the unions and the big tasks that we face. With a new war coming on the Party needs unity and discipline more than ever.

"We close this appeal in the last words of Comrade Ruthenberg whose birthday it is today: 'Tell the Comrades to close the ranks, to build the Party. The American workers under the leadership of our Party and the Comintern will win. Let's fight on.'

"(Signed) CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY."

U. S. Guns On Tsing-tao.

SHANGHAI, July 8. — Fifteen American warships are anchored in Tsing-tao harbor with their guns trained on the city, according to dispatches received here. Twelve American submarines and one tender are also anchored in the harbor. The Japanese have seven ships, the Italians two, and the British one.

Confirmation has been received here of the information that Japan is dispatching 2,000 troops from Manchuria to Tsing-tao.

Anti-Japanese Boycott.

The boycott that is being organized against Japan in this city to protest the landing of Japanese troops in Shantung is spreading rapidly despite the efforts of the supporters of Chiang Kai-shek, Nationalist renegade, to stem it. It is feared that Japan is making an attempt to reseize Shantung which she was compelled to abandon by the terms of the Washington treaty in 1922. Anti-Japanese strikes and boycotts are spreading rapidly in the Canton region, reports state.

Chiang Executes Workers.

The execution of labor and peasant leaders by right wing officials continues at Ningpo, according to information received here. Chiang Kai-shek fearing a rebellion of workers and peasants has sent 200 executioners to Ningpo to murder left wing leaders.

Recall Ruthenberg Defiance of Court On His 45th Birthday

On this occasion of the forty-fifth anniversary of the birth of our late leader, Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg, we publish herewith his opening statement to the judge who sentenced him to a long term in Sing Sing Prison in New York:

"I have merely this to say for myself, that I have in the past held certain ideals for a reorganization of society on a new basis. I have upheld those ideals and gone to prison for them when they were connected with the late war. I have stood by those principles in which I firmly believe, and I still stand for those principles irrespective of the result of this particular trial. I expect in the future, as in the past, to uphold and fight for those principles until the time comes that those principles triumph, and a new society is built in place of the present social organization. I realized from the beginning of this trial, as I have in any other trial that I have taken part in as a defendant, that this court, and all the instruments of this court, are merely a part of that organization of force which we call the capitalist state; and I expected no other result from an organization of the capitalist class to protect the capitalist system, than the result that has been returned by this court in this particular case; and, of course, accepting this as a case of class justice, a case of the use of the organized force of the state in order to suppress the desires of those who today are suffering under the oppression of the present system, I will accept the sentence in that same spirit of defiance, realizing that I go to prison because of support of a great principle that will triumph in spite of all the courts, in spite of all the organizations of the capitalist class."

104 FUR WORKERS RELEASED; MARCH TO JOINT BOARD

Walker Sends Letter to Warren

One hundred and four fur strikers were released from Welfare Island on bail yesterday. They were serving sentences ranging from 10 to 30 days.

Singing "Solidarity Forever" they marched in military formation to the office of the Joint Board, 22 East 22nd St., at 5:30 p. m. When they reached the office they were greeted by cheers of hundreds of fellow unionists and relatives who were waiting to receive them.

They told the assembled workers that they kept busy digging potatoes while they were on the island.

To Release Five More.

It is hoped to obtain the release by Monday of the five workers who were sentenced to six months each at the same time the other workers were given the shorter sentences. The six month terms were meted out as a result of a protest against the unfair attitude displayed by Magistrate Ewald in Jefferson Market Court.

Passing the Buck.

The Joint Board of the furriers' union yesterday received a letter from the secretary of Mayor Walker acknowledging their communication of last Wednesday which was delivered by a committee of three accompanied by 5,000 strikers and members of their families. The letter from the mayor says that the complaints of brutalities would be referred to the police commissioner for consideration.

The letter reads as follows:

"Mrs. Margaret Bandili,
"Joint Board Furriers' Union,
"22 East 22nd Street, N. Y. C.
"Dear Madam:

"Mayor Walker has directed me to acknowledge your letter of July 6th to you, and through you to the other members of the Committee of Striking Fur Workers, in which you call attention to alleged brutalities in connection with the fur strike.

"Your communication has been referred to Police Commissioner Warren who has charge of this situation, and you can be assured the facts contained in your letter will have his earnest consideration.

"Very truly yours,
"(Signed) Edward L. Stanton,
"Secretary to the Mayor."

Only a Gesture.

That the referring of the letter to the police commissioner is just a gesture that will result in no action, was the opinion of Joint Board officials yesterday. They pointed out the fact that they already have made a complaint to Commissioner Warren concerning the brutality of the police and filed with him several weeks ago the affidavits of a number of workers who had been beaten in the 30th St. police station after their arrest on the picket line.

The police commissioner's office interviewed some of these workers who had been injured, and he promised that the investigation would be continued and the charges thoroly sifted. To date no report has been made on this matter. Arrests have continued as usual.

Three Furriers Arrested.

Three furriers who were arrested Thursday at Union Square when the socialists in cooperation with the police broke up the Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration were released on bail for trial July 12 in the Jefferson Market Court. They are A. Macardo, M. Waliger and Max Levine.

SACCO-VANZETTI DEMONSTRATION IN UNION SQUARE JUST AS POLICE CHARGED INTO IT

WORKERS PARTY ANSWERS CHARGE OF A. SHIPLACOFF

Flatly denying all of the charges sent to the papers yesterday by A. Shiplacoff and L. Frisina that the Commnnists created a disturbance at the Union Square demonstration for Sacco and Vanzetti, the New York District (No. 2) of the Workers (Communist) Party has issued a statement, placing the blame directly on Shiplacoff and his associates. The statement goes on to say, in part:

"It is called to our attention that Mr. Abraham I. Shipkoff in a letter to the American Civil Liberties Union charged that the Workers (Communist) Party is responsible for the breaking up of the demonstration for Sacco and Vanzetti at Union Square Thursday and that it was decided upon at a meeting of the Workers Party Wednesday evening.

"Mr. Shiplacoff claims that he and his group will not defend Communist prisoners in the future.

"In the first place Mr. Shiplacoff and his socialist colleagues are trying to explain away their criminal action in asking the police to break up the Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration, because the thousands of workers who came to voice their protests demanded to hear the militant leader of the striking furriers, Ben Gold.

"Many of our members and trade unionists generally have brot to us the facts concerning the incident, namely that Gold who together with members of his union came to share in the protest and demand the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti was recognized by a group of workers and they raised the cry: 'Gold is in the audience,' which was overwhelmingly shouting a demand that Gold be given the platform.

"Gold was hoisted by many of the workers upon their shoulders and carried to the platform. He did not desire to speak and demanded of the chairman that he be allowed to quiet the audience so the demonstration might proceed peacefully.

"It is the selfish and narrow interests of the right wing socialists that is responsible for the entire affair. First they try to exploit the issue of Sacco and Vanzetti in their interests, denying the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee representing 500,000 organized workers of this city of which we are a part, the right to have a share in the Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration.

"Shiplacoff is making use of the fact that the Workers Party held a membership meeting on Wednesday, a meeting that was advertised in the press as was also the order of business. This is another example of the provocative methods of a Shiplacoff, a Sigman, and of the Socialist and the Forverdiht.

"As to the statement about the decision of the union affiliated with the Liberation Committee for Sacco and Vanzetti that they will not in the future defend Communist political prisoners, we want to state that Mr. Shiplacoff and his associates, the Sigmans, the Schlichtmans are today pointing their fingers at and jailing not only Communists but hundreds of trade unionists in the needle industry.

"The Workers Party will defend in the future as in the past every worker taken in the clutches of the capitalist police, be he anarchist, socialist, Communist or workers holding any other view, so long as he is fighting in the interests of the workingclass."

SACCO-VANZETTI COMMITTEE SHOWS SOCIALISTS BROKE UNITY OF LABOR

Issues Statement Revealing Shiplacoff Enemy of Workingclass Solidarity

Condemning the actions of the socialist clique who in open cooperation with the police department broke up Thursday's Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration in Union Square, the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee yesterday issued a statement explaining in detail the events leading up to the meeting. Roger Francezan of the I. W. W. also testified to the socialists calling on the police.

The statement of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee points out how after Leonard Frisina, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Liberation Committee had agreed that the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee would be allowed to cooperate, let Abraham I. Shiplacoff of the socialist party, chairman of the "liberation committee", to rule that the latter organization would not be allowed to participate.

The statement, in full, reads as follows:

The Statement of Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee

"The breaking up of Thursday's Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration in Union Square, where 25,000 workers had gathered to demand the release of the two Italian workers, is a crime that all those who are working in their behalf must condemn in strong terms.

"When the socialist party leaders who had gained control of the Sacco-Vanzetti Liberation Committee permitted Abraham I. Shipacoff to destroy the plan to have all sections of the labor movement participate; after Leonard Frisina had so agreed, places the responsibility for the disgraceful display of police brutality squarely on the shoulders of the socialist party leaders, who for partisan reasons wanted to have exclusive control in the selection of the speakers.

United Front Agreement Reached.

On Monday, June 27, Ross Baron and Carlo Tresca, representing the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee, held a conference with Leonardo Frisina, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Liberation Committee at which he agreed that the former organization should participate in yesterday's demonstration. It was decided that each organization would have two platforms and be responsible for the conduct of their respective followers.

"We were never informed officially of any change of plans but were told by some delegates who are affiliated with their organization that at a meeting of their executive committee held Wednesday, when Frisina reported on the agreement between the two committees, that Shiplacoff, who was presiding, ruled the proposed plan order. He said that no other speakers would be allowed at the meeting except those whom he chose. Furthermore, he would give the list of names to the police who would see to it that no one else would be allowed to speak.

The Last Minute Change.

"This tyranny established over the committee by the socialist party took place only one day before the demonstration.

"We did not notify the members of our organization of the move on the part of the socialist clique to create trouble, as we wanted the affair to be a success, being interested above all in the release of Sacco and Vanzetti.

"We had notified all our affiliated organizations of the demonstration also having a resolution in favor of the one-hour strike passed at the Union Square meeting June 26, where 25,000 needle trades workers approved it.

"Two hundred thousand leaflets and 100,000 stickers were given out by our committee, that used every means at our disposal to have as big a turnout of the New York workers as possible.

Workers Call For Ben Gold.

"When the thousands of workers gathered at the Square saw that instead of a meeting to secure the release of our two fellow workers it was being utilized to advance the political views and prestige of a certain organization, the assembled workers were not satisfied.

"Spying Ben Gold, the manager of the Joint Board of the Furriers'

U. S. STATE DEPT. BULLDOZED SPAIN TO GET OIL SALE

Threatened Embargo if USSR Oil Bought

That the American Ambassador to Spain Moore actually threatened Spain with an embargo on all cotton goods destined for that country unless she awarded her oil monopoly to the Standard Oil Company and British oil interests instead of a native corporation imposing Soviet Union oil (which actually won the contract) leaked out in an amazing story of U.S. oil diplomacy appearing in yesterday's issue of the New York Times.

Admitting that the State Department actually fought the Standard Oil's battle for the contract, the New York Times says, "The American and British governments are understood to have brought strong representations to bear upon the government of General Primo de Rivera in support of their national petroleum organizations. Alexander Moore, the then American Ambassador, who was a personal friend of the dictator, was asked to lead the combined British-American attack. Even the British Ambassador, the senior to Mr. Moore in diplomatic precedence, is said to have requested the American representative to attempt to save the situation.

Can You Secure All or Part of $25,000 Security?

On Monday morning, Jo-Louis Engdahl, William F. Dunne, A. Bittelman, David Gordon, and Bert Miller will report at the office of the District Attorney in answer to the indictment of the Federal Grand Jury. They will be held pending the payment of bail. We must secure not less than $25,000 in property security to cover the bail of the defendants. If this is not secured it will be necessary to pay an exorbitant premium of not less than $700, or if that cannot be raised then the defendants will have to stay in jail until the date of trial. They will be unable to continue their work on the paper. We appeal to all comrades who have any connections with those who have any real estate to secure their consent to stand bail for those indicted. Comrades who are able to secure any part of the security needed should call, telephone or wire at once to the DAILY WORKER, 33 First Street, Orchard 1680.

FORD PRODUCTION LOW, APOLOGIZES FOR JEW BAITING

Industrialist Pleads Ignorance

Henry Ford is sorry that he ever said anything offensive about the Jews. This is the gist of his statement made public yesterday by Arthur Brisbane. In addition Ford promises that he will refrain from further anti-semitic utterances and will withdraw from circulation the odious pamphlet, "The International Jew."

The new General Motors' plans for a car to compete with the present Ford product together with the necessity for additional capital to carry on the competitive fight which is sure to ensue is said to be the main cause of the apology which reads in part:

Able Forgiveness.

"I deem it my duty as an honorable man to make amends for the wrong done to the Jews as fellowmen and brothers, by asking their forgiveness for the harm I have unintentionally committed, by retracting as far as lies within my power the offensive charges laid at their door by these publications, and by giving them the unqualified assurance that henceforth they may look to me for friendship and good will.

"Righteous Indignation."

This assurance of goodwill in the future contradicts by implication Ford's statement that the publication of anti-Jewish articles was done without his knowledge.

Ford Production Off.

In the face of the fact that the Ford production has fallen off considerably within the last two years this abject statement loses some of its edge. The figures are 1,790,258 cars for 1924 as compared to 1,447,515 for 1926. Ford concludes his climb-down with:

"Finally, let me add this statement is made on my own initiative and wholly in the interest of right and justice and in accordance with what I regard as my solemn duty as a man and citizen."

"THOUSANDS IN SACCO-VANZETTI DEMONSTRATION SHOUTING FOR GOLD TO SPEAK"

The huge crowd, as seen in the picture, was orderly enough until Socialists irritated by the workers' demand that Ben Gold, leader of the fur strike should speak, assaulted Gold and called on the police to break up the meeting.

THE UNITY OF LABOR AND THE UNION SQUARE DEMONSTRATION

THE unity of the labor movement is most vital to its existence and progress. It is the basic fact which must underlie the policy of labor in all its activities.

The Socialist Party leaders who are directly responsible for the breaking up of the Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration in Union Square Thursday, not only struck a blow at the solidarity of labor, but directed an attack at the very life of the labor movement itself.

No one will deny that the left wing workers, the most advanced section of the trade union movement, have carried the burden of the fight for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The Socialists in the conventions of the American Federation of Labor, at Atlantic City, in 1925, and at Detroit, in 1926, were silent on the Sacco-Vanzetti issue. They joined with the reaction in evading the issue. Abraham I. Shiplacoff, especially, who was most responsible for the police attack on the workers Thursday, did not raise his voice for Sacco and Vanzetti at the Detroit A. F. of L. convention.

The Socialists merely added another chapter, therefore, to their betrayal of Sacco and Vanzetti when they arbitrarily, and with the aid of the New York police, refused to permit Ben Gold to speak after thousands of enthusiastic and militant workers had demanded that he mount the speakers' stand and address them.

The great demonstration for Ben Gold, in the face of police clubs and the hoofs of the mounted Cossacks of the employing class, clearly indicated that left wing workers made up the great majority of the demonstrators, that they had made it the great success that it promised to be until it was broken by the alliance of the socialist right wingers and the police.

Thus the Socialists have again violated the very solidarity of labor, for the preservation and development of which Sacco and Vanzetti are now facing death in the electric chair.

The campaign for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti must be and can be made broad enough to allow room for all sections of the working class to participate, no matter what their other differences may be. The forces of capitalism, now seeking the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti, must be shown in no mistaken terms, that every section of the labor movement is solidly and unequivocably for the immediate release of these workers. Any act of provocation or division, which by implication or intent excludes any section of the labor movement from expressing its sympathy with the movement for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti, weakens that movement and destroys its power.

The Socialists and right wingers in control of the demonstration worked in full cooperation with the police to enforce their dangerous policy, the same police force which is today arresting pickets, and breaking up labor demonstrations. The capitalist press which has been most vicious in its efforts to railroad Sacco and Vanzetti to the electric chair is uttering peons of praise for the right wingers, and hypocritical statements of regret for what occurred at the demonstration. None will be deluded by these utterances.

The right wing, the Socialist Party, the chief officialdom of the American Federation of Labor, has done practically nothing to secure the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The police and the capitalist press, which has come out so openly in alliance with the right wing, has been the most unscrupulous opponent of the efforts to free these men.

The sole factor which has thus far stayed the hand of the executioner, and which will leave no stone unturned until they are finally freed, is the power of the rank and file of labor, manifested in labor demonstrations in every part of the world.

The rank and file of labor has a right to hear its own spokesmen and no renegades will succeed in their attempts to revoke that right or disrupt the forces of labor, not even in the name of Sacco and Vanzetti.

SACCO-VANZETTI COMMITTEE SHOWS SOCIALISTS BROKE UNITY OF LABOR

Union, one of the organizations affiliated with our committee, some of the workers lifted him up on their shoulders and moved towards one of the speakers' stands. When the 25,000 workers saw Gold they immediately demanded that he be allowed to speak. More than 90 per cent of those present joined in this demand.

"As the cry was taken up by more and more workers, the socialists, August Claessens, secretary of the local organisation and Abraham Weinberg, called upon the police to break up the meeting. By this act they showed that if their own plans could not be realised they preferred to have the demonstration broken up and at the same time allow scores of workers to receive broken heads.

Liberation Fight Goes On.

"The Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee will go on with its work and save the lives of these two condemned workers.

"The Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee was organized July 9, 1926, at a conference held at the Labor Temple, 243 East 84th St., where 400 delegates attended, representing 500,000 workers organized in trade unions, labor, fraternal and other organizations. It held its second conference April 22, 1927, and its third meeting June 24, 1927, when it went on record in favor of the one-hour strike and the Union Square demonstration.

"Since our committee has been organized it has held hundreds of meetings in the vicinity of New York. Large gatherings have been held with speakers we have furnished in Philadelphia, Albany, Union City, Passaic, Hartford, Stamford, New Haven, Newark, Bridgeport, Jersey City, Paterson, Buffalo and Elizabeth to name only a few.

"In New York City we filled Madison Square Garden on November 17, 1926 where over 15,000 workers gathered and listened to speeches by such speakers as Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, Leonard Abbot, Arturo Giovannitti, Arthur Garfield Hays, Carlo Tresca, Jacob Panken, Norman Thomas, William Z. Foster and many others.

Big Demonstration April 16th.

"On Saturday, April 16, we held a mass demonstration in Union Square where over 20,000 workers gathered and protested under our direction. The speakers at that demonstration included Bishop Paul Jones, Leonard Abbot, McAlister Coleman, Robert W. Dunn, Arthur Garfield Hays, Paxton Hibbin, Scott Nearing, Harry Kelly, Carlo Tresca and others.

"We have at all times done our utmost to centralize the work in this city. On April 26th of this year our executive committee elected a committee of three to attend the Sacco-Vanzetti Liberation Committee's executive board conference to try and coordinate the work.

"On May 11 we sent them a letter requesting information about the one-hour strike and offering our cooperation. On June 15, Carlo Tresca representing our committee attended a meeting of their executive committee and told them that we would cooperate wholeheartedly in the strike and demonstration.

"On June 25th we received a letter from Frisina in which he said:

"'This committee instructs me to thank you most kindly for your interest in the case of Sacco and Vanzetti and to assure you that we appreciate all your efforts in their behalf.

"'Under separate cover, I am sending you a copy of the circular letter which we are sending to all the labor unions in the city, so that you may see for yourself what we are doing for that date.

"'Please advise me what if anything—you are planning for the same date in your locality.

"'With best wishes and kindest regards, I beg to remain for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti.

"'Fraternally yours,

(Signed) "'Leonardo Frisina,
"'Executive Secretary.'

"On the basis of this letter and the conversation our committee later held with Frisina, we went ahead and prepared honestly for the demonstration, which undoubtedly would have been held without any trouble.

"In behalf of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee we promise to continue our work in the future as we have in the past until the day arrives that Sacco and Vanzetti leave the Massachusetts prison as free men to once again take their places in the ranks of the working class of this country.

"SACCO-VANZETTI EMERGENCY COMMITTEE, (Signed) "Rose Baron,
Acting Secretary.
"Carlo Tresca,
Acting Treasurer."

Roger Francescon, delegate of the Marine Transport Workers, I. U. 510, I. W. W., issued a statement yesterday exposing the acts at the Sacco-Vanzetti Liberation Committee meeting held last Wednesday, at which he was a delegate.

It reads as follows:

"On July 6th the Italian Chamber of Labor called a meeting of the Sacco and Vanzetti Liberation Committee. During the discussion, when a list of speakers was being presented to the delegates for approval, some one among the delegates asked if the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee was going to be represented also. The secretary, Brother Frasina, made a statement declaring that a few days previous to this date, Carlo Tresca and Rose Baron came to him and asked to have a united form of action on this date, at least in the Union Square demonstration.

"They emphasized, he stated, that insofar as the Webster Hall and the Cooper Union Hall had been rented by the Sacco Liberation Committee they would not insist on having speakers there, however, they thought it was all important to have speakers from both sides speaking at the open air meeting, as there the audience would be largely composed of radically inclined people.

"Frasina declared that at the time he did not have any objection, due to the fact that he was finding difficulties to secure permission from the park commissioner for the demonstration of July 6th, so he promised that both committees could have speakers at the time.

"But the executive committee, when told of this new arrangement, strongly objected to having any body coming from the Communists, as they termed the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee, and Frasina said to the delegates, 'Now it is up to you'.

"At this point the chairman of the meeting, Abraham Shiplacoff ruled that a discussion on this point was not necessary and that the decision of the executive committee was binding. This started protest from myself, representing the Marine Transport Workers of the IWW and from my fellow worker, Ben Edelman, representing the Industrial District Council of the IWW, also Brother James W. Walsh of the Plumbers' Helpers strenuously objected to these discriminations. Then I pointed out to Shiplacoff that the audience would be largely composed of radicals of all shades, who would protest against any discrimination, and that some serious trouble could ensue. Shiplacoff declared that the police would protect this committee and that they would be called upon for protection. This caused strong protest from Ben Edelman and myself, but to no avail, as we were overruled by men who had their machine pretty well oiled, and it was useless for us to try to do anything else as we would have been thrown out anyway, so we withdrew.

"After having witnessed the dastardly action of the socialists at Union Square, where Assemblyman Claessens and Herman Hens kicked Ben Gold on the face and his body while he was helplessly held by his admirers who were attempting to shove him on the stand, I deem it my duty to expose that gang of cowards, who have done more to stab Sacco and Vanzetti in the back than all the capitalist agencies put together.

"Roger Francescon, Marine Transport Workers' I. U. 51 of the I.W.W."

Every Factory a Fortress

This is the message of our dead commander-in-chief, Comrade LENIN.

What is now the haven of the exploiters, must be turned into the fortress of the proletariat. The capture of these fortresses can only be accomplished by the army of the proletariat, by a systematic and well-organized attack with the most powerful weapon available for the destruction of the present system of capitalist exploitation. The most powerful weapon of our proletarian army is this attack of The DAILY WORKER. It is only by a constant bombardment with copies of The DAILY WORKER, by the securing of new readers within the walls of the fortress, the final victory can be assured. The army of proletarians within the wall of these fortresses, the army which at present is helping to maintain the present system of exploitation, this army must be won over from within, its loyalty to the cause of the proletarian revolution must be developed, its courage and willingness to fight against the ruling class must be raised to the highest pitch. Every comrade must enlist in this campaign against the enemy, in the campaign for FIVE THOUSAND NEW READERS. Every comrade belongs on the front line of the campaign to storm the citadels of capitalism, with a stronger and bigger army of DAILY WORKER readers.

OHIO MINERS ASK MORE CONFERENCE REJECT WAGE CUT

Very Little Sentiment For Non-Union Work

COLUMBUS, Ohio, July 8.—Refusal to consider the $8 wage scale offered by Ohio operators, the executive council of district No. 6 (Ohio), of the United Mine Workers today asked the operators to re-convene the joint conference held this winter at Miami, Fla., to fix a wage scale for the central competitive field.

The Ohio operators have already announced that they will re-open their mines on a non-union basis, at the low wage mentioned. However, they apparently were much dissatisfied with the way in which this announcement was greeted by the miners, as, with the exception of one small local, the organized miners were unanimous against any yielding on the matter of wages, so they finally made an appeal to the district union officials, and the latter have asked a discussion from the beginning.

Bronx Detective Is Elected Legion Head After a Fist Fight

A fist fight, considerable shouting and threats ended the ninth annual convention of the New York County American Legion which ended yesterday.

As a result Thomas A. Nielson, a Bronx detective, was re-elected county commander with 943 votes. The fight was precipitated during a vote on the resolution which would have ended the right of a county commander to succeed himself.

Shouts of "sit down" and "shut up" preceded the vote. As one legionaire demanded an apology for an alleged insult the party became a free-for-all. Friends of the contending factions pulled the contestants apart and the vote was then taken.

In addition to the fight the convention passed a resolution urging congress to "recognize" the Star Spangled Banner as the national anthem.

Bullied Spain Over Oil U. S. State Department

brought pressure upon their respective governments, and the American State Department and the British Ministry of Foreign Affairs cabled their respective Madrid ministers hurried instructions to take action.

The strongest of the American Ambassador to force Spain to give the oil monopoly to the Standard Oil Company, which is pressed for a time would be successful, is described by the Times correspondent in the following words:

"Whether it was because of the dictator's (Primo de Rivera) personal friendship for Mr. Moore or because of the threat which the ambassador is said to have made that an embargo would be placed on all cotton destined for Spain, is not known, but the upshot was that Primo de Rivera replied that while Mr. Moore was ambassador to the Spanish court no Russian oil or oil products would be allowed to enter the country."

Standard Loses Fight.

Despite the threats of the American ambassador, the Standard Oil Company lost its battle for the monopoly. The Portpost Petroleum Company is Spanish both in personal and capital.

A decree issued by the Spanish government not only establishes a monopoly of the petroleum industry but bars bids from foreign concerns.

To Commemorate Ruthenberg's Birthday—Fight the War Danger.

Had Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg lived he would have been forty-five years old today. Young in years, he was at the time of his death already a veteran in the ranks of the revolution. It is impossible to commemorate the birth of Ruthenberg without recalling, in face of the present war danger, his role in the American labor movement precisely ten years ago at this time. In the dark days of this country's entrance into the world war, when frenzied mobs of maddened jingoes were howling in the wake of the warmongers, when the old national leaders of the Socialist Party, of which Ruthenberg was the local leader in Cleveland, were wallowing in the slough of sentimental pacifism, perverting the revolutionary movement into pro-German channels or shouting with the jingoes, Ruthenberg defied them all and took the lead in the anti-draft agitation which led to his first arrest and imprisonment.

Ten years ago, in the face of the last world war, our late leader gave to the American labor movement a militant example of how a revolutionist should face the task of combating the criminal slaughter of workers by the imperialist butchers.

Today, when Britain is openly striving to provoke war against the Soviet Union, when the United States imperialists carry on their own conspiracies in their own interests with the same object in view, when the mighty financial power of Wall Street is used to finance white guard governments in Europe, when the ink is hardly dry on an American loan to the fascist dictator, Pilsudski of Poland, it is not difficult to perceive the fact that the United States is following its own policies against the Soviet Union in backing the servile governments that are forever on the auction bloc, for sale to the highest bidder to carry on their campaigns of forgery, provocation and murder against the workers and peasants' government of the Soviet Union, or to engage in any debased task that may be set them by their buyers, the imperialist masters of the capitalist world.

In the last war Ruthenberg, in the thick of the fight and in face of the greatest peril, established himself as a courageous leader of the masses. He, more than any other individual, came to personify the American Communist movement that arose out of the war, and the collapse of the old social-democratic parties of the Second (Socialist) International. In America, as in other countries, a tremendous impetus was given to the development of the revolutionary movement by the brilliant achievements of the Bolshevik revolution in Russia. Arising from the identical causes that caused the collapse of the old International the Russian revolution became a tremendous revolutionizing factor in the labor movement of the world. Comrade Ruthenberg was among the very first of the American leaders to appreciate its full significance and its implications for the future of the labor movement in this country. From the first he was the most able defender of the Russian workers' and peasants' government and, at the time of his death, was taking the lead in the fight against the war danger, whose ominous clouds were already lowering upon the horizon.

Only by a relentless fight against imperialism and the threat of war can we pay tribute to our dead leader, whose birth we today commemorate.

Sheffield Journeys to Rapid City.

The American ambassador to Mexico, James R. Sheffield, responsible for the recent diplomatic scandal that swept over him when President Calles called his bluff on his military threats, is the most recent visitor to the summer resort of the asthmatic president of the United States. Sheffield is slated for the discard because the dirty scheme of the administration to terrorize the Mexican president by pretending to reveal to him the plans for American military intervention failed to terrorize him into yielding to the demands of Wall Street. When Calles published to the world the alleged military plans of Sheffield in Mexico City, and "Nervous Nelly" Kellogg in the state department at Washington declared the documents had been stolen and then altered by forgers to make it appear that the peace-loving, gentle, child-like government of the United States was planning military intervention. This excuse was too lame and was greeted with derisive laughter because of its crudity.

Sheffield will probably not return to Mexico City. Henry L. Stimson, the diplomatic flunkey who helped the gunmen of Wall Street disarm the Nicaraguan liberal forces in order that Diaz, the chosen president of the American imperialists, could hold undisputed sway, is proposed as successor to Sheffield.

The individual who serves as Wall Street's ambassador in Mexico is unimportant. What is important is the vicious imperialist policy being conducted in Mexico in order to protect the interests of the Rockefeller oil concern, the Guggenheimer mining interests and Hearst's land interests and to extend in general American imperialist power in Central and South America.

The workers of the United States ought to fight against the vicious policy of the government in Mexico and do everything in their power to aid the Mexican workers and peasants drive from their land the agents of the oil and mining trusts and of the banking houses of Wall Street.

The Klan Explosion in Indiana.

Hoosier politicians are all hunting their holes because of the recent interview of a district attorney with David C. Stephenson, former imperial dragon of the Indiana ku klux klan, now serving a life term in the penitentiary for fiendishly torturing to death in the process of a most depraved debauch a young woman named Madge Oberholtzer. Stephenson, for a number of years the most powerful political boss among the republican grafters in Indiana, a friend of the late President Harding, of Harry M. Daugherty and the rest of the Ohio gang, used his position in the hooded order of native-born white, protestant, one hundred per cent Americans, to shield him in his degenerate practices.

His eventual undoing was not so much because his prosecutors were revolted at his assaults upon the young woman, but because his political star was on the wane in the inner circles of the klan. Convicted and sentenced, Stephenson expected his former associates of the night-shirt brigade to secure his release. Months dragged into years and he still remains in the penitentiary. Hence, as a matter of self-preservation, the former grand dragon turns upon his associates. The governor of the state, the mayor of Indianapolis and other luminaries are wondering where the lightning will strike. Senator Jim Watson has retired to his aperture in Rushville, Indiana, and would like to pull the cavity in after him—at least until the storm blows over.

Just how far Stephenson has gone in his exposing of the graft and corruption of the republican-klan machine in Indiana, is not known and may never be known, for the simple reason that steps will be taken to release him or in some other way stop the scandal. The shady election practices, the most brazen ballot-box stuffing and bribery of the electorate has become the ordinary procedure in Indiana, just as it is in Ohio, where Daugherty and Harding reigned supreme, or as it is in Illinois under the Len Small gang, or in Pennsylvania under the Mellon-Vare-Fisher corruptionists.

We do not refer to the case of Stephenson because of any moral indignation against him. He is no better nor worse than any other political boss in this country. We expose such creatures in order that workers may come to hold in the utmost contempt the public servants of the capitalist governments in the various states and in the nation and to despise the hirelings of capitalism in the labor movement who tell workers to support candidates of the old parties of capitalism, instead of creating their own labor party against the parties of Wall Street.

Ruthenberg's Place in American Labor Movement

In the development of the labor movement, of all other social institutions, certain individuals come to personify certain stages. In the history of American labor five men stand out as embodiments of various stages—Terence V. Powderly, Samuel M. Gompers, Daniel DeLeon, Eugene V. Debs and C. E. Ruthenberg. All of these men, with the exception of DeLeon, lived through the world war, but only one of them can be said to have represented the interests of the working class after the war. That one was Ruthenberg who, at the time of his death last March, was the highest type of American labor leader yet produced in the United States. Not only did he possess the organizational ability, the broad experience in the best of the older leaders, but he possessed a Marxian-Leninist knowledge of the movement that made him the superior of any of them.

However, we do not yield to the illusion that it was Ruthenberg who created the environment in which he worked, but he brought to it the best product of the new labor movement that arose out of the agony and ashes of the great imperialist convulsion known as the world war.

The Labor Reactionaries.

Of the five men we have chosen as typical of certain stages and who played prominent parts in the labor movement in their time, Powderly and Gompers, were avowedly reactionary at the time of their deaths, but both of them had played parts at certain stages. Powderly became the leading figure in that amorphous mixture of labor elements, small shopkeepers, professionals, known as the Knights of Labor. Dictated on the field of economic struggle it lapsed into weird unscientific and utopian cooperative ventures that were fast submerged by the terrific tempo of capitalist development. In the great labor upheavals of the 80's Powderly cut a sorry figure in his fight against the eight-hour movement and his own organization was swept into the movement in spite of him.

The leader of the more advanced forces of labor that took issue with Powderly and the Knights of Labor was Samuel G. Gompers, head of the newly-created American Federation of Labor. But the great clash of class interests that culminated in the Haymarket bomb disaster sent Gompers scurrying for a safe refuge. As years passed his cowardice in face of the capitalist enemy changed into the courage of a conscious lackey of the powers that be when he was chosen to attack the militant elements of the labor movement. One treachery followed upon another until early in the nineties Gompers plain to every thoughtful worker that Gompers was nothing more nor less than the chief labor lieutenant of capitalism in America.

The Socialist Leaders.

With a fair understanding of Marxian criticism, Daniel DeLeon, leader of the socialist labor party of that day, assailed both Powderly and Gompers and for a considerable time gained a powerful following. His inability correctly to apply Marxian tactics inside the ranks of working class organizations soon resulted in his playing directly into the hands of the reactionaries by deserting the main stream of the labor movement and trying to organize new socialist-controlled "pure" unions.

Considerable impetus was given to the agitation for dual unions by the great American Railway Union strike of the early nineties, under the leadership of Eugene V. Debs who later, under the influences of certain socialist-democrats, used the organization, after its defeat by the combined forces of the government and the railroad companies, as the basis for the organization of the socialist party. For years Debs was the principal socialist propagandist in the country, though he never played an important role in the leading political and organizational work of that party. In spite of this he did personify the early stages of that party—a fiery militancy vitiated by a sentimentalism strongly flavored with christian socialism and populism.

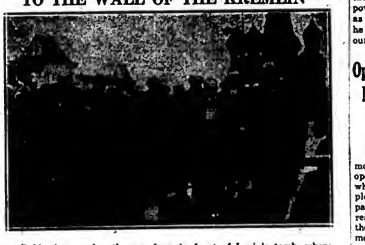
The Crucible of World War.

When the world war broke upon humanity DeLeon had been dead for almost a year. What his attitude toward the war might have been can never be known. He did not, however, in his writings seem able to grasp the great changes that had taken place and the transition from competitive capitalism into imperialism, characterized by Lenin as the "final stage of capitalism" passed by him unnoticed. Powderly, an old man at the outbreak of the war, played no part in the labor movement. He had long enjoyed the quiet of a soft government job, the reward of the executive committee of the capitalist class for his treachery to the working class. The record of Gompers is too well known and too odious to need extended comment. So anxious was he to serve his bloody masters that he descended to depths of depravity to which ordinary vassals of capitalism would shrink from contemplating. Using his office in the interests of the imperialist war-mongers of Wall Street during the war, he became their most militant defender against the revival of the labor movement after the war. He passed away, faithful to the last to those whom he had so long served, with Maudlin patriotic twaddle upon his lips, and his remains were accorded a place of honor alongside the graves of some of the biggest capitalists this country has produced. Debs, who also never perceived the significance of the imperialist era, viewed the war as a gigantic crime against humanity and opposed it upon purely sentimental grounds. The watch-words of the nineties fell flat when uttered before the working class audiences after the world war. For his opposition to the war Debs was finally sent to prison.

Revolutionary Fight Against War.

While the nation was preparing to slaughter its youth and young manhood in the interest of the investments of the House of Morgan in Europe and when congress had passed the draft law with the intention of conscripting the youth into the human slaughter house only a handful of members of the socialist party dared raise the demand for opposition to the war and call upon those within draft age to refuse to register. The outstanding leader of this group was Comrade Ruthenberg, then secretary of the city central committee of the socialist party of Cleveland, Ohio, who made his living working in an office of a clothing concern. He was the first man in the United States arrested for opposition to the draft and for his activity was discharged from the first for which he worked and became for the first time (June, 1917) a paid official of the party. From that time onward Ruthenberg was a national figure in the movement. He with Alfred Wagenknecht and Charles Baker served jail terms after being convicted for opposing the imperialist war.

Upon his release from jail at the close of the war Ruthenberg was the one outstanding national figure in the old labor movement that cast his lot with the communist movement in this country. In his own life he personified the best traditions of the old party carried over into the period of world revolution. Despising the treachery of creatures of the Powderly and Gompers calibre, he at the same time avoided the mechanical, almost grotesque Marxism that characterized DeLeon, and although being the equal of Debs in courage and ability as an organizer he avoided the sentimental swamps of utopianism and correctly interpreted events in the labor movement in the light of Marxist-Leninist analysis.



Even with the fragmentary facts brought out in this brief sketch before him the worker can easily perceive that of all the outstanding figures in the American labor movement Ruthenberg alone represented the highest type of labor leader yet produced in the class struggles in America, and in the light of present threats of a new world war against the Soviet Union and for further division of the world among the imperialist powers his work is as valuable and as effective today as it was while he was still fighting at the head of our revolutionary forces.

Open Air Work, One of the Most Important Phases of Our Activies.

By A. GUSAKOFF.

With the coming of the summer months a new field of activity was opened for our party. A broad field, which if properly utilized and exploited, must a big gain for the party, meant a greater possibility to reach thousands of workers thruout the country, conveying to them our message, spreading our literature among them, our party mothly organs, and daily newspapers and giving them the correct interpretation of many important events.

This field of open-air work if properly organised, and earnestly supported by ALL the comrades, would give us, as the fruit of our work: New members, new numbers of sympathisers, more funds to continue our struggle, and a great number of new readers of our dailies and periodicals.

More Attention Needed.

But it seems that many comrades of our party do not pay much attention to this important work. Comrades who are appointed to speak and act as chairmen, do not show up at meetings, comrades responsible for the distribution of literature are failing to appear, and it even happens, that comrades who are in charge of the platform, flag, and other necessary implements do not show up at all.

This proves to us, that many of our comrades consider this work of secondary importance, or of no importance at all, and exercise much neglect toward it.

I think, that in order to make this work a success, our comrades must change their attitude and change it as soon as possible. They must realize that this is one of the most important phases of our activities, as it enables us to reach great masses of workers, and if earnestly supported will do much good to the party.

I want to give here in brief a report on the special concentration day of section one, in order to show comrades of other sections what can be achieved in this work, if the work is properly organized.

The Special Distribution.

The special distribution day, scheduled for Thursday a week ago, was organized for the purpose of reaching as many workers in our section as possible. Special articles telling the story of the conditions in many shops and factories of our section, were printed in the special section edition of The DAILY WORKER. The section decided to mobilize ALL the comrades, and distribute the 10,000 copies of this special issue of The Daily. We organized a net of open air meetings in the section, and all the comrades felt that they are in such a way building the section and popularizing the party in this neighborhood.

Some Success.

Was the concentration day a success?

Well, seven of the ten thousand copies of the Daily were distributed, three of the four open-air meetings were held, some money was collected for the Daily, and our message reached on this day thousands of workers of our section.

It is important to note that this concentration day gave more enthusiasm to our comrades to continue their work, and brought back to many of them the fervor of activity which usually comes to one, when he sees that his work is successful.

There is not a single doubt in the minds of the comrades of our section, that if all the comrades would have turned out for this work, the 10,000 copies would have not been sufficient, and at least two more open-air meetings could have been held.

Let's Fight On! Join The Workers Party!

Observations on War and Revolution by Ruthenberg

"We find at the beginning of the war in 1914, that there had developed during the preceding decades the imperialist policy in all the great capitalist nations; notably in England and in Germany.

"The struggle for concessions, the struggle for what we now might call 'mandatories,' or colonies, had been going on for a long term of years. We found repeatedly that the governments came in conflict with each other, as for instance, France and Germany over Morocco. The questions at stake were questions as to which country should have the right to exploit this unexploited, undeveloped territory. These conflicts in which the governements fought the battles, thru diplomacy, of the capitalist class, reflected the imperialist process, the development of imperialism, the securing of these concessions for the benefit of the home capitalist.

"IT IS OUT OF THIS PROCESS THAT THE WAR EMERGED. IT IS OUT OF THIS PROCESS THAT OTHER WARS WILL DEVELOP IN THE FUTURE, FROM THE STANDPOINT OF SOCIALIST ANALYSIS."—Testimony in New York trial—1920.

"During the world war the system of production in Europe, as well as its financial system was undermined. The European capitalist countries are unable to produce as much as they did before the war. This sharpens the struggle between the workers and the capitalists because the capitalists try to put the losses on the backs of the workers and make them accept a lower standard of life. None of the European countries have been able to overcome the forces of destruction of capitalism let loose by the war.

"While the United States was not affected the same way because it was not so deeply involved in the war and made great profits out of it during the first two and a half years of the war, it has become the greatest imperialist country and is exploiting all parts of the world. This development of American imperialism will lead to new wars which will let loose upon American capitalism the same forces that are destroying capitalism in Europe.

"The government which will be established after the result of the revolutionary struggles of the workers must be a workers' and farmers' government—that is, it must be a government which will use its powers against the capitalists just as the capitalists now use the power of the government against the workers."—From "The Workers (Communist) Party—What It Stands For and Why Workers Should Join."

Final Reservations For Russian Trip Must Be Made Now

The first group of fifty American tourists visiting Soviet Russia will sail on the Swedish-American motor liner, "Gripsholm," July 14th.

This group of American tourists are made up of men and women from all walks of life. There are lawyers, doctors, nurses, teachers, business men and a fairly representative group of workers from the various trades and occupations.

There are a number of reservations still open and registration for this first party will close today, Saturday, July 9th.

Those desiring to sail on July 14th or make such trip to Russia in the future should communicate with the World Tourists, Inc., Room 803, 41 Union Square, New York.

Furriers' Wives to Hit At Police Brutality at Demonstration in Bronx

Bronx women are urged to attend the mass demonstration at 2 o'clock this afternoon at Clairemont Park, way and Washington Avenue, Bronx, to protest against the police brutality against striking left wing furriers.

Kate Gitlow, Rose Wortis and Fannie Warshafsky as well as a number of other women prominent in the labor movement will address the demonstration.

The demonstration will be held under the auspices of the United Council of Working Class Housewives, Furriers' Council No. 1.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

One of the most dastardly crimes committed by a degenerate shell of a so-called workingclass political party, against the two victims of capitalist injustice, Sacco and Vanzetti, was the action of the socialist party representatives at the demonstration in Union Square last Thursday when they broke up the giant meeting with the aid of the police rather than allow Ben Gold of the Furriers Union to address the gathering, at the urgent request of 95 per cent of the audience.

Tho the secretary of the committee under whose auspices the demonstration was held had agreed with representatives of the Sacco and Vanzetti Emergency Committee to accept their co-operation and permit their speakers to address the meeting, the socialists violated this agreement and turned the city police horse, foot and Bomb Squad loose on the workers gathered there to show their loyalty to their brothers who are threatened with execution in e Massachusetts prison.

It is admitted by all honest witnesses to the disgraceful conduct of the socialists that Ben Gold, rather than give the socialists an excuse for calling in the police and venting their wrath on the militant left wing unionists in the demonstration, wished to speak to the masses advising them the situation and urging them to restrain their indignation and refuse to be provoked. But Gold got kicks in the face and chest for his pains and the clubs of the police did the rest.

Carlo Tresca, editor of Il Martello, and one of the first to take up the battle in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti, told me in this office that in his opinion at least 95 per cent of the workers present at the demonstration wanted to hear Gold speak. They had little use for the liberal hokum handed out by the republican Italician La Guardia, that governor Fuller was a decent fellow and would do the right thing by the convicted men. Those workers place more reliance in the mass strength of the workers than in the inviolable goodness that is buried away deep in the heart of some capitalist servant.

In the light of what happened at the Union Square demonstration last Thursday it is perfectly clear that the socialists have completely lost whatever semblance of decency remained to stick to them since the year 1919 when they used the police to oust left wing delegates from the convention in Chicago. They are now in open alliance with the Bomb Squad, the entire police force, the employers, the labor fakers and the capitalist press. The stories in the newspapers describing the break-up of the demonstration might have been written by William J. Burns's publicity man. The socialists are welcome to their allies.

Henry Ford, who once won himself an unenviable reputation by declaring that "history is bunk" has again grasped the prize for general and unusual ignorance by admitting that he knew not the nature of the material published in his own paper, the Dearborn Independent, for several years past. In this weekly, Ford had a whole, nicely-boxed page all to himself. Hardly a week passed that the publication did not contain a broadside against the Jews, and the multi-millionaire flivver magnate hired a small army of Czarist forgers to manufacture protocols designed to prove that the Jews were the cause of all earthly woes from Bolshevism to General Motors.

When Ford's Hebrews were not busy devouring gentile babies they were engaged in the lucrative practice of gritting a strangle-hold on the banking business, hatching wars between nordic nations and making life miserable for honest one hundred percent Americans like the khaki-coated, slave-driving automobile manufacturer. Ford spent hundreds of thousands of dollars on this propaganda and the man who employed agents to snuffle for alcoholic smells as his workers reported to his factory gates in the morning, the man had experts wracking their brains for new methods to get more profits out of the bone, and sinew of his slaves, did not consider any amount of money too much to spend on his anti-Semitic phobia.

Now, this great man appears wearing sackcloth and rubbing salt into his wounds. He claims that he did not know that anti-Semitic articles were appearing in his paper, until he found time to look over the files. Then he was sorry that the Jews resented those articles and regarded him as an enemy. Poor, naive Henry! Isn't it surprising that somebody hasn't rubbed him of his swaddlers? (Continued on Page Four.)

HAYS DENOUNCES A. SHIPLACOFF FOR ATTACK ON GOLD

'Should Let Him Speak' Says Civil Liberties

When informed that Abraham I. Shiplacoff was sending a letter to the American Civil Liberties Union trying to place the blame for the breaking up of Thursday's Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration on the shoulders of the Workers (Communist) Party, Arthur Garfield Hays of the union issued a statement in which he says that Ben Gold of the furriers union should have been allowed to speak.

"I think it's an outrage that they did not let Gold speak," said Mr. Hays. "This bitterness between rights and lefts in the needle unions is being overdone. It's just as intolerant for the socialists to adopt an attitude like that as for the Communists to stop socialists from speaking. This meeting on Thursday had nothing to do with the warfare in the needle trades. It was a workingmen's demonstration, and Gold and his followers came there as workingmen."

The New York District Organization of the Workers (Communist) Party has issued a statement flatly denying the charges of Shiplacoff. It points out that Shiplacoff is trying to explain away the action of his socialist colleagues who called upon the police to break up the demonstration because the thousands of workers wanted to hear Ben Gold, furrier leader, speak.

It continues: "Shiplacoff is making use of the fact that the Workers Party held a membership meeting on Wednesday, a meeting that was advertised in the press as was also the order of business. This is another example of the provocative method of Shiplacoff, Sigman, and all of the socialist and the Forwardite.

"As to the statement about the decision of the union affiliated with the Labor Federation Committee for Sacco and Vanzetti that it will not in the future defend Communist political prisoners, we want to state that Mr. Shiplacoff and his associates, the Sigmans, and the Schlesinans are today pointing their fingers at and jailing not only Communists but hundreds of trade unionists in the needle industry.

"The Workers Party will defend in the future as in the past every worker taken in the clutches of the capitalist police, be he anarchist, socialist, Communist or workers holding any other view, so long as he is fighting in the interests of the workingclass."

Straton's Wilder Friends Now Forbid Reporters to Tarry

Made wise by the sudden flood of notoriety and the influx of psycho-analytically intentioned visitors which followed in the wake of their successes among the flock of John Roach Straton, the extremist sect of Pentacostalists no longer let the sober minded into their tarrying services.

Reporters who stayed thru the wild whirling and shouting, praying and testifying of the open meeting in Glad Tidings Tabernacle, the Pentacostalist Church in New York, were gently excluded last night when the still wilder "tarrying" service started.

"No Witnesses."

"This is no place for curiosity seekers," said the ushers as they barred the door to all whose faces did not show the fanatical expression demanded of the enthusiasts who remained. As the folding doors slid shut, the reporters saw a throng of "tarriers" fling themselves, men and women and children together, on the floor near the altar in preparation for the primitive rites of Pelion.

It was these orgies of religious emotionalism which attracted many members of the church of the fundamentalist leader, John Roach Straton, and his tacit consent to such practices in his own church raised such a division in his ranks that he has had to interrupt his work of fighting liberalism and suppressing plays and books to defend himself from the charge of abetting something akin to voodooism.

John Drew Dead.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 10.—John Drew, veteran actor, died here yesterday after a prolonged illness. He was 73 years of age.

Kevin O'Higgins, Vice-President of Irish Free State, is Assassinated

DUBLIN, July 10. — Kevin O'Higgins, vice-president of the Irish Free State, and minister of justice and external affairs, died shortly before five o'clock this afternoon from wounds received when he was ambushed and shot four times by three men early this morning.

O'Higgins was on his way to mass, accompanied by his wife, when the assailants drove up in an automobile, fired at him, and escaped. The wounded man was taken to his home, a few hundred yards away, where he died this evening after lingering all day.

Check-Off Is Large Issue of Hard Coal Miners' Convention

SCRANTON, Pa., (FP) July 10.—Still denied the checkoff promised to International President John L. Lewis 17 months ago at the close of the anthracite strike the miners of the northern hard coal field are meeting in Scranton et their biennial convention in belligerent mood.

Delegates from 80,000 workers are ready to give their officers the necessary mandates to demand a showdown with the big operators who agreed to the checkoff during the settlement negotiations of February 1, 1926.

Promises Ignored.

These promises are now cynically forgotten by the Big Three that dominate the field—the Hudson Coal Co. that operates for the Delaware & Hudson R. R.; the Glen Alden Coal Co. that produces for the Delaware, Lackawanna & Hudson R. R. interests and the Pennsylvania Coal Co. that is owned by the Erie R. R.

"As to the statement that the checkoff because it means more funds and security for the union, and the operators oppose it for the same reason, if under this plan there is one hundred per cent organization. No apathetic unionist or company sucker can be a "free rider." The company paymaster is compelled to check off the union dues from each man's bi-weekly pay and to turn them over to the local union treasurer.

Need Revenue.

To the west of the anthracite are the 165,000 bituminous strikers who need all the revenues that can be raised from the hard coal zone. And that is one reason why the operators are breaking their agreement to grant the checkoff. There is a solidarity of interest between many hard and soft coal employers, through joint selling agencies, kindred banking affiliations and sometimes joint ownership.

Pennsylvania Coal Co., for instance, as an Erie R.R. concern, is owned by exactly the same stockholders that own the Northwestern Mining & Exchange Co. with 2000 striking employes in the central Pennsylvania bituminous fields. Delaware & Hudson R. R. is closely related to the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh R. R., whose soft coal subsidiaries broke their agreements with the United Mine Workers in central Pennsylvania.

Thousands Unemployed.

Like the union bituminous miners the anthracite men are affected by scab West Virginia coal. Thousands of hard coal men are out of work today because their markets have gone to the smokeless coal of the New River fields in West Virginia, and to coke, briquet and fuel oil concerns.

Times have not been so slack in the Scranton-Wilkes-Barre field for many summers. At this writing the 20,000 employes of the Hudson Coal Co. are on a two weeks' vacation without pay.

MASSES RISING AGAINST CHIANG THRUOUT CHINA

Demand March Against Nanking Butchers

HANKOW, China, July 10.—Notwithstanding the fact that certain wavering and uncertain elements of the Wuhan government favor liquidating the revolutionary government and making an alliance with the Nanking government there is growing up in Hankow a powerful movement demanding an expedition against the traitors, Chiang Kai-shek and Feng Yu-Hsiang. Great mass organizations, realizing the fact that the series of betrayals by the military adventurers who, because of the rapid development of the Netionalist movement, were able to place themselves at the head of the troops, has endangered the very existence of the Wuhan Nationalist revolutionary government, are ever more insistently demanding an expedition against Nenking.

Demend Immediate Action.

A manifesto issued in reference to this by the Hankow committee of the Kuomintang enumerated all of Chiang Kai-shek's crimes against the revolution, namely the suppression of the workers' and peasants' movement by the most ruthless and bloody terror, the economic blockade of the Wuhen government in an effort to starve the revolution into submission, the support of the most vicious counter-revolutionary actions in the rear of the Nationalist forces, the spreading of the most malignent rumors against the Wuhan governments.

Everywhere the demand is rising for immediate action against Nenking and the preparations for this drive against Chiang Kai-shek will probably be entrusted to General Chang Fukwei, recently appointed commander of the fourth revolutionary army.

Canton Revolutionary Center.

CANTON, China, July 10.—The resistance of the laboring masses against the counter-revolution is growing ever stronger here, despite the terror of the ruling clique. The labor masses are passing to an attack against the reaction, trade union activities are being renewed and numerous demonstrations are taking place against repressions, such demonstrations sometimes end by horrible slaughters of workers, wholesale arrests and summary executions carried out on large scale and in the most savage manner.

New Strike Committees.

The reaction is vainly trying to destroy the last vestiges of labor organization in this city, but the vitality of the unions guarantees their continuation. New strike committees have been formed, while the reaction valnly tries to obtain disbandment of the Hong-kong strikers, numbering up to 40,000. The authorities are vainly trying to suppress with military methods the uprisings of workers and have declared that a state of war exists in the labor quarters of the city. Mass arrests and wholesale executions by shootings are the order of the day.

Beset With Enemies.

Every day new and more startling situations develop ont of the kaleidoscopic changes in China. In this city (Canton) while Li Chi-sheng is carrying on a struggle against the traitor, Chiang Kai-shek, he yields to the pressure of the reaction that is exerted everywhere and attacks the labor unions. At the very time he was calling for a determined fight against Chiang Kai-shek he was also ordering the arrest and deportation from Kwan-tung of the left trade union leader, Cheng Fu-mo. He has closed many of the labor unions' halls and dispersed the membership. A peaceful labor demonstration going to protest to the labor department was dis-

Unity Committee Calls For Demonstration by Needle Workers Today

In a statement issued yesterday by Louis Hyman, Charles Zimmerman and Ben Gold on behalf of the Unity Committee of the furriers and cloak and dressmakers' union, the workers in the needle trades are called upon to be on the picket line this morning.

"During the past few weeks," traitorous chiefs of the A. F. of L. with be active cooperation of the statement reads in part, "the the police and Tammeny politicians have succeeded in jailing hundreds of our comrades.

"These tactics however, have only succeeded in infusing new energy and determination in the ranks of the workers. Our enemies will fail to crush our strike even tho they utilize the most vicious methods at their command.

"Be on the picket line Monday morning by the thousands and defy the bosses and their tools to crush our struggle."

Healey Defeated as Firemen's Head; Had Held Post 24 Years

CLEVELAND, July 10.—Utilising his age as a pretext to "ditch" him, the reactionary machine of the Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen, Oilers and Railway Shop Laborers at its convention here yesterday succeeded in defeating Timothy Healey, a militant trade unionist, as president of the organization.

Healey, who is 61, has served as head of the union for 24 years. He was at one time a member of the advisory board of the National Labor Alliance for the Recognition of and the Reamption of Trade Relations with Soviet Russia, and has favored the sending of a delegation to the Soviet Union to study conditions there.

Healey was defeated by John F. McNamara of Boston, an old-line union politician.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 10.—Clarence Bennett, seventeen months old, died yesterday as a result of eating a firecracker.

BIG PICKET LINE EXPECTED IN FUR DISTRICT TODAY

Toronto Local in Call for Joint Conference

A big picket line is expected in the market this morning when the sixth week of the struggle to improve the working conditions of the furriers begins. In spite of the mass arrests and the open cooperation of the bosses with the right wing, the workers are just as determined to fight until victory is achieved as they were when the strike began.

The workers declare that they will not be deterred in their picketing by the refusal of the police commissioner and the mayor to take any action on the protests of the furriers' Joint Board regarding the mass arrests and police brutality.

Membership Meeting Tomorrow.

An important special membership meeting of all four locals of the Joint Board will be held tomorrow night after work at Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East Fourth St.

All strikers should assemble in Union Hall, 12 St. Marks Place, instead of Manhattan Lyceum this morning.

TORONTO, July 10.—As the first step in its work of bringing the problem of peace and unity in the International Fur Workers' Union directly before the membership of Canadian unions, the Toronto Section of the Unity Conference of Fur Workers of United States and Canada issued the following call yesterday, "To Trade Unions, Societies, and all Working Class Organizations," for a joint conference. The letter reads:

"Dear Sirs and Brothers:

GENEVA NAVAL CONFERENCE IS NEAR COLLAPSE

British and Americans Hurl Accusations

GENEVA, July 10.—Tomorrow's plenary session of the strit-parthe arms conference in session here may be the end of the naval parleys if yesterday's session of the executive committee in any indication of what must happen tomorrow.

The usually suave diplomats who try to conceal, beneath polite language the antagonism existing between the powers they represent threw off their masks and shouted and raved at each other, hurling recriminations in all directions.

A new storm broke yesterday when Hugh Gibson, head of the American delegation, proposed to boost the number of American big cruisers from 18 to 25, so they could use up 250,000 tons of the 400,000 proposed as a compromise on Tuesday. It had been considered that the 400,000 tons referred to a number of light cruisers, but when Gibson proposed that more than half of the tonnage be applied to heavy cruisers, the British representative, Lord Bridgeman, shouted in most undiplomatic language that in case of such a program be inaugurated by the United States the British government "would build ship for ship."

Gibson Waxes Sarcastic.

"In other words," Mr. Gibson remarked drily, "while we are asked to trust Great Britain's purity of intentions whatever her demands, it does not seem to work the same way when we make a few ourselves."

Read Admiral Hilary P. Jones, of the American delegation, then proceeded to explain the reasons for the American demands for the big cruisers, assailing the British proposals for cruisers of only 7,500 tons which would prevent the United States using such cruisers for anything but coastal service near its base of supplies and would practically shut this type of war ship out of the Pacific as far as the United States is concerned.

See Break Tomorrow.

Lord Robert Cecil, in reply to Admiral Jones, blurted out "This is perfect nonsense." Immediately Hugh Gibson was on his feet and demanded an apology from Cecil, declaring that he would instantly leave the conference unless one was forthcoming. Cecil withdrew the remarks and the dogfight went on.

The plenary session has been called for tomorrow by request of the

REPORT EXPECTED SOON ON CASE OF SACCO, VANZETTI

Governor's Committee Makes Visit to Prison

BOSTON, July 10.—Rumors are persisting here that Gov. Fuller's "Advisory Committee" will submit its report in a short time. They have gained credence especially in view of the fact that the committee yesterday spent two hours with Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti in the death house at Charlestown state prison. Earlier in the day they interviewed seven members of the jury that convicted the two Italian radicals on the original framed-up charges of murder.

Skeptical of "Investigation."

Friends of the defense here are unusually apprehensive of the decision that may be made by the committee. With Sacco and Vanzetti secretly transferred from the Dedham county jail to the state prison where the electric chair is located, they feel that the investigation can be described in no other manner than "perfunctory." If the committee is really basing its decision on the ten volumes of printed testimony, given them only a week ago.

—Governor Framing Decision.

Gov. Fuller, who is now at his summer home in Rye Beach, N. H., is said to be framing the beginning of his decision on the case. Sometime this week he will visit Sacco and Vanzetti in the state prison, and will also interview Celestino Madeiros, under sentence of death, who has made a full confession that the Morelli gang of which he was a member committed the crime for which Sacco and Vanzetti are now facing the electric chair.

We Will Not Surrender!

Today the members of The DAILY WORKER staff, who have been indicted by the Federal Grand Jury, will have to report at the office of the District Attorney. Physically we will have to surrender ourselves. But actually we will not surrender in this fight until we win, for we are confident that we have behind us rank upon rank of workers, who are ready to undergo the greatest self-sacrifice in order that The DAILY WORKER may continue its work. We are confident that thousands upon thousands of workers in the mines, mills, factories and farms, who have been deeply aroused by the attack of the war-mongers against The DAILY WORKER, and who thoroughly understand its significance in the present war propaganda period, will fight to the last ditch to defend and maintain the only daily newspaper, which has the courage and determination to speak up defiantly against the forces of reaction and capitalist militarism.

During the coming week, when we go before the District Attorney, we call upon the comrades throughout the country to speak, with voices strong and powerful, speak in a way that will clearly show that you are behind The DAILY WORKER at the time when it approaches its hardest battle.

New Housing Scheme a Royal Opportunity For the City Realtors

A Wallingford scheme to loot the city treasury is in process of perfection at the City Hall. Mayor Walker is the presiding genius. Under the terms of the scheme the city will build so-called multiple-family apartments on condemned property.

Those connected with Walker in this latest housing scheme are August Heckscher, philanthropist; Paul Block, a personal friend of the mayor; Samuel Paley, vice president of the Public National Bank and several other bankers and real estate operators.

The promise held out to secure the approval of the "public" is that of an $8 rental per room. Realtors who are now getting as high as fifteen and twenty dollars per room are behind the Walker plan.

Corporations In Deal.

The scheme calls for the creation of limited-dividend corporations in which the above named banks and realtors will largely figure and provides for wholesale "condemnation" of delapidated east side properties. What basis of appraisal will be employed under the mayor's plan only Tammany knows.

Provision is also made in favor of the holding corporations in that the condemned properties will be tax-exempt for twenty years. After paying whatever price will be agreed upon between the owner of the property and the city officials, the holding corporations will pay only 4 per cent as rent for use of the sites.

Is Legal.

The law which enabled the mayor to go thru with his plan is a chapter in the state constitution which permits the city when condemning property for street opening or the leasing of parks or other public places to take adjacent additional land for building sites, which cites may be either sold or leased by the city.

Chicago Traction Strike Near; Man Tricked by Lies

CHICAGO, July 10 (FP).—A traction strike becomes more probable as the Chicago Surface Lines persists in refusing to grant any increase over the present 75 cents an hour maximum. The union asks 90 cents maximum. It was believed last week that the company might grant the insurance demands already in force on the elevated lines. At that time the men might have accepted the compromise for a year but their temper is growing hotter.

Men Angered By Trick.

The union officials, usually opposed to strike action if anything can be gained by negotiations, are not so set against a strike, because of the trick played on them last year. The company had agreed the union to postpone matters because of the eucharistic congress and other Chicago conventions. The union obliged and then was laughed at for its courtesy, just as happened in Cleveland in 1924 at the time of the republican and La Follette national conventions.

The Imitation "Trombinicks."

No one would have known that a second group of "Trombinicks" had quietly come into existence if this other group had not got together and held a party on Monday at which $60 was collected for the defense. Of course they may be charged with being only imitators, nevertheless such imitations are as good as the genuine article, so—live on "Trombinicks"!

$50 From L. Harris' Farm.

A variety of people spent their vacation at the Harris and Lifshitz Farm. Among them a few class-conscious workers remembered their duty to the striking furriers—and a collection was called for, which brought $50. It is interesting to note that the collection appeal was made by a woman, Mrs. F. Rosenberg, who is far removed from the workingclass. This shows that the deeds of our betrayers have already become so well-known that many business people even are ready to help our martyrs in the struggle to wipe out hooliganism.

Walters Raise $60.

A committee of waiters of the "Green Kretchme" made an appeal for the defense on Sunday and collected $60. The Joint Defense and Relief Committee extends its thanks to all those above mentioned and the many whom space does not permit us to mention.

TEXTILE BARONS ROAST OF CHEAP LABOR IN SOUTH

Backed by Power Trust in Anti-Union War

By HARVEY O'CONNOR.

WASHINGTON, (FP) July 10.—If the power trust is now the most American octopus, with its tentacles sucking profits from the labor of every worker in electrified industry, then the textile worker is due to take his place among the worst exploited in the country.

Back of the rapidly expanding textile industry of the south stands the power trust—General Electric and its baffling array of subsidiaries—represented in Alabama Power, Carolina Light & Power, Tennessee Electric Power, Georgia Power, Texas Light & Power and, the friendly competitor—Duke Power, with its monopoly of the Piedmont Carolinas. Textiles are the main industrial power consumers below the Mason and Dixon line, and in turn the power companies are the main boosters for textiles, with glowing advertisements in all national business magazines beckoning New England textiles south.

Fight For Muscle Schoals.

The bitter unrelenting struggle the power trust is waging in congress against public operation of Muscle Shoals on the Tennessee River is well-justified from its own point of view. At present it has undisputed hegemony over the most rapidly expanding industrial section in America; but with Muscle Shoals operated by the people and selling juice at cost, the fattest and safest profit source in the world would vanish.

Liberal reserves of half-famished Anglo-Saxon labor, now languishing in the backward hill regions of the south, are the main lure held out by the power companies, which overhead boast of cheap power in comparison with New England steam power. Absence of competition coupled with cheap labor bait in fact enable the southern branches of the power trust to ignore their own comparatively high prices in their glowing advertisements.

Boast of Cheap Labor.

"The lowest taxes in eight textile states," boasts the Alabama Power Co. in advising northern mills not to liquidate, but come south. "We have never had a general strike," this company boasts. "We have ample reserves of Anglo-Saxon workers waiting for your mill doors to open."

"Tennessee has the kind of labor you would like to employ," advises the Tennessee Electric Power Co. "Our labor situation is ideal with 100 per cent native workers possessing loyalty and willingness to work."

"Georgia leads in the number of eastern mills locating in the south," declares Georgia Power. "Georgia has a reserve of efficient, willing Anglo-Saxon workers, ready to man your mills and cut your costs. Textile profits reach their highest tide in Georgia."

"The fact that more men than women are employed in the present industries has created a surplus of female labor," advises Duke Power. "That suggests opportunities for more knitting mills, hosiery mills, silk mills and garment factories. Less than ⅓ of our total labor is now engaged in industry."

No Union; Low Wages.

"Come where there is an adequate labor supply," is the enticement of Texas Light & Power, whose slogan is 'Texas for Textiles.' We have the greatest untapped labor supply of this country. Hundreds of thousands of people here are available for employment. They don't participate in labor disturbances. They don't believe in the 5-day week or in 48-hour laws."

The president of this company was the featured speaker before the recent Dallas convention of Texas Cotton Manufacturers Association. He glowed over the steady influx of eastern mill owners, enticed to Texas by the power company's promotion department. With both speaker and audience agreed on the "untapped labor supply" as an inexhaustible source of profits for both, there was no discussion of the possibility of lower power prices or of the toll paid by Texas industry to Texas Power & Light. American Light & Power, Electric Bond and Share and General Electric, the power trust's financial apparatus for extracting profits from Texas industry and workers.

Harriman Revises Pact With Soviet Russia on Manganese Concession

W. A. Harriman & Co. confirmed on Saturday the report that they have revised to the satisfaction of both parties that company's manganese concession agreement with Soviet Russia. In a public statement W. A. Harriman says:

"I am now in a position to state that our differences with the Soviet government have been cleared up and the revised contract was signed in Moscow by my associate, R. H. M. Robinson, and the concession commission of the Soviet government has ratified it. This confirms prediction by me that an agreement will be reached, and I may add that the Soviet government has met us in a fair spirit."

cies by the bosses and boss interests.

"The right of a worker to belong to a bona fide trade union, and the right of the membership of a union to decide its policies are fundamental and must be fought for with all the energy the working class can command. Because of this and the fact that a defeat of the New York furriers (who were the first to win the 40 hour 5 day week) will immediately be reflected throughout the country, the Toronto fur workers, who are affiliated with this Unity and Peace Conference, are appealing to you to send three delegates to a joint conference which is to take place at the Toronto Labor Lyceum, at 348 Spadina Ave., Sunday, July 10th, at 10 a. m.

To Assist Strikers.

"The general aim of this conference will be to discuss ways and means of assisting the New York striking furriers. Its immediate tasks will be to stage a monster meeting and bring Brother Ben Gold, manager of the New York Joint Board, Furriers' Union, to Toronto, to tell the workers of Toronto the full story of the great fight.

"This conference is called upon the directions and instructions of the Unity Conference for preservation of peace in the International Fur Workers' Union. Assistance to the New York fur strikers will also mean a speed-up in ending the internal struggle in the International union.

"With Trade Union Greetings,

"H. Englander, chairman, Unity Conference of U. S. & C."

On the Executive Board of the Unity Conference of the Fur Workers' Union are delegates from 8 cities of the United States and Canada, who were elected at the close of the recent so-called convention at Washington. The Unity Conference is charged with acquainting the labor movement of the situation in the furriers' union, with a view to bringing about peace as quickly as possible and preserving the union from its enemies.

Masses Rising Against Chiang Thruout China

persed by the firing of police into their ranks.

In spite of the terror on all hands the workers' movement remains powerful and increases its influence, as the struggle becomes clearer with the adventurers going over into the camp of the liberal bourgeoisie in service of the imperialist invaders. There is a great strike of sailors looming which may tremendously aid the labor movement. Also the peasant movement in the eastern part of the province continues to grow more formidable.

New Kuomintang Fight.

Among the reactionary elements of the Kuomintang there is fast developing a terrific struggle for control of the party and for execution of the revolution by military leaders may pave the way for intervention by some power that will recognize Nanking. It is strongly suspected that the United States is preparing to recognize the counter-revolutionary government of Nanking in order to secure opportunities for economic penetration of China and to also try to align that government in the world conspiracy that is being carried on under various forms against the Soviet Union.

While the right wing fight is raging in the Kuomintang, the left wing is working as a unit, has consolidated all its forces and become its representative the peasants, the organized workers and some of the petty-bourgeoisie, is developing ever-growing activity. So deeply implanted in the masses is the desire for freedom from the tyranny of the imperialists and their agents, the war lords, that no combination of reacting can prevent the inevitable triumph of the revolution.

Ford Apologizes to Jews; Shares Jump 7 Points on Market

In spite of the fact that the Ford anti-Jewish retractions are rumored to have been hatched upon sundry business occasions, Jewish leaders" expressed gratification at the motor king's about-face.

Dr. Maurice E. Harris, rabbi of the Temple Israel said: "It would be ungenerous to seek a motive in Mr. Ford's salutory step. We wish he would carry his 'message of good tidings' to Prague and Bucharest—not to mention places nearer home."

W. J. Cameron, editor of the Dearborn Independent, the organ which spread the Ford anti-Semitic charges, refused to comment on the future of the magazine. It is believed that the periodical will become the house organ of the Ford Motor Company.

Stocks Rise.

As a result of the Ford apology the shares of Ford of Canada, the only Ford unit traded on any market, advanced 7 points on the New York Curb on Saturday. It sold for $500. This represents the highest price of the year.

While Ford claims that the immense anti-Jewish propaganda was carried on without his knowledge, the Jewish Telegraphic Agency calls attention to the fact that Ford spent enormous sums of money in circularising the infamous "International Jew" through notorious anti-Jewish organizations. It says: "The distribution of these translations was brought about thru organizations like the Hakenkreuzler, the Awakening Magyars and all the national, chauvinistic factions in European states, making anti-Semitism their major policy."

Young and Not So Young Will Frolic On Chi. Excursion

CHICAGO, July 10.—Arrangements for The Daily Worker excursion to Michigan City, Ind., are almost complete and Sam Hammermark, the guide of the expedition is as busy as a one-armed frankfurter salesman at a Tercentenary outing.

In his headquarters at 19 South Lincoln street which is also the headquarters of an up-to-date book store, Comrade Hammermark is willing to stop any work he may be engaged in, even the selling of books, to answer questions relating to the outing.

We can officially state that the Young Workers League has decided to participate. The Pioneers are wavering but are expected to be won over by a box of esquimaux pies.

Fun Is Promised.

"While the chief aim of the excursion is the business of organizing the Daily Worker builders", Sam Hammermark stated in an exclusive interview to the Daily Worker, "those who are bereft of a social conscience will be amply rewarded for their pain in parting with the price of a ticket for the amusement provided by the committee. Music, singing and dancing will be among the attractions, with soft, cooling drinks between the acts."

The excursion boat will leave Chicago for Michigan city at 9.30 a. m. and will return with its human freight at 7 p. m.

Max Schachtman, Jr., when caught up a tree with his automobile he observed that there was something in heredity after all he will be on the excursion ship

Great Flood Damage.

New York was figuring out the damage yesterday caused by the heavy electrical storm, accompanied by torrential rain which swept over the five boroughs.

Westchester and the Bronx got the brunt of the storm. Streets and cellars were flooded and traffic held up for hours.

It was estimated that property damage amounting to several hundreds of thousands of dollars was done in the metropolitan area.

AMERICAN PUPPET IN CHILE SEIZES 76 IN "RED" RAIDS

Suppresses Communist Newspaper

Raids, arrests and deportations of Chilean Communists have followed as a result of the Arcos raid in London. Addresses alleged to have been found in the Arcos raid were cabled to the British envoy in Chile who turned them over to the police.

The illegal Communist paper "La Antorcha" was discovered and suppressed. Communist leaflets and circulars are still being distributed, however.

Profitable Business.

The Santiago police raided the IWW headquarters. All pamphlets and books were confiscated. However, the police did not destroy them, but sold them in bulk to second-hand bookshops. The public is eagerly buying the propaganda literature made available by Ibanez police.

It was announced at a mass meeting in the largest theatre in Santiago that Ibanez would be the only candidate for president. The entire press of Chile reports that this announcement was received with great enthusiasm, but news has reached neighboring states that the announcement was greeted with shouts of "Death to the dictator!" and "Long live the deported victims!"

Election Framed.

A group of 76 Communists nominated one of their deported comrades as candidate to oppose Ibanez. The 76 Communists were at once arrested. The police took them to the polls and forced them to cast their ballots. This was done under the pretext of enforcing the law of obligatory voting, since "legally" there were no other candidates.

The Ibanez dirtatorship was established with the aid of the Guggenheim interests, which have invested heavily in Chilean nitrate. On March 7th Ibanez issued a statement attacking the native nitrate magnates. The Guggenheim interests in Chile operate thru the Anglo-Chilean Consolidated Nitrate Company.

Geneva Navy Confab Ready to Break Up

British delegation in order that they may state their position for home consumption and try to convince the British taxpayers that the blame for the collapse of the conference and the mad competition for naval armaments that will be started upon the American government.

At the same time Gibson let it be known that he aware of the purpose of the British delegation in calling the plenary session and that he could guess fairly well the contents of Bridgeman's proposed speech and that he would answer it point by point.

Millions For Armaments.

In preparation for the war that is being plotted by the nations of the world against the Soviet Union and few imperialist powers that hope to emerge intact from the next world slaughter it is recognized that America and Britain will struggle against each other to obtain the lead. Geneva cannot be separated from the whole world conflict. Especially, it is pointed out, is this conflict sharpening in Europe even during the sessions of the conference, with American banking houses making agreements to float loans for the border countries of Russia bitherto mostly under the domination of Britain.

In the great battle ship building conflict that is already under way it is known that the United States, to carry out even its proposals at Geneva, instead of scrapping some of its ships already afloat as Coolidge would have had the world believe he intended to do when he called the conference, will in reality spend hundreds of millions of dollars for new war ships.

America's compromise figures of 400,000 tons call for an expenditure more than $561,000,000. The fake argument will be made before the American congress that the appropriation should be voted for this amount because it is $300,000,000 below that offered by the British.

Workers Watch Conference.

Much interest is being aroused all over Europe berause of the events at Geneva. The working class press, particularly the Communist press, points out the inevitable conflict that must arise from the competition between the two great imperialist giants of the world and the anti-war agitation bas taken on a new impetus. They all see the principal objective of imperialism to be the attempt first to destroy the Soviet Union in order to remove that great menace to imperialist plundering of the world before they begin the decisive fight among themselves.

Drunk Policeman Suspended.

For being drunk while on duty Patrolman Albert Hancock of the Elizabeth Street Station has been suspended from the force. He hit Patrirk McLean, a rarpenter, while in an intoxirated condition.

Building of Houses in the U.S.S.R.

Owing to famine and lack of industrial development the population of big towns and industrial centres in the Soviet Union decreased considerably in 1919-20. This situation underwent a great change when the country had no longer to defend its frontiers and its independence and was able to turn its attention to the establishment and consolidatin of national economy. Smoke issued again from factory chimneys, towns began to gradually assume their former busy aspects, economic life became normal. We give below a few figures descriptive of this process. The growth of the urban population since 1923 has been as follows:

Urban Population.
Year	Million
1923	20.7
1924	21.5
1925	22.7
1926	24.8
1927	25.7

This growth of the urban population is to a great extent brought about through the proletariat, which left the towns in 1919-20 partly to go to the front and partly to the villages and which is now returning to the towns. According to the recent census the urban population is growing rapidly. The average growth is about 6 per cent a year.

The housing question became very acute in the years of civil war and foreign intervention. The imperialist and civil wars did not only bring all new buildings to a stop, they were also to a great extent the cause of the destruction of dwellings and of the entire municipal economy. Over crowding in big centres was already felt prior to the war. It had a serious effect on the health of the proletariat (great infant mortality, spread of tuberculosis, etc.). At that time the working class had to live in basements, parts of rooms, barracks, etc. Its housing conditions were far from desirable. The housing question was particularly acute in the Donetz coal basin and on the oil fields of Baku and Grozny.

One of the first achievements of the October Revolution was to provide better housing conditions for the working class. Workers were housed in dwellings taken away from the bourgeoisie. It is true that this was not a proper solution of the housing problem However, the appalling housing conditions of the working class were at least considerably mitigated. But civil war broke out and prevented the Soviet Government from turning its full attention to the reconstruction of the country including repairing and building houses. All its forces were mobilized for defence. It was not before 1924 that building of new houses could be taken in hand. Building cooperatives played the role of skirmishers with respect to the construction of new houses, the total amount of money spent throughout the Union in 1924-25 for the construction of houses was 114 million roubles, in 1926—270 million roubles, and 370 million roubles will be spent in 1927.

The area built with the above sums was:—1925, 280 thousand square sazhen (1 sazhen 7 feet); 1926, 540 thousand square sazhen; 1927, 655 thousand square sazhen (proposed).

The main builders of new dwellings were: (1) the State industry, (2) the municipal departments of town Soviets, (3) housing cooperatives (small cheap houses for one family each have been built through private enterprises covering almost the same housing area. The State (in the person of the industry and the Soviets) and the cooperatives, play the chief rôle in the construction of houses.

In our industry the housing question has been and is still very acute. The construction of new factories and works and the extension of the ones necessitated the provision of new housing accomodation and therefore the government paid maximum attention to this form of building. We give below a table showing the State building grants to industrial enterprises for the erection of dwellings:

Year	Million Roubles
1925	60
1926	120
1927	135

The buildings put up by industrial enterprises take generally the form of settlements and hostels just outside the town. The usual type of house in a works settlement is a four or two-flat house, two stories or one story high. Hostels are put up mainly for single working men and women without children. They are big buildings of several stories.

Settlement building predominates. Accomodation in them is provided for workers employed in the enterprise. Rent in such buildings is as a rule very low, as the enterprise takes upon itself part of expenses. It is becoming customary to place the administration of these houses into the hands of householders' cooperatives.

Municipal building by town Soviets takes the form of the erection of flats (buildings, four to five stories high). These houses are administered either by the organs of the municipality or their administration is handed over to housing cooperatives. The latter is quite usual at present, and these cooperatives makes themselves responsible for expenses connected with administration and the liquidation of the debt incurred for the building of the houses.

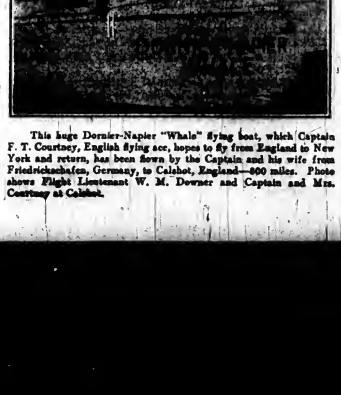
Housing cooperatives generally put up buildings either in suburbs or outside towns, in the form of settlements. One of the aims of cooperative working class buildings is the establishment of new social customs in keeping with the order created by the October Revolution. Lack of funds stand in the way of a large scale development in this direction on the basis of cooperative self-activity. Moreover, in spite of great difficulties this work is permeating considerable sections of the working class which is in sympathy with these efforts. This work takes also the form of providing creches for children under school age, of arranging playgrounds for children's homes, opening clubs, special red corners, wall newspapers, dining halls, laundries, etc. Housing cooperatives pay considerable attention to this form of social self-activity.

Building rooperatives for the erection of dwellings sprang up in the U.S.S.R. at the end of 1923. On January 1st, 1927, there were throughout the Union about 1,500 such cooperatives embracing about 200,000 families. The social composition of these building cooperatives is 70 per cent manual and 30 per cent office workers. Organizationally, building and leasehold cooperatives are amalgamated together into town and republican unions. These unions have to give organizational and economic help to primary amalgamations.

Workers' building cooperatives are given a number of privileges by the government, with respect to transport, payment for timber, allotment of plots of land, exemption from taxes, etc.

In order to provide building cooperatives systematically with the necessary funds, the housing State bank was established in 1925. This bank holds all the grants made by the State budget and distributes them among the various building organs according to a definite, rarefully drawn up plan. The bank gives loans for the construction of brick buildings for 55 to 60 years and for the construction of timber buildings for 35 to 45 years, at an interest of 2 per cent (according to a law confirmed by the U.S.S.R. Soviet of Peoples Commissars in March 1927 which applies also to loans made prior to its promulgation).—V. Belousov.

Gas Workers Win.



CHICAGO, July 10.—The strike of gasoline truck drivers and filling station employes has ended in a compromise. The former are to receive a monthly raise of $7.50 and the latter a $5 increase over the present monthly maximum of $140.

The workers lost their fight for one week vacation with pay. Workers in the Sinclair Refining Company led the walkout which was declared Saturday morning.

SPY CONFESSES FORGERY PLOT AGAINST SOVIETS

American Embassy Bought Forged Letters

According to a news story received Saturday from the Moscow correspondent of the New York American, a Polish spy, being tried before the military division of the supreme court has confessed that he and British spies framed-up the Sofia, Bulgaria, bomb explosion of April, 1925. The spy pleaded guilty and in his expose threw a political bombshell that rocks the capitols of Europe, especially in view of the widespread conviction that both the United States state department as well as the British foreign office are using forged documents in the campaigns against the Soviet Union.

Details of the Plot.

In April, 1925, according to the testimony of Druzelovski, these things occurred:

1. The cathdral in Sofia was bombed with the knowledge and consent of the Bulgarian Government.

2. A British spy, Colonel Holst—Druzelovski claimed—engineered the bombing.

3. M. Popoff, Bulgarian Minister to Berlin, dictated fake documents purporting to show that Communists plotted revolution in Bulgaria on April 15.

4. Druzelovsk binself participated in this alleged forgery, and the documents were printed in Berlin.

5. These documents—giving the apparent history of the cathedral bombing plot—enabled the Bulgarian Government to arrest and execute hundreds of Communists; innocent of any connection with the bomb outrage.

6—Berause of the iron-hand methods, based on alleged forgeries, the throne of Bulgaria was saved and the republican movement crushed.

The spy said:

"I am saddened by the executions which were the result of my forgery."

The charges against him had to do with espionage on behalf of Poland.

In the course of his story, Druzelovski declared he had sold forged Communist international letters to the American Embassy in Berlin and to American newspaper correspondents in Europe.

Paraguay in Fight to Avoid U.S. Imperialism; Concludes Spanish Loan

The government of Paraguay is conriudlng negotiations with Spanish bankers for a loan with which to buy war materials for a possible war with Bolivia over boundary differences.

This is the second time within the past few months that Spain has gotten material advantages out of its "solidarity" with the Latin-American countries in their struggle against United States imperialism.

Under the name of "Hispano-Americanism" Spain is carrying on propaganda throughout Latin America for closer union with the "mother country".

Recently Spanish bankers floated a loan of 100,000,000 pesetas to the Argentine government. One of the conditions of the loan was that the Argentine national anthem be amended; it words referring to the struggle of Latin America for freedom from Spain are to be omitted. Part of the loan will be used to buy warships. Argentina has already spent part of it on two modern destroyers—which it bought from Spain.

Henry Ford Is Worried

Henry Ford, foremost of America's slavedrivers, is here shown, in consultation with Edward P. Warner, of the U. S. Navy Department.

They are deeply concerned about the intense pressure being brought to bear by the Daily Worker Army of Detroit upon the Ford fortifications.

Under the leadership of one of the ablest generals on our field staff, Sarah Victor, the strategic center of our capitalist enemy is undergoing a steady bombardment.

Hundreds of Ford workers, driven to desperation by the monotony and nerve-racking speed-up system, have seized with enthusiasm the Daily Worker, and have begun to read it daily.

From the columns of the Daily Worker, they receive daily inspiration for their efforts to form a union, to protect themselves against the encroachments of this most ruthless czar of capitalism. From the Daily Worker they receive the news of other battlefronts.

The drive for Five Thousand New Readers for the Daily Worker, which is being enthusiastically pushed by the militant soldiers of the Daily Worker Army, will occasion ever increasing concern among the generals of capitalism.

That Socialist Threat to Boycott Communist Political Prisoners.

Abe Shiplacoff, an ornament of Abe Cahan's socialist party of New York, has again exposed himself and the party he represents as the enemy of the working class. His action at the Sacco and Vanzetti demonstration at Union Square was not only a blow against united action on the part of labor—an attempt to divide the workers into two hostile camps—but was particularly loathsome inasmuch as he was so unprincipled as to disregard the threat of death that hangs over the two Italian workers in whose behalf the demonstration was arranged. By his action in disrupting the meeting with the assistance of Tammany Hall police rather than yield to the overwhelming demand on the part of the audience to hear Ben Gold, leader of the furriers, he proved that the socialist party leadership in New York can still sink to depths formerly undreamed of.

After this vile attack against the united front of labor striving to save from the electric chair the victims of the Massachusetts frame-up, Shiplacoff issued a public statement in which he declared that he would ask labor to boycott the Communist political prisoners of Europe. The dirty lying implication is that the socialist leaders of this country once defended Communist political prisoners in Europe.

Far from defending Communist political prisoners in Europe Shiplacoff, Abe Weissberg, Sam Friedman, Eddie Levinson, August Claessans and the rest of the gang that aided the police in their attacks upon the Union Square meeting have allied themselves with the jailers and the executioners of Communists in Europe and publicly defended known spies of imperialism in their attacks upon workers. The contemptible scoundrels who went over to their governments in the world war,—the heroes of the second (socialist) international—are today in the capitalist governments of various European nations and are defending capitalism against the rising tide of revolution by the most atrocious persecutions against those who remained true to the traditions of the proletarian movement.

The demand of the socialists upon the labor movement to refuse to defend the Communist victims of the socialist ministers to various kings in Europe is a slimy effort to prevent the bloody assassins of labor who are international comrades of the yellow socialists of this country being known to the workers.

When they speak of boycotting Communist victims of capitalist tyranny in Europe the socialists of this country should be asked by labor: When and where and under what conditions did you ever defend, since the world war, the enemies of capitalist reaction in Europe? Where were the socialist leaders of America when their comrades, Scheidemann, Ebert and Noske, agents of the capitalists of Germany, murdered Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg?

Shiplacoff and the rest of the socialist party gang who played the roles of police agents at Union Square may want the world to forget the murders of the flower of the working class by their comrades, the social-democratic ministers, but we will never permit the memory of these crimes to fade from the mind of mankind.

By their action at Union Square the socialist provocateurs proved to all the workers of America that if they had the power in the United States as their comrades, the heroes of the second international have in Europe, they also would slaughter the workers in order to defend for a while longer the domination of capital over labor, just as they now aid the jailers of the left-wing needle trades workers in the interest of the bosses.

Coolidge Studies Farmers' Crop Prospects.

The "summer white house" in the Black Hills of South Dakota, whence President Coolidge journeyed in the hope of building his political fences that have been badly shattered because of the persistent farm crisis and his cynical veto of the McNary-Haughen farm relief bill, was the scene of a conference of "best minds" to try to obtain correct information upon the problems confronting the farmer.

The experts with which Coolidge conferred were Howard Elliott, chairman of the board of directors of the Northern Pacific Railroad; Hale Holden, president of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy and Charles E. Perkins, a director of both railway systems. The railroad magnates reported that, according to their observations, the crops would be the best in seven years. This is said to have greatly encouraged the President, who perceives an opportunity to claim credit for the good crops in order to remain in office another term.

The careful scientific manner in which the railroad magnates surveyed the agricultural situation is revealed by the deep research of Mr. Elliott of the Northern Pacific who left New York on July 4th and made a daylight trip across the country to observe from a window of his private car the crop conditions. The other data, furnished by the other gentlemen, was gathered in the same spirit of detailed observation.

Incidentally, the hard working Mr. Elliott was in New York during the unpleasantness of the summer, when most other gentlemen of affluence leave the city for cooler parts, in order to file application with the interstate commerce commission for a permit to consolidate the Northern Pacific with the Great Northern. When the merger is granted, new stock issues, based upon new capitalization of millions of dollars, will be placed upon the market and the freight rates for hauling crops will be boosted so that the rail magnates will get a still larger share of the product of the labor of the farmers of the corn and wheat belts.

Coolidge's optimism is doomed to fade in face of facts. The farmers have had very good crops many times during the past seven years, but other agricultural countries also had good crops—the total being more than the inhabitants of the earth could buy.

The railroads, however, get their freight rates and profits, whether the farmer gets the price of production for his crop or not.

Crawling Politics

By BERT MILLER.

The Joint Committee of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association and the Uniformed Firemen's Association has just adopted a resolution calling upon patrolmen and firemen of New York State and their relatives and friends to vote "yes" on the proposed constitutional amendment to increase the pay of members of the legislature from $1,500 to $2,000 a year. This proposal was undoubtedly accepted by the members of the two above-mentioned organizations as a means whereby certain concessions might be secured from the grateful legislators, after they get a raise. The members of these two organizations have repeatedly asked for increases in salary, and have repeatedly been turned down by republican and democratic administrations alike. They are subjected to the most rigorous check-up system and are compelled to comply with most exacting demands of their departments. They have no right to organize in labor unions, as do other civil servants, especially in other countries. Yet they are led by their corrupt officials to crawl abjectly before the very politicians who are their bitterest enemies.

The attitude of the patrolmen and firemen is but a further expression of the ridiculous policy of Frayne, Woll and Co., the policy of "rewarding your friends and punishing your enemies." It is this policy, which if carried out to its logical conclusion, would so completely undermine labor's confidence itself, that not only would the idea of a labor party be abandoned, but even the idea of labor unions would give place to amorphous organizations like the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association and the Uniformed Firemen's Associations. It is this suicidal policy of Frayne, Woll and Co., which has left the working class of this country, politically, helpless. Mr. Abraham Epstein, of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, has pointed out in a recent article, that the American worker, in spite of the exaggerated claims of his prosperity, is economically more insecure than his fellow workers in most countries of Europe, that he is totally unprotected by social legislation, such as we find in Germany, England, France, Sweden, Switzerland and other countries, and that his conditions of work are almost completely at the mercy of his employer. Nowhere among the leading capitalist countries, except in fascist Italy, are the workers more vulnerable to the attacks of the employers through the courts and government agencies in general. This is the result of the suicidal non-partisan political policy which the American workers must learn to reject.

Incidentally our conclusion is dramatically corroborated by a news item from South America. Says the New York Times, "Pressure upon the Hertzog government of the Union of South Africa by the labor members of the South African Parliament has brought about the withdrawal of the so-called sedition clauses in the Native Administration bill." Thus the black workers of South Africa have succeeded in killing a most vicious anti-labor measure. The wholesale utilization of government agencies against the workers, the police and the courts, the use of the injunction, the passage of anti-labor legislation should quickly open the eyes of the American workers to the necessity of having their own political party of labor, which will fight in the interests of American labor as effectively as the Labor Party of South Afrien.

Working farmers and poor farmers will not easily be deceived by the twaddle of the "best minds" and "agricultural experts" who haunt the summer white house. They will not fall for Coolidge, but there is grave danger of their being taken in by such swindlers and political crooks as Frank O. Lowden, Vice President Dawes or some of the other millionaires who have suddenly become defenders of the farmers.

The only hope for the farmers of this country is by striving with the advanced elements of the working class for a class party that will fight for their joint interests. The natural political ally of the working class in this country is the exploited farmer, and the impoverished inhabitants of the corn and wheat belts should not for a moment imagine that their interests can be served by supporting the Wall Street government of Coolidge or any of the lackeys of capitalism now trying to appeal to them for their support in 1928.

ARTHUR BRISBANE, our foremost literary man of elastic virtue, was the medium thru which Ford conveyed his apology to the public. One might gather from Arthur's eulogy of Ford that it is more meritorious to sin on a large scale than to be chronically virtuous, for the greater glory there is in repentance. To commit errors for the sake of admitting them might be alright, but for the fact that errors like small pox leave ineradicable marks. And no matter how many respectable Hebrews praise Henry for hitting the sawdust trail in his eleventh hour, like to the sacrificial altar, there will be millions who will attribute his change of heart to less worthy motives than a desire to atone for wrong committed.

WHAT impelled Ford to call off his yelping mongrels at this time? It is not hard to guess. The there are reports that he has presidential ambitions, the principal reason for his action is a business one. Libel suits do not make good advertising, for his animated tin cans and Jew-baiting has lost a good deal of its value with the decline of the Ku Klux Klan. Ford has no more chance of being elected president than William Randolph Hearst. Should Ford's name be seriously suggested for the white house it will be merely a cheaper way of bringing his product to public attention than by buying advertising space. Ford may be several kinds of a fool, but he knows his millons, and Coolidge suits him down to the ground.

"L" Accidents Call For Belated Action On Wooden Car Use

Moved to belated action following the B.-M. T. elevated crash last Tuesday in which 13 passengers were severely injured, the transit commission has come forward with a statement that "efforts will be made to remove the wooden cars now in service on the elevated lines thruout the city."

John F. Gilchrist, chairman of the committee, under whose regime several wooden car accidents occurred within the last year said that the excuse offered by the B.-M. T. was that the elevated structures were not enough to carry the weight of a steel car.

The public reaction to the series of calamities due to the use of wooden cars has spurred the B.-M.T. to remove the death traps from the Brighton line service.

CIGAR MAKERS' INTERNATIONAL SUSPENDS PROGRESSIVE LOCAL ON EVE OF CONVENTION

(By a Cigarworker)

The progressive local of the Cigar Workers International, Local 100, New York City was recently suspended by the president shortly before the international convention, which is to be held in August 1927.

The reasons given for the suspension of this local is that it is deficient in funds to the amount of $200. This amount is disputed by the local. A closer examination of the circumstances leading to the suspension of this local will reveal some interesting facts. What are these facts?

Once Separate?

Until about 6 months ago the present Local 100 was an independent organization known as the Amalgamated Tobacco Workers' Union. This union had to, as a matter of course, come into conflict with the international. The Amalgamated Tobacco Workers had to for the past several years fight for its existence on the picket line not only against the bosses, but also against the International bureaucrats as well.

The aim of the Amalgamated Tobacco Workers, based upon progressive lines, could not be obtained due to the existence of two organizations in the field and a large mass of unorganized workers in the industry. The Amalgamated, realizing the necessity for unified action in the industry in order to better defend the interests of the workers, agreed to confer with the International Cigar Makers Union upon the initiative of Santiago Iglesias with the idea in view of joining the A. F. of L. organization.

After a series of conference between the two orgnizations the following main points for unity were agreed upon: (1) Conditions and prices prevailing in the Amalgamated shops before affiliation be maintained. (2) Immediate organization campaign be started. (3) That the Amalgamated receive a charter as a separate local. All these points were granted by the International and the former Amalgamated Tobacco Workers Union became known as Local 100, International Cigar Makers Union.

First Betrayal.

At the time of the granting of the charter as a separate local a strike was in progress in one of the biggest cigar shops in New York, Bloom's shop. The International took over this strike and agreed to do its utmost to carry this strike to a successful conclusion. Instead of fighting this strike thru for the best interests of the workers the president of the international, in true class collaboration style, effected a settlement with the bosses, based on a secret agreement, which is not as yet known to the workers. This agreement calls for a reduction in wages of 27 per cent. Local 100 bitterly fought this betrayal without much success. This is the first skirmish this new local had with the international officials.

Another Betrayal.

Local 100 then had to call another strike in Schwab & Baer (this was after affiliation with the International) to maintain standards existing in this shop before their affiliation. The International officials again betrayed the workers thru secret correspondence between the boss, the International president and his New York representative. This strike was also lost, thanks to the international bureaucrats.

The official report of the International of April 1927 shows that the total number of members in New York and vicinity is 1665. Of this number about 50 per cent are no more working at the bench, but are considered as members because they still pay sick and death benefit dues. This leaves the New York membership about 800 and then 300 members are suspended (local 100). The above deplorable situation of the unorganized state of the industry makes it imperative to institute a real organization campaign.

Struggle to Organize the Unorganized.

As per agreement between Local 100 and the International officials to organize the cigar industry in New York the local proposed the following plan of organizing the cigar workers: (1) The calling of shop chairmen meetings to organize a live rank and file organization committee. (2) The calling of a series of general membership meetings to prepare and stimulate interest in the drive amongst the members. (3) After preparing the membership a series of mass meetings to be called.

How did the International carry out the above plan to organize the industry? During the 6 months that Local 100 has been in existence the International called one shop chairmen's meeting, where an "organization committee" was elected. This committee was never called to a meeting. They also called one membership meeting during the entire six months, the membership not being notified. An obscure notice was posted in one of the local offices to which the members rarely come announcing this meeting. Then with this "wonderful" preperation a "mass meeting" was called, about as well prepared as the membership meeting.

A few progressives came down to this meeting and no results obtained. This was the end of the organization drive for the whole 6 months. The above manner in which the reactionary officials of the International ran an organization campaign should be enough to convince anyone of the utter lack of interest the bureaucrats have in such a campaign and the deliberate sabotage on the part of the officials in this organization drive.

Local 100 Fights Betrayal.

Local 100 was outraged at these betrayals and acts of sabotage on the part of the International bureaucrats and put up a consistent fight in the New York Joint Advisory Board. The exposure of the bureaucrats of the International by this progressive local put fear into their hearts and as a consequence, in true bureaucratic fashion, issued an edict dissolving the local to prevent this local from exposing their treacherous class collaboration policy at the coming convention. The lame excuse given for dissolving the local was that they owed $200 above the amount allowed by the constitution.

Lame Excuse.

Is the excuse given by the president of the International a valid one? According to the official annual financial report of the International contained in its official organ of April 1927 under the heading "Deficiency in Funds of Local Union on January 1, 1927" we find that 160 locals are deficient in funds to the amount of $34,985.59, giving an average deficiency of $218.72 per local. Examining this deficiency list closer we find the following locals listed individually deficient in funds considerably above that of Local 100. This is but a partial list of the outstanding "deficiencies."

Local No.	Location	Amount Deficient.
14	Chicago, Ill.	$4,261.86
64	Lebanon, Penna.	1,233.33
148	Caguas	1,442.52.
218	Binghamton	906.29
251	New York	1,939.77
350	Monaca	1,478.05
501	Whalling, W. Va.	1,124.55

The above partial list of 160 locals is sufficient to prove that the excuse given by the president of the International for the suspension of Local 100 for deficiency of funds is not only a lame one, but is also hypocritical. If, according to the constitution locals are to be suspended for deficiency in funds why were not the 160 locals listed in their own official reports suspended The reason is obvious. These 160 locals are "safe" for the bureaucrats. They will give no trouble to the labor fakers at the next convention, whereas, Local 100, being progressive and having suffered unheard of acts of betrayal and sabotage on the part of the bureaucracy of the International will appear before the convention and demand an accounting.

We therefore see that the real reason for suspending this progressive local is not because they are deficient in a paltry $200, but because they fight for a progressive policies; exposed the officials for their betrayal of Bloom and Schwab & Baer strikes and because they demand a real organization campaign in the cigar industry.

Questions to the President.

Was Local 100 suspended because it fought the betrayal of Bloom, or because of the deficit?

Was Local 100 suspended because it fought the betrayal of Schwab & Baer or because of the deficit?

Was Local 100 suspended because it sabotage on the part of the bureaucracy or because of the deficit?

Was Local 100 suspended because of the coming International Convention, or because of the deficit?

Half of Hollywood Actors Join Union

By ESTHER LOWELL.
(Federated Press)

Nearly half the movie actors and actresses of Hollywood voted themselves into Actors Equity Association at a mass meeting, union secretary Frank Gillmore has wired New York headquarters.

Not counting a few of the highest paid stars and the "whole world" of extras, the 700 new unionists make nearly half the total expected to join before the campaign is over. Extras will be lined up later.

Acceptance of the standard contract regulating working conditions in the studios is the movie unionists' demand. A basic 8-hour day is provided, though overtime is allowed. Movie players are worked day and night under present conditions.

Equity doesn't propose to interfere with movie wages yet, states assistant executive secretary Paul Dalsall to Federated Press. But secretary Gillmore, now in Hollywood, found a much better response to his union call after the movie magnates announced $1 per cent pay. Equity sets no minimum wage, but aims to collect whatever the contract calls for without hitch.

Big Business Launches Campaign for Slash in Taxes on Corporations

WASHINGTON, July 10.—Big business, thru the United States Chamber of Commerce, is carrying on a campaign for a reduction on corporation taxes by at least $325,000,000.

The Chamber of Commerce has sent out 1,500 letters to members' organizations, affiliated with the national body, urging to them to carry on a campaign for the reduction of taxes on big business.

Those who are in touch with the administration's policies in this regard say that Coolidge will favor the Chamber's request.

Private Air Mail Hung Up; Want More Planes?

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The government's relinquishment of the New York-Chicago air mail route to private hands has been postponed until September 1. It was announced here today. Officials of the national air transport company, who take over the contract, requested the postponement. When the government decided to sell out, officials in charge bought a number of expensive new machines which were sold for a song to private parties.

Resent Appointment Of Politician on City Teacher Board

The appointment of a Bronx politician as executive secretary of the teachers' retirement board has resulted in a row which may hold up its operations indefinitely.

Since the resignation of the previous secretary on July 1st the board has been deadlocked on the selection of a successor. Yesterday the four non-teachers who are members of the retirement board outvoted the three teachers and selected Irving Crabe, a Tammany lawyer of 850 East 16?st St., as the secretary.

Bitter accusations were made yesterday by the teacher members of the board who insisted that only one who has served in the public schools can possibly be fitted to administer the fund.

The election was denounced as illegal and as a "cheap political trick." Miss Lillian A. Hatch, a teacher member of the board, said she would refuse to act on any more retirement cases and added that most of the teachers in the public school system considered the retirement fund of more vital concern to themselves than any hoped-for increase in salaries.

Call to the Sixth Annual Convention of the Northern States' Co-operative League, Minneapolis, Minn., July 17-18, 1927

The Sixth Annual Convention of the Northern States' Co-operative League will be held in the auditorium of the Franklin Co-operative Creamery Association, 2108 Washington Ave. N., Minneapolis, Minn., on Sunday and Monday, July 17th and 18th. The Convention will be called to order at 10 A. M., on July 17th, by the president of the League.

Every society in constituent membership with the League is entitled to be represented at this convention by at least one voting delegate. Societies with a membership exceeding 300 are entitled to one additional voting delegate to each 300 members or a majority fraction thereof.

Societies in fraternal membership are entitled to send one or more fraternal delegates to the convention. Fraternal delegates have a voice but no vote.

Co-operative Societies, not in constituent or fraternal membership with the League, who wish to be represented at the Minneapolis convention, are welcome to send delegates to it. These delegates will be extended the same courtesies and privileges that are enjoyed by the fraternal delegates.

Individual members in good standing, who are not delegates, are also invited to attend the Convention. They may be granted the privilege of the floor upon the action of the delegates assembled. Other persons interested in the Co-operative Movement, who wish to attend the Convention as visitors, are also welcome to be present at its sessions.

If any constituent societies wish to send more delegates to the Convention than they are entitled to, on the basis of their dues-paying membership, they may do so, provided that such additional delegates have a voice but no vote.

All delegates, whether constituent or fraternal, should come to the Convention provided with credentials signed by the proper officers of their society.

The boards of directors of the affiliated societies are urged to discuss at their next meeting any proposals they might wish to make or support at the Minneapolis Convention and which would be for the welfare of the League and its member societies. The Convention agenda have been mailed to all societies, for their information.

At the Fifth Annual Convention of the League, which was held in Duluth July 18th and 19th, last year, there were 51 regular voting delegates and 12 fraternal delegates in attendance. Let us all unite our efforts to make our Sixth Convention still bigger and better than the Duluth Convention was.

Fraternally, NORTHERN STATES' CO-OPERATIVE LEAGUE.
H. I. NORDBY, President.
V. S. ALANNE, Executive Secretary.

AGENDA

26. Adjournment.

A Successful Convention.

The first annual convention of the Central States' Co-operative League was held at Bloomington, Ill., on May 22nd and 23rd. From all indications this was a very successful convention and undoubtedly contributed in a large measure toward strengthening and solidifying the consumers' co-operative movement in the central part of the United States.

Besides the four delegates representing the central organization, there were altogether 25 regular voting delegates present, from 10 different societies affiliated with the League. There also were present twelve fraternal delegates, representing six different organizations.

Many matters of vital interest to the movement were considered and many important measures passed.

A. W. Warinner, a veteran co-operative worker, is the executive secretary and educational director of the League.

THE PRESIDENTIAL JESTER

Who is here but Calvin Coolidge, our Massachusetts politician and representative of big business, who has forced himself to frolic around South Dakota in chaps (no longer in style for ranchers, unfortunately) and try to lasso some farmer votes. He fills the community with glee, and some of his press agents are beginning to suspect people are laughing at him.

Danger of War and the United Front of the Working Class

By G. BEICHEK.

A characteristic feature of the present situation is the increased activity of the international bourgeoisie in absolutely all phases of the class struggle. We are unable to lose sight of the fact there has been a logical sequence in all these international events, from the Chinese revolution to the latest white-guard intrigue in the U. S. S. R., a sequence determined by the irreconcilable contradictions inevitably arising from the parallel existence of two systems—the capitalist and the socialist. As the relations between these two systems become more acute a danger arises which could at any moment become the procurser of an armed attack on the U. S. S. R. of a bloc of capitalist states.

A survey of the international situation at present maturing, taking into consideration all those elements which have ereated it, especially the rapid development of individual industries in all the capitalist countries, international bourgeoisie are making feverish efforts to utilize the period of relative stabilization of capitalism before it is too late.

The undermining of capitalist stabilization in the Far East, the Chinese and colonial events are foreing the bourgeoisie to hurry still more, and the steady strengthening of Soviet Russia plays also no small part in the intensification of the struggle. The question as to how the International bourgeoisie intends to deal with its class foes at home becomes one of the greatest importance, and is the most important factor of the present stage of development. The working class, which has during the last 10 years passed through the furnaces of world war and post-revolutionary reaction, is very different from that existing on the eve of August, 1914. Its experience of mass-scale struggle has increased, its level of class-consciousness is indubitably higher and it is now incomparably more difficult for the bourgeoisie to establish "peace in industry," and "civil peace," which constitute a sine qua non for serious military attache. The international bourgeoisie knows all this as well as we do, and this is why, an elaborate system of acurrilous provocation against the U. S. S. R. is accompanied by feverish attacks on the working class at home.

To deprive the working class of the right to strike, to cut down the rights of labor organizations, to impede in every way the ever-increasing aspirations of the workers towards the united front and trade union unity, such is the true meaning of the International bourgeoisie's "social" policy in the present transitional period.

The latest achievements in this field have been the anti-trade union bill in England, compulsory arbitration in Norway, the French bill in course of preparation for the militarization of the trade unions in case of war, and, finally, the degradation of the Italian trade unions into Fascist organizations.

It must be clear to all that the sum total of the British conservative government's military provocations against Soviet Russia make up an integral part of the International bourgeoisie's general attack on the world proletariat as a whole.

The fact that the British conservative government has appeared as the instigator of the attack on Soviet Russia is attributable to the British bourgeoisie's high level of "class consciousness" and the extent to which its interests are involved in the colonies and semi-colonies. The degree of hostility towards Soviet Russia on the part of the other capitalist powers can be determined by a regular succession of fortuitous events.

The fact, however, that in almost all the bigger countries systematic attacks on the legal status of labor organizations are going on, shows clearly that all the capitalist states will, should occasion arise, be found able to "speak English."

A new phase of social conflicts is fraught with grave dangers, but these are all piled upon the backs of the international working class.

The United Front is a powerful weapon in the hands of the working class now invested with exceptional importance as the only effective means of resistance. The united front has become a practical necessity for the international labor movement, and if the reformists intend in future to sabotage it they will have to come out definitely on the side of the belligerent bourgeoisie, consciously assisting it in its endeavors to destroy the working class and its class organizations.

Such is the external state of affairs at the present moment.

Anthracite Becomes Efficient

The world-wide crusade for efficient production has made its dent in the anthracite situation. The demand for mule drivers has almost disappeared. Mule-driving was once a profession, and men who could handle a team of mules with skill, found jobs in every mine.

But electrification has made the mule driver practically a legendary figure. Swift motors rush through dripping gangways; the clinging of engine bells replaces the swearing of the infuriated driver urging an immovable pair of mules to their task. Gangways are still in need of electric lights, however. Save for the few globes twinkling at the cage-bottom, the rest of the mine is left to darkness.

The Lehigh Co. collieries in the Panther Creek Valley are equipped with mechanical boilers which do away with firemen, asbman, and the usual squad of maintenance men required to keep up steam for the colliery engines. The Panther Creek collieries being of recent construction and development, started with the advantage of modern technique.

But where the collieries can easily look back upon half century of development, as around here, many old engines and antiquated devices can still be seen in daily operation.

These inefficient devices divided the work between mechanical power, and man power. But more efficient machines have come, which propose to eliminate man power still further. Man-power being the largest item of expense of production, it is peculiarly fitting that companies go in heavy for such machines as cut down on human labor. It is this economy which, in the main, determines the efficiency of a machine.

The average quota of men to a boiler house is about 21. These come under the heading of "maintenance," and usually stay at their posts during strikes and suspensions. The fall quota was kept on during the last six months' suspension.

This summer an unexplained enthusiasm for "knocking off" boilermen has seized colliery officials. The firemen not only get "days off," and are compelled to work on holidays with reduced force, but are actually being layed off permanently, and the job left to fewer hands. This situation is one causing much wrinkling of brows. Locals bold meetings that rise to boiling point before the chairman's gaval pounds adjournment, and settlement is attempted on the street corner, or in the barroom.

Nor is this situation a simple one for the union to face. The company has got the right to insist on eight hours work from each man. It holds the right to improve productive methods and cut down labor costs. Its right to these things was duly recognized by the union when the last work contract was signed, granting the companies "efficiency and co-operation."

"Efficiency and co-operation" is a mischievous phrase, and has to be explained over and over again to the miners. Its purpose is to "improve" production by installing man-saving devices, while checking the miners' "comeback" which, otherwise, would inflict damage to the companies in the form of strikes and minor troubles.

As matters stand, the contract gives the company the right to do what it wishes, while the miners are bound to stand rigidly by their agreement, and make no stir until the worst is over.

A recent case here shows the utter helplessness of the miners in meeting the situation. A boiler man was "knocked off," and at a local meeting it was decided to present the superintendent of the colliery with an ultimatum. Either he would rehire the discharged man, or the men would declare a strike. The men greeted this with enthusiasm. In their opinion, the matter had gone far enough, and drastic measures only could have effect.

But soon enough they were reminded that their contract bound them to honor its provisions; that a strike would be in open violation of its terms; that the case must be carried through proper channels to the conciliation board where, between the operators and the miners, the matter would be thrashed out, and decision rendered. By this decision they would have to abide.

The miners listened, shrugged their shoulders, and wondered at their helplessness. No strike took place; the man was "knocked off"; things took their usual course.

The situation in the anthracite is very unhappy. The bottom has dropped out of the market; one day a week the collieries work, and the rest of the time the miners dawdle away the time standing around street corners, watching the people pass by. Their faces stare at edges of roofs, or they sit on rail sills and play pinochle all day.

While towns glitter still with something of the flash of the old prosperity, and chambers of commerce exult in business booms, the average miner feels his stomach sag, and his children go without decent shoes. Fortunately it is summer, and children walk barefooted.

One almost gasps to wonder what has struck the anthracite such blow. The present depression is the worst ever known, and complaint and suffering is general. Not only those who work suffer, but jobs are beyond price, and those out of work must face a future which time can only darken and make more serious.

Men and women can be heard passing on their way to the woods at three A. M. They carry buckets and slight lunches. These are huckleberry pickers. Dozens of miners out of work search the mountains for huckleberries which hucksters buy from them at fifteen cents a quart. In this way some miners manage to add something to the narrow margin along which they must stretch their living at this time.

THE CHECK WEIGHMAN

WOMEN

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By RIMDALV NINEL.

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., (By Mail).—"A motion picture actress returned from Paris with twelve trunks, a new husband and a mouthful of philosophy." One can easily imagine the owner of twelve trunks coming back with a NEW husband, but it take a credulous mind to imagine the owner of twelve trunksful coming back with even a mouthful of philosophy. Judge for yourselves: "The flapper styles," says she, "are disappearing, for which I am so glad. For they were not beautiful, those style. The sight of legs is not charming; to be charming women must have mystery. . . ."

Columnist Philosophies.

Mr. Lessing, the columnist, then goes on to discuss this palatable bit of philosophy which he chose to offer the public: ". . . the generality of her philosophy," says he, "is somewhat appleassy. The sight of pretty legs is most absolutely, positively and 110 per cent charming," etc. This is the kind of philosophy served to us by our "best" papers. It is the kind of papers filled with philosophical discussions such as the foregoing that have the greatest circulation. Is it a wonder, then, that (according to reliable statistics) over 50 per cent of the adult population in this country has the mentality of a 12-year old child. Of course, any 12-year-old is capable of such sound philosophy.

Further on one might expect something reasonable from this philosopher when he says: ". . . Female politicians are rarely charming. Competition with men in the sordid struggle for existence has the same effect upon a woman's charm as the smoke-laden atmosphere of a Pittsburgh steel mill would have upon the wings of a butterfly. Which may be regrettable. Yet true." He need not have troubled to tell us so evident a truth; however, one soon sees that he did not realize this to be the only thing he said worth thinking about.

Why Go Into Politics.

Yes, this is worthy of your full consideration.

Why do women become politicians? Does a woman deliberately throw away her charms for politics? Is it possible today for a woman to get along honorably without competing with men? Does the average man earn enough to support her? (Much less a family.) The answer is no. Then what is left for a woman to do? There is no other alternative than to compete with man. How else is she to exist?

Certainly the sordid struggle for existence has the same effect upon a woman's charm as the smoke-laden atmosphere of a Pittsburgh steel mill would have upon the wings of a butterfly." That is it. What other atmosphere is there for the myriads of women who are compelled to earn their livelihood? Who, apart from the favored few of fortune, can keep their wings from being singed by the "sordid smoked?" Think it over, you women who must earn your livelihood: charm is of necessity destroyed before its time in those who must sell themselves, their lives, for wages, in order that the sheltered few may keep their charms. Wage earning women, ours is "a sordid afruggle," and for what—for a mere existence, so that our bosses may wring profits from us to make their lives, and those of their families, lives of ease and luxury. This being a fact, you might as well give yourself to the task of changing the policies that permit of such travesties. Since we must suffer from the "smoke" and be burned by it, let us not suffer in vain. Let us become politicians, but politicians with a purpose, whose purpose it shall be to clear away the deadly smoke.

Let's Organize.

"Which may be regrettable. Yet true," continues Mr. Lessing. It is most emphatically regrettable, that what are we to do about it? Pine and sigh as he does. Be satisfied with the hot air he, and other like him, pour upon us? No! Let us make anything such as he may say really "Somethink to Think about"; let us organize to devise ways and means to do away with such regrettable conditions. We cannot better them by being satisfied with listening to someone tell us they are regrettable. They need a forceful remedy. The remedy is in organized effort to eradicate such evils. It can be done! It must be done! It is up to you to help to do it. You can do this by joining the Workers (Communist) Party, by learning of its work, and carrying out its program.

ADDITIONAL CABLE OF THE C. I. ON THE INNER PARTY SITUATION

The following cable has been received by Max Bedacht, Acting Secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party with instructions to publish immediately:

"Our cable of July 7th did not aim at all to support the hegemony of one group in the Workers Party but the merging of all groups. We criticised the factional action of the National Committee Opposition bloc, we criticised also the narrow inner party line of the other side. Between the representatives of the three groups an agreement has been reached here to facilitate the bringing nearer and to accelerate the merging of these groups. Every action standing in contradiction to this agreement no matter from which side it should come from is condemned and categorically rejected by us in the interest of the party unity. According to the agreement the opposition shall also have the right to express and to defend in a non-factional comradely way its opinions in all meetings of the party units.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

KEVIN O'HIGGINS, Vice-president of the Free State council, minister of justice, and foreign affairs, was the victim of retribution when he met his death last Sunday at the hands of unknown men who presumably avenged the crime committed by this tool of the British government against the scores of Irish revolutionists he sent before the firing squad for keeping faith with the cause for which every generation of Irish rebels sacrificed lives.

COMMUNISTS do not advocate individual terrorism as a political policy. It is the weapon of despair and rarely provides a remedy for the situation which breeds despair. But one cannot offer considers the wholesale murders carried out by the present heads of the Irish Free State under the direction of the British government, no honest observer can work up any indignation or experience any sorrow over the death of O'Higgins. Indeed, the remarkable thing is that something like this did not take place before now.

O'HIGGINS attended the imperial conference in London last October. He was an imperialist and a fascist to the marrow of his bones and the most brutal and blood thirsty member of the cabinet. The Catholic he turned a cold shoulder to the papal envoy who visited Ireland a few years ago with the object of making peace between the Free Staters and the Republicans. DeValera, depended on the pope to help him out, but O'Higgins had the support of the Irish bishops. Only a few weeks ago, O'Higgins and DeValera knelt together in the same church to ask divine blessing on the new parliament. Evidently the catholic god was out of politics on that day.

WHAT effect the assassination of O'Higgins will have on the situation in Ireland is problematical. It undoubtedly weakens the Cosgrave cabinet. O'Higgins was the ablest man in that imperialist crew. England loses a faithful servant. The bereaved mothers, fathers, children and wives of the brave lads that he sent to early graves will shed no tears.

WHAT has happened to "Hell and Maria" Davis? The vice-president could get more publicity for sleeping an extra minute than the average person could, for hanging up a long distance waking record. His name was on millions of tongues until quite recently and he was considered a formidable candidate for the presidency. But nowadays he only breaks into the news when he catches a whale. He never did believe than a cussing politician had the ghost of a chance to make the white house. This is a well-behaved country—in public.

ADOLF HUM, the boy preacher preached another sermon for the benefit of President Coolidge last Sunday. His text was: "An angel of the lord appeared to Joseph in a dream." I was taken from Matthew, not Matty of the A. F. of L. and the National Civic Federation, but one of the scripture scriveners. Reid went on to say that dreams are often employed by god to communicate his message to the faithful, but from what we gather from the divine radio message to the carpenter of Nazareth, we hope for the sake of domestic felicity in the white house that Hum's god will be a little more on the level with Cal than he was with Joseph.

BOMB SQUAD IN RAID ON ANTI-FASCIST PAPERS

Arrest Eleven Workers; Don't Use Warrants

BULLETIN

At the late hour last night no information was obtainable as to the whereabouts of the eleven workers arrested in the offices of two Italian newspapers. Inquiries at the Centre street headquarters and the Twenty-second street police station met with no success, the men being held incommunicado, their attorney not being able to reach them. Rumors were spread that they were being held on a federal charge.

Eleven anti-fascist workers were arrested shortly after six o'clock last night when 10 members of the bomb squad raided the offices of Il Martello and Il Nuovo Mondo, Italian newspapers located on East 10th St.

The office of Il Nuovo Mondo, 81 East 10th St., was entered first. They asked for the manager and when informed that he was not in they asked for V. Vacirca, the editor. When the detectives were told that he also was out, they arrested L. D'Armico, a clerk and left.

Entering the office of Il Martello, in the next building they arrested everyone who was present except one man whom they allowed to remain and take care of the office. Those taken into custody were C. Cancilleros of Il Nuovo Mondo, who was there on an errand, Luigi Quintiliano, Mario Tresca, M. Buzzi, Antonio Aloia, Joseph Alfieri and three others.

A short time after the raid a man entered the office of Il Nuvo Mondo and asked for Vacirca. When asked what he wanted he said that "it is very important." Refusing to divulge his business he left hastily. It is believed that he was a detective trying to trap Vacirca.

Isaac Shore, of 41 Union Square, is acting as attorney for the 11 arrested workers. No warrants were shown at the time of the arrests.

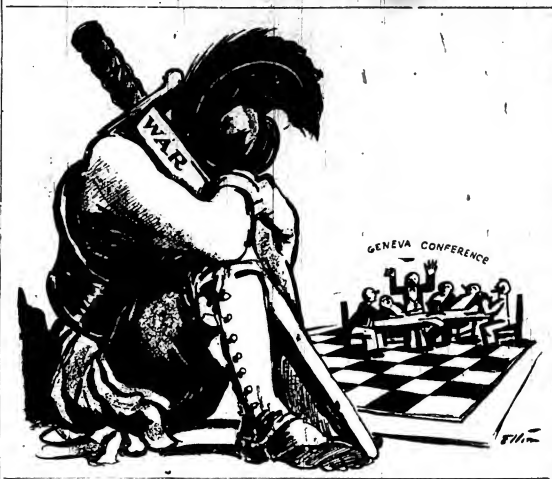
CHINESE COMMUNISTS MUST WORK IN KUOMINTANG BUT LEAVE WUHAN GOV.

Bukharin Lays Down Party Line; Japan Sends More Troops to Shantung Province

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

MOSCOW, July 11.—Declaring that the Chinese Communist Party must continue to work within the Kuomintang, but that Wuhan has outlived its usefulness as the organizational center of the Chinese revolution," N. Bukharin in an article in the Pravda, official Communist organ, declares that the Chinese Communist Party ought to quit the Wuhan (Hankow) Government immediately.

"The Chinese Communists ought to leave the Wuhan government immediately," said N. Bukharin. "This action must be demonstrative and should be accompanied by a political declaration of the Communist Party, in which the attitude of the Party towards the Kuomintang should be made perfectly clear.



"The Executive Committee of the Communist International was a thousand times right when, in due time, it directed the Chinese Communist Party to leave the Wuhan (Hankow) government."

Must Not Leave Kuomintang.

Bukharin makes it clear, however, that the Chinese Communist Party should by no means leave the Kuomintang. On the contrary, the Chi-

Forge Papers in Effort to Discredit USSR

BERLIN, July 11.—In an effort to discredit the Soviet Union, British agents perpetrated the explosion which blew up the Sophia Cathedral in 1925 and which resulted in the murder of more than a hundred persons. This is the amazing confession of Druschilowski, forger and spy in British employ made at the espionage trial now going on in Moscow.

That he had been hired by the British to forge documents in an attempt to fasten blame for the brutal murder on the Soviet Union was admitted by Druschilowski. The Bulgarian white guardist government also participated in the international forgery and murder, the Bulgarian Minister Popoff, in Berlin, cooperating with Captain Harry Holst, British agent, according to the testimony offered by Druschilowski.

Fight the War Propaganda! Defend The Daily Worker!

THE attack on The DAILY WORKER is an attack of the war-mongers against the most militant opponent of a new World War. If there were any doubt about this previously, the expose published in an adjoining column, would remove it.

One of the leading organizations in the attack on The DAILY WORKER is the Keymen of America. Fourteen of the directors of this organization are connected with patriotic societies, thirteen with business corporations, five with employers' associations, four are army officers. On the advisory council are Major Amos A. Fries, chief of Chemical Warfare Service of the U. S. Army and Major General Eli Helmick, Inspector General of the Army.

The fight to defend The DAILY WORKER against the charges brought by the patriotic societies is a fight against those who are seeking to involve the United States in a new World War. The fight to maintain our paper is a vital part of the campaign against renewed war preparations. HUNDREDS OF STRIKERS PARADE TO NON UNION MINES; CALL OUT MEN

Two Thousand Join Union in Two Days When Workers Use More Progressive Tactics

CLEARFIELD, Pa., July 11.—The coal miners are marching. Heeding at last the arguments of all progressives in the union, that inactivity and the folded arms policy were assisting the operators, hundreds of the rank and file miners of District 2, United Mine Workers, the district of which John Brophy was president when he led the "Save the Union" campaign last year in the international union elections, have begun to parade in force to non-union mines here and lead out the men working there.

Hundreds of miners started today from the Morrisdale section and marched thru the Grassflat and Philippsburg section and around Osceola Mills, where other hundreds of men at work in non-union mines broke away from their company guards and ran to join them in the strike.

Many Organize.

Many men who only recently left the Morrisdale Coal Company are taking the lead in organizing the other men working in non-union mines round about.

At least 2,000 men have joined the union within the last two days. Mines at Hyde City, Curwensville and Karthaus are new additions to the list of operations closed yesterday and the day before. The Karthaus mines had been running without a contract with the union for fifteen years.

Hard-Boiled Owners.

The strike in District 2 started with the breakdown of negotiations in a conference held a short time ago between the union officials and the operators. At this conference the New York Central Railroad representative (the railroad owns many coal properties) announced that his railroad would never recognize the United Mine Workers of America until a reduction of wages was made. It is against such a recalcitrant group of employers and against such a union smashing policy as this that the miners are now struggling in this district.

Progressive Tactics.

The progressive group in the district union has not only advocated the present militant marching tactic but has opposed district agreements, or agreements within the district not covering all of them. Wm. Welsh, of the district executive board, while negotiations with the employers were being arranged, fought vigorously against a motion to furnish any operator who paid the scale with miners from the union.

43 MORE FURRIER WORKERS JAILED WHEN PICKETING

Two Forward Reporters Among Those Released

A large picketing demonstration was held in the fur market yesterday which resulted in 43 arrests. The workers responded to the call of the Unity Committee in large numbers and showed a remarkable spirit for the beginning of the sixth week of the struggle.

When brot before Magistrate Brodsky, the first 11 were dismissed while the other 32 had their cases adjourned until Wednesday morning.

Among the 11 who were dismissed were two reporters for the Jewish Daily Forward, Z. Libin and B. Weinstone. Many workers remarked that it was odd that the batch including the Forward men were discharged, while the others were held for further examination.

Fanny Marin, a fur striker who was arrested last week on the complaint of a right wing scab, had her case postponed until September when it came up before Magistrate Joseph Well in the Six District Court of the Bronx yesterday morning.

The general membership meeting of the Joint Board will be held in Arlington Hall, St. Mark's Place near Second Ave. tonight, instead of Manhattan Lyceum, which was previously advertised. The meeting will start right after work and take action on a

FEDERAL COURT HOLDS MEMBERS OF DAILY WORKER STAFF ON $1,000 BAIL

Engdahl, Dunne, Bittleman, Miller and Gordon Before Judge Anderson

Members of the editorial staff of The DAILY WORKER, including J. Louis Engdahl, William F. Dunne and Alexander Bittleman, with Business Manager Bert Miller and Abe Gordon, author of the poem, "America," were held in $1,000 bail each before Judge Anderson in the United States District Court, yesterday, when they were arraigned on the indictment recently returned by the federal grand jury.

This is the latest development in the attack on The DAILY WORKER by state and federal authorities, co-operating with various jingo paytriotic organizations, one of which, the so-called "Keymen of America" is being subjected to additional exposures, this time by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, who makes her attack in an open letter to the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Indictment Returned June 29th.

The arraignment of The DAILY WORKER editorial staff members and business manager was set for yesterday following the federal indictment returned Wednesday, June 29.

Engdahl was returning from the Soviet Union when the grand jury made its charges. Bittelman was in Chicago. Attorney Joseph Brodsky arranged for their appearance in court with the others indicted.

The actual proceedings were brief. The court was presided over by Judge Anderson, who hails from Tennessee, made famous by the "monkey trial" at Dayton. He was helping to substitute for local judges who have gone on their summer vacations. The federal courts sit in the post office building in City Hall Square.

Bail Details Arranged.

When Attorney Brodsky demanded that low bail be fixed, Chief Assist-

Assistant Prosecuting Attorney George S. Leisure raised no objection when the judge set $1,000 as the figure. The comrades under indictment were held in the "strong room" while the details incidental to fixing up the bail bonds were taken care of.

The next step in the case will be the filing of a demurrer to the indictment, charging that there is not sufficient evidence on which to hold those indicted, and therefore to demand the quashing of the indictment. It is expected that there will be an early hearing of arguments on the demurrer.

Open Letter Attacks Paytriots.

It is pointed out in Mrs. Catt's open letter" to the D. A. R. that among the listed directors of the Key Men of America are Judge Willard J. Bunyan, of St. Joseph, Mich., whom C. E. Rothemberg was tried and sentenced to ten years' imprisonment, and Representative Albert Johnson of Washington, chairman of the house committee on immigration and naturalization, who is sponsoring some of the legislation now before congress for the deportation of foreign-born vicious campaign against the Soviet Union, according to the explosion.

That the notorious Zinoviev "letters" were forged under the direction of the British tories was also admitted at the trial. The forgers Vodkart and Gumanski, both agents of the British Secret Service, received 20 pounds for the Zinoviev "letters."

SELECT JURY FOR TRIAL OF POLICE CHIEF IN CANTON

CANTON, O., July 11.—At two p. m. today five jurors were tentatively seated in the trial of S. A. Lengel, former Canton chief of police, charged with complicity in the murder of Don R. Mellett, Canton publisher, here last July 16. Differing from previous Mellett trials both state and defense counsel have agreed to accept for jury duty, persons who have formed an opinion regarding the case.

One man is already serving time for killing Don Mellett in what he confesses was a plot between underworld characters and the police officers to stop the exposure of graft which Mellett was printing.

BRITISH MOURN DEATH OF FREE STATE MINISTER

O'Higgins Imperialist of Deepest Type

DUBLIN, July 11.—Ireland is in a state of feverish excitement today following the death of Kevin O'Higgins, known as the "Irish Mussolini" and the most outspoken imperialist of the British agents in the council of the Free State government.

The identity of those who inflicted the death penalty is not yet known. While some apprehension is felt that the incident may revive guerilla warfare between the militant republicans and the imperialists, there is little sympathy for O'Higgins whose cold-blooded execution policy left a rankling sore in the hearts of thousands of revolutionary nationalists and the bereaved relatives of the young nationalist fighters he sent to face the firing squad because they refused to surrender their principles in return for a bribe from the British government.

Several capitalist governments have sent condolences to President Cosgrave. London is considerably worried. O'Higgins was their most reliable tool. Others might consider a more compromising attitude on the question of the oath of allegiance to the king but O'Higgins was for the iresty lock, stock and barrel.

It was recalled that during the recent elections, while speaking in the County Monaghan, O'Higgins was taunted with his part in the execution of 77 Republicans. His retort was typical of the man." We cut your tails" he roared. "We drew your fangs you curs! If necessary we will execute seventy-seven more."

When news of O'Higgins' death reached Cosgrave the latter called an extraordinary session of the cabinet. The a new reign of government terror is expected it is not likely that the Free State will be able to successfully carry out reprisals in view of its weakness with the masses which was exposed in the recent elections.

When O'Higgins attended the imperial conference in London last October, he carried a letter from President Cosgravo which recommended O'Higgins for the parley, in view of the fact that he did not participate in the 1916 rebellion. He was at Geneve last week supporting the British naval policy.

DETROIT, July 11.—The twenty-fifth annual convention of the American Institute of Banking opened in this city today with nearly 5,000 delegates in attendance.

An era of national prosperity was predicted by Hall M. Detwiler, president of the institute in an interview. Detwiler believes the country is now entering a new cycle of improved conditions.

The program today consists of entertainment for the delegates.

All Against Mexico.

The "Key Men of America" which is thus seen as a kind of interlocking directorate of the most reactionary and labor hating groups in this country lays heavy stress on its propaganda for American militarism and imperialism. It rights vigorously against any movement or organization which might hinder the annexation of Mexico and the rest of Central America, or the subjugation of China. It campaigns for the breaking off of relations between the United States and Mexico and for the shipment of arms to clerical and reactionary rebels in Mexico, as for instance in a recent "Daily Data Sheet" sent to all of its members wherein it states:

"Withdraw Recognition."

"The differences between the government of the United States and that of Mexico are not due to a religious issue. That is but a cleverly constructed smoke screen erected by a well-organized "movement to aid Socialism and Communism. They are not due to the question of oil titles. That is another cleverly constructed smoke screen erected by the same agencies.

"Withdrawal of recognition at this time would mean revolt in Mexico and the quick overthrow of the Calles-Communist regime. If the embargo on arms is removed the overthrow almost would be overnight and the Socialist-Communist scheme to control Mexico would be squelched for the time being at least."

Calls For Cash.

It is part of the far fetched propaganda of the "Key Men" that the Liberal president of Mexico, Calles, is a Communist.

In spite of these exaggerations and plain untruths in the service of imperialism, the big corporations seem to feel doubtful as to their need of Marvin and his "Key Men." They have been badly swindled recently by self appointed and high priced "Patriots" and Marvin in a statement to the press yesterday bewailed the fact that corporations have been niggardly in their support, and that the Key Men are not as well off financially as they might be.

CHECK FROM KLAN DRAGON EVIDENCE AGAINST JACKSON

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 11.—The name of Governor Ed. Jackson was brought into the D. C. Stephenson scandal today through a commission for publication of a check dated Sept. 12, 1923, for $2,500 made out to Ed Jackson by the former klan grand dragon.

The check, made public by Lloyd O. Hill, attorney for Stephenson, is regarded by Hill as first definite proof that "Steve" at last is going to "tell all." Stephenson is trying to get out of the state prison where he is serving a life term for the Madge Oberholtzer murder.

Attached to the check was a little slip bearing these words:

"This check is the first one-fourth of the $10,000 given Jackson personally for primary expenses."

The name of Ed Jackson appears on the back of the check, indicating it had been cashed. The name is written in the latter's handwriting strikingly similar to that of the governor.

Stamps on the cancelled check are those of the Union Trust Company and Indiana National Bank of Indianapolis and the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland, O. The check was drawn on the First National Bank of Columbus, O.

During the first investigation of political corruption charges, last fall made by Thomas H. Adams, Vincennes publisher, Floyd O. Christian, of Noblesville, said that when he was with Stephenson as attorney in the jail at Noblesville, the former grand dragon showed him a check for $2,500, bearing identical writing to the document reported today.

Stephenson, then was sorting out incriminating papers against prominent state politicians, according to Christian.

I. H. Hull and his wife, both of Anderson, told newspaper men at that time they had photographed a check for $2,500 bearing the same writing, along with other Stephenson-ian data, at the request of the former grand dragon.

Marion County prosecutors were conferring today to determine future steps in the probe.

A. F. L. INSURANCE SCHEME BEGIN ON WALL STREET AID

Matthew Woll Head of New Company

By CHARLES YALE HARRISON.

The creation of the Union Labor Life Insurance Company is Matthew Woll's newest venture into the company of finance capital. It is a partnership agreement calling attention to the opening of the company for business. Woll resorts to the usual practices of insurance sharks in snaring customers.

He says, "Every policy in the Union Life Insurance Company is participating; that is, it returns the profits to the policyholder."

Woll Like Old Line Liars.

In making this statement Woll places himself in a class with the three hundred odd life insurance corporations who deliberately lie when they say that a premium refund is a share of the profits. What is commonly called a dividend in insurance parlance is nothing more than a refund of the excess rate charged when the rates are originally fixed, and in all cases it is merely a fraction of what the policyholder is entitled to.

Impartial observers of the insurance graft know that life insurance rates are more than 100 per cent too high for the present American death experience. However, Woll says, "The rates of insurance for the time being are on a par with those charged by other life insurance companies." The purchaser of Union Labor Life Insurance will benefit little by Woll's game.

Fiske Boosts Woll.

Haley Fiske, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, and arch-defender of industrial insurance which is considered in insurance circles as one of the most callous insurance swindle-stunts is loud in his praise of the new company.

Fiske says, "The working people are becoming capitalists thru savings, investments and life insurance. They have formed a large life insurance company which is going to do old line life insurance on scentific (sic) principles with adequate, ample capital, and under competent advice. . ."

In view of the fact that only 10 per cent of all life insurance policies are ever paid on for their full face value, the balance being lost thru forfeitures; and in further view of the fact that the Union Life will operate on the scientific principles laid down by Haley Fiske who is employed by Woll in an advisory capacity, the worker who insures his life in the A. F. of L. outfit will be jumping out of the frying pan into the fire.

Will Workers Fall?

But the majority of workers have been so pap-fed on life insurance propaganda that they will think that Woll and his associates are their lifelong benefactors.

Mr. Beha, the superintendent of insurance for the State of New York, has applied for the first policy to be issued by the Union Labor Life in the state. Woll says in his communique that this signifies that the company has the endorsement of the superintendent. This is without a doubt true, but it means nothing. It is a known fact that Beha is the creature of Haley Fiske and his associated insurance financiers. It is Beha who has condoned the big business interlocking directorates and the rotten conditions which generally underlie the so-called mutual life insurance business.

Good Business Stuff.

Woll is the creator and president of this new venture in class collaboration. He now shows that he has nothing in common with the class he pretends he represents. His beknighting with Haley Fiske in the National Civic Federation has now blossomed into a real, profitable business contract. In addition to the fat salaries he will be drawing from his various labor jobs, he will horn in on a life insurance president's salary.

The officers of the new company are conservative job holders in the A. F. of L. but the board of directors are the same clique one finds behind all big business enterprises.

Introduce Alabama Bill To Curb Floggings; Ban Masks in Streets, Roads

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 11.—Proposing to end the reign of terror that is being carried on by masked members of the Ku Klux Klan, a bill will be introduced in the Alabama State Legislature Tuesday to bar the wearing of masks for other than legitimate purposes, according to the Birmingham Age-Herald.

No arrests have been made in connection with the series of brutal floggings that have occurred in Alabama recently.

The bill would make it a misdemeanor for any one to appear on Alabama highways disguised by a mask. If the perpetrator of a crime is found advocating the anti-mask law the offender would be guilty of a criminal act carrying with it a minimum of five years imprisonment.

WORKERS IN PHILADELPHIA JOIN THE CAMPAIGN AGAINST THE WAR DANGER

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 11.—An intensive campaign for the defense and recognition of the Union of Soviet Republics was launched here with the demonstration against the new war danger held in Maple Park Grove. The gathering was addressed by J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, just returned from the Soviet Union. Albert Weisberd leader of the Passaic strike acted as chairman.

"The war danger today grows out of the new attack planned by world imperialism against the first workers' republic," said Engdahl. "That attack is also directed against the workers of this country because any success won in the new war against the Soviet Union will encourage the employing interests to greater onslaughts against the workers at home."

The success of the hands off China campaign in Philadelphia is one indication that the hands off the Soviet Union drive will meet with considerable success.

The demonstration here was also commemeration of the Ruthenberg Birthday Anniversary with a pledge to build the Workers (Communist) Party and defend its central organ, The DAILY WORKER, against court, the attack that is now being made upon it by its enemies.

Engdahl will also address a gathering of the membership of the Workers (Communist) Party, Wednesday night, at the Russian Hall, 1522 Fifth Avenue to develop the campaign.

ENGINEERS UNION SECRETARY SAYS GOT HIS $2,500

Found Guilty Tho Tried to Argue Wasn't Bribed

CLEVELAND, July 11.—Gen. Secy. C. E. Lindquist, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, has been found guilty by the triennial convention meeting at Cleveland on charges preferred by the committee of 10 which has been investigating the financial activities conducted by the grand officials of the brotherhood. The vote was 338 to 68 for conviction. The general charge was mismanagement of bro herhood funds.

It had been planned to try Pres. W. B. Prenter first but he pleaded illness which seems to have developed into pneumonia. Prenter is 72 and the illness combined with his disgrace before the convention may prove fatal. The trial of Vice President L. G. Griffing was scheduled next and the of 2nd Vice President H. P. Daugherty to follow. All are under the same general charges.

Wild Graft.

The charges arose out of investigations by the committee of 10 which has been at work since the convention began June 6. It became evident immediately that the convention meant business when it took out of President Prenter's hands the naming of the committee and proceeded to elect it instead. Delegates had come to Cleveland gunning for bear after the usual 7 per cent dividend on the preferred stock of the Bond & Investment Co. had failed to materialize this year. They found what the committee described as unexampled extravagance, mismanagement, carelessness and neglect of duty and a financial maze of banking, investment enterprise, realty speculation, industrial risks and jeopardizing of pension and insurance funds that passed the ability of the committee to unravel without expert assistance.

Three trustees were put in charge of the financial end of the brotherhood. The offices of president, 1st and 2nd vice president and secretary, held by Prenter, Griffing, Daugherty and Lindquist, were abolished.

Passes Blame.

Lindquist's defense at his trial was a claim that he had been largely a rubber stamp for the other 3, that he had protested in vain and then "gone along" on the financial roller coaster because he saw nothing else to do and that the whole thing started under the late President Warren S. Stone with Prenter following Stone's lead. Regarding the $2,500 he was accused of pocketing, together with Prenter, Griffing and Daugherty, for agreeing to the sale by the brotherhood of the Equitable skyscraper in New York City, Lindquist admitted receiving his $2,500 but said he and the rest had kept the money intact for the convention to act upon.

Austro-American Treaty Paves Road for Further Penetration of Capital

VIENNA, July 11.—The heavy investment of American capital in Austria has just culminated in a commercial treaty between the two countries which provides that for the next eight years the minimum duty permitted by its enatoma laws shall be imposed on imports from America to Austria and vice versa.

It is pointed out that Vienna remains, now as always, the ideal financial point for the distribution of American goods for consumption in the states of the old Austrian Empire. Export of American automobiles and motorcycles has shown a marked development in the last several years. American imports of Austrian goods have been limited practically to finished articles such as porcelain were, leather goods and so-called luxury articles in which there is very little competition from American industry.

The new commercial treaty providing for this "favored nation" treaty on tariffs was signed here yesterday.

German-American Trust Organized To Foster Trade

The steady penetration of American capital into post-war Germany and the Central European States is evidenced by the announcement today of the proposed organization of the International Germanic Trust Company, under the banking laws of the State of New York, with offices at 26 Broadway, on the ground floor of the Standard Oil Building.

According to Mr. Aron, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Organization Committee, "the trust company will have and develop relations both with Americans of German descend throughout this country, and with business and banking institutions in Germany. It is the intention of the company to stress particularly the development of its foreign and trust departments, and to provide an effective fiscal agency in the expected liquidation of German properties and trusts still in Government custody."

Mr. Aron, who expects to go abroad this month to establish a branch office of the trust company in Berlin, expresses the belief of the organizers of the new bank that "the formation of the International Germanic Trust Company will accomplish much in uniting effectively American and German capital resources in the development of financial and commercial relations between the two countries."

The authorized capitalization will consist of 30,000 shares, with a capital of $3,000,000 and a surplus of $2,000,000.

The Soviet Government is organizing a trust for the construction of the State's housing facilities also established the norms of exploitation and utilization of the buildings, protecting thereby the interests of the toiling people in all buildings, regardless as to whether they live, in co-operative houses or in the houses of State institutions or enterprises belong directly to the municipal organs, or those which belong to private people.

The most important right secured to the working people is to occupy the place in which they live, regardless as to whether the house administration or owner agrees to it or not. The inhabitant, if he pays his rent, cannot under any conditions be put out of the building. This guarantee of the right of the inhabitant, regardless of the desire of the house administrator or owner, existed also in the bourgeois countries, but there it was instituted during the war and only a short period after the war. In the Soviet Union, however, this right of the toiling inhabitant is a permanent right; it is one of the most vital rights given to the workers in the code of laws.

Another important measure taken by the Soviet Government towards the protection and improvement of the living conditions of the toilers is the system of rent payments. The payment of rent is regulated by the Soviet Laws on the following principles: the entire rent system as applied to the toilers, is based on the amortization and the administration of the houses; it does not include any house or ground rent, which burdens the toilers in bourgeois countries. The Soviet laws provide for a sliding scale in the payment of rent dependent upon the paying capacity of the inhabitant and the conditions of the house in question. An inhabitant with an income of from 125 roubles to 150 roubles a month pays exactly enough to cover amortization and administration of the house. Those who have a higher income pay partly also interest on the capital invested in the building which enables the house to cover the deficit formed as a result of the low payments of the poorer inhabitants. In order to cover this deficit a considerably high rent is taken from the inhabitants not employed in product work. The overwhelming majority of the toilers whose income is less than 125 roubles a month, pay an average of 75 per cent less than the amortization of the house requires. The unemployed pay an absolutely insignificant amount; they pay altogether 5.5. copecks per square metre a month.

Owing to this class principle in collecting rent, the average worker with an average income pays for a fairly good room four to five roubles a month, whereas before the revolution he had to pay just as much and even more for some corner or only for the use of a bed.

On an average, the worker spends about 6 to 8 per cent of his budget on rent, whilst in bourgeois countries (not including heating, light, water, and cleaning) he spends 10 per cent or more of his budget for rent. But what is most important is the fact that the housing conditions of the workers, at least in the urban centers are now much better and more hygienic than there were before.

It should be observed that owing to the municipalization of the largest and best houses and the regulation of rent, the government is able to regulate the income of the houses and to control the surplus income of some buildings as well as the income coming from commercial enterprises. This surplus income goes to form special capital funds of the town Soviets to subsidize and to finance the repairs of the poorer houses.

In general the entire system of Soviet management protects the interest of the toiling masses and ensures the further extension of housing facilities; it prevents any form of housing exploitation which is so frequent in the bourgeois countries.—D. Sobelnikh.

THE growth of the irrigated cotton area in the Soviet Union is shown by the following figures: Fiscal year 1921-22—1,780,000 dessiatins (4,806,000 acres); 1924-25—2,448,000 dessiatins (9,309,600 acres); 1925-26—3,524,000 dessiatins (10,035,800 acres); 1926-27—3,895,000 dessiatins (10,516,000 acres). The area irrigated in 1914-15 was 4,349,000 dessiatins (11,745,000 acres).

The sums appropriated for this purpose from the State budget were 4,604,000 rubles ($2,371,000) in 1922-23; 7,249,000 rubles ($4,093,750) in 1923-24; 12,482,000 rubles ($6,429,000) in 1924-25; 31,000,000 rubles (about $16,000,000) in 1925-26, and 48,225,000 rubles ($23,260,000) in 1926-27.

Connection Of White and Caspian Seas.

MOSCOW, (By Mail).—In the region of Kumshakoye Lake surveys have been started for the digging of the Lacha-Kubinskoye Canal, which will join the river system of the White Sea pith the tributaries of the Volga and thus connect the White Sea with the Caspian and Black Seas (via the Marinsk canal system).

Waterway from Siberia to Europe.

MOSCOW, (By Mail).—Next year the Central Department of Waterways of the People's Commissariat of Ways of Communication of the Soviet Union will start investigations with a view to establishing water connection between the rivers Obi, Sob, Usa, Pechora, Sula and Indiga, Western Siberia, the Northern Ural and the Pechora Region would thus be connected with the Cheshskaya Bay of the Arctic Ocean, solving the problem of the export of Siberian timber, grain and other freight shipped in large quantities. The total length of the route, from the mouth of the Sob, a tributary of the Obi, to the Indiga Bay (on the Samoyed coast of the Arctic Ocean) will be about 1,500 miles of which 850 miles will have to be operated by locks.

The bulk of the freight will be shipped down stream on the rivers constituting that system, thus considerably reducing the cost of transport. Thus the delivery of one pood (36 lbs.) of freight over a distance of 2,000 miles from Obdorsk to Novosibirsk to the Indiga port will cost not more than 12 kopecks (6 cents), while the rail transport of grain over the same distance would cost from 27 to 38 kopecks (14 to 19 cents) more.

American Equipment For Soviet Industries.

MOSCOW, (By Mail).—Amtorg Trading Corporation of New York has received advices from the Donets Coal Basin of the Soviet Union of the completion of preliminary work on the two "Amerikanka" (American) mines, to be constructed with the assistance of six American mining engineers. Machinery and equipment to the value of $325,000 will be shipped to the Donetz Basin from the United States.

Other machinery, already ordered here for the Donetz Basin, will be tested in the field in comparison with similar German equipment. A construction department along American lines has been organized by the Donugol Coal Trust.

For the Kuznetz coal fields in Siberia, coal cutters, loaders, conveyors and other equipment will be ordered in the United States.

Gas meters, regulators and other gas equipment valued at nearly $250,000, ordered in the United States, will soon be shipped to the Soviet oil cities, Baku and Grozny.

Natural gas is found in abundance in the Soviet oil fields. It is now beginning to be utilized for the first time for household and refining purposes.

Sewing machines, cloth cutting machines, spare parts and other equipment valued at $230,000 were recently purchased in the United States for clothing factories in Moscow, Leningrad and several Ukrainian cities.

American Mining Engineers In U.S.S.R.

MOSCOW, (By Mail).—John A. Garcia, mining engineers, with five assistants left this week, have sailed for the Donetz Basin. They will remain for the duration of a number of years months by latest American methods, and for the construction of auxiliary and for the construction of auxiliary buildings, in the coal fields of the Donetz Basin. Mr. Garcia's firm is the third American firm to be operated by the Donugol Coal Trust during the past few months to assist in the modernization of the Donugol mines, constituting that system. They will spend three months in the Soviet designing, writing specifications and making estimates for a complete mining plant, to be operated by the Donugol Coal Trust. In particular they will design a shipshoit mine of the American type.

Ten new coal shafts with a combined capacity of 5,000,000 metric tons are being sunk in the Donetz Basin this year and sixteen more will be put under construction in 1928.

The Dnieper Power Plant.

MOSCOW, (By Mail).—Preliminary work on the Dnieper river power project, which will be the largest hydro-electric development in Europe, has been started. Seven hundred workmen were put to work on construction early in May, and this force will be increased to 2,000 by midsummer. Col. Hugh L. Cooper, the builder of Muscle Shoals, who is chief consulting engineer for the Dnieper project, is on the ground.

Two 1½ yard steam shovels for excavation work in connection with the Dnieper plant have been ordered from the Marion Steam Shovel Company and will be shipped shortly. Other American orders in prospect include complete equipment for a sawmill, tanker locomotives, cranes and dump cars.

CONSUMERS' CO-OPERATIVE MOVEMENT IN U. S. S. R.

The consumers' cooperation covers 41 per cent of the total trade turnover in the Union and is enlarging its operations from year to year. During the last year the cooperative movement increased its turnover by 78 per cent, and in the first half of the current economic year 1926-27 it increased its operations by 41 per cent. The aggregate turnover of the consumers' cooperative movement reached 1,085 million rubles in 1925-26, and 968 million rubles in the first half of 1926-27.

The movement's paid-up capita was 475 million rubles on October 1st, 1926, and the loaned capital, 1,213 million rubles.

The profits made by the consumer' cooperation reach 157,616,000 ' rubles.

The Government's instructions re lowering prices in detail trade by 10 per cent on June 1st have been carried out in nearly all the country.

Bruce, Son-in-Law Of Andrew Mellon, Gets Another Job

WASHINGTON, (FP) July 11.—Government employees should become son-in-laws of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon in addition to picking senators for fathers, if they want to get ahead in Uncle Sam's service.

Young David K. E. Bruce did both. Late in 1925, at the ripe age of 27, he decided to enter government service. Son of Senator Bruce of Maryland, a "Coolidge Democrat", he was able to get into the state department where within a few months he was elevated to one of the prize berths of the foreign service as attache in the American embassy at Rome. Finding the salary of $2,500 insufficient, he formed an alliance with America's third wealthiest family by marrying Ailsa Mellon last year.

Now the youthful diplomat is to be shot up in the service to the post of secretary of the International Radiotelegraph Conference, to be held in Washington beginning October 4. He has formally asked to be relieved of his Roman post, where his duties have been so light that he has been able to while away most of his time on the Riviera. This summer Bruce will cruise the Mediterranean on Mellon's private yacht.

Bruce will transfer his allegiance from Secretary of State Kellogg to Secretary of Commerce Hoover, who is running the International Telegraph Conference on behalf of Radio Corporation's fight against European and Latin America ideas that the public and not private monopolies, should control the air. Hoover, who has seized position of governmental overseer of the radio, is chairman of the American delegation.

GENEVA, N. Y., July 11.—Failure of the driver to see the danger in time was believed responsible today for a crash between a motor truck and a passenger train at a New York Central Railroad crossing near here which cost three lives.

Chinese Communists To Leave Wuhan Gov't.

ese Communists should intensify their work within the Kuomintang, striving to expose the wavering and treacherous leaders to the masses.

Pointing out that the leaders of the Chinese Communist Party have failed in their task of developing the agrarian revolution and have brought to the fore military expeditions against Peking instead of the internal problems of the revolution, Bukharin declares that the Communist International has found it necessary to call for the election of a new Central Executive Committee for the Chinese Communist Party.

Scores Party Opportunists.

"The more opportunistic leaders of the Chinese Party advocated that the Party leave the Kuomintang," Bukharin says. "On the contrary the Central Committee of the Chinese Union of Communist Youth adhered strictly to the decisions of the Communist International and strongly protested against the tactics of the Central Executive Committee of the Chinese Communist Party.

Elect New Executive Committee.

"In view of the situation which has been created, the Communist International deems it necessary to call an extraordinary conference of the Communist Party to reelect a Central Committee which will conduct an energetic struggle for the revolution, even to the exclusion from the Party of those who consider that the Chinese Communist Party must follow the trail of the bourgeois leaders of the Kuomintang.

Michael Borodin, adviser to the People's government in China in the days when it was victoriously advancing from control of one town in the South to control of two-thirds of the vast country. Right wing elements are now trying to banish him from his post; some accounts say he has already left. He is seen standing here with his wife, Mme. Borodin, now a prisoner of Chang Tso-lin and on "trial" in Peking for activities against him. She was seized in violation of neutrality from a vessel belonging to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Seattle Workers in Demand for Freedom For Sacco, Vanzetti

SEATTLE, JULY 11.—In spite of counter attractions in the way of picnics, with ex-Senator Magnus Johnson of Minnesota as the main feature at one of them several hundred people took part in the Sacco-Vanzetti meeting in City Hall Square. J. E. Phillips, business agent of Painters Local 300 and delegate to the Central Labor Council presided. Speakers included George F. Vandeveer, prominent local attorney; Chi Tai Haieh, Chinese University of Washington student; J. C. Kennedy, Seattle Labor College; George Ritchie, Carpenters Union; Aaron Fisherman, Workers' Party and J. P. Thompson, Industrial Workers of the World.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Sacco-Vanzetti United Front Conference and is the fourth large down town gathering held since the launching of the active campaign to save the lives of the two Italian workers.

A well attended out door meeting was held recently in the suburb of Renton.

Expel Salesmen's Union.

Following orders from President Green of the American Federation of Labor, the local Bakery Salesmen's union has been expelled from the Central Labor Council here.

This action follows a demand of the Teamsters International Union, that the Salesmen should affiliate to it. In 1915 at the A. F. of L. convention in San Francisco the Teamsters were given jurisdiction over this craft and Seattle and Tacoma are the only cities where this ruling had not been put into effect.

The Salesmen's union here has adopted a resolution declaring its intention to retain its connection with the Bakers International and urging unions to support its position at the A. F. of L. convention this year at Los Angeles. It is pointed out that they enjoy better conditions than other bakery salesmen due to the fact that their union contract is negotiated and signed at the same time as that of the bakers. The advantages of industrial unionism is exemplified in their case.

Local business agents of the Machinists and the Teamsters unions are trying to increase the membership of their respective unions at the expense of the Street Railwaymen's union. The first named organization is trying to enroll the shop employees and the latter is going after the drivers of the municipal auto buses which act as feeders to the city owned street car system. The street car men are protesting at this attempted hi-jacking of their members and the workers involved are turning a deaf ear to the proffers made them.

Several progressive members of Carpenters Union 131 were rather surprised on the eve of a recent election to find that though they had been nominated for office their names had been left off the ballot. These members are making a point of this unfairness of their officials in an effort to organize to oust their reactionary representatives.

TACOMA, July 10.—The strike of the Laundry Workers Union continues with encouraging results. Home to cause solicitation by the strikers is stopping what little business the unfair employers had managed to secured.

The Superior Service Laundries, which has a contract with the union is running to capacity day and night.

The Laundry Wagon Drivers which are under the jurisdiction of the Teamsters are kept on the job by their International organizer though the sentiment is to walk out in sympathy with the inside workers.

MARCEL CACHIN

Marcel Cachin, French Communist, and member of the Chamber of Deputies is particularly hated by the imperialists of his nation for his courageous stand against their policies. The latest brush he had with them resulted in his being sentenced to six months in prison, the he is supposed to have "parliamentary immunity," like members of the other parties.

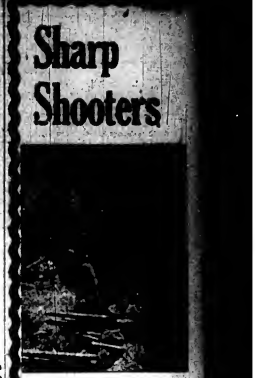
Russian Oil Firms Cut Gasoline Price In English Markets

By TOM BARKER.

LONDON, July 11.—Car owners in Great Britain are on velvet. After being muicted for a decade of large sums by a combine consisting principally of the subsidiaries of the Royal Dutch Shell Oil Co. and Standard Oil Co., a price war has arisen by the entrance on the market of the Russian Oil Products, Ltd., who are now sole sellers of Soviet gasoline.

Some time ago the Russians were compelled to sell their oil in bulk to the two large concerns at prices far below the prevailing world rate. Royal Dutch lost much property in Russia by the nationalization decrees, but during the difficult position of the Bolsheviste the company purchased—at its own price—half a million tons of oil. This they sold retail at prices verging on 50 cents a gallon to British car owners.

Since the Russians entered the field themselves, they have led a price cutting war which has practically halved the price of gas to the consumer. The combine firms have subsidized the Rothermere press, especially the Daily Mail—a paper which outdoes Hearst in howling for blood and for "clearing out the reds."



This campaign of the Mail does not prelude it at the same time solicitating advertising from Russian oil products.

Two other anti-Soviet oil combines are the Association of British Creditors—interested solely in oil—and the Hands Off Britain Campaign led by a fascist demagogue named Locker Lampson.

Despite all the noise, Soviet oil sales have increased 100 per cent within one year. The opposition seems to defeat its purpose, as Russian oil is distinctly better than its competitors.

Viscount Bearsted, chairman of Shell directors, at a company meeting in June denounced Soviet gasoline as "stolen" oil. The directors of R. O. P. laugh at bis lordship and say that if it is "stolen" then Viscount Bearsted's firm when buying Soviet oil three years ago was an accessory after the fact, in short a "fence." Bearsted's firm paid a little item of $6 per cent dividend for the past year, tax free.

Sharp Shooters

We need ten thousand Daily Worker sharpshooters for the Class War.

We want these Ten Thousand expert marksmen to strike at the heart of American capitalism. From every factory, mine, mills and farm the deadly bullets of revolutionary propaganda must rain with destructive effect upon the rule of the exploiters.

The Daily Worker is the modern rapid fire gun, which will be swung into action by thousands of sharpshooters of the Daily Worker Army.

Every additional reader secured for the Daily Worker will be another telling shot at the domination of the ruling class.

Every new reader secured will mean another recruit in the growing army of the revolution.

In this battle, bystanders are not permitted.

We call upon every active soldier of the revolution to participate with all the power at his command.

Our objective is the winning of Five Thousand New Readers for the Daily Worker.

The winning of this objective means that we have gained strong reinforcements for the coming struggles. Forward to the goal—Five Thousand New Readers for the Daily Worker.

German Farmers Must Pay Tribute to Wall Street.

American banking capital, already realizing enormous profits off German industry thru the operation of the Dawes plan and thru the constant penetration of that nation's industrial sections by investment capital from Wall Street, now has first mortgages on vast agricultural sections of that country. Yesterday there was floated on Wall Street thru the National City Bank, Lee, Higginson & Co., and Harris, Forbes & Co., a thirty million dollar bond issue for the Central Agricultural Bank of Germany, secured by first mortgages on agricultural properties. A smaller issue (four millions) was floated for the State of Hanover. As is customary there is a discount of approximately ten per cent. The banks obtain five per cent discount for handling the issue, while they in turn sell it to their customers at an additional five per cent discount.

Actually there is placed, at the disposal of the German bank, credits to the extent of $27,000,000 on which the American bond holders draw six per cent interest on $30,000,000. Hence it means that the Wall Street gang has a claim on the products of German agricultural labor and it further indicates that this and future investments will be used to dispossess the farmers of the regions covered by American mortgages and institute large-scale agriculture. Just as capitalism, in its early stages inaugurated the wholesale expulsion of the agricultural inhabitants from the land in order to obtain sheep-walks to supply wool for the rising textile industries of the cities, so today, in its final stages, capitalism again drives the farmers and peasants from the land, erases the boundaries between the plots of land and inaugurates machine production with seasonal employment of wage slaves, with the resultant pauperization of the agricultural population.

The effect of this policy upon the American farmers will be the same as similar European investments in industry. Intensified agricultural production in Germany in order to pay interest to the American bankers will cause German products to enter into world competition with the products of the American farmers, with the result that the working farmers of this country will face still more difficult years than they now face.

Capitalism exploits alike the workers and farmers. The fact that it does not directly employ farmers as wage laborers does not conceal the fact of their exploitation. Many of them today receive less than the cost of production of their commodities; their exploiters receive the rest. The answer of the workers and farmers to the ever-growing power of Wall Street must be a class party of labor that will represent the interests of these two groups of slaves.

In addition to the economic effect upon the American farmer, the continuous stream of investments to Europe and other parts of the world means that this country becomes ever more deeply involved in all crises that affect these countries. It means that the danger of world war becomes ever more menacing. Especially is there grave danger of an attack upon the Soviet Union which stands as a monumental inspiration to the oppressed of the world whether the ground under colonial despotism or live in the debtor nations that absorb millions in investment capital.

The workers and farmers of the United States must be aware of these new dangers of the new threats of war that are the inevitable outcome of the unbridled sway of Wall Street over the government and must organize politically to fight against the bloody conspiracies that go hand in hand with the ravages in foreign countries of Yankee imperialism.

Government Clerks Can't Vote Against Cal.

Most of the 60,000 government clerks in Washington thought it no more than "fair" for the administration to permit them to enjoy a full holiday for Saturday during the intense heat of the summer months. The matter was referred to President Coolidge on a three month's vacation at his "summer white house" in the Black Hills of South Dakota, whence he had gone for political purposes and to escape the sweltering heat of Washington in midsummer, disapproved the request, so the clerks will work the customary six days.

The clerks will have to make the best of it. If they don't like it they can exercise their inalienable right to quit and if they object too strenuously they will get kicked out. They are considered mere automatons and cannot register a protest because they are not even permitted to vote so long as they hold government jobs or live in the city of Washington. The other alternative is to organize a union and strike. That, however, would be a political act, because the policy of all departments of the United States government is scab. Unions are prohibited and the workers are subject to the whim and caprice of the politicians at the head of the government.

Coolidge's respect for the demands of labor is clearly revealed in this latest act and ought favorably to impress the workers and farmers of the middle west—to fight against him and the gang he serves by striving for a class party of labor that will also put forth the demands of the farmers.

Floods in Saxony and America

A flood in Saxony in Germany, the result of a cloudburst, took a toll of some ninety lives. Though small, almost insignificant in comparison with the vast inundation of the Mississippi river valley in this country, the government took immediate steps to relieve the suffering. It sent in federal troops with fully-equipped camp kitchens to relieve the starving victims. No effort was spared to relieve the suffering.

Contrast the action of the authorities of that small province, poor in wealth and resources, with the criminal neglect by the United States government of the hundreds of thousands of victims of the Mississippi floods, left to the tender mercies of Secretary of Commerce Hoover, who utilized the disaster to increase the power of the New Orleans bankers, part of the Wall Street octopus.

This comparison ought to be sufficient to cause the American workers and farmers to respectfully rise and sing "My country, 'tis of thee," the next time someone bursts forth into patriotic song.

Even today, after the waters have subsided in Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana, when malaria is taking an unrecorded toll of death and more frightful plagues threaten to devastate the land the low political shyster, Cal Coolidge, in whose hands rests the power to call a special session of congress to deal with the matter, refuses to budge from his comfortable summer home in the Black Hills of South Dakota, because he fears the political consequences of facing the responsibility for the recreance of the government in neglecting to build proper safeguards for the inhabitants of the Mississippi valley.

District 2 Miners Show How to Win the Strike

The militant action of striking miners in and around Clearfield, Pa., where, marching into non-union territory they stage parades and demonstrations against the coal barons that result in thousands of miners joining the ranks of the strikers, gives a lead to the whole union.

In one instance, as reported in dispatches, a mine which had been non-union for 15 years was closed completely, the workers responding to the strike call almost to a man.

The Clearfield incident is a smashing reply to the official dom of the United Mine Workers which so far has failed to launch any systematic organization work in the non-union districts. It is indicative of the sympathy among the thousands of non-union men for the strikers, and of resentment of the coal barons' autocracy expressed in action when given the right kind of leadership.

The action of the miners in District 2 should be broadcasted thruout the entire union. It can be used to stimulate similar action in those districts bordering on non-union territory and in our opinion all that is necessary is for the officialdom to stop the pussyfooting policy so far followed and allow the rank and file to use the experience it has gained in a hundred bitter conflicts by which the union has been established and maintained.

If the "Save the Union" bloc leadership will, with the Clearfield action as a precedent, initiate similar well-organized demonstrations in other sections the sheer weight of mass pressure will force the official U. M. W. A. family into some kind of support for these rank and file actions or make them abandon all opposition to them.

It should not be forgotten that District 2, of which John Brophy was formerly president, has a tradition of militancy and is living up to that tradition in spite of all the damage done to the district by the Lewis machine in its unprincipled fight on Brophy.

The same thing holds true in other districts but from the "Save the Union" bloc must come a concrete program and direction.

The miners' strike can be won but it cannot be won by waiting. This is clearly seen by the rank and file as the Clearfield action shows.

Death, Commutation or Freedom?

The great movement of solidarity in the campaign to save Sacco and Vanzetti for the working class, which has developed to such splendid proportions, may be confronted with a new danger by the time these words appear. It is the same danger that sapped the strength, resoluteness and militancy of the movement to rescue Tom Mooney and Warren Billings from the hangman's noose. It arises out of the diabolical cunning and fear of the vultures of capitalism who see their prey staunchly defended and seek to hold it with new snares.

This is known to us from the history of the past. We remember the movement for Mooney and Billings; how it enlisted the support of the entire labor movement in this country and in others, of prominent men and women, writers and thinkers; how the cry for a general strike to free the two frame up victims found an echo among hundreds of thousands of workers. We know that with a whole world convinced of their innocence, the executioners were forced to forge a murderous case against Billings, and instead cheated the movement for the two labor fighters out of its victory by putting them in prison for life. The change of the death sentence to one of life imprisonment was the clever evasion of the consequences of the powerful and swiftly growing movement to vindicate Mooney and Billings. But although they were saved from the death of the sprung trap, they were condemned to the living death of life imprisonment and the movement for their release was virtually destroyed.

The workers who had rallied to Mooney and Billings were soothed by the sinister argument that imprisonment for life was, in any event, better than execution. They were told that we would have to be satisfied for the while with one victory, and that final release of the two fighters would be won later. But after ten years there remain only a few who still keep alive the memory of these buried men and who are pledged to continue the work for their freedom.

The great movement for Sacco and Vanzetti, which now embraces millions of workers, must not allow itself to be dissolved by a similar subterfuge. It is not a fantastic possibility that is projected here, but a probability that may rapidly develop into a fact.

Already the rumor is being cautiously spread that the governor of Massachusetts, in whose hands the final decision on Sacco and Vanzetti is placed, will commute the sentence of death to one of life imprisonment. It is being spread so that the enemies of Sacco and Vanzetti may feel out the reaction to this prospect among the defenders of the two Italian rebels. They want to know if this splendid movement of solidarity, which has time and again struck heavy blows at the Massachusetts reaction, will of allow itself to be dissolved with the bait of a commutation. They want to know if, since some retreat must be made, they can wreck their revenge upon these rebels, who have not feared to defy them, by burying them alive and at the same time liquidate the movement which must free them!

We declare that these "kind" gentlemen who are so ready to grant a commutation of sentence to life imprisonment, and those who are so ready to accept such a commutation, are not the friends of Sacco and Vanzetti. For these fighters, who have so bravely withstood the tortures and nightmares of seven years constantly being confronted with the frightful prospect of death in the electric chair, who have been borne up only by their own bravery and the knowledge of the support and solidarity of the millions of the world, a sentence of life imprisonment is in many respects worse than death, for it is at best a living death, a death by the spirit-crushing torture of cold walls and bars.

We repeat the warning to the friends of Sacco and Vanzetti which Bartolomeo Vanzetti addressed to his friends almost a year ago, in the pages of the Labor Defender, when the decision on the case had been postponed and illusions on its outcome were being created:

"We see evil, not good, in this delay. Look out, friends and comrades, let no unfounded optimism lure you in a restful slumbering of confidence that could be awakened only by a shameful and deadly, new and final vanquishment."

The millions of workers in every part of the world who have not ceased to fight for the cause of Sacco and Vanzetti, which has become the cause of the whole working class, must not be deluded by talk of commutation of sentence. The workers who have thus far by their power and solidarity prevented the execution of the two rebels must continue their great fight with unabated vigor and determination. The workers who have snatched Sacco and Vanzetti from the chair of death must snatch them from the cell of death by slow torture. No unfounded joy must dull the sharp edge of the movement. It must continue to fight forward with its million-armed power until this great issue is settled with a great victory.

The hearts of the Massachusetts executioners have not softened with kindness, and their desire to murder our comrades has not changed. On the contrary, they seek for new methods of torment. The working class must reply:

Not the chair of death, but life for Sacco and Vanzetti!

—James Cannon (Labor Defender, July.)

ALL CHINA FEDERATION OF LABOR UNIONS CALLS ON SAILORS OF IMPERIALIST POWERS TO ASSIST

WUHAN, (By Mail).—To workers of the whole world:—The United States of America is a democratic government in name but not in fact. She persecutes and entraps our class-workers, the proletariat, in the self-same way in which the autocratic governments of Europe do to the working classes. Recently the state government of Massachusetts for the sake of pleasing the venal capitalists pronounced death sentence for execution on the 10th of July, 1927, against our class-comrades, Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti. This is sufficient to show that American imperialists are as equally cruel and tyrannical as other imperialists in the world. We, the class-workers of the world, must jointly protest against the taking of precious lives of innocent class-comrades.

In Rumania, Bulgaria, Italy and under the white guard dictatorship of Poland, the most elemental rights are denied to our class-workers, the proletariat, and furthermore many laborers are imprisoned and many labor leaders butchered. We, workers of the world, the proletariat, cannot bear this kind of treatment any longer now. We must unite together to work for the world revolution. Down with our common enemy, capitalist imperialism of all nations. Avenge the blood of the butchered comrades and liberate us from our pains.

The said federation leading 2,500,000 organized Chinese workers has engaged struggles against capitalist imperialism for many years. The Nationalist revolution of China, through the guidance of us, the proletariat, will sooner or later reach its final goal. For the sake of avenging the murdered class-comrades and with the aim of accomplishing the world revolution within the shortest possible period of time, we resolutely determine to fight most desperately and most violently against capitalist imperialism of all nations.—The All-China Labor Federation.

HANKOW, (By Mail).—To sailors of all nations in China, on the Chinese National Humiliation Day, May 9, 1927.—Dear friends: Today is the Chinese National Humiliation Day. Let us tell you very briefly its history in order to make it more clear. Twelve years ago on this very day, May 9, 1915, the Japanese imperialists forced China to accept the "Twenty-one Demands" which had been presented by them on the seventh of May. The main purpose which the Japanese imperialists had was to carry the policy of Japan towards China at that time. To speak definitely, they wanted to establish in China their cruel policy of economical exploitation, expansion of territory, the highest influence, political control and of the Asiatic Monroe doctrine.

These cruel demands they were prevented from carrying into existence at the risk of many a life yet they have greatly influenced other imperialistic countries and opened a gate in China for them to come over to exercise their cruel policy. Consequently, a series of terrible massacres and bombardments was conducted by them in Darien, Tsing-tao, Canton, Shanghai, Shamen, Hui-chow, Wan-hsien, Nanking, Kiu-kiang and Hankow. They have got all imperialistic countries on their side and at the same time they have induced all the new and old militarists—Chiang Kai-shek and Sung Tsu-ling—to join them. They want to commit another series of more horrible massacres and to crush the revolutionary spirit of China by means of this united force.

You, our friends, ought to know that the defeat of the revolutionary movement of China is the defeat of the world revolution and hinders the emancipation of the oppressed peoples of the world. The imperialists are wolves in sheeps' skin if we speak more correctly. They would not be contented in carrying out their policy of exploitation and oppression in one country only they would do the same in other countries and even in their own countries.

You, sailors, have gone through all the troubles only for the imperialists. What else have you got besides earning a few tens of dollars a month for your living? Which of you, sailors of imperialist, suffered more in the great European War 1914-1918? Was not a great number of the Chinese laborers deceived by and sacrificed their lives for the imperialists? Who got the greater benefits, sailors, laborers or imperialists, when war was over? Most of you, sailors—we are sure—are come from the working class of your countries. Will you be able to secure for your brother-workers and sister-workers in your countries a better condition of livelihood at the risk of your own lives? We assure you that the imperialists would not take heed of the work you have done for them or even treat them well. What then is the use for you to murder the Chinese workers who are in no better condition than your brothers are? We know and do believe that you would not do this. Why, then, will you not help us in demanding for the cancellation of all the unequal treaties? In doing this, you help not only the poor workers of China but also the brother-workers of your own countries, because our enemy is your enemy and your enemy is our enemy. Let us work together and shout:

"Long live the proletarian workers of the world."

"Success of the sailors' help in the world revolution."

The All-China Labor Federation.

Joint Defense Concert At Coney Island Stadium Saturday

The big open air arena of the Coney Island Stadium, 8th Street and Surf Avenue, will be the scene of the dual operatic and concert offering of the Joint Defense Committee, Cloakmakers and Furriers this Saturday night. Boredine's world famous "Prince Igor" presented by Alex Kosloff, premier dancer of the Metropolitan Opera House assisted by his ballet corps of 50 and 100 musicians of the New York Symphony Orchestra conducted by Ernc Rapee, will be the principal attractions. Rita La Porte, dancer of the Metropolitan Opera Company, Victoria Youngman, and Allen Delano Weiss, formerly of the Capitol theatre ballet, will be presented in the principal roles.

This concert is being given for the purpose of raising funds for the defense and relief of the imprisoned furriers and cloakmakers, and also for their wives and children. Ludwig Landy, campaign manager of the Joint Defense Committee expects more than 30,000 people to attend the concert this year. His estimate is prompted by the enormous success of last year's turnout at the same place given for the benefit of the children of the textile strikers in Passaic.

This is the second consecutive year that Kosloff is appearing at the Stadium for strikers' benefit. Last summer he presented Rimsky-Korsakoff "Scheherezade." This year the ever popular "Prince Igor" will be one of the main features. Terpsichorean and ballet divertissements by celebrated artists will complete this unusually large program. The orchestral sections which will be played by the New York Symphony Orchestra under the guidance of Rapee, includes compositions by Wagner, Richard and Johann Strauss, Tschaikowsky, Rimsky-Korsakoff, Berlioz and Borodine. Tickets, which are sold at $2 and $1, can be purchased in the office of the Joint Defense Committee, 41 Union Square.

Successful Conference in Toronto.

A telegram received yesterday from H. Englander, manager of the Toronto Joint Board of the Furriers' Union, announced that the Unity Conference of the union held a most successful meeting there Sunday, which resulted in some very important decisions.

This is the first of a series of conferences to which the trade unionists of various large cities will be invited to learn of the struggle in the Furriers' Union and join with the Furriers' Unity Committee in an effort to bring about peace and unity in the International Fur Workers' Union of the United States and Canada.

Mass meetings will follow the conferences in the various cities and Ben Gold, manager of the New York Joint Board, will attend many of these meetings and tell of the present strike in the New York fur industry and the struggle against the reactionary forces which are seeking to destroy the furriers' union.

Furriers Vacate Cloakmakers.

A committee of needle trades workers visited the office of The DAILY WORKER yesterday and offered to show the whole world just how strong they are and how well they can pull.

Comrade M. Malkin, spokesman for the committee offered to stage a special tug of war match at The DAILY WORKER Carnival and Fair to be held at Pleasant Bay Park, on July 23rd and 24th. The match will be: Arrested Furriers versus Arrested Cloakmakers.

What a spectacle! The Tammany cops will go crazy when they see the strong picket line strikers going into training for the match. Of course the furriers and cloakmakers have been doing quite some pulling of late. They are in the vanguard of the militant working class in the big fight to pull the labor movement ont of the hands of the reactionaries.

Transit Hearing Is Thrown Into Uproar As Hylan Testifies

Former Mayor John F. Hylan stood off at the Transit Commission's hearing yesterday and called his questioner, Samuel Untermyer, names. He hurled accusations one after another at the special counsel for the commission and finally drew from Untermyer an inquiry, "That's a lie!"

Hylan had demanded of Untermyer whether he had not accepted a fee from the Interborough while his firm represented the Admiral Realty Company which was suing the Interborough in a test of the constitutionality of the dual subway contracts. Untermyer remained quiet for a moment, and Lylan leaned forward to him.

"Well, you don't deny it, do you?"

"Yes," Untermyer answered. "It's a lie."

During the hot exchanges between the corporation lawyer and Hylan, Untermyer kept appealing to the chairman to have the personal remarks struck from the record. In this he was upheld.

Not long after the fee charge had been made Hylan began his interrogation of the special counsel.

Wise To Untermyer.

"You're always the fellow who pretends to be doing something for nothing and all the time you are getting paid pretty good. Where were you when I was in the mayor's office and making this fight?"

At another time Hylan said that "if the commission is working for the people it ought to have a counsel who has respect for the people." He added, "He's been kidding the people long enough."

Publicity Seeker.

After much refusing on the part of Hylan to be bulldosed by Untermyer the latter said, "Do you know that this investigation is mandatory by act of the legislature?"

"I suppose it was," Hylan replied, "but it wasn't mandatory to bring you into it. You know what I think, Untermyer? I think you're trying to get yourself nominated for supreme court justice. You want to advertise yourself."

The hearing was void of any important testimony.

Will Not Accept Lavin's Resignation is Opinion of City's Traction Men

The announcement of Edward P. Lavin, president of Local 977 of the Amalgamated Association of Electric Railway Employes Association that he is resigning that position to take effect immediately, was received with surprise by traction workers throughout the city yesterday.

When interviewed by a reporter of The DAILY WORKER many of the members of the union said that they would refuse to accept Lavin's resignation. When making his announcement he said that the international officials have been conducting the local's business without consulting him.

800 Passengers Shaken In "L" Train Collision

Eight hundred passengers were shaken up today by a rear-end collision between a Myrtle Avenue Elevated train and a Fifth Avenue train at the Adams Street Station, Brooklyn.

Police reserves were called from the Poplar Avenue Station to quiet the passengers, who became frightened. They were removed from both trains.

The rear-end platform of the Myrtle Avenue train and the front platform of the Fifth Avenue train were damaged.

The Myrtle Avenue train was at a standstill in the station and was bumped by the other train, which was coming into the station, according to Patrick O'Neil, motorman of the Fifth Avenue train, he put on the brakes when he saw the signal set against him, but slippery rails prevented the train from stopping in time.

The Fifth Avenue train slipped over the tracks for twenty feet after the brakes were applied, O'Neil said. Service was tied up on the line for twenty minutes.

the committee had before it a communication from Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the Transit Commission, in which Untermyer charged that the Socialist Party in which the responsibility for the deportation of Sacco and Vanzetti protest meeting held in Union Square on Thursday is laid on the Workers Party of America.

"Allow me, as a member of the Executive Board of the Sacco and Vanzetti Emergency Committee, to protest against this calumnious charge, and to bring to your attention the true facts as I know them. Prior to Thursday's demonstration, Leonardo Frisina, executive secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Liberation Committee gave his assurance to two representatives of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee that both committees would have speakers at the demonstration. We had no cause to doubt his word, since by all the traditions of the labor movement, political defense activities are sacred against factional quarrels.

Joined Demonstration.

"In true united-front spirit 4 called upon the members of the Joined Board of the Cloak and Dressmakers Union, as did Mr. Gold upon the members of the Furriers Joint Board, to participate in the one-hour strike and to join in full force in the demonstration. I came to the square not with the intention of speaking, but as a worker. I stood on the outskirts of the gathering and saw what was going on. I heard the crowd—fully 90 per cent of it—clamor to hear Ben Gold. I saw him hoisted over the heads of the people toward the platform. By virtue of the agreement with Mr. Frisina, and, what is more, by virtue of loyalty to the endeavor to liberte Sacco and Vanzetti, the will of the thousands of workers should have been respected. Instead, the socialists who occupied the platform kicked Ben Gold in the face. By that action they kicked the entire eathering in the face. They proved that they were bent on making the demonstration as narrow and partisan as possible. They sought to turn the demonstration into grist for their mill. They, who so magnilooquently

WORK FOR LATIN-AMERICAN UNION TO FIGHT U. S. IMPERIALISM; FEAR INTERVENTION FOR OIL GRAB

By HARVEY O'CONNOR
(Federated Press.)

WASHINGTON, July 11 (FP).—Of all the two presidential issues in American foreign policy, the government's relations with Britain and with Latin America, the latter is causing more and more concern. Although Geneva has brought the growing, cocksure imperialism of America face to face with the declining but still arrant imperialism of Britain, officials in both the state and commerce departments view Latin American developments with more anxiety. Meeting Britain's claims of supremacy on the seas is a very matter of money and ships, but the Latin American question is far more subtle and less amenable to solution by simple superiority of gunboats and marines.

The hollow apology of the Federal Oil Conservation Board that it really did not mean what it said when it urged full state department support for naked oil imperialism in Mexico and South America instances the delicate relations between the "Yankee Colossus of the North" and the apparently weak and divided nations south of the Rio Grande. Said the Board in a recent report:

Urges Oil Imperialism.

"The fields of Mexico and South America are of large yield and much promising geological oil structure as yet undrilled. That our companies should vigorously acquire and explore such fields is of first importance, not only as a source of future supply, but a supply under our own citizens."

Naturally the Latin oil-producing countries—Mexico, Colombia, Venezuela—have interpreted that as meaning that American oil companies should monopolize the Latin American fields, driving out foreign, i. e. British, competitors and preventing the nations involved from exerting any control over their own greatest natural resource. In the phrase "under control of our own citizens," they visualize American battleships and marines supporting American exploiters in obtaining and keeping a monopoly of a product which the Latins regard as belonging to all the people, rather than to a few powerful foreign corporations.

Oil Diplomacy.

The Board's labored apology speaks of respect for the needs of the nations involved—although manifestly neither Mexico, Venezuela nor Columbia, agricultural nations, have very extensive needs for oil. The Board entirely overlooks the Latin American objection that oil is a natural resource, given by nature and from which all the people should benefit.

That oil is the major factor in American diplomacy in Mexico and the Caribbean, becomes more apparent every day. The Mexican problem is now in the hands of undersecretary of State Robert E. Olds—he who issued the famous don't-quote-me interview regarding Mexico, challenging American hegemony of the Caribbean, which inflamed Mexican-American relations last spring and brought intervention so close that enthusiastic militarists here almost smelled the gunpowder. Olds may go to Mexico as ambassador himself, so important in the eyes of the state department is the struggle over who should control Mexico's oil—Mexico herself, or the Mellon-Doheny-Sinclair-Standard Oil combination.

Work for Latin-American Union.

The oil struggle in the Caribbean is approaching a crisis expressed best in the words of Jose Bejarano, secretary of the Mexican Chamber of Commerce of New York in a speech before the anti-imperialist conference of the People's Reconstruction League in Washington last week:

"A period is rapidly approaching in the history of Mexico which will finally decide the fate not only of Mexico, but of many Latin-American countries; it will either be the epoch of economic emancipation or the beginning of the collapse of the entire Latin-American race. American imperialism will not be mainly to blame. To protest against the imperialism of the United States because of American invasion—political, commercial, economic and ideological—into our countries, is like protesting against the clouds when it rains and our roofs are leaky."

In that last line is a prediction either of Mexico's slavery, or of a Latin-American union for defense against American imperialism. Probably Bejarano sees the apparent inevitability of the "collapse of the Latin-American race" in the unequal struggle against American oil barons and battleships.

Governor-General Wood will never return to the Phillippines to take up the reigns of dictatorship again. While the President has salved the latter country's pride with public assurances that he will be allowed to return to Manila, it is certain that he will not.

Wood and Coolidge are in complete disagreement over military rule in the islands. Carmi Thompson, who sleuthed through the archipelago for Coolidge, reported unfavorably on Wood's "cavalry cabinet" and urged civilian rule under the Department of the Interior. The Filipinos, short of complete independence, would prefer Department of State rule, in order to recognize their "foreign" status. Perhaps Secretary Hoover, who has corralled nearly everything loose in Washington, will capture the Philippines for his Department of Commerce.

Disgraceful tales of "cavalry cabinet" rule continue to pour out of Manila. Acting Governor-General E. A. Gilmore is even more crass in his military deportment than Wood. He barred Filipino reporters from a dinner given the third congressional party to visit the islands this summer. One cameraman succeeded in entering, but a member of the cavalry cabinet kicked over his camera and smashed it to bits. A fight followed with police and secret service men called.

Secretary of State Kellogg, after the people threw him out of the senate occupied offices in the same building with Butler and Mitchell. Coolidge rewarded Kellogg for his faithfulness to standpatism by putting him in charge of America's foreign affairs—about the worst move Cal ever made. Kellogg invited Undersecretary Olds, to come east and enjoy the clover in the state department's pasture. Now Olds is undersecretary and may succeed Sheffield as ambassador to Mexico. Thus three of the Four Rough Riders of Reaction in Minnesota find themselves in charge of American foreign policy and federal prosecution—a strategic position considering the Ohio gang—with the fourth, Butler, regarded as a dominating force in the Supreme Court.

STRIKE OF PHILADELPHIA PAVING CUTTERS STILL STRONG DESPITE BETRAYAL OF THEIR "LEADERS"

By JOHN ANDERSON.

The striking paving cutters are still holding out against Union Paving Company in spite of that they are betrayed by their leaders. This firm has employed scabs imported from the south to take the places of the organized workers. A new minister was sent down to Virginia to recruit strikebreakers by the Company. The men were promised steady jobs and union wages ($20.00 per 1,000 blocks). When they arrived here they were paid $15.00 per thousand—25 per cent reduction. Most of the men are unskilled in the work. Fifty per cent of the material of the old paving blocks are spoiled in the act of resetting them and the work that is done is very poor. This means a loss to the city because the city furnishes the blocks, and the blocks that are replaced are of poor quality and make bad streets.

They refuse to recognize the union; they want to hire and fire whoever they please according to good American plan! They want to crush our organization, and the city officials are behind them. All this is very clear to most of the paving cutters. Some of the Negroes brought here from the south were taken in the union, but there is still about 50 working and it is said that more are coming from the south.

The secretary of the central labor union had been requested to give his advice. He told us we must "establish friendly relations with the Union Paving Co. and not stop work until we had tested it out." In other words, to compromise in the matter. It was a good lesson in class collaboration. Being a conservative he went to see Mr. Hannah, International president of the Pavers' and Rammsrmen's Union with headquarters in New York, in order to get the men (those now on the job the blocks in the streets) to quit paving scab blocks. Hannah promised the committee to come here and see what he could do, and he did. He arrived here one day last week and had a meeting with our committee, and here is the result: The committee reported to the branch: (1) That Hannah refused to call off or forbid his men to pave scab blocks (that in spite of both organizations belonging to A. F. of L.). The pavers are allowed to continue to pave scab blocks. (2) Hannah suggested to the paving cutters to take a 15 per cent reduction in wages. (3) That the expenses for this labor "leader" in coming here were to be paid by the union. The spirit of the men is still strong and in spite of these corrupt labor "leaders" they are determined to fight even if they are going to stand alone.

Reformism in the Far East

By A. MARKOV.

World reformism has of late years been following with keener and keener alarm the successes of the left trade union movement in the Far East. The fears and alarms of the reformists are perfectly comprehensible: they have been evoked by the steady growth of the revolutionary class trade union movement in China, covering as it already does about 3 millions, i. e., almost all the organized Chinese workers, by the successful struggle going on in Japan in the Hoigikai (the left trade union centre) for the winning over of the masses, and, finally, by the progress made by the class trade union movement in Indonesia, where more than half of the trade unions are under left influence.

Unions Red.

The reformist position is particularly weak in China, where the trade union movement from the very beginning assumed a definitely revolutionary character. The workers are not to be tempted into the yellow trade unions in China, despite Chiang Kai-shek's zealous endeavors to naturalize the latter.

Neither do prospects smile upon the reformists in Indonesia, where the trade union movement has already begun to assume a definitely revolutionary tinge. Their affairs in Japan also are far from brilliant despite the existence in that country of many big reformist organizations, for the left and centrist elements in the latter are becoming more and more pronounced. The reformist Japanese Federation of Labor—the blatantly right Sodomei—has been forced to put up with the loss of more than half of its members so as to preserve appearances as a hundred per cent trade union centre.

In India alone, where the trade union movement is chiefly under the influence of right nationalist bourgeois element, has reformism been able to get the upper hand. But even here a tendency to form a left wing in the trade union movement is noticeable.

The Reformist Trick.

In their search for ways of impeding the steady revolutionization of the trade union movement in the Far East, the reformist leaders—always at the service of imperialism—raised the question at the International Conference of Labor held two years ago in Geneva of calling a Pan-Asiatic Labor Conference. They hoped thus to be able to link up the activities of the reformists in Japan and India and above all to involve the Chinese trade union organizations in the reformist net. The execution of this conference was entrusted to the well-known reactionary and Sodomei leader, Sudzuki. The revolutionary Chinese trade union movement, however, by refusing to take part in it, cramped the reformist style. Instead of seeing the realization of their plans they were forced to be the witnesses of a Pacific Ocean Left Trades Union Conference, planned several years ago, held on the 20th of May in Hankow. The reformists, however, decided not to give up without a struggle. Chiang Kai-shek's counter-revolutionary coup d'état opened to them new prospects. The question of the creation of a single Reformist bloc in the Far East was again brought forward on an ambitious scale. The reformists consider it now more important than ever before to get the upper hand of the Chinese and Indonesian trade union movements, to destroy the influence of the Higokai, the left trade union centre in Japan and to stem the tide of the left trade union movement in India. Judging by press statements the Japanese opportunists, together with the right yellow Kuomintang unions in China, are again working up towards the famous Pan-Asiatic Conference. This time the International Labor Office and Sudzuki and Co., working under its instructions, may be able to bring it off, having at last found traitors at their service in the Chinese trade union movement.

Sudzuki Plots.

As early as April last, directly after the Chiang Kai-shek's coup d'état, Sudzuki (on his way to the International Labor Conference, now being held in Geneva) remained in Shanghai for the special purpose of arranging with the right Kuomintang leaders and yellow unions about the calling of the Pan-Asiatic Conference.

Soon after this the right Kuomintangites and the so-called Socialist-Nationalist Party entered into close relations. They contracted a mutual agreement to struggle with Communism and decided to support Sudzuki's idea of calling a Pan-Asiatic Conference by every means at their disposal. Finally, according to the Japanese paper "Myako," a secret journey was made to Shanghai and Nanking in connection with the conference by Natzuoka, secretary of the Sodomai. It is obvious that the Japanese reformists are developing their activities all along the front in China.

Appealed to Bosses.

Sudzuki of course also raised the question of the Pan-Asiatic Conference at the International Labor Conference in Geneva, emphasizing the necessity of its convocation for the struggle with the destructive influence of the Communists in the Far East, where they have "poisoned the minds of the working class and are undermining the trade union movement." While he was still in Shanghai he declared that he would discuss the conference with delegates from India, Australia and other countries. Unfortunately for him, he had great difficulties in his Geneva negotiations. He declared, not without reason, that the Far Eastern countries were very feebly represented at the labor conference and western reformism did not pay them due attention. Even between the Far Eastern reformists themselves relations were somewhat brittle, as is borne testimony to by the complaints of Sudzuki that the Indian reformists, insisting on a campaign for the ratification of the Washington treaty on the 8-hour day in Japan, were quite ready to reconcile themselves to a 10-hour day for their own country.

The general object of Sudzuki's participation in the Labor Conference at Geneva was the organization of an attack by world reformism on the revolutionary trade union movement in the Far Eastern countries. The Amsterdam International had, however, already reckoned with the necessity of exorting greater energies in these countries and embarked upon activities in this direction.

Thus the Reformist International Transport Workers' Federation, to which the railway workers of Yava, the Indian Seamen's Union and the All-India Federation of Railway workers have belonged since 1926, decided to develop activities in Japan also. With this object its secretary, Nathans, addressed the so-called Yokohama Dockers' Mutual Aid Society (Yokohaima-Nakasi-Koisai-kai) in May last with a formal proposal of affiliation, which was promptly accepted. Although this society cannot be called a trade union, and has only a few hundred members, it now intends to embark upon intensified organizational work among dockers, loaders and other transport workers in Kobe, Osaka, Otaru, Hokodate and other ports. Thus Amsterdam, which quite recently was content that the reformists' role in Far Eastern countries should be chiefly that of theoretical inspiration, is now alarmed by the reinforcement of the left trade union movement in the Far East, endeavoring to change its tactics and get direct hold of the Far Eastern trade union organizations. World reformism will, however, have great difficulty in striking roots in the Far East.

Annual Conference of United Council of Working Class Housewives

By TILLIE LITINSKY.

The Conference of United Council of Working Class Housewives, which took place on June 25, 1927, at the Little Hungary, New York, was indeed a phenomenal one. To see seven hundred women, the erewhile kitchen drudges, sitting through a seven hour session and pondering vital, very vital problems, was truly inspiring.

The problems confronting the conference and its constituency were of no mean or petty calibre, either; resolutions on:

1. War. Realizing that the political horizon is getting cloudy and the peace of the world threatened once again, and with a full knowledge and understanding that, if was ensues, the working class will pay the heavy war toll, while the munition manufacturers wax rich and fat. The delegates unanimously passed a resolution against war.

2. Playgrounds. Past experience had taught the workingcinas mothers that summer, which should be a season of joy and freedom, brings ever more tribulation and worries to the worker's children. On their parents' meagre funds they cannot afford vacations, so they are exposed to all sorts of accidents on the congested streets of the city. The Conference, therefore, passed a resolution, requesting the municipal government to make playgrounds on every ten blocks of the whole city, so that the little ones might at least play unmolested and without direct exposure to danger.

Many Resolutions.

Many other equally important resolutions (two numerous to be given in detail) on housing, school, picketing, nurseries and education, were taken up and discussed precisely, painstakingly, with depth and a breadth of vision, which was a tribute to woman's capability to do things, and which fully vindicated her well-earned right to take her place as man's equal in the building of the future.

Delegates from the Joint Furriers Board, from the Workers' School, the International Labor Defense, the Ladies' Council and others greeted the United Councils and acknowleged our participation in the workers' struggle which the need arose.

Proud Record.

Kate Gitlow, secretary of the U. C. W. H. then read the report of our last years' work, and it was one to make any organization proud. Fraught as their winter had been with calls for relief, the Council's response to the needs was immediate and carried, along with its financial aid, the warmth, understanding and class solidarity of the councils' members to their fellow-workers in the front trenches. The report follows in brief:

In Passaic.

The Councils' relief work in Passaic alone amounted to $20,000, not to mention the invaluable work done in the kitchens and other organizational lines. To the paper hox makers strike the Councils' contribution was $2,500.

The plushworkers' helpers, when they went out on strike, were boosted, and their spirits sustained by the Councils, held out and have won a $6 instead of the $4 day, although they are as yet not acknowledged by the A. F. of L.

Exhausted But Active.

When the danger call from the Joint Cloakmakers' and Furriers' was sounded, we were well nigh exhausted with previous intensive work, but, nothing daunted, and true to the Councils' mission, we rallied to their support, realising as we did that they were fighting the decisive battle for the progressive workers. Determinedly we plunged into the work and our aid was of ample value, morally and financially. The Council raised $3,000 in cash from a bazaar, which $1,000 in pledges are still outstanding.

Gives Much Relief.

To summarize, the U. C. W. H. has done $50,000 relief work in the past year. Is this not a colossal achievement?

So much for relief work. But the U. C. W. H. does not stop at sponsoring the workers' cause financially only. The education plank in our program received the undivided attention of the delegates. All seemed to be consumed with a desire to launch a cultural program, wide in scope, in every local, in order to raise the cultural status of the constituency. Relative to this question, Rachel Haltman, editor of our bulletin, spoke on the prospects of the paper and outlined its work. On suggestion from one of our delegates, a section of the bulletin will be devoted to children, when it has grown considerably. It was unanimously decided to give special attention to education in the coming year.

Dr. Movskowitz then spoke on the hakers' situation and the successful organization of the hakers' wives in a very active council. She asserted that the awakening class consciousness of the women comprising the councils, was in itself an invaluable cultural achievement.

Adopted Constitution.

Adoption of the Constitution and By-laws of the organization followed, after which the conference adjourned with a firm resolve to do oven better work next year. It may be mentioned that the U. C. W. H. has risen in membership from 300 to 2,000.

To all those who are interested in the labor struggle, we would say, pass the word along to all women folk of your acquaintance, to join the U. C. W. H., and to become a factor in the active work which this organization is doing, for let us not forget that when Woman sponsors something, she does it devotedly, ardently and truly as befits a Real Woman.

MISS Marie Beryl of Lexington, Kentucky, narrowly escaped losing $100,000 when she fell in love with a count who sported a name that sounds like the trade mark of a throat gargle. It is Spiro Hadgi-Kyriacos. Her wealthy father left her that sum provided she would not wed before thirty, but while picking her way cautiously thru swarms of European counts the fellow with the gurgling cognomen almost ruined her, financially. The American Legion should do something about this. If one American is the equal of half a dozen foreigners why is it that this branch of a flourishing industry is allowed to fall into the hands of outsiders?

THE Rev. Dr. John Roach Straton is a shrinking spiritual violet. Public men as a rule can ill afford this luxury. The careerist whose lips are not attuned to a booming horn must accept the services of a clever press agent if he expects to keep in the spotlight. But extraordinary persons like John D. Rockefeller, Henry Ford and Doc. Straton do not need press agents. Their good deeds break thru the paper walls of the continent despite their aversion to self-praise.

STRATON runs a crazy house known as the Calvary Baptist Church. Here the managers indulge in weird hair-raising rites, under the auspices of the holy spirit. Several of the Doc's deacons could not see any fun in those antics so they tried to slip the skid under him, but Straton was first at the skid and the deacons slid out on the axle grease. But a writer can attempt to be conscientious. So the Reverend Doctor invited the ousted deacons to return. One in particular can repose in a soft crevice of Straton's heart. He once expressed the opinion that Straton was the greatest man in America. "That showed a sapient man and an understanding heart" observed the blushing Straton.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER has passed his 88th birthday. The money wizard's picture indicates that if he had to depend on his appearance for a living he would not be worth a dime outside of a circus. Yet he is one of the wealthiest men living, because he possesses the cunning of the fox and the cold-bloodedness of a hyena. A faker selling a health book on the street corner a few evenings ago attributed Rockefeller's success in dodging the undertaker to his abstemious life. As soon as the health fraud got thru with his speech he went thru the audience selling books and puffing a noxious weed.

Foch Predicts New World War Within Next 15-20 Years

LONDON, July 11.—A new world war "within the next 15 years or 20, years" on a scale hastily less than the last, is Marshal Foch's prediction which was printed in today's issue of the Weekly Dispatch.

"Such a war will be a world war and will not be localized in any sense of the word," Marshal Foch is quoted as saying. "Every country will take part in it and the combatants will include not only the manhood, but the women and children of every nation.

"Younger women probably will take an even more active part in the war of the future. The nation in arms will comprise not only every available man, but every woman and child, since all will have allotted to them some definite task.

"Battles will be fought not only by land and sea, but in the air, where planes will fight not singly or in squadrons, but in series of masses."

YESTERDAY'S comment on the absence of Dawes publicity has borne fruit and may soon bear fish, or at least fish stories. The tremendous inroad that Coolidge has been making on the poor fish voter sent the vice-president out of his retirement with several bounds, a cartoonist and a fly hatchery. Since Coolidge has already lined up the worm caucus in the G. O. P. Dawes has been forced to try his luck with the fly crowd. It is not quite clear what position the G. O. P. national committee will take but it is unlikely that they will decide until the fish are counted.

CIVILIZATION is now hitting on all fins. A comparatively short time ago elections were decided by the heaviest artillery even outside of Chicago. Today the heaviest fish story teller is likely to win. Dawes appreciates the value of accentuating the differences among the economic interests that cater to the angling section of the voting population. He is out to make a split between the fly people and the worm crowd. Al Smith, a typical candidate of heavy industry is photographed after having captured a wooden pike.

SMITH will come home with the lumber vote, the thirsty vote and the catholic vote. Since living as well as artificial bait is monopolized by the G. O. P. Al must fall back on newer devices. He makes his own fish and catches them at will. If this method of campaigning becomes universal we may see MacAdoo fishing with an inverted bottle and Frank L. Lowden, trying to bring them in with one of those nets you drop your socks in while agonizing thru a Pullman sleeper.

THE capitalist politicians are more adept at telling fish stories than catching fish. Between now and election time their hired scribblers will be busy retailing "personal" stories about the entries as sporting writers do about the pugs that are being tested for the squared arena. Enthusiasm will be worked up until the great majority of the workers and farmers forget their own interests and develop as much interest in the race between the rival politicians as if the victory of either of them meant a betterment of their conditions. The workers and farmers of this country would give the capitalist political hacks something else to think about besides indulging in clownish cowboy stunts and stale fish tales if they set about organizing a Labor Party instead of wasting their time hoping against hope that the capitalist tucks will do something for them.

This parasite is one of hundreds of Hindoo parasites protected in their luxurious positions by the armed forces of the British government. They spend enough money on dissipation and luxury to feed thousands of Hindoo workers. In return for the protection afforded to them by the British government they help the empire hold the teeming millions of India enslaved.

THE British gave a rather flimsy excuse for postponing a session of the so-called naval disarmament conference. The excuse given was the death ofIevin O'Higgins of the Free State government. As if the passing away of such an inconsequential person would hold up the polite warfare between England and the United States at Geneva. As these lines are being written the plenary session of this conference may never be held. The fact is that the conflict between the two great powers is so sharp that there is little hope that the differences can be reconciled on this side of a war.

THE police are still busy helping the manufacturers, and right wing labor leaders to break the strike of the Furriers' Union. It is encouraging to know that New York trade unionists have spurned the invitation to become strikebreakers, sent out by the A. F. of L. disorganizers Woll, McGrady and Brown. The invitation was broadcasted by the socialists. The tenacity of the militant workers is one of the brightest chapters in the history of labor struggles. Despite the odds against them, they are unconquerable and their courage and steadfastness is winning for them the applause of all honest trade unionists regardless of political affiliation.

Thayer Faces Com. On Prejudice Charge

BOSTON, July 12.—Judge Webster Thayer, who presided at the Sacco and Vanzetti trial and who has been charged with prejudice by well-known newspaper men and writers, was called for examination yesterday and appeared before Governor Fuller's advisory committee.

The sessions of the committee are being held behind closed doors and none but witnesses and their counsel are allowed to enter.

Thayer was called before the committee to answer to the repeated charges of unfairness and prejudice made against him by impartial observers.

Thayer refused to talk on leaving the committee room and those who were in with him at the same time also declined to speak.

The committee, which consists of Dr. Howell, president of Harvard; Dr. Stratton, president of the M.I.T., and former Judge Grant, called in William G. Thompson, chief counsel for the condemned workers and Professor James F. Richardson, of Dartmouth College, who wrote one of the affidavits in which he charged that Thayer was guilty of "gross prejudice." Others who were called were Dudley P. Ranney, assistant district attorney and a public stenographer.

While the advisory committee was carrying on its investigation yesterday Fuller was hearing evidence. Witnesses were presented to the committee by William G. Thompson and cross-examined by Ranney, district attorney.

PEKING REPORTS CHIANG KAI-SHEK ATTACKS HANKOW

PEKING, July 12.—Chiang Kai-shek, appears to have changed his plan of military campaign, according to reports reaching here.

Nationalist troops which had pushed forward are now reported withdrawing towards Nanking with the Northern armies reoccupying points along the Tientsin-Pukow railroad.

Chiang Kai-shek is reported to be concentrating his armies for a drive against Changsha and Hankow where military preparations against him are under way. Several transports bearing Hankow troops are already against Nanking.

Attack Chiang Kai-shek.

WUHAN, China, July 12.—General Chiang Fa-kui has marched to the borders of Kiangsi in his advance against General Chiang Kai-shek. The advance was undertaken under orders of the Wuhan (Hankow) government. Chiang Fa-kui's army has been maneuvering in the center of Honan province. It is the best equipped and best trained portion of the Wuhan government's troops, and has been nicknamed "The Iron Army."

Near Kiukiang General Chu Peiteh is advancing steadily against Nanking. There are persistent rumors that many sections of Chiang Kai-shek's army are in mutiny, following the discovery of the common soldiers that he has turned adventurer like the militarist generals he opposes. The most important mutiny is said to be of the troops in Shantung province.

White Guards In Tsingtao.

TSINGTAO, July 12.—Three armored trains with Russian white guards, mercenaries in the pay of the Northern warlord's coalition have united at Kiao-Chau, and are opposing the troops of General Chiang Kai-shek. The harbor here is now held by the fleet of Chang Tso-lin. Six of his ships are reported on the verge of a mutiny. One airplane was brot into port by the cruiser Haichi, and is flown over the city and surrounding country for "moral effect" on the villagers. Two thousand Japanese soldiers are arriving today, sent from Dairen, and they will raise the total under arms here for Japan to about 5,000.

U.S.S.R. Calls Workers Against Capitalist War To Defend Soviet Union

MOSCOW, July 11.—The second Defense week in the U.S.S.R. opened with a renewed warning from President Rykoff, Chairman of Labor and Defense, to the workers of the Soviet Union not relax their vigilance in preparing for defense of the Republic and the Revolution in the face of the imminence of a capitalist offensive against Russia.

"Whoever is not a member of the Red Army said Rykoff, must join the ranks of the Osoviackim (the central organ of defense) and be ready to rise to the defense of the Union. Every worker must know how to use a rifle, how to deal with gas attacks and how to strengthen the defense of the country."

AGRICULTURISTS' CONFERENCE SAYS COOLIDGE UNFAIR

Condemn His Veto on Farm Relief Bill

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 12.—Senators, representatives, republican and democrat, united their voices with those of other representatives of the American and the Minnesota Councils of Agriculture here in condemnation of President Coolidge for his attitude towards farm relief. Resolutions embodying their sentiments are being drafted.

President Partial.

"The president," said Senator T. H. Caraway of Arkansas, "says to enable the farmer to get a fair price for pigs would be class legislation; therefore he vetoes the bill designed to aid them, and with the same pen signs a declaration that raises the tariff 50 per cent on pig iron."

Representatives L. J. Dickinson and Gilbert N. Haugen of Iowa, the latter co-author of the McNary-Haugen bill, stressed the condition of the farmer, and, urged the principles of the vetoed bill as the only satisfactory solution offered.

Representative Dickinson declared that if satisfactory farm relief legislation was not passed by the Seventieth Congress next Winter, "farm relief will become the major issue of the 1928 campaign."

Many Delegates.

Delegates representing fourteen states were present. They applauded every scathing rebuke, and there were many of them, administered to the head of the government. Coolidge has seldom been so unanimously spanked by any public meeting, and political observers take considerable interest in the fact that Coolidge's strength is said to lie with the farmers especially. If the dirt farmers feel the way these representatives do, Cal, they say, will probably be moving his iron horse out of the White House.

Coolidge Insulting.

The McNary-Haugen bill was a weak form in which to administer relief to the farmers, but it was at least a gesture in that direction, is the opinion of most of the farmers. The cold and insulting way in which Coolidge vetoed it astonished and angered both those who were enamored of its glittering phraseology and those who "saw thru" it. Both alike are convinced that Cal Coolidge means nothing good for the farmer.

Smaggle Drugs By Plane.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., July 12 — Essex County authorities were confronted today with what they believe is a new wrinkle in drug running.

Investigating mysterious nocturnal visits recently of a huge amphibian airplane, Sheriff Close has believed that the ship is bringing narcotics to this vicinity.

Ferry Boat Crash.

Two municipal ferry boats plying between Brooklyn and St. George, Staten Island, collided in the harbor during a dense fog today but no one was injured and the damage was limited to $500, according to municipal ferry officials.

Only a comparatively few passengers were aboard both ferries.

Guard the Daily Worker Fund Launched by Management Committee

The grave charges launched against The DAILY WORKER and the members of its staff by the Federal Grand Jury, initiated by powerful patriotic societies, and officially heard before Judge Anderson in the United States District Court yesterday, has compelled the Management Committee to act upon the serious situation, which the paper is confronting.

We place this situation frankly before the Party and its sympathizers. The fact that members of our staff are facing penalties of twelve years each, or fines totalling $20,000 in all, or both, and that the paper faces a revocation of its mailing privileges by the Federal authorities, means that we are facing a life and death struggle for the right to maintain the paper. Proceedings in the Federal Courts are highly complicated and therefore involve a heavier legal expense, than do the lower state courts.

The DAILY WORKER Management Committee is conscious of the fact that we are facing not an ordinary prosecution, but rather an attack which is an integral part of the present capitalist offensive against labor, and the present preparation for a new World War. The Management Committee calls the attention of the Party and its sympathizers to the fact that not only a few patriotic societies are involved in the attack upon The DAILY WORKER, but that the entire weight of the Federal Government and the capitalist class of this country will be brought to bear in the effort to destroy completely labor's most effective weapon against the Open Shoppers and War Mongers.

The DAILY WORKER Management Committee has therefore decided to launch the Guard The DAILY WORKER Fund with which to meet the powerful assault being made against it. The Guard The DAILY WORKER Fund will be floated by means of One Dollar Certificates, which are being sent to all subscribers and to Party units. This fund will be used for the defense and maintenance of The DAILY WORKER in the face of the present attack against it.

Management Committee calls upon all Party units and friends of The DAILY WORKER to meet the attack against our paper with all the enthusiastic support, which the gravity of the situation demands.

40-Hour Week Fight Will Soon Be Won By 400 Capmakers

The struggle of the 400 capmakers who have been fighting for the 40-hour week for the last few weeks is going forward towards victory. A meeting will be held today, 2 p. m., at Beethoven Hall, East Fifth St., where the latest developments will come up.

Conferences are being held between the union and the contractors' association while several unofficial talks have also been held. It is believed that it will not be long before the bosses give in to the workers' demands.

A settlement is in prospect because more than 1,300 workers have already obtained the 40-hour week in this city as well as elsewhere and it is not possible for the small group of about 60 bosses to fight for any length of time under those conditions.

Zukor Defies Federal Mandate to Quit Anti-Trust Law Violations

Adolph Zukor, president of the Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation, issued a statement this afternoon commenting upon the recent federal trade commission order in which the commission instructed the company to discontinue an alleged conspiracy between the Famous Players and others in violation of the anti-trust laws.

"The commission's order, if sustained by the courts, will have to be dealt with by the entire industry," said Zukor. "And therefore no change in our existing policies is contemplated at present."

Zukor said he was glad to find that the commission's investigation, began in 1921, reveals that the only existing business practice to which the order applies is that of "block booking." The block booking sales method, Zukor asserted, "is peculiar to the industry."

SPIES' FORGERIES USED AGAINST U.S. S.R. RECOGNITION

Fake Evidence to Senate Against Soviet Union

MOSCOW, July 12.—The spy accused of having forged documents used by the state department of the United States against the demand for recognition of the Soviet Union was today sentenced to death on charges of espionage and forgery of alleged state documents. The doomed culprit is Sergius Drujelovsky, who confessed after exposure to a whole series of forgeries against the Soviet Union on behalf of various imperialist governments.

Used Against Senator Borah.

At a time when the Idaho senator, William E. Borah, had forced the Coolidge administration into a position where it had no arguments against the recognition of the Soviet government, the state department order Kellogg produced forged documents concocted by this same Drujelovsky purporting to show that the Soviet Union was conducting Communist propaganda in the United States.

The prisoner was also guilty of foreknowledge and complicity in the Sofia bomb explosion in a cathedral, having forged a document a month before as a part of the plot, which forgery was used to exile and murder a large number of Bulgarian communists who were entirely innocent of the outrage.

Spy a Weak Character.

The defense attorney, while pleading guilty for the spy, tried to plead extenuating circumstances on the ground that Drujelovsky was a weak character who could be persuaded to engage in such low practices, without knowing the effect of his deeds, and their definite counter-revolutionary purpose. This plea was ignored by the court which declared that the spy was fully aware of his crimes

Silent On Accusations.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Inquiry at the state department regarding the revelations in Moscow of the spy, Drujelovsky, failed to evoke any response. None of those at the offices would talk for publication on the matter and one of the staff resented questions implying that Kellogg had used forged documents in his attack upon the members of the senate preparing for recognition of the Soviet Union.

NEGROES HERDED BACK TO SLAVERY IN FLOOD REGION

Waters Ruin Their Crop and Increase Debts

OPELOUSAS, La., July 12.—Utter incompetence in the handling of the relief for the most serious natural disaster that has ever overtaken the United States, plain failure to do anything to save the farmers standing on levees and looking out over their ruined crops and houses rotting away in the waters still spread over the southern Mississippi valley, is the opinion about the United States government of all in the flooded region.

Hoover's Interest in Credit.

Herbert Hoover came down with a great flourish of trumpets, and journeyed about the flood waters on a government launch, promising much. But once he had perfected his machinery for controlling the credit of the government and that based on private funds, he lost interest in the people of

TRY TO IMPLICATE MARTELLO AND NUOVO MONDO STAFFS IN MURDER

Fascist Detectives, Federal Agents Unite to Build Up New Sacco Case, but Fail

After subjecting fourteen anti-fascist workers to the third degree, Italian secret service agents working in conjunction with United States department of justice operatives, yesterday failed to implicate those arrested with the murder of two fascists who were killed in a street brawl on Memorial Day.

The workers arrested were C. Cancellero, Luigi Quintiliano, M. Buzzi, Antonio Alela, Joseph Alteri, Mario Tresca and several others. Mario Tresca is the brother of Carlo Tresca, world famous writer and anti-fascist.

Arrested D'Armico.

At the Il Martello offices, failing to find V. Vacirca, the editor, they arrested a clerk, L. D'Armico and continued the raids.

Later the agents went to Brooklyn where they arrested Donato Carrillo and Cologero Greco, who are being held as material witnesses in the alleged murder of two fascist "squadristas" supposed to have been killed by anti-fascists on Memorial Day.

"Planted" Weapons.

Employing the usual "planting" tactics, the police claim to have found two revolvers and four dirks on the Il Martello offices.

Those framed with the "violation" of the Sullivan law are Mario Tresca, editor of Il Martello and Luigi Quintiliano, a secretary.

The employment of department of justice agents in a local unsolved "murder mystery" has all the earmarks of the creation of another Sacco-Vanzetti frame-up. Several evening papers yesterday carried scare headlines to the effect the government is instituting another series of "red round-ups."

Like Red Raids.

Monday's raids are reminiscent of the Palmer and Burleson raids in 1919 when Salsedo, the anarchist, was taken for "questioning" to federal headquarters in the New York post office building and was later found dead on the sidewalk below.

The U. S. secret service agents admitted that they were working in conjunction with the Mussolini agents under orders of the Italian Ambassador in Washington, Giacomo De Martino. They said that the raids were part of an international plan to wipe out all opposition to the Mussolini dictatorship.

Instead of being taken to the Tremont avenue police station it the precinct where the fascists were killed, those seized in the raids were taken to the Highbridge station, which is in an out of the way section of the city.

Third Degree.

Of the fourteen arrested, seven were afterwards released and the other seven held as "material witnesses," who were subjected to third degree torture.

WOULD IMPEACH JACKSON UPON KLAN EVIDENCE

Dragon's Confession to Be Published Serially

INDIANAPOLIS, July 12.—Impeachment of Governor Ed Jackson through a special session of the state legislature it was learned today is the object of a group headed by Boyd Gurley, Indianapolis editor, and Thomas H. Adams, Vincennes publisher, who started the present political probe, it was learned today.

This group has obtained possession of thirty-two documents bearing upon the reported connection between Governor Jackson and other political notables and D. C. Stephenson, former political czar of Indiana, now serving a life sentence in the state prison for the murder of Madge Oberholtzer of Indianapolis.

Will Publish.

Day by day the alleged documents will be published, with a view of so arousing public opinion that the members of the legislature will demand they be called in special session.

The spotlight in the political probe has shifted from William H. Remy, Marion County prosecuting attorney, and his aides, to this group. There is no indication that the Gurley-Adams forces will yield their alleged evidence to the prosecutorsu.

Force Remy's Hand.

"There is no connection between this office and whatever investigation Mr. Gurley is conducting," Remy said.

Remy would not say whether he would take steps to obtain the 32 documents, which Lloyd O. Hill, Stephenson's attorney, said are in possession of Gurley.

Asked whether a court order would be necessary to garner this data, Remy replied that it might be obtained on a subpoena of duces tecum, but would not say whether he would use such a legal weapon.

Klan Launches Fight on Al Smith

Acquit Slayers of Beatrice Meaney in Trial for Larceny

FLEMINGTON, N. J., July 12.—Four New Jersey state troopers charged with having robbed Timothy Meaney of $2,675 in cash after their attack on the Meaney farm-house and the murder of Beatrice Meaney were acquitted late yesterday afternoon.

The jury had been out 23 hours and 43 minutes when the verdict was pronounced.

The accused, Lieutenant Daniel F. Rogers, Sergeant Thomas Cunningham, Corporal Matthew Daly and Trooper Joseph A. Cox, were in the courtroom when the verdict was given. There was no demonstration by the handful of spectators.

Timothy Meaney testified during the trial that after he was searched by the troopers, when the siege was lifted, he discovered the money had been taken from a coat hanging on the door of his farmhouse.

During the siege Miss Beatrice Meaney, sister of Tim, was fatally wounded by members of the state police, several of whom were convicted of manslaughter recently.

Adjourn "Boston Bill" Trial.

MINEOLA, N. Y., July 12.—The Nassau County Grand Jury adjourned this afternoon until Friday after hearing testimony against "Boston Billy" Williams, alleged companion of Arthur Barry, confessed burglar in the robbery of several wealthy families in Westchester and Nassau Counties.

South Africa to Fly Union Jack With Own Flag as Empire Link

General Herzog, South African Premier, who came back from the Imperialist Conference shorn of all his thunder and meekly subservient to the British Empire, is taking it out on the Union Jack.

In the debate on the flag bill he thundered against the small British section which, he said, insisted that South Africa must be dominated by the Union Jack. But said Herzog, South Africa was as free as Great Britain, and was as free to have a national flag. The Bill would go through, he stated, in spite of General Smuts and his few die-hards.

The proposal of the Labor Party that the Union Jack be flown with the national flag "as a link with the Empire" is an interesting commentary on the unclass-conscious character of this body. The proposal was carried.

Arrest 30,000 in Year For Breaking Booze Law

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Despite the fact that the hip-pocket toters and home brewers virtually were unmolested by the Federal Government, prohibition arrests in the year ending June 30th, reached a new high record of nearly 30,000. It was announced today.

Federal agents arrested 20,000 more persons than the year before. A majority of those apprehended were accused of major violations of the law, including conspiracies against the government, smuggling and big bootlegging operations.

Several international smuggling and bootlegging rings were put out of commission and their leaders sentenced to jail. Reports at the close of the year, however, indicated that many big bootlegging corporations are still in existance. Administrators here for a week's conference, have been informed that serious problems confront the enforcement machine in the next year.

More than 2,500,000 gallons of whiskey, wine, cider and malts were seized by the federal authorities, a considerable decrease over the year before, although captures of boats and automobiles were heavier.

A survey of enforcement showed that the average fine for persons convicted in the federal courts was $150 and the average jail sentence 140 days. A majority of those arrested were convicted. The best record for the percentage of convictions was made in the Chicago and Montana districts.

Needle Trade Defense

Have You Made Your Appointment?

Have you made your arrangements for Saturday evening? If not, act immediately. Get your crowd together for the great open air concert, under the wide canopy of the heavens, with the stars shining down.

Those with experience know quite well the extra pleasure to be derived from group campanionship at such an affair. Buy your tickets at once, otherwise you may fail to get seats together with your friends. Tickets are $1 for general admission and $2 for reserved seats. In case of rain the concert will be held the following night Sunday July 17th.

Workers Club Buys 400 Tickets.

The members of the Coney Island Club know what a treat it is to be at an open air concert in the Coney Island Stadium. They also know that thousands and thousands of persons will be there and it will be difficult to obtain tickets at the last moment. The Club therefore, obtained 400 tickets from the Defense Office in order to assure their members and friends of seats. This is a very wise move—first, because it guarantees a seat to each member of the Club, and secondly, the Clubs helps to dispose of hundreds of tickets.

It is not to late to follow the example of the Coney Island Workers Club if you act quick.

The Executive of the Coney Island Workers Club also decided to donate $200 to the Joint Defense Committee. Although their treasury is empty they decided to borrow the money, give it as a donation to the defense and pay it back in weekly installments. At a meeting called to discuss this decision the members enthusiastically approved and decided to raise the money at once. $185 was realized. The members who were not at the meeting will also be visited and instead of the $200 pledged they will try to make it $300.

$50 At Graduation Party.

An appeal for the Defense at a graduation party in the house of Brother Rensin in honor of his niece, brought a collection of $50. M. Hein forwarded $5 to the Defense.

More Vacation Money.

A check for $106.25 was received at the Defense Office with the following letter:

"Dear Comrades:—We are in the mountains on our vacation, but have not forgotten that you remained in New York to continue the heroic struggle against the betrayers. We feel that your struggle is our struggle and while we cannot be with you on the picket line, we send this contribution as a symbol of solidarity.

We take this opportunity to extend our heartiest thanks to all those who contributed, and to the management of "The House of Joy" for their kind cooperation in helping to make the collection. Fraternally, M. Greenstein, Kaufman, S. Pecker, Gladstein and Rothenberg."

There are many other class conscious workers who are at present on vacation and they must not forget the brave struggle that our brothers are waging. Make collections in your hotel or camp and forward it immediately to the Defense Office.

Rock Island, Ill.

Twenty-eight dollars with the following letter from a sympathizers of Rock Island, Ill. was received at the Defense Office. "Heartiest greetings to you brother Furriers! Although we are not connected with you on the economic field we are in the fullest sympathy with you. Your fight is justified and you must win. The Truth is on your side, therefore your victory is assured."

This is another example which shows that the fighting furriers are not alone in their struggle. Mrs. Lena Weinrib and Mrs. Moskowitz were active in raising the $28.00.

Carpenters and electricians who have any leisure time are asked to come into the Defense Office immediately. If you are the lucky possessor of an automobile you can be of great help to the Defense this week.

Expert Negro-Baiter Loses Treasury Job; Replaced by New Job

WASHINGTON, (FP) July 12.—Rejoicing of District of Columbia Negroes over the forced resignation of Harley V. Speelman, registrar of the treasury, has been tempered by the appointment of another Republican white politician to take his place. Speelman was appointed to his executive position over employes of the treasury department by President Harding and ever since has been a source of embarrassment to Coolidge by his enthusiasm for segregating white and colored workers.

His first act was to shift colored workers to the top floor of the treasury building where he put them from the whites with a board. Even the elevator service was arranged so there would be no contact between the races, the colored clerks reporting and leaving 15 minutes earlier than the whites. Segregation reached its apex when Speelman unveiled a "jim crow" and a white memorial tablet for department employes who had lost their lives in the world war. White workers joined the protest, leading to the destruction of both tablets and the erection of a single bronze plate. In the following Coolidge Economy, Speelman invariably fired more Negroes than whites until the department's colored proportion sank to the lowest level in a half century.

Appointment of Walter Wood of Kansas, a Republican white politician, brings little satisfaction. Under all previous administrations, the position of registrar of the treasury has been filled with Negroes as one of the few political plums awarded them for faithfulness to the Republican party.

Cuban Government Stages Red Raids to Prevent Strikes

HAVANA, July 12.—The Cuban government, in response to demands of the American sugar, tobacco and other trusts having interests has begun an offensive against the labor movement by wholesale arrests of Communists. The slave drivers fear that the sugar cane crop will be endangered unless the demands of the workers are met and so the government pretends to have "discovered" a plot against itself.

Fifty-seven Communists are under arrest in Camaguri and Regla and some 100 or more have been arrested and held "incommunicado in Havana.

No specific charges have been filed against the prisoners, as Cuban law permits the holding of prisoners on open charges for a period of seventy-two hours. Meanwhile the house and headquarters of Communists are being burglarized by the police who are stealing tons of literature and fixtures.

Civil Wage Increase Carried in Committee Over Poincare's Will

PARIS, July 11.—The Poincare Government suffered two defeats today in the Finance Committee of the Chamber on the question of an increase in pay for Government employees. An amendment to increase the original proposal for an expenditure of 600,000,000 francs to 900,000,000 francs was carried by a vote of 14 to 8 over the bitter opposition of the Premier.

A provision that the 1928 budget surplus be applied to this sum was opposed by M. Poincare with equal fervor, but he was again defeated. It is expected that the open discussion in the Chamber on Wednesday will be the setting for a severe struggle on this question. There was more than a covert warning in the Premier's statement to the Committee that continued opposition to his policy in this matter would result in his leaving "to others the responsibility of destroying the budget equilibrium."

KELLOGG AGAIN ATTACKS CALLES FOR OIL TAXES

Two More Secret Notes Sent to Mexico

WASHINGTON, July 12.—The fourth message from the Kellogg behind the Coolidge-Wall Street administration in Washington has been dispatched in secrecy to Washington. This fact became known today when the State Department began to bustle, and arose simultaneously underground rumors to this effect and open declarations that the department had "nothing to say."

The rumors, evidently well authenticated, are to the effect that the note is really two notes, one of which accuses the Mexican authorities of not already hanging somebody for the death in a bandit raid of Arthur Brewer, an American capitalist in Guadalajara a short time ago, and the other criticising the Calles administration for withholding a drilling permit from an American oil company which permitted its rights to lapse as a protest against paying the tax demanded.

The case of the Transcontinental Oil Co., about which it is supposed the state department at Washington has written to the Mexican government has been under consideration by the Mexican Minister of Commerce, Industry and Labor, Louis N. Morones for some time.

Sheffield Criticized.

MEXICO CITY, July 12.—The newspaper "El Universal Grafico" not a pro-Calles organ, sharply condemns the resigning American minister Sheffield for his conduct of his office here, for the insulting tone of his communications with the Mexican government and for his open association with aristocratic elements hostile to and at times in open armed rebellion against the Calles administration. It also criticises the administration for not being socially friendly with the staff of the American ministry.

American Firm to Survey Coal Basin For Soviet Union

Technical surveys of the Donetz coal basin, in Soviet Russia, are to be made by an American engineering firm preliminary to the spending of about $20,000,000 by the Donugol Coal Trust. The trust is the Russian state enterprise developing the property.

"Throughout the U.S.S.R. there is a great admiration over our rapid industrial and technical progress," states Charles E. Stuart of Stuart, James & Cooke Inc., the American engineering firm. Stuart has been negotiating in Russia. Much of the equipment for the coal development will be purchased in the United States, Stuart says.

Stuart expresses his surprised at stories published in the United States on alleged disorders and uprisings in that country. "Aside from patriotic parades of citizens, life there was normal and orderly to all appearances," he says.

Amtorg Trading Corp. is the American purchasing representative for Donugol Coal Trust. Amtorg's office is in New York City.

German Press Demands Rhineland Evacuation

BERLIN, July 12. — Immediate evacuation of the Rhineland by French and Allied troops is urged by the German Press in fulfillment of promises made to Germany at the time of signing the Locarno Treaty, nearly two years ago. The occasion for reiteration of this request is provided by the announcement that Germany has fulfilled the demand of the allies that she destroy her eastern fortifications, and has passed the "war material" law required by them.

The "Berliner Tageblatt" points out that all peace treaty conditions have now been carried out, and the evacuation of the Rhineland must now take place as a matter of right, and that any evasion or refusal will constitute a breach of contract on the part of the allies.

The Press in general takes the position that, having fulfilled her obligations, Germany has the right to demand that the allies look to the fulfillment of theirs.

Survey Wages, Hours of Machine Shop Workers

WASHINGTON, (FP) July 12.—Unions in the machine trade hope to gather valuable information for their organization work from the scheduled survey of wages and hours in foundries and machine shops, to be undertaken by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The survey will be completed by the end of the year after taking samples of statistics in shops employing 125,000 workers. The principal states to be covered are Illinois, Massachusetts, Michigan, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Who Am I?

One of the main attractions on the excursion will be the great "Who I Am" contest. All the "I am's" will be there, we hope. Lake Michigan is deep and wide.

The Doubting Thomas.

Sam Hammermark had the toughest job in his long public career trying to sell a ticket to Paul Simonson, who did not remember having ever heard of Michigan City until he was informed that several wrestling exhibitions were given there. Paul would just as soon fight as sneeze.

Bathing Suits in Heavy Demands for Big Chi. Excursion

CHICAGO, July 12.—Excursionists to Michigan City, Indiana, on Sunday, July 17 are urged to buy their tickets in advance, on pain of getting a shocking in Lake Michigan.

This is the threat voiced by Sam Hammermark who is charged by the Workers (Communist) Party with engineering the excursion which is expected to bring considerable shekels into The DAILY WORKER treasury.

The excursion will leave Goodrich Docks, Municipal Pier at 9.30 a. m. sharp and will return at 7 p. m. This is one of the most popular outdoor sports in the Windy City. On the most sweltering dog-days, cool breezes fan the waters of Lake Michigan and music will charm the savage breasts of the most serious comrade. There will be dancing, singing and impromptu entertainment. As far as that is concerned nobody need worry about fun. Where there are hundreds gathered together in the name of Pan the other equally popular gods of ancient vintage there should be no dearth of hilarity.

Strangers Will Be In Town.

A contingent from Los Angeles passing thru the city on their way to New York were induced to stop over for the excursion. The Chicago is not a provincial, one-horse town by any means, the natives are always glad to entertain outsiders.

Another attraction is free bathing, but the daring are warned that they must bring their own bathing suits, otherwise they can only have a dip over Hammersmark's dead body.

"In conclusion," said Sam to the representative of The DAILY WORKER, "make it as emphatic as possible that tickets must be paid for in advance and bought in advance, otherwise my name may be added to the list of those who have laid down their lives in behalf of great causes."

Three German Fliers To Rival French Ace In Trans-Atlantic Hop

BERLIN, July 12.—The reported imminent flight of the American war profiteer Chas. A. Levine from Europe to America under the pilotage of the French ace, Drouhin, has excited similar plans among the Germans.

Herr Udet, also a war ace, tho on the German side, has been stirred to rivalry, and wants to try the stunt in a Rohrbach multi-motored plane. Koennlek, also a war flier, is willing to try in a Rohrbach plane. Professor Junkers of the Junker Corporation will give a single motored plane from his factory to Schnebele, a German flyer of experience in the Asiatic flight lost year for an Atlantic hop.

Freight Train Derailed.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., July 12.—Officials of the New Jersey Central Railroad here reported that a freight train was derailed about thirty miles from Wilkesbarre, Pa., today blocking the tracks and holding up traffic west.

The road officials expressed the belief that no one was injured in the derailment, and said that wrecking crews were clearing the tracks. Resumption of service over the tracks where the accident occurred was expected soon.

FORD KNEW ABOUT ATTACKS ON JEWS SAYS EX-EDITOR

Cut in Sales Caused Ford Conversion

Despite his denials, Henry Ford not only knew about the articles containing vicious attacks on the Jews, but actually ordered them. This is the evidence submitted by E. G. Pipp, a former editor of the Dearborn Independent, which will appear in the American Hebrew next Friday.

Aspiring to the presidency and hoping to gain votes in backward communities, Ford had the articles published, Pipp says. "When Ford first launched the attacks on the Jews," he declares, "he was a candidate for the presidency of the United States—firmly so in his own mind. He figured that the prejudice in small communities thruout the United States was so strong against the Jews that he would gain three, four or five votes for every Jewish vote he would lose."

Ford's sudden reversal of his position is ascribed to the rapid inroads made in his sales by the General Motors, which is engaging in a titanic struggle with the Ford Company for control of the automobile market. The recent decline in Ford's production has led to sudden benevolence toward the Jews, it is stated.

Boston Street Car Men Win Six-Day Week But Suffer Big Pay Slash

BOSTON, (FP) July 12.—Winning a 6-day week for the first time, 4000 union Boston street car men have taken with it a wage cut. Hourly rates have been increased 2½ an hour, but the higher rate leaves weekly pay about $5.16 short of former earnings.

Motormen and conductors, one-man car operators and bus drivers and 100 miscellaneous employes are affected by the new agreement. The basic rate for motormen and conductors is 75 cents an hour with the increase. This is the second consecutive year the Amalgamated Association of Street & Electric Railway Employes has dealt directly with the Boston Elevated Co., instead of resorting to arbitration as previously.

Hunt Murderers of 8 In Chicago Booze Feud

CHICAGO, July 12.—Heavily armed detectives tramped the streets of "Little Italy" today in an effort to halt the feud that has resulted in the death of eight Italians within the last twelve days.

The heavy police guard was thrown into the district last night after the latest victims, Vincenzi Biandina and Caspar Alagna, had been shot to death, the men were neighbors and friends.

Police believe all eight recent slayings can be tracked back to the Venetta which originated when the Genna gang of alcohol peddlars was in its prime.

3 Die In English Storms.

LONDON, July 12.—Only three deaths have been reported as the result of the terrific rain and thunderstorms that have visited Lancashire and other sections of England last night.

Thirty families were driven from their homes when the Mossheaul Reservoir broke after four hours of steady rain. Rescue work was carried out under the greatest difficulty.

The London-Ineth cable service has been disrupted by severe storms in the Black Sea.

[ARRESTED] FOR DEATH OF [IRISH MINISTER]

New York Priest Says Ireland Is Lucky

DUBLIN, July 12.—The Free State police have arrested nine men in connection with those involved in the execution of Kevin O'Higgins vice-president of the executive council of the Irish Free State and minister of home affairs and minister of justice. O'Higgins met his death last Sunday while walking in the vicinity of his home.

Among those who condemned the execution of the man who was directly responsible for the shooting of 77 Republicans who Eamonn De Valera, head of the Fianna Fail faction of the Republicans.

George and Kellogg Condole.

King George of England and Frank B. Kellogg, secretary of state for the United States sent condolences to Cosgrave and to the O'Higgins family.

A new side light on the ferocity of the dead man's character was shown when it was revealed that Rory O'Connor the man he sentenced to be shot by a firing squad for opposing the treaty with the British empire left his entire fortune to his executioner.

While none are ready to openly express jubilation over the dead of the "Irish Mussolini" there is general relief that he is at peace with the world. The people were fearful that this maniac would suddenly let loose his murder squad and take another blood bath.

Commenting on the execution of O'Higgins, the Rev. John H. Dooley, pastor of the Church of Corpus Christi, at 535 West 121st Street, felt it to be his spiritual duty to hope that the soul of the dead man would not suffer for the sins of its owner and went on:

"But at the same time we must feel that it is to Ireland's benefit that he has gone. The christians in Rome must have felt a relief at the death of Nero, and this is an incident that brings the same feeling. The recent elections caused the fear, no doubt, that O'Higgins would be placed in charge of work similar to that done by our Attorney General in this country, and his power was feared. "This man, who is held responsible for the killing of fifty or sixty young men who dared to defy his power, was held to be nothing less than a Nero and, no doubt, the feeling ran rife that Ireland was in for a reign of terror. He was known as a merciless person; hundreds of persons have fled for their very lives, to this country because of the fear with which they held O'Higgins. I do not think there will be any political effect, but I do think that sheer fear caused this group to determine to kill him as the only means of safety."

U.S.S.R. Agent Jumps Bail; Difficult to Be First Woman Consul

MOSCOW, July 12.—Anna Bertrova Goldfarb, age 32, has the honor of being the first woman consul in the Soviet Union, and in the world. Miss Goldfarb was appointed as temporary consul during a recent visit to Moscow of her uncle and chief, Ludwig Martens, and Wednesday, assuming the full responsibilities of the position.

The U.S.S.R. now enters taboo first place in the matter of women to function in places of honor and responsibility on an equal footing with men, having set the precedent in the appointment of the first woman Ambassador, Mme. Kollontai, first appointed to Norway and then to Mexico.

Miss Goldfarb has been Press Secretary at the London Embassy for the past two years. She has also had five years training in the Soviet Foreign Office and three as personal secretary to Theodor Rothstein, Director of the Press Department.

Hate Campaign of 'Daily Mail' Booms Sale of Soviet Oil

LONDON, June 26 (By Mail).—The campaign of Lord Rothermere and his reactionary "Daily Mail" against the sale of Soviet oil in England, has proved a boomarang. Not only have the sales shown no falling off, but, on the contrary, the Russian Oil Products Company announces that the 31.3 million gallons of Soviet oil imported for the six months ending April, 1926, has grown to 62.5 million gallons for the six months ending April, 1927.

The "No Soviet Petrol Sold Here" campaign has defeated its own end in bringing the Soviet product to the attention of thousands of new consumers. "The present flood of publicity would cost tens of thousands of pounds if we had to buy it," said a representative of the R. O. P. "Without doubt, a continuation of the 'Daily Mail' campaign will cause the rate of increase to be more that maintained in the future."

Lord Bearstead, Chairman of the Shell Transport Company, which has retailed in the neighborhood of 500,000 tons of Soviet oil in Britain since 1921, at 2 shillings a gallon, now speaks of it as "stolen" oil. Ha is not the only oil profiteer who is discomfited by the fact that the Russian Oil Products Company has succeeded in bringing retail prices down from 2s. a gallon to the present price of 1s. to 1s.3d a gallon.

Negroes Herded Back to Slave In Flood Region

the flood. When their land dries out, Hoover's string of "credit corporation" agents will see that the farmers pay thru the nose for every cent they borrow to rehabilitate their fortunes, and that is all there is to that.

Certain southern senators have shouted for an extra session of Congress to donate money to the flooded regions, but even these have grown quieter lately—the farmers observe that many of them are now connected with Hoover's "credit corporations" and become cynical over the prospects of Congress doing anything that will hurt business for the money lenders.

Poor Suffer Most.

The blow is heavy on the great plantation owners, but these at least can take a mortgage on their property and plant and rebuild. The blow is crushing to the tenant farmers, most of them Negroes, who have seen their crops wiped out, who have nothing to pledge for seed or farm stock, who find the planters chalking up their debt higher and higher, and sinking them deeper into the mire of peonage because of the disaster.

Negros Suffer Most.

These Negro tenants have a woeful tale to tell. When the flood came down upon them, they were saved last. The white landlords and their kind, the white business men of the towns in many cases saved their live stock before they saved the colored worker's wife and child. In the refugee camps, the whites had whatever comforts there were. The plantation owners hunted down "their" Negro tenants and sequestrated them. If any tried to escape, they were pursued with all the powers of the law, and haled back to their levee prisons, where many still abide, fretting, sick, starving, hopeless, and forever unable to escape the pressure of the debts that the flood has added to, and which in the South, despite laws and constitutions, mean slavery for the Negro farmer.

News from the U.S.S.R.

Construction of a New Line of Electric-Transmission From the Volkhovstrel Hydro Station.

In Leningrad the new air line of the Volkhov electric-transmission has been begun.

This new line is being constructed to relieve the main Northern substation and to be able to supply Leningrad uninterruptedly with electricity from the Volkhov station should there be any accident to the cable.

In this manner it will be possible to electrify completely all works of the Moscow-Narva district, the "Krasnopi Putilovets," "Krasnyi Treugolnik" and others. Moreover, by instituting a branch line for electric-transmission at the Saperanya station the complete electrification of the Izhora works will be possible.

All the orders for the electric-transmission line and for the Southern sub-station are placed with Soviet works (Sevcable, Izhora works "Marty" works). The plant for the Southern sub-station will be made by the GET, (State Electrical Trust).

The construction of the new electric-transmission line will cost 1,700,000 roubles.

The First Electric Combine.

In connection with the construction of the Maritz district electric station in Kursk, interesting work is being done in order to create a model electric-combine, the first of its kind in the U.S.S.R. This work is on the following lines:

It is impossible to utilize in the "Karl Liebknecht" sugar refinery the steam used in the process of sugar boiling much more effectively than has been hitherto the case. With the help of the turbine-generator it is possible to convert a considerable part of the heat energy into electricity. This will provide the Maritz electric-station with cheap energy (at 3 kopeks per kilowat—hour whereas its own energy costs 7.5 kopeks). This question has already been decided at headquarters and 1,550,000 rubles have been assigned to organize the combine.

Moreover, through the organization of the electric combine it will be possible to electrify 41,000 peasant farms. The Central Agrarian Bank has already granted 440,000 rubles for this purpose. Power will be obtainable from the electric combine next autumn.

Growth of Oil Production.

At the end of the last half year 414 oil springs were exploited as compared with 400 at the beginning of the year; 1,429,303 tons of oil were produced in 6 months—103.9% of the half year's or 50.3% of the full year's programme. 1,314,604 tons of oil have been refined—98.2% of the programme. In connection with boring operations 92% of the programme has been carried out as to area and 94.5% as to rapadity of operations. The year's programme will be carried out to the full. The sale of Naphta-products is increasing; during the last half year 235,000 tons were sold compared with 226,000 tons during the whole of the preceding year.

Work in connection with the construction of the Grozny-Tuapse oil circuit is in full swing. In the current year 9,856,000 rubles is being spent for its construction. An initial instalment of 6 million roubles has been assigned for the construction of oil works in Tuapse. Preparatory work has started on the Black Sea coast for the construction of an oil distilling battery, cracking plant, an electric-station and a settlement with 150 dwellings.

Oil By-Products.

Preparations are made in Grozny to open paraffin works capable of producing 30,000 poods of paraffin, one million poods of asphalt tar and 1,400,000 poods of distilled machine oil annually. A cracking plant producing 1,250,000 poods of benzine will soon be opened. Mechanization and rationalization of production have resulted in economizing millions of roubles per year. In May the construction of an electric station has begun, which, when it is finished, will provide electricity for the entire Grozneft enterprise.

The number of permanent workers during the half year has increased to 14,174, an increase of 4.2%. Five hundred and twenty-two Chechental (a native tribe) have been drawn into the process of production.

Big building operations are being carried on for the erection of dwellings to accommodate over 1,000 people.

The orders placed with the British firm of Vickers for plant for the new works and industry to the amount of four and one half million roubles, will probably be transferred to America and other countries. However, delivery of Naptha products to Great Britain on the strength of previous contracts continues and will be continued.

Coal in the Donetz Basin.

In the Don coal-mines 93,200,000 poods (pood equals 36 lbs. avoirdupond) of coal and anthracite were produced in May, an increase of 6 million poods compared with the April production. Average daily production in May amounted to 3,700,000 poods against 3,600,000 poods in April.

Five Years Plan of the Development of the Moscow Industry.

The above plan provides for an expenditure of 300,000,000 rubles for reconstruction and new construction.

It is proposed to spend 100,000,000 rubles for the construction of new factories and works, 164,000,000 rubles for the reconstruction of enterprises, 42,000,000 rubles for office repairs, etc.

The plan provides for the construction of 41 enterprises in the course of 5 years.

In the textile industry it is proposed to build up during the next three years, three weaving mills for 3,700 looms, several spinning mills with altogether 376,000 spindles, 2 wool spinning mills for 14,000 spindles and one wool cleaning mill for 47,000 spindles.

In the metal industry it is proposed to build works for the manufacture of textile machinery which will require 2,050 workers, and cost 7,000,000 rubles. a tool factory for 618 workers, which will cost 3,600 rubles, an electrical appliances factory for 550 workers, a bicycle factory for 235 workers and a works for the production of equipment for transport within factories, to employ 750 workers.

In the basic chemical industry it is proposed to build one oxygen works to employ 100 workers and 1 superphosphate works for 150 workers.

In regard to the chemical fat industry, it is proposed to build 6 works: soap boiling, margarine, hydrogenisation works, a scent factory, one glue factory, and finally, a heat-power station for new soap-boiling and bone-dressing works.

New Factories in the Dnieprstroi District.

The presidium of the Supreme Economic Council of the U. S. S. R. decided to provide for the planning of some factories to be built in the Dnieprstroi district. The administration of the Dnieprstroi will have to submit a detailed plan by January 1st, 1928, on the economic possibilities of the Dnieprstroi as a whole.

The presidium of the Economic Council also approved of the decision of the administration of the Dnieprstroi that a sluice be constructed to permit river navigation, and the plan to build two-storied railway bridges each with double tracks. The administration of the Dnieprstroi was instructed to work out the problem of constructing two dams and hydro stations in the lower Dnieprand to establish a sea route from the above the Dnieprstroi.

It has been decided to set up in connection with the Industrial Economic Management of the Supreme Economic Council of the U. S. S. R. a special commission to deal with the problem of the Dnieprstroi as a combine, including all questions connected with this problem in the five years plan of industrial development. To this work the workers of the Dnieprstroi are to be drawn in. The plan of industrial development based on energy from the Dnieprstroi will have to be so fixed that the newly-built factories should be ready to start when the Dnieprstation will begin to supply power.

Italian Protestants Face New Inquisition In Catholic Crusade

ROME, July 12.—A new crusade against the Protestants of Italy has been started by the Union of Catholic Men of Genoa. "Osservatore Romano," the Vatican organ, publishes a document today wherein a demand is made for the suppression of all Protestant newspapers, clubs and schools, and calls on the government to wage war "against the numerous Protestant propagandists paid by foreigners." The Government is especially urged to investigate the activities of the Young Men's Christian Association.

The Protestants are accused of spreading "heresy" among the Italian people, sowing religious dissension and disrupting the Italian Catholic tradition.

Under the Italian constitution, religious liberty is guaranteed, and it is feared that if the crusade becomes sufficiently powerful, it may involve an amendment to the constitution and usher in a new Inquisition.

Thousand Die as China Flood Sweeps Villages

SHANGHAI, July 12.—More than one thousand persons have been drowned and extensive losses of property, crops and cattle have been occasioned by floods in the King Hsien and Hsiang Shan districts, following the breaking of Dykes in South Anhwei, according to reports received here from Wu Hu.

Waters ten feet deep are reported devastating villages along the river.

Tag Day Fixed to Aid Soldiers Wounded in Fight for Free China

In response to the cahled appeal of Mme. Dr. Sun Yat Sen, the International Workers Aid, local Chicago, will conduct a collection day on July 23rd.

The funds raised will be used to purchase bandages and other medical needs for the revolutionary Chinese wounded soldiers who because of lack of these supplies are undergoing unspeakable suffering and hardships. In some instances hundreds have died in agony, who would have been saved from a torturous death if sufficient bandages, disinfectants and other medical requirements were plentiful.

All those in sympathy with the Chinese Revolutionary movement are urged to volunteer their services on Saturday, July 23rd, so that a substantial sum may be raised for the Chinese Revolutionary soldiers. All those desiring to help are urged to report to one of the stations listed below.

International Workers' Aid, 1533 W. Madison Street, Room 303; 19 S. Lincoln Street; Roymat Ludu, 1510 W. 18th Street; Freiheit, 3209 Roosevelt Road; Ukranian Hall, 1532 W. Chicago Ave.; Vilnus, 3116 S. Halsted Street; Book Store, 1806 S. Racine; Russian School, 1902 W. Division St., 2400 N. Halsted Ave.

If you cannot give the entire day a few hours will be appreciated.

[MEXICAN WORKERS FOR LABOR BETRAYAL]

Moscow Daily Exposes IFTU Bankruptcy

MOSCOW, July 11.—Referring to the report of Jouhaux and the American International for the last three years, Trud, the organ of the All Central Council of Trade Unions points out that the "leaders" are unable to record any substantial achievements.

The deficit in the balance of the labour, Trud says, illustrates the political impotence of the International Federation of Trade Unions.

Outdegeest Fights Labor Unity.

Referring to the declarations of the Red International of Labor Unions and the Amsterdam International, Oudegeest in his report advances the following arguments against negotiations: That verbal negotiations are impossible as long as preliminary common views are not formulated in writing. (This argument Trud remarks is especially convincing on the part of reformists who are striving by all means for unconditional agreements).

Secondly, Oudegeest says, the differences between the Amsterdam International and the Red International of Labor Union are so profound that they cannot easily be reconciled.

In reference to this Trud remarks that despite Oudegeest's denial, he had actually stated that the Amsterdam's only principle contains in the full freedom of national organizations affiliated with it. Amsterdam easily overlooks open strike breaking activities on the part of its members and remembers the purity of its principles only in regard to revolutionary trade unions, Trud says.

Executive Committee Hypocrisy.

In the third place Oudegeest warns that the Amsterdam International will not be able to undertake any serious steps without first receiving the sanction of the next congress. This admonition was written in September, 1924 while the next congress is due to meet in August 1927.

Oudegeest makes the following charges against the All Union Central Council of Trade Union: In issuing the manifesto to world workers on June 7, 1926 the U. C. C. T. of U. criticized the General Council of British Trade Unions, which in Oudegeest's words, irritated Arthur Pugh, chairman of the congress.

"The third charge and the one which best illustrates the corruption of the leaders of the Amsterdam International refers to the relief sent by the workers of the Soviet Union to the striking miners of Britain and shamelessly tries to convince the trade union movement that millions of roubles were given to the miners 'for the sole purpose of propaganda'," says Trud.

The workers of the Soviet Union helped their British brothers because they considered the struggle internationally important; a victory for the miners of Great Britain would have been a victory for the workers of the world.

"The miners of Great Britain know," Trud continues, "who helped them with money and with propaganda and who broke the struggle by sabotage and anti-proletarian propaganda."

"Oudegeest's attacks don't hit the Soviet trade unions as much as they expose the reformist leaders who are helping international capitalism in its attacks against the workers thruout the world."

Turkish Writer Hailed Into Court for Heresy

CONSTANTINOPLE, Turkey, July 12.—Turkey is having her first heresy trial. The defendant is Suad Manem, one of Turkey's most beautiful women and a well-known author. She is being tried in the Stamboul Court.

Utterances of the heroine in her latest novel that religion is more harmful than opium and that all prophets are charlatans brought the novelist before the court. One section of the code under which she is being prosecuted provides a penalty of from two to six months' imprisonment for ridiculing religion.

Mexico's Educational Progress Lauded Even By Masonic News Bureau

WASHINGTON, July 12 (FP).—Mexico's educational advance wins the praise even on the Scottish Rite News Bureau, a Masonic service which has shown great interest in the southern republic since President Calles' religious difficulties. Calles' program for 5,000 rural schools, 2,000 of which have already been established with 1,000 more scheduled for this year receives the Masons' cordial approval in articles which it broadcasts to all parts of the United order.

"Mexico is alive with educational enthusiasm," the Scottish Rite Bureau quotes approvingly. "In fact the country is in advance of ours in having a national university, to which students are invited from all over the world. American teachers and students are especially solicited to come to study in this laboratory of international friendship."

22,000 Headstones

Twenty-two thousand headstones of Italian marble are being sent to France to mark the grave of the American soldier boys who lost their lives in the last World War.

The war-mongers and munition manufacturers are thus unconsciously calling again to our memory the last blood bath of 1914.

Our memories are still fresh to the days of the last World War.

The twenty-two thousand dead, who lie buried in France and the thousands upon thousands of others who have been mutilated for life in the last world slaughter, are still in our minds.

So keen is this memory, that the new Daily Worker Army of 1927 has determined that never again will capitalism be permitted to launch another such bloody war.

We have determined that instead of 22,000 headstones, we will build a stronger and bigger army of Daily Worker Readers, equipped with the necessary weapons of knowledge and fighting spirit, to successfully prevent another world catastrophe.

Let the memory of those who died in the last devastating orgy, inspire us to build a new army that will crush the militarists and hasten the onward march of a Workers' and Farmers' Government.

The Farmers and Coolidge

The offensive against Coolidge's vacation seems to be getting under way.

Delegates from 14 states to the Northwestern Agricultural Conference held in St. Paul 49 farm organizations are represented at the conference and judging from dispatches the discussion centers entirely around the failure of the Coolidge administration to do anything but sneer at the farmers' demands for relief.

There is also creeping into the news from Rapid City which is at variance with the first lyrical description of the welcome accorded Coolidge. The New York Times correspondent, for instance, goes so far as to say:

"According to reports President Coolidge has found since coming here that the West is fairly evenly divided on the merits of the McNary-Haugen bill, with its advocates MORE ASSERTIVE AND APPARENTLY IN THE MAJORITY." (Our emphasis.)

The expressed opinion that the western visit of Coolidge would show the question of farmers' relief into the background seems to have received a damaging blow as reports come in from the firing line.

There is considerable significance in the fact that, altho the delegates to the St. Paul conference are largely adherents of the two capitalist parties, they are meeting in the capital city of a state where the Farmer-Labor Party is the second largest political organization and is made up for the most part of farmers who were formerly supporters of the republican party. The conference certainly chose an anti-Coolidge center for its sessions.

But in spite of the tremendous opposition to Coolidge in agricultural states there is not much evidence outside of Minnesota that indicates as yet any strong tendency to break with the republican party. Unless this break takes place and develops into a powerful stream flowing in the same channel as that already marked out in Minnesota, the farmers are doomed to be fooled again by some sort of fake farm relief bill designed to allay the discontent.

That this is the tack the Coolidge administration intends to take is shown by the following dispatch of July 11 in the New York Times:

"Nevertheless, he (Coolidge) is disposed to recommend to Congress the consideration of a farm bill which some of the farm organizations and the committee working with the government favor. This compromise bill, which will appear in the next Congress sponsored by the farm associations, is likely to receive President Coolidge's support, it is said."

We can be sure that the "farm associations" which will sponsor this "compromise" bill will be far less "radical" than even the advocates of the McNary-Haugen bill, itself a totally inadequate piece of legislation.

We have commented before on the utterly cynical attitude of the two capitalist parties towards the question of farm relief.

Nor will this attitude change as long as the leaders of the two capitalist parties can convince the great majority of farmers that their class interests can and will be taken care of by political parties whose purpose is the protection of the class interests of bankers and industrial capitalists.

If the farmers will make a clean break with those who rob, rule and fool them, join with the workers in the creation of a powerful mass party organized in the interests of both, they will find that a great change will have taken place in the attitude of the capitalist spokesmen. Instead of contemptuous expressions the farmer leaders will be slandered and vilified by the capitalist press—always a good sign that a fear has taken the place of contempt, a fear inspired by the knowledge that a suppressed class has begun to take stock of its potential power and is preparing to bring it into use for the purpose of securing immediate class demands.

How About Other Labor Banks?

The revelations regarding the disastrous labor banking adventure of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, whose banks were the most powerful institutions of that kind in the world, have evoked much comment from the ranks of both labor and capital. Many financial writers and other spokesmen of big capital frankly express their disappointment at the collapse of the illusion of labor banking. It was one of the best schemes ever devised to fool the workers into believing that they could graduate into the ranks of the capitalists.

It caused them to abandon the fight for better conditions through an open struggle with the employers and try to achieve by "boring from within" capitalism what they had abandoned hope of obtaining otherwise.

Even James P. Eagan of the editorial staff of the publications of the American Federation of Labor declares that labor officials generally are pleased that the outside activity in the realm of labor banking have been curtailed and predicts a "lessening enthusiasm for business ventures."

The collapse of the Brotherhood banking schemes, the father of all labor banks, ought to provoke some serious thinking on the part of those labor leaders who have hoodwinked their unions into such ventures. The rank and file of labor ought to demand investigations of other "labor banks."

How about Peter J. Brady's "federation bank", or the "Amalgamated Banks" and other ventures in "labor-capitalism"?

One thing is certain to be revealed on investigation: Labor banks cannot by any stretch of the imagination benefit labor and they have thus far been used as instruments for incalculable harm to the movement, not merely because of the financial losses suffered by workers (after all they are trivial because of small amounts involved) but principally because of the illusions they engender about labor growing into the status of capitalism.

The Passing of General Max Hoffmann

By H. M. WICKS.

THE death of General Max Hoffmann revived for a few days the events of the early months of 1918, when the Bolshevik regime, facing the German imperial government on the east and rich territory of the Ukraine, he would seize the fastest invasion of Russia by the German legions.

Infuriated at the impudent demeanor and arrogant demands of the German war lord that the Soviet government release to the Kaiser's government almost a quarter of the arable land of Russia, rich deposits of coal and iron and one-third of the population, the Bolshevist delegates, particularly Leon Trotsky and Karl Radek, refused to yield and declared the only reply to Hoffmann was war to the end.

The threatened break of the conference and the threat of war was duly reported to the Council of People's Commissars, with Lenin as chairman. This master of revolution took careful inventory of the whole situation — the resources of the enemy, their ability to continue the war on the western front and at the same time throw an army into Russian territory; the internal political situation among the central powers which involved the estimate of the possibilities of the development of resistance against the imperial government; and most important of all, the possibilities of the Russian workers and soldiers who had suffered thru the war and revolution having sufficient vitality to wage a war against the German forces.

LENIN presented that the masses of Russia were exhausted by the war, he knew that they had risen and overthrown the Czar, they had begun the organization necessary for the reconstruction of the country and were ready to defend the revolution against the counter-revolutionary plots of the Russian generals backed by the Allied governments.

The Brest-Litovsk delegation were called to Petrograd. Lenin announced that they sign the treaty in spite of its humiliating terms. When Trotsky asked him how he knew the workers would no longer fight, Lenin replied simply that they had shown with their feet when they run away from the front that they would not fight face to face the enemy in the trenches. He also knew that the signing of such an obviously imperialistic document would reveal to the workers upon thousands of German workers that it was not a defensive but an aggressive war of conquest that Germany was waging and that the imperialistic agents in the ranks of the social-democracy would no longer be able to deceive the masses as to the real character of the war.

THE treaty was signed, General Hoffmann returned in triumph to report to his kaiser, the Ukraine was ceded to Germany. According to the ethics of bourgeois diplomacy Russia suffered a humiliating defeat —and indeed it was a defeat, but unavoidable.

The question was not whether the Soviet government should or should not yield territory to Germany, but whether the Bolshevik government should try to defend that territory without men and face certain defeat of the revolution throughout all Russia, or hold the heart of Russia for the revolution and await a more favorable opportunity. Lenin faced the accusations of pessimism about the outcome of the revolution as was natural from the petty bourgeois critics of the proletarian revolution. He realized that such charges were the offspring of cowardice and he scorned his critics as the Bolsheviki the world over. But the correctness of his estimate of the situation was proven to all within a few months when the battalions of the German army joined in the revolutionary upheavals in the north of Germany, in protest at the exile from whence he has never returned.

To have followed the path of revolutionary fundamentalism and sacrificed the revolution would have been spectacular—a dramatic gesture—but utterly useless. The policy of Lenin saved the revolution and at the same time did more to smash German imperialism than all the battalions of the allies.

THE death of Hoffmann and the revival of the Brest-Litovsk treaty again serves to remind the workers of the world of the genius of Lenin as a political and revolutionary leader, one who could avoid the pitfalls of romanticism as well as the danger of sinking into the slough of pessimism and yielding to despair.

His decisive action at Brest-Litovsk, while revealing his mastery of diplomacy in the face of tremendous odds, contains many valuable lessons for revolutionists, not the least of which is the necessity for facing facts as they are, not as one would like them to be.

Since the death of Lenin there have been many occasions when a considerable portion of the revolutionists of the world have tried to evade facing facts when to admit realities meant to admit temporary defeats. Such was the case, for instance in the great general strike in Britain when some of our own comrades in the Workers (Communist) Party tried to shut their eyes to the fact that the strike had been betrayed by the general council and even insisted upon trying to distort the facts so as to make it appear that the defeat was in reality a victory.

Again this defect, this romantic optimism, is apparent even today among many workers sympathetic to the Chinese revolution who had placed all their hopes in the Hankow government and are exceedingly reluctant to admit that that government has abandoned the path of the revolution and that new forms of struggle must be found in order to carry out the next stage of that rapidly developing national liberation movement.

From Lenin, as from Marx and Engels, we must learn the folly of arousing enthusiasm among the masses by perpetuating illusions regarding the outcome of class struggle. Revolutionary optimism must be based upon realities and if the objective conditions are at hand for revolutionary success that is sufficient. Unlike the modern working class, unlike other classes in history struggling for supremacy, has no need of illusions.

Headstones for Unknown Victims of Morgan's War

Headstones to the number of 20,000 for America's unknown war dead in France have been ordered by the war department. They are all to be installed before the annual debauch known as the American Legion convention which is to take place in Paris, France, in September. There will be 10,750 graves of victims of Morgan's war that will have no headstones.

Each of the headstones will bear the inscription:

Here Rests in Honored Glory
An American Soldier
Known But to God.

That means the victims are unknown to anything or anybody. They are utterly wiped out and not one of them knows that he ever lived. They sacrificed their all in order that Morgan's investments on the side of Britain, France and Czarist Russia might be made safe. Some day the lying, deceptive headstones erected by the navy department will be torn down and the revolutionary workers of France will erect a monument signifying that these victims were sacrificed, not to make the world safe for democracy, but in a predatory imperialist war, in a fight in the interest of the ruling class of the United States that was not worth the shedding of a single drop of working class blood.

The time is fast approaching when the workers of the world must realize that the only fight worth while is the fight on the part of the working class against the capitalist class.

Mr. John Drew, Court Jester

The death of Mr. John Drew, the famous light comedian, removes from the American stage one of its foremost actors. He was a darling of the bourgeoisie, their best court jester. His favorite role was that of the suave, well-bred man-of-the-world, the unattainable ideal of every petty penny-grabbing shop-keeper with an ambition to climb the social scale and mingle with the swine of the exclusive sets. Polite comedy was the proper setting for his performances.

An ornament of the stage for more than fifty years this old codger was a social symbol. He was the embodiment of that code of capitalist ethics that has developed with the ascendency of the big capitalists; a code thht viewed the daughters of the working class as legitimate prey for the gentlemen of the upper crust. As the polished seducer of other men's wives, as the full-dress Don Juan the late Mr. Drew was captivating (on the other side of the footlights) even in his toothless and tottering dotage.

He is mourned by many of those whose debaucheries he glorified as he strutted through a vast array of polite parts, written by sychophants whose greatest aim in life is to please the master class, to "crook the pregnant hinges of the knee, where thrift may follow fawning."

Russian Industry Still Advances.

Yesterday's DAILY WORKER carried a report from the Soviet Union of the beginning of work on the great Dneiper river hydro-electric plant, which will be by far the largest of its kind in all Europe. The consulting engineer of this project is the American builder of Muscle Shoals, Col. Hugh L. Cooper. Much of the machinery used for the purposes of excavating is purchased from the United States and many orders that had previously been placed with British producers of industrial machinery have been withdrawn since the Arcos raid and the breaking of trade and diplomatic relations by the Baldwin tory government of forgery.

If the United States government was on diplomatic terms with the Soviet Union there is no question that most of the orders for such machinery as well as for other products of heavy industry would come to this country.

Aside from all other considerations there are indications now that at the next session of congress the administration is going to face a much more determined demand for recognition of the Soviet Union than ever before, precisely because of the fact that in Russia alone, of all countries of the old world, is industry advancing and economic conditions constantly improving.

Aside also from the class demands of the advanced workers for recognition of Russia, the most backward American worker cannot fail to perceive that orders for millions of dollars worth of machinery of production placed in this country will assure more workers steady employment.

Byrd and Chamberlin To Sail on Leviathan

SOUTHAMPTON, England, July 12.—The S. S. Leviathan sailed for New York Today, carrying a notable company of aviation aces.

Clarence Chamberlin, who piloted the Columbia from New York to Germany, was a passenger together with his wife and mother.

Fraulein Thea Rasche, the daring German aviatrix and Baron Von Krudener, aviation mechanical expert, were also passengers.

At Cherbourg Commander Byrd and his heroic comrades of the America flight will board the vessel.

Other passengers included senator Walsh, of Montana, William Crocker, Henry Russell and Baron Adolph Deott of Czecho-Slovakia which is on a special mission to Washington.

Ben Gold and Zimmerman Will Speak in Boston at a Mass Meeting, Thursday

BOSTON, July 12.—Ben Gold, manager of the New York Joint Board of the Furriers' Union and C. Zimmerman, manager of the New York Dressmakers' Union will speak in Boston, Thursday, July 14, at 8 p. m., right after work at 12 Berkeley St. They will urge the necessity of workers standing by their labor unions and defeating the attempts of the reactionaries to destroy them. Meeting is under auspices of the Boston Joint Cloakmakers' and Furriers' Defense and Relief Committee.

DRAMA

Eva Le Gallienne to Send "Cradle Song" On Tour

The Civic Repertory Theatre will organize a special company under the artistic direction of Eva Le Gallienne to present last season's success, Gregorio and Martinez Sierra's "Cradle Song" on tour beginning September 1st.

The Lakewood Players of Skowhegan, Maine will be associated with George C. Tyler next week in the new metropolitan showing of "Hoosiers Abroad," a new version of "The Man From Home" which Booth Tarkington has just completed. Elliott Nugent will play the role played here by William Hodge.

The Shuberts are also planning a musical version of "Trilby," and another of "Arizona." Both productions may be shown on Broadway early next season.

Charles L. Wagner is planning to present here a new play by Zoe Akin, a dramatization of Mrs. Wharton's "The Old Maid." Josephine Victor and Marjorie Wood will head the cast.

Eva Le Gallienne to Send "Cradle Song" On Tour

The Civic Repertory Theatre will organize a special company under the artistic direction of Eva Le Gallienne to present last season's success, Gregorio and Martinez Sierra's "Cradle Song" on tour beginning September 1st.

The Lakewood Players of Skowhegan, Maine will be associated with George C. Tyler next week in the new metropolitan showing of "Hoosiers Abroad," a new version of "The Man From Home" which Booth Tarkington has just completed. Elliott Nugent will play the role played here by William Hodge.

The Shuberts are also planning a musical version of "Trilby," and another of "Arizona." Both productions may be shown on Broadway early next season.

Charles L. Wagner is planning to present here a new play by Zoe Akin, a dramatization of Mrs. Wharton's "The Old Maid." Josephine Victor and Marjorie Wood will head the cast.

43 MORE FURRIER WORKERS JAILED WHEN PICKETING

Two Forward Reporters Among Those Released

A large picketing demonstration was held in the fur market Tuesday which resulted in 43 arrests. The workers responded to the call of the Unity Committee in large numbers and showed a remarkable spirit for the beginning of the sixth week of the struggle.

When brot before Magistrate Brodsky, the first 11 were dismissed while the other 32 had their cases adjourned until Wednesday morning.

Among the 11 who were dismissed were two reporters for the Jewish Daily Forward, Z. Libin and B. Weinstone. Many workers remarked that it was odd that the batch including the Forward men were discharged, while the others were held for further examination.

Fanny Marin, a fur striker who was arrested last week on the complaint of a rights wing scab, had her case postponed until September, when it came up before Magistrate Joseph Weil in the Six District Court of the Bronx yesterday morning.

Charge Mal-Practice in Coma Case

LOS ANGELES, July 12.—Leaders of the "Medical War" waged over the treatment of Mrs. Clara Drummond, 21-year-old "sleeping beauty," prepared today for a clash in court tomorrow. Dr. W. J. Peacock, chiropractor attending Mrs. Drummond, will then defend himself against charges of running a hospital in violation of city ordinances.

Dr. George Parrish, Los Angeles City Health Commissioner, filed the charges against Dr. Peacock when the latter turned away two brain specialists whom Dr. Parrish sent to examine Mrs. Drummond.

MONTREAL, Que., July 12.—Five drownings in the past 24 hours in the St. Lawrence river and La Chine rapids were added today to the season's death toll from water sports in this section.

Another Engineer's Official Convicted By Their Convention

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 12.—One more official of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers has been found guilty of the charitably phrased crime of being "careless, lax and indifferent" with the hard earned money of the members of the union. The convention now sitting, after due investigation decided that Harry P. Daugherty, second vice president was one of the same class as C. E. Lindquist, Secretary-Treasurer, and L. G. Griffing, first vice-president. Another involved in the same charges Wm. B. Prentar, president of the union, who has so far avoided trial by the conventions because of illness.

All Fired.

All these officials have already been removed from office, but what other punishment will be meeted upon them, the convention has not decided.

All were involved in the extremely high finance associated with the management of funds of the collaboration schemes, labor banks, scab coal mines, and Florida real estate ventures of the late Warren Stone, who started them while still grand chief of the union.

Wrong and Badly Managed

The labor capitalists thus originated has been so badly conducted, the convention's investigating committee found, that there is grave danger that all the engineer's money will be lost, and an assessment of five dollars a month on each member, to continue for over a year, and perhaps longer, has been voted.

Officers Got Money.

Lindquist admitted, while on trial, that he and other officers charged were given personal presents of $2,500 a piece by real estate interests in New York to make easy the sale to those interests of a skyscraper the union owned. He argued that as long as the union officials had kept their money so acquired intact, they were not bribed. But the convention found him guilty of "carelessness, laxness and indifference" anyway.

Progressives in the union have all along insisted that the money of the union is a fund intended by its members for use in strikes and in other beefits and not a treasury for stock exchange and real estate speculations by the officers, and point to the recent revelations of the corruptive power of such activities as proof.

Pullman Terrorism Used in Fight On Union of Porters

WASHINGTON, July 12 (FP).—Czarist Russia, which forced trade unions underground, has a rival in the United States where a large and growing trade union has been forced to work almost entirely by underground methods. That organization is the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters whose Negro members are obliged to conduct propaganda and union business in secret, due to the elaborate espionage system maintained by the Pullman Co.

"Occasionally we hold public meetings," declared A. Philip Randolph, general organizer, in Washington to confer with officials of the Railway Mediation Board. "The rest of our activities have to be carried on in secret to outwit the spies, far-reaching Pullman spy service. But we have been successful, as the Mediation Board found out when they investigated our membership rolls and discovered we have a majority of all pullman porters in the brotherhood.

Terrorist Tactics.

"Terrorism is part of the Pullman tactics in fighting the young brotherhood. Many of our best men have been disciplined or discharged for having 'outside interests'. Pullman has even corrupted one or two Negro papers.

"Last October we filed our petition for recognition as the legitimate union of our craft with the Mediation Board. Edwin P. Morrow of the board has just left Chicago to hold hearings on our case. As soon as we win recognition, we can come up from underground and function in the open like other trade unions."

The board and brotherhood alike have scotched canards spread by a news agency that the union's claim for recognition as representative of the sleeping car porters had been rejected.

Brophy Tells Miners To Stand Fast; Urges Organization Drive

DILLONVILLE, O., (FP) July 12.—Addressing a large audience of striking miners and their families at the annual picnic of the Cooperative Store Society John Brophy, former chairman of the National Miners Research committee of the United Mine Workers urged the workers to hold their lines steadfastly in the present struggle.

"Bring them to bear in mind the goal of public ownership and democratic management of the coal industry to which the Cooperative has pledged at three conventions he told them that their hope of achieving this end depended on the maintaining of the union.

"To maintain the union, said Brophy, it is necessary not only to stand together in the union stores, but to organize to organize the Ohio, West Virginia fields, a few miles away, across the Ohio River. Even before the strike most Ohio mines were idle as West Virginia and Kentucky coal took their markets away.

The Cooperative Store Society is one of the most successful consumers' cooperatives in the United States. Half a million dollars a year business is done by its three stores at Dillonville, Piney Fork and Bradley, three mining towns, and dividends of 8 to 11 per cent are paid on purchases. The Dillonville enterprise, under the management of Joseph Bisha is housed in a fine $100,000 brick building, and has a general grocery department, meat, furniture and drug goods departments.

Try Five for Beating Man; Leader Whipped Mother and 15-Year Son

TOCCOA, Ga., July 12.—Five men who flogged Burt Singleton, Stephens County farmer, will be tried today on charges of assault with intent to murder, plotting and carrying firearms.

One of the men to be tried, W. G. Arrow, former principal of the Eastonville High School, is already been convicted of flogging Mrs. Ansley Bowers and her fifteen year-old son, Floyd, but has not been sentenced.

Arrest 9 In Speak-Easy Raid.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., July 12.—Nine girls were under arrest today as a result of a number of raids on alleged "speak-easies" and gambling dens on Huguenot Street here.

The raids were made by a squad of men under Captain John MacGowan of the New Rochelle detective bureau, after Frederick Dahl, of 34 Walnut St., had been taken to Grasslands Hospital in a critical condition. He told the authorities he had purchased a drink of liquor in an establishment on Huguenot Street. It is feared he may lose his eyesight.

All of the places raided were in the space of a few blocks.

NATIONAL CIVIC FEDERATION WARS ON AGE PENSIONS

Matty Woll Approves Action by Silence

By ESTHER LOWELL.
(Federated Press)

No respresentative of organized labor in the National Civic Federation (of which Matthew Woll is acting president) joined its conference on Old Age Pensions, printed reports of the session show. The conference occurred April 29 under auspices of the Industrial Welfare Department of the organization. Printed proceedings have just been issued.

Employer members of the Civic Federation participating in the conference agreed that state old age pensions are not desirable from their viewpoint. Individual pensions, to which workers themselves contribute, were generally deemed best.

Blend Fur Workers.

Arthur Williams, an officer of the New York Edison Co., emphasized that there was a definite object in employer's giving old age pensions. This object is "long and satisfactory service" from the workers. He quoted judge Elbert Gary's remark about U. S. Steel Corp. welfare work—"It pays."

Percy S. Straus of the big Macy department store presided at the conference. P. Tecumseh Sherman, corporation lawyer and chairman of the federation's old age annuities committee, attacked state pensions. He referred to the Pennsylvania Old Age Pension Commission of which James Maurer, state federation of labor president, is chairman.

Keep Workers Docile.

Yearly instead of long term promises were advocated by E. C. Roth of Western Clock Co., La Salle, Ill. Roth argued that workers must be assured that they will actually get what is promised and so it is better to promise only the amount of pension saved each year.

This plan offers extreme flexibility, Roth stated, trendering it easier for the company to pay lower benefits in the future than at present." To date the company has increased its promised pensions instead of decreasing, however, he stated.

Wall and Company.

Col. A. G. Mills of Otis Elevator Co. praised the Civic Federation for its "patriotic" work on industrial pensions as against state pensions favored by organized labor.

Other employers represented at the conference were Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., Bethlehem Steel Corp., American Telephone & Telegraph Co., Radio Corp. of America, General Electric Co., U. S. Rubber Co., All American Cables, National Lead Co., etc. Most of them are openshop concerns practicing various forms of welfare work and company unionism to offset real trade union organization.

A New Jersey state labor department was represented. Matthew Woll, vice-president American Federation of Labor and acting president of the National Civic Federation, is not listed as a participant in the conference.

Open Long Island City Ferry.

Service will open August 15th on the Thirty-Fourth Street-Long Island City vehicular ferry, it was announced today by William McGuirk, head of the company which it to operate the route.

All the under waterwork on the new slips is completed and superstructure work is progressing rapidly, he said.

TO WHOM DOES VOLCANO MADE LAND BELONG?

While Kilauea (Lake of Fire), Hawaii, has been erupting, Hawaiians have been trying to settle a land dispute caused by an eruption last year of Mauna Loa. At that time the rushing lava added 43 acres of ground to the Island of Hawaii. Who owns the ground? The territorial legislature wants to erect a wharf there, but old residents of the region have staked out the new area as homesites, saying it is simply their old homesites moved down closer to the sea by the volcano's action. Photos above are of the disputed region. The top picture shows the village of Mileili, isolated by flow; lower left, road under construction across lava flow; right, above, road over lava, four miles from sea, showing steam still escaping more than a year after eruption; right, below, new beach created by lava.

Call Conference to Defend the Foreign Born; Meet July 31

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., July 12.—The Cambria Council for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers has issued a call for a conference to meet July 31 in Moose Hall, Portage, Pa., to devise ways and means to defend the foreign born. The conference has the endorsement of the May, 1927, convention of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, and is as follows:

Proposed legislation introduced in congress by Congressmen Aswell, Holaday, Brand and others aims to stigmatize the foreign born by treating them as if they were criminals. They propose that aliens be fingerprinted, photographed, registered and taxed, and that they carry "passports." The police are to have the right to search the person of aliens and their homes for the cards of identification. The punishment is to be a fine, imprisonment and deportation.

The powers that be aim to intensify the race conflict by cowing the foreign born population, humiliating and stigmatizing them for the purpose of increasing racial and national prejudice, to keep labor divided and so weaken the labor moral.

A very strong organized force is preparing to support the measures to register aliens. Wall Street is behind this movement. Our Council is calling upon all progressive organizations to stand united with us. This proposed, undemocratic legislation must be defeated. You must help preserve our cherished American liberties for the greater liberties we are destined to achieve.

Cambria County Council Protection Foreign Born Workers is calling you to a conference, Sunday afternoon, 2 p. m., July 31, 1927, at Moose Hall, Portage, Pa. The object is to plan ways and means for concerted action and to be ready to act when Congress reconvence. Prominent speakers will address the gathering. We want at least five delegates from each fraternal organization, church and local unions. Visitors are welcome.

American liberty is in danger. You must not be indifferent to this danger. You are called upon to do your duty. We are counting on you.

Jeannette D. Pearl, Field Organizer.

His Wife and Baby Ill; 18-Year-Old Youth Robs

Desperate because his girl wife and their five-months-old daughter lay ill at home, Lester Betterly, eighteen, of 109 Oak Street, Brooklyn, took his wife's twelve-year-old brother with him as a lookout and staged a series of robberies in the Greenpoint section, police say he admitted today, following his arrest.

Out of employment and his wife, Ethel and their daughter, Dorothy, growing weaker and weaker, Betterly decided no meals were to be had to save them and turned robber, police say he confessed.

Detectives arrested him at Guernsey Street and Normand Avenue, when they saw him hurring along with a suit of clothes under his arm. They say he told them he was headed for a pawn shop where he expected to turn the clothes into cash. Police say he figured in eight petty robberies in the Greenpoint section.

New York Workers in Constant Danger From Fire Trap Tenements

The lives of hundreds of thousands of New York workers are endangered by the lack of adequate fire escapes. This is the conclusion of a report made by Harold Riegelman, counsel for the State commission for the revision of the Tenement House Act after investigation.

Flimsy wooden tenements, which house thousands of New York workers, left members of the State commission "thoroly shocked," Riegelman said. A lack of fire escapes, sealed roof scuttles, narrow wooden stairways and non-fire proof walls characterized all of the houses that the commission investigated.

"Most New Yorkers who live in converted dwellings live in constant and inescapable fire hazard," Riegelman declared. The commission will continue its investigation of New York dwellings, it was announced.

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 12.—Eight persons were injured, some seriously, in a collision between two automobiles on the outskirts of the city today.

Toronto Workers in Successful Meeting For N. Y. Furriers

A telegram received yesterday at the office of the Joint Board, Furriers Union, from H. Englander, manager of the Toronto Joint Board of the Furriers' Union, announced that the Unity Conference of the union held a most successful meeting there Sunday, which resulted in some very important decisions.

This is the first of a series of conferences to which the trade unionists of various large cities will be invited to learn of the struggle in the Furriers' Union and join with the Furriers' Unity Committee in an effort to bring about peace and unity in the International Fur Workers' Union of the United States and Canada.

Mass meetings will follow the conferences in the various cities and Ben Gold, manager of the New York Joint Board, will attend many of these meetings and tell of the present strike in the New York fur industry and the struggle against the reactionary forces which are seeking to destroy the furriers' union.

Poland—It Is the Land of Strutting Soldiers With Barefooted, Ragged Workers

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

THERE was martial law in the bitterly fought copper miners' strike in Michigan's upper peninsula in 1913. As the correspondent of a labor newspaper I had to have a military pass in order to get about.

There was also martial law in the coal strike in the Paint and Cabin Creek Districts in West Virginia, in 1913, as in many other industrial struggles in that state. As publicity director of the United Mine Workers' Union, I found it difficult to get thru the various sections of the war zone.

I get the same feeling of the grip of the military, only intensified, as Stolbzy, in Poland, where we leave the train behind that has brought us from Moscow via E. E. E., pass the customs officers and board the train that is to take us on to Paris.

Everybody salutes! The porters carrying baggage salute! Maybe it is the baggage master or the station master, I can't make out, that receives this attention. The Polish imitation of the American boy scouts and of the high school and university cadets is very much in evidence. But then there are also the many branches of the regular army, in a multitude of vari-colored uniforms, all seemingly represented.

This railroad station with its martial surroundings gives the feel of a military outpost close to the front line trenches in war time. You might interpret that the Polish Pilsudski militarism doesn't know that the war is over." But that would be hardly true. The Pilsudski tyranny only knows that for it, the war never ended, because with the signing of the Versailles bandit peace, the Polish reaction merely became the catspaw of the imperialisms at Paris and London, in the new attacks on the Union of Soviet Republics. Always ready with their dollars, the international bankers in Wall Street have been continuously on the job bolstering the Polish reaction financially. Polish fascism, like its Italian counterpart, has the full sympathy of the capitalist regime in Washington.

Poland is today an imperialist outpost against the Soviet Power of the workers and peasants, and Stolbzy on Poland's eastern frontier is near the edge of the fenced border of the Soviet Republic. Hence the soldiers, the strutting officers, the pompous general who comes thru the station and boards the train, looking for all the world like the Russian prince that I had seen in the Moscow prison that I had visited.

It was a motley train made up of first, second and third class coaches and sleeping cars of Polish, French and German origin, shrieking testimony to the many national divisions in bourgeois Europe. Yet there was peace reflected when this train started moving toward the west.

But what a nation we passed thru of men and women in rags and barefoot, Polish workers who showed to all the world their dejection!

It is not unusual, of course, for the peasant to walk barefoot in the fields, following the plow, or tending herds and flocks.

But here in Poland the city workers, men and women, trod barefooted, bleak and bleeding. At one station, I did not take down the name, but it was typical of all, a large basement was being excavated for some new building. There was no giant steam shovel to do the heavy work. Men and women were massed together in large numbers, shovelling, passing the dirt from level to level, like Japanese coolies coaling a ship, passing the coal up its sides.

The train stopped for a few moments at one station during the noon hour. Many of these workers dropped their shovels and came running across the tracks, finding a place on the station platform to eat their lunches. Some of them had their feet bandaged.

The employer might claim that many of them are strong and well equipped physically for this manual labor. The fact was that many were very frail in appearance. One particular sight was that of a very young and weak appearing woman worker who had worn a cheap necklace as if to defy the Polish reaction to destroy her womanliness.

Another sight was of many men workers, picking their way barefooted about as they unloaded freight cars, especially cars loaded with huge timbers.

It isn't because there is a scarcity of labor in Poland that women as well as men must thus toil. There are from a quarter to a third of a million unemployed in Poland. These are oppressive conditions that American capitalism upholds because it would like to see the workers in the United States reduced to the same level.

We passed over a river. Cavalrymen of the Polish army could be seen at the water's edge. They had removed their polished boots, rolled up their colored tronsers and were bathing their feet in the cool water. Their feet were not bleeding, like the feet of the workers we had just seen.

That is Poland. And so it was all the way to Warsaw, that we reached toward evening, arriving at the railroad station in the Polish capital on the platform of which Peter I. Voikov, the Soviet Ambassador, had been shot down by an assassin inspired by the imperialist attack against the Soviet Union.

It is a rather forlorn looking railroad station where priests with robes that dust the ground vie for attention with the soldiers. Nimerous guides offer to show the travelers about the town, until the train shall continue on its journey. One guide even has a slip of paper signed by someone with an address in Brooklyn, N. Y., testifying to his reliability. There are cathedrals and palaces to be seen, they say. But Europe is full of cathedrals and palaces and they all look more or less alike, and there are more interesting ones in Berlin and Paris. The most interesting, of course, are in the Soviet Union, where the workers have turned them to useful purposes as rest homes and museums.

But train time is welcome again. I find that for the night I am to share my sleeping compartment with Dr. W. De Vriest, who is on his way to Berlin to participate in an International Conference of Scientists. He says that 20 scientists, the best known in Russia, are planning to leave the Soviet Union in a few days to journey to Berlin for the same purpose. We talked until long after midnight.

The Development of the Chinese Revolution And Vacillations of the Kuomintang Leaders

(Leading article from "Pravda" June 22.)

The depths and the swing of the revolution is expressing itself clearly in the racing tempo at which the events in China are developing. Hardly eighteen months have passed since the commencement of the struggle against the North which led the national army to the borders of Kwangtung in the Yangtse Valley. How great is the expanse in these few months, what tremendous progress has been made in the relation of class forces, how much the measure has grown which many now be used to estimate the situation! In this period, Wu Pei-fu, Sun Chuan-fang and Chang Tsung-chang have been developed. New millions of workers and peasants have gone into the revolutionary struggle. The tremendous growth of the workers' and peasants' movement on the one hand and the open and hard pressure of the imperialists on the other have intensified the differences inside the national-revolutionary camp. Chiang Kai-shek has betrayed the revolution and the bourgeoisie which up to his treachery played the leading role has gone over more and more obviously to the working class, but at the same time the vacillations and the methods of the struggle are becoming more definite. The Wuhan government and the Kuomintang are now faced with the necessity of fighting upon two fronts, against Pekin and against Nanking. At the same time the revolutionary solution of the agrarian problem is carried out by the peasant unions caused a further split in the Wuhan ranks. The counter-revolutionary officers' insurrection broke out in Changsha.

This stormy change of events and of the general situation is taking place upon an extremely kaleidoscopic basis in a country where new and modern methods of capitalist exploitation rub shoulders with the remnants of the most extreme feudalism, where in an extremely complicated system, the most varied relations exist side by side. Between Shanghai and any Sitchuan there is not merely a 1,000 kilometres, but a century of economic development. This enormous variety of existing social forms, this great inequality in the development of the various provinces and districts, the great differences in the degree of dependence upon the imperialists, upon the foreign market, the differences in the forces and importance of the remnants of feudalism, all this causes a great variety of interests, causes the existence of a great number of middle groups and sections. This must be taken into consideration in the present epoch of development in which the re-grouping of class forces has by no means ended.

"The forces of the petty-bourgeoisie is a vacillating force." This statement of Lenin applied to the present situation in China means that one may not reckon that with the defection of Chiang Kai-shek to the side of the counter-revolution laid the definite border between the revolution and the counter-revolution, between the forces for and against the bourgeois democratic revolution. On the contrary, the content of the bourgeois-democratic revolution will become deeper every day and more definite. This makes a further differentiation in the Wuhan camp unavoidable. The intellectual radical bourgeois elements in the Kuomintang will vacillate according to their class character; they cannot take a decisive and definite line. We must therefore be prepared for new defections, for new treachery. To close one's eyes in the face of this possibility would be just as stupid as to fall into a panic on account of it.

Chiang Kai-shek has openly betrayed the revolution. But a number of elements related to him are still in the Kuomintang. The swing of the workers and peasants movement brought in its first period the defection of the bourgeoisie with it. Its further development, the tremendous extension of the agrarian revolution from below must result in a further defection of the bourgeoisie and the troops most nearly related to it. The officers' insurrection in Changsha has a symptomatic significance in this connection. The officers of the Wuhan army oppose the peasants who had decided to take the land and the power into their own hand. The social and political significance of this action of the officers was fundamentally the same as that of the defection of Chiang Kai-shek.

It is extremely typical of the lack of determination, the half measures and the lack of character of the petty bourgeoisie, that the Kuomintang and the Wuhan government were not able to crush the counter-revolution in Changsha in its beginnings. When the moment came to support the agrarian revolution not in words but in deeds, the petty bourgeois leaders showed openly that their force, is a vacillating one. And that is the extremely great danger for the Chinese revolution.

This vacillation of many political and especially military leaders of Wuhan is intensified by the following circumstance. The northern crusade was initiated in a block with the bourgeoisie and under its leadership as a war against the imperialists and against the northern militarists. The difficulties in the national camp appeared, however, before the main task was fulfilled. Whilst is fighting Nanking and Pekin, and with Nanking against Pekin. The struggle in the centre of the allies which sprang up after the split is weighing on the conscience of individual generals of the Kuomintang and even at the favorable moment be used as the occasion for the formation of a block with Chiang Kai-shek and for further treachery against the revolution.

The possibility and the danger of new treachery is made greater by the specific forms of the Chinese struggle. We have said and written more than once that the peculiarity of the Chinese revolution consists in the fact that each of the class groups participating has its own state apparatus, its own army and government. This peculiarity is an historical fact. It has its enormous advantages and its great disadvantages. The chief disadvantage is that the old administrative and military apparatus was not destroyed by the revolution in the beginning, but set up again as a revolutionary apparatus. The old officials and the officers' corps are all firmly in their jobs and even in the ranks of the Wuhan troops they represent a great force which can come out at any moment even on the territory of the Wuhan government as a counter-revolution. The insurrection in Changsha is the best proof of this.

The open and logical counter-revolution of Chiang Kai-shek must be met by a no less decided and logical revolutionary policy on the part of the Kuomintang. For or against the agrarian revolution? For or against the peasant movement? For or against the working class organizations? All these questions permit, in the present moment of development, no half measures, no vacillation, but demand decision. Further, these questions cannot be answered with words, but with deeds.

The development of the agrarian revolution, the development and the organization of the mass movement of the workers and peasants is the only way to victory. The stress placed upon the significance of the agrarian problem by no means pushes the military task of the Wuhan government into the background. Bnt to oppose the military and the political tasks of the Kuomintang to each other is not only especially false, but it supplies grist to the mill of the counter-revolution. To speak of a "spread of the revolution and only afterwards a deepening of the revolution" is objectively not only to the isolation of the Kuomintang from the worker and peasant masses, but sustains the ideology of those hostile elements which still regard Chiang Kai-shek as an ally in the struggle against Chang Tso-lin. But the other extreme, the overstressing of political tasks of the Kuomintang, as our oppositionalists do it, and separating them from the military tasks, would not only lead to absolutism, to the fatal defeat of the revolution, but it would also give Chiang Kai-shek material for agitation and assist him to represent himself as the centre figure in the struggle against the northern militarists.

The political and military tasks of the Chinese revolution can not be regarded separately. Without supporting itself upon the masses, without organizing the masses, the Knomintang cannot be victorious in the struggle against the imperialists and the northern militarists and Chiang Kai-shek. The lack of understanding for this fact amongst various petty bourgeois elements in the leadership of the Kuomintang, the characteristic fear of petty bourgeois leaders for the masses must be broken. The historic significance of the Chinese proletariat and its Communist Party consists at the present moment in the fact that the pressure of the masses, the pressure of the lower sections is being unified and organized, that the zig-zag line of the Kuomintang is being changed into a decisive revolutionary line.

To make the vacillations of the leaders of the radical bourgeoisie as a ground for a breach with the Kuomintang, and a self-imposed isolation, as our opposition wants to do, would be at the present stage of development to abandon practically any active participation in the broad revolutionary movement of the masses. The task of the proletarian revolutionaries in China is to overcome the right-wing deviations and to lend the peasantry and by no means to separate themselves from the town petty bourgeoisie.

The development of the agrarian revolution has created a situation in which only the proletariat can seize the hegemony of the national democratic, bourgeois democratic. The proletariat and its Party will win this hegemony by supporting themselves upon the masses, organizing the masses for the struggle, as the only logical and decisive representative of the interests of the masses.

Before us there is still much treachery, risings and sinkings of the revolutionary wave, but no matter what the next zigzags may be, the Chinese revolution will be victorious under the leadership of the working class and the Communist Party in close alliance with the revolutionary movement of the world proletariat.

THE YOUTH AND PATRIOTISM

It was my good fortune to have been graduated from high school in the year 1917. Those were the days I read fairytimes like in the idea of getting out of one of the worst fields of reaction that is possible to find among American institutions. In this school, patriotism, although not a subject, was a subconscious thing. I was so impressed and imbibed by the average student with the old of the faculty and of the orators who came to the school to speak every now and then.

It is true that "I pledge allegiance to my flag" is not said every day, but that "do not think for a moment that "patriotism" has been forgotten, and that this reactionary American institution has realized the destructibility of this decadent sentiment. The boards of education realise that the average high school student is able to comprehend a little more than "I pledge allegiance," and they also realise that he is not very analytical—that if anything were told him in a high and mighty manner, he would swallow it without a grain of salt. It is upon this state of mind that the capitalist tools play with their patriotism, anti-Sovietism, Yellow Peril, etc.

In celebration of Memorial Day, the whole student body of this school was asked to donate a few pennies with which to purchase a new silk American flag to beautify the Auditorium and to instill that beautiful and uplifting sentiment of love of country. Those who refused to buy this worthy cause (they must have been in the pay of the Soviet Union) were lectured by the teachers and shunned by the students. When the day for celebrating arrived, half the student body was assembled in the auditorium where could be seen the newly purchased flag.

The program was opened by the orchestra which played some patriotic airs. Then followed a playlet in which the colors of the flag were personified. A boy made a speech for each color, representing valor, White representing purity and Blue representing loyalty. He then recited "your flag and my flag—your land and my land." Five members of the faculty (ex-service men) then sang some war songs. At last the big event of the day took place. Congressman Clyde Kelly made a speech in which he stressed the false idea that patriotism was an uplifting sentiment, that Lindbergh's father was a great man and a great patriot (this was news to some of us), that Colonel Lindbergh was a daring and courageous patriot because he was following in the footsteps of his father (some more news), that the war did good in that it established a staple democracy, (?) that at present in the United States there was a "blight" which was undermining the wonderful institutions of our blessed country and that this "blight" must be strangled in its infancy—as one rotten apple rots the whole barrel full. He did not name the "blight" probably because a sixth sense told him that he might find a few in the audience. Of course he made no contrast between destructive war and constructive peace. The applause was very prolonged.

This program, of which I have just spoken, is only one of many. The jingoes realize there is to be an armament race which will result in a terrible destructive war, that the masses (especially the youth) must be prepared for it by propaganda, and that the place where this propaganda will have the most effect is in the schools, nourished by the American capitalism. It is up to the students to realize that they must fight against this coming war, must question the words of flinky institutors; that sooner or later the youth will be forced to choose between proletariat and reactionary, between a new world and a decadent one. To follow the old means to be an aid in the prolongation of civilization which is characterized by the cold-blooded murder of millions of people and the exploitation of those who remain alive. All this for private profit. To follow the new means to be an aid in the destruction of civilization and the construction of that culture which is only possible with the establishing of the Union of the Socialist Soviet Republics of the World, which will be founded on economic equality.

JAN—THE UNCONQUERED

By MEYER DWORKIN.

In the autumn of 1919, soon after the great steel strike, led by Comrade Foster I lived next to Jan, a tall, strong Pole, who wore a pair of long black mustaches and had a terrible temper. He was a steel worker and slaved nights in Judge Gary's flaming steel-hells somewhere in the south side of the smoke-laden city of Cleveland.

The brutality of the police, together with the terrible black power of the local capitalist press, was instrumental in breaking the morale of many a striker, but not so with Jan. He always remained the same unconquered Jan. And in spite of the outcome of the steel strike Jan's fighting spirit was even more tempered and he was more imbittered against the steel magnates than ever before.

Soon afterwards I noticed on the eastern wall in his small house, among other ornaments, a good sized picture of Comrade Foster.

Jan's loyalty and belief in Comrade Foster's honest leadership and devotion to the steel-strikers has never diminished, although Jan went through terrible privation with his large family during the strike, and even greater suffering and privation after the strike was lost.

Yesterday, early at dawn, when Jan returned from the steel-mill, he lingered about his small grassy yard, for a long time, silent and embittered, and stood watching the flaming-red, rising sun. He stood leaning against the fence in a forest of tall fire-red hollyhocks, silent and in deep thought.

Close by his small house a black stream of factory workers, thousands of them, hurried to work in nearby factories. When Jan saw them, his eyes filled with indescribable hate.

"Such an army, if it had only come to our assistance at the time of our strike," he sighed.

"But this is not yet the end."

Jan was bitterest when he saw the thousands of toil-worn workers reading the Plain Dealer, as they scurried through the early morning autumn mists like bundles of rags, to work; the very newspaper that employed all its capitalist viciousness to break the morale of the striking steel-workers.

After witnessing such a spectacle, Jan entered his house and went to bed; and in his sleep he raged on:

"Damned we be all! Who is to blame that we are in such a mess! Who is at fault for the bitterness of our life but ourselves?! ! Damned we be all!"

And whenever I met Jan he never ceased talking about a new strike in the steel-trade.

Jan remained unconquered.

TURPENTINE MILL IN U. S. S. R.

In the midst of the dense wood of Vetluzhski the erection of a huge turpentine-resin works has been completed. In equipment and annual output this works is the only one of its kind in U. S. S. R. and the second in the world.

On the eve of May 1st, this works were put into action.

In Chiti (Far East), the erection of the first wolfram factory in the district has been completed.

Chester Textile Workers in Strike Ferment

(In a previous article the author told how textile workers in this city are to consider the case of an attempted wage reduction in the Irving Woolen Mills. At the meeting numerous spies of the employers were discovered and invited to leave the meeting).

After clearing the boss delegation, the meeting proceeded enthusiastically. Workers from various departments in the mill recited their experiences and working conditions. A little girl of 12 years told about cockroaches running all over the place, even into the lunch baskets; another girl about 17 years told about the dirty toilets and the unspeakable stage of $10.00 for two weeks' work; another related the merciless speed-up system of getting increased profits.

The meeting ended with the workers determined to go ahead with the work of preparing for struggle. It was decided to have another meeting on the night of the trial of the workers arrested.

Boss Offers Compromise.

On Saturday morning a most unusual and significant incident happened. The manager's side-kick personally called upon Devine to discuss the question. "I'm confident we can arrive at a suitable compromise", he stated. Of course he was informed the workers were the supreme authority and would decide upon future action.

The bosses went all over the town to find workers. The superintendent saw the wool sorters and suggested they call individually at the mill when they would probably receive their work back.

The wool sorters rejected the offer saying they would only go back at the old wage and as a group.

Tuesday found the interest at a high pitch. Mr. McDonough, a very capable Chester attorney, was in charge of the workers' case. Mr. Montgomery represented the Irving Worsted Mill. In the opening of the case Mr. Montgomery showed warrants he had sworn out charging the defendants with inciting to riot. The usual gallery of superintendents, bosses, etc., set about giving their evidence to prove that a riot was imminent. The workers' lawyer looked unconcernedly only taking time to elicit from the witnesses for the prosecution that they did all the arresting without having warrants or even being detectives. The case was postponed till the fall term of court which does not assemble until October.

Mr. McDonough, attorney for the workers stated at the close of the session that the whole case was illegal and would be quashed when it came up for hearing.

Calls Mass Meeting Bluff.

The meeting on Tuesday 21st was somewhat disappointing. A big carnival (something that is really a treat to the oppressed workers of the city), was in full swing. The bosses had been more open in their disapproval of the workers attending the meeting. Many workers had been laid off, county police and deputies were on the job surrounding the hall, the superintendent's interest in conducting an open air meeting warning workers not to go inside the hall.

Without quite a fair enthusiasm to the talk about the arrests and the future policy to be pursued. Parsmen, teachers, stool-pigeons and detectives present at the meeting actually looked more certain as Devine built up a case against the inhuman treatment meted out to the workers in Irving's mill. In pointing out the visit of the superintendent's son-in-law, Devine called the boss's bluff. "I have been approached unofficially and told that Mr. Irving would be prepared to meet a committee of workers with myself included for the purpose of discussing the dispute and that a compromise would almost certainly be arrived at", said Devine. "I now publicly say we are prepared to meet Mr. Irving at anytime to discuss the grievances."

The meeting unanimously endorsed that attitude. It was decided to call a further meeting if anything developed.

During the following afternoon Devine telephoned Mr. Atkinson, the superintendent, who refused to acknowledge the unofficial representative of Saturday morning. The superintendent tried to bring in wage side issues but was not allowed. The talk concluded with the intimation by Devine that a committee of workers would meet him when he realized how serious it was. Meantime things are moving as formerly.

The workers are not yet solid, but the signs are that a struggle is brewing. It may be weeks, it may be months, it does not matter. One thing is certain and that is, the workers are covertly talking strike. A continuation of the present terrible conditions will accentuate that feeling and bring the workers definitely to the point of fight. Keep your eye on Chester.

Kirchwey Hits Baumes Law.

Hitting the Baumes law as a "hit and miss remedy which will exert no influence on the vast majority of criminals," Governor George Kirchwey, former warden of Sing Sing prison and one-time dean of the Columbia Law School urged its repeal in speaking to a meeting of social workers at the Charity Organization Society, 105 East 22nd Street.

Letters From Our Readers

Editor: The DAILY WORKER:—In answer to the call of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee to put down tools on Thursday July 7th, at 2 P. M. in protest against the death-sentence; the New York trade-unions, acted promptly and enthusiastically.

After 4 o'clock the workers streamed into Union Square, to demonstrate, bringing with them many vivid banners. Along with them came duly elected delegates from fraternal, socialist, Communist and I. W. W. organizations.

After a few leaders of the socialist party had spoken, but actually nothing of interest was said on this vital issue,—a very great number of workers spotted Ben Gold, the leader of the furriers, in the audience and called upon him to speak. The socialist leaders who dominated the platform refused their request.

The workers would not listen to this, and again called upon him to speak. But as they were again ignored, the demand for Gold increased when they carried him on their shoulders to the platform.

The socialist leaders refused to let him speak and left the field in the face. Rather than give Gold the platform, and allow the demonstration to go on successfully, the socialist called on their assistants, the police force, to break up the meeting.

The socialist party never intended from the beginning to carry through their important protest meeting. It was all prearranged from the outset, by the socialist party and the right wing labor leaders. They knew the composition of the fraternal and political organizations and trade unions, who responded to the strike call, and would demand equally representation to speak. The socialist party wished to dominate the meeting and exclude the other duly elected delegates who disagreed with them.

When they saw it was impossible to do this, owing to the overwhelming of the audience to hear their own delegates they destroyed the demonstration. What the socialist party and the Forward gang have done to honest and militant workers in their trade-unions, and on the picket lines, they have done here.

A great many thousands of workers who have not witnessed before the socialist party and right wing labor leaders, do dirty destructive injury to, the workers and to the labor movement, have seen it now with their own eyes.

The socialist party, has deeply insulted Sacco and Vanzetti, by their despicable actions. They have no intention of helping to liberate these two innocent workers, when at the same time they kill the spirit of militancy in their own unions.

All honest men and women of the toiling class should raise their voice and demand of Governor Fuller of Massachusetts the unconditional release of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Yours Fraternally,—Mark Stone.

Capitalistic editorial writers are unrestrained in their indignation over the execution of the Irish Free State minister of justice and foreign affairs. How different was their attitude when the Soviet minister to Poland was assassinated by a young monarchist. That youthful murderer was subtly justified in the commission of the crime. How class-conscious those capitalistic hacks are. O'Higgins was an imperialist agent. Voikoff was a representative of the Workers' and Peasants' Government. That explains the double standard of judgment.

In the lengthy verbal tilt between John F. Hylan, former mayor of the metropolis and Samuel Untermyer, a liberal with a roving commission to fight for sundry worthy causes that are usually frowned on by some substantial financial group, Hylan came off with flying colors. John refused to be intimidated and he whaled the interests gallantly. Hylan is a five-cent-fare man and in this big city a five-cent platform is no flimsy support. It is reported that Hylan did not get thin on his struggle in behalf of the corn-trodden patrons of the I.R.T. and B.-M.T. Nevertheless a life is to see him in action and contributing to the gaiety of the masses.

Hylan represented certain petty bourgeois interests who were in conflict with Wall Street. The latter commissioned Al Smith to cut John F. off from his political scalp and Al succeeded after practicing with the knife for a few years. In return for Al's services Wall Street, or a substantial section thereof, agreed that it would not consider it a calamity should Al manage to reach the white house. Big Bill is on top just now but Smith and Tammany are anxious to collar the five-cent vote that John lived on for many years. Hence the farce in which Samuel Untermyer is playing a leading role. We advise the workers to keep out of the laughs they can out of the comedy. That's about all they will ever get out of it.

Everybody does not love a cowboy, it seems. While our nice little president was maiming the horses giggle on the plains of South Dakota, dressed out in the general regalia, fancy farmers were meeting in conference in Minneapolis and throwing their lariats at the white house incumbent. Those farmers are hard to please. Only a few short weeks ago, Coolidge informed them that there was not a flaw in the national sentiment and that corn-belt woe was a drug on the market. Now here are those farmers acting as if he never told them that and nothing to worry about.

The Geneva naval conference is still marking time without any indications that an agreement between the rival powers will be reached. Even if for the sake of appearances a formula if one can thus be agreed on) is that is not palatable it will mean nothing. The struggle for naval supremacy the offshoot of world commercial rivalry will go on with greater intensity.

Sir Austen Chamberlain declared in the house of commons that war with the United States was outlawed in every British heart. He did not seem to be so sure that this applied to the great heart of America. Strange to say there are people that believed this bunk. The masses of Great Britain and the United States have not a thing to say about the war plans of their respective imperialists. There is a lot to fight and die when their masters give the word. Of course it will not be always thus. The time will come when the workers of all countries now under the flag of capitalism will refuse to kill each other for the profit of others, but will get rid of capitalism, and automatically of capitalists. Until then wars are certainties and peace an illusion.

Those are critical and trying days for Sacco and Vanzetti. The committee appointed by the governor of Massachusetts is busy and perhaps we may know inside of another week whether those long-suffering labor organizers will be seated in the electric chair, committed to a living death in the penitentiary or freed. Now more than ever the voices of the American workers should be raised in unison in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti. It is almost impossible of belief that at this crucial hour when the lives of all workers should be on their comrades threatened with death at the hands of the capitalists of Massachusetts, that the socialists should be trying to disrupt the ranks of those whose long-drawn struggle has hitherto halted the hand of the executioners. For this treachery

CORRECTION IN CONNECTION WITH COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL CABLE

The DAILY WORKER has been instructed by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party to publish the following correction:

"The headline and explanatory comment published over the Communist International cable of July 7th was not authorized by the Central Executive Committee but was written in The DAILY WORKER editorial office. The Central Executive Committee did not offer any interpretation of the Communist International cable. It is self explanatory and is supplemented by the cable of July 10th, published yesterday. The two cables are to be taken together, with the forthcoming decisions of the American Commission, as showing what the Communist International desires in the American Party. The Communist International stresses the necessity of unifying the Party and preventing a factional fight, especially in view of the lack of fundamental political differences and the big tasks, such as the war danger, facing the Party."

Central Executive Committee Issues Call To Party Membership

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party having considered the recent Federal Grand Jury indictment against The DAILY WORKER, the official organ of our party, calls upon party members to rally to the campaign to raise funds to GUARD THE DAILY WORKER. The Central Executive Committee sees in this latest move of the federal government, instigated by various patriotic organizations which are closely affiliated with the capitalist interests of the country, another step in the general offensive against the labor movement. It is but another instance of the growing aggressiveness of American imperialism and a further development of its increasing war machinations.

The Central Executive Committee calls upon all the units of the party to utilize the Dollar Certificates for the GUARD THE DAILY WORKER FUND to reach sympathizers and all available connections outside of the party, so as to build a strong and impregnable wall of defense around our party organ. The party must recognize that the tremendous pressure which is being brought to bear upon The DAILY WORKER, is due to the fact that the capitalist class of America, is fully aware of the danger of such a paper, to the security and domination of the exploiters.

We call upon the party therefore, to be the leader in the fight to protect our party organ, to demonstrate its ability to rally a wide circle of supporters in the fight to defend our chief weapon against the capitalist attack upon the labor movement, and to safeguard our strongest instrument in the fight against the new war danger.

GENEVA CONFAB FAILURE SEEN BY WASHINGTON

See Race for Naval Armaments

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Scant hope was held out here today that the Geneva naval conference will survive the forthcoming plenary meeting.

Even state department officials, who have hitherto pretended to be unfailingly optimistic concerning a favorable prospect of an amicable agreement between Great Britain and the United States on the controversial question of cruisers.

Britain's latest proposal, which is understood to be for limitation of the number of 10,000-ton cruisers each nation could possess, with no limitation at all on total cruiser tonnage, was described unofficially as but little, if any more, acceptable to this government than Britain's previous proposals.

Every cruiser proposal Britain has advanced to date, it was pointed out, would have the net effect of giving the British navy undeniable naval superiority.

The lobbyists for a big navy are very busy here and swarm about the state department daily, usually vacant at this time of year, and for the most part but half full even during sessions of congress because big business feels that it needs fewer lobbyists to influence the Coolidge administration, are now full of agents of the armor plate, munition, arms and other trusts interested in big appropriations for armaments. The state department is acting as a publicity agent for these elements and utilizing the Geneva fiasco as an excuse for their propaganda.

PEASANT RISINGS SHAKE REACTION THRUOUT CHINA

Seize Town and Release Political Prisoners

SHANGHAI, July 13.—The Chinese press here reports a big peasant outbreak in South Kiangsu province. The uprising is against the Nanking government and the agents of Chiang Kai-shek have been driven from the province by the mighty sweep of the revolt. It is reported that the Nanking bandits have ordered army divisions into the province with orders to crush the rising with the utmost force, as other risings are constantly be put down. But each time the peasants are crushed the victory of the reaction proves only temporary, for the masses retire only long enough to stage new and more widespread and menacing outbreaks.

CANTON, July 13.—Over 2,000 peasants stormed Yamen town and took all the public buildings by force from the Nanking shirelings of Chiang Kai-shek, released two hundred prisoners held in the jails charged with crimes against the Nanking government. The whole countryside is inflamed as the real purpose of the militarist traitors becomes known and indications are that the whole country formerly affected by the nationalist movement before the series of betrayals of Chiang Kai-shek, Feng Yu-hsiang and smaller military adventurers who placed themselves at the head of the armed forces will soon be swept with the flame of peasant revolts, thus uniting their fate as to further wage changes, either up or down, under a scheme as drafted by the famous Duncan Royal Commission.

At this convention the "sleepy giant" received his first report on the results obtained by Besco out of a year's operation under the Duncan scheme of exploitation. A fellow by the name of Scott was the miners' representative to audit the Besco books and determine whether Besco could afford to pay more wages or the miners have to suffer another cut in order to keep the wheels of industry going. Scott made his first report to this convention, and the re-

250,000 PERILED BY EPIDEMIC IN FLOODED SECTION

Refugees Are Herded Like Cattle

WASHINGTON (FP). — In the richest nation on earth, 250,000 men, women and children are homeless, destitute, forsaken, without hope of relief and in peril of death from raging epidemics. This summarizes the appalling situation in the "Evangeline Parishes" of Louisiana, 75 per cent of which are still under water.

"No national agency is doing out a helping hand for these miserable people," admits Representative Aswell of Louisiana. "They are appealing to Washington, to Calvin Coolidge, to the prosperous people of the east, but no word of comfort or effective assistance has come to them.

Red Cross "Relief."

"The Red Cross is granting relief in extremo emergency cases only to families on the point of starvation. As the waters slowly recede from what was formerly their homes, they see only sand-covered land which has been swept clean of buildings and crops. It is too late now to plant sugar or cotton.

"What is going to happen to these people of Louisiana?" Aswell was asked by Federated Press.

"God only knows, I don't," he answered. "Congress could give all the help needed. We finished the fiscal year $600,000,000 to the good. But congress will not be called into special session and no other agency seems to cope with the situation."

When the report of Representative Tilson, republican house floor leader, that "all of the money that can be helpfully utilized is now forthcoming," was brought to Aswell's attention, he commented laconically, "Yes, plenty of tin money."

Hundreds of Malaria Cases.

Malaria is springing at these hopeless people from the marshes. Hundreds of cases have been reported, daily the bodies of victims are being laid away in rough-hewn pine boxes while executives of the Red Cross and the Rockefeller Foundation negotiate in New York and Washington over quotas to be set aside to fight the plague.

Washington representatives of New Orleans papers admit privately that the Red Cross is earning the hatred of the destitute people. As many as a thousand farmers are herded into a single commissary line, forced to stand for hours in the blazing southern sun, advancing by inches toward the supply depot where they finally get meagre rations of bread and meal.

Admit Resentment.

Red Cross officials in Washington, in self defense, point out that they have only $5,000,000 to carry on relief and rehabilitation work which would cost nearer $500,000,000. They admit dissatisfaction is rampant.

The Evangeline country was settled by the Acadians expelled from eastern Canada by the British after the French and Indian wars. Sugar, the main crop, is ruined without the possibility of planting again. A few forage crops may be sowed for cattle after the flood recedes.

BEGIN EVICTION OF COAL MINERS AT BROWNSVILLE

County Sheriff Betrays Men Who Elected Him

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., July 13.—(FP).—A 10-day notices to vacate served on union miners in company houses have expired and the Vesta Coal Co. is starting eviction proceedings. The Vesta is a subsidiary of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Co. The mine ran under union agreement until April 1 but has since vainly attempted to resume open shop at reduced wages.

Union miners are bitterly disappointed with the sheriff of Washington county who was elected by their votes but now sides viciously with the operators. Labor party talk is spreading as the sheriff, the coal and iron police and the state constabulary club the pickets off the public highway and beat them up in the company jail.

Lewis Vote Steal Must Be Probed, Says Miner Convention of Scotia

GLACE BAY, Nova Scotia, June 30 (By Mail).—The eighth annual convention of District No. 26, U. M. W. of A. met in New Glasgow, N. S., June 29-28, with 110 delegates present. These annual gatherings are a good means by which to judge the temper of the miners. The present convention indicated a rather sleepy and grumbling spirit that was too tired to battle, but would give an ugly growl at any attempt to further degrade and humble him. Under Tory influence the miners of Nova Scotia had been induced to accept a ten per cent wage cut a year ago, and to place their fate as to further wage changes, either up or down, under a scheme as drafted by the famous Duncan Royal Commission.

Former Members of Klan File Suit to Get Line On $15,000,000 of Funds

PITTSBURGH, July 13.—Former members stating that the Ku Klux Klan collected $15,000,000 in Pennsylvania in the last seven years without ever accounting for it, five members of the organization asked the U. S. District court here today to appoint a receiver for the klan in this state and to compel an accounting.

The plaintiffs, Rev. J. S. Strayer, a state legislator of Latrobe; Dr. Charles Hunter, North Besemer; Dr. Charles Oyver, Wilkinsburg; W. C. Davis, Manor, and Van A. Barrckman, Pittsburgh attorney, were named last week in a suit filed by the klan seeking damages and accusing the defendants of attempting to injure the Klan. They charged that funds were misused to enrich the Klan's promoters and to spread the spirit of disrespect of government, law and order."

Hoover To Be Sole Air Czar; Only the Congress Could Limit New Power

WASHINGTON, July 13 (FP).—Herbert Hoover will be undisputed ruler of the air lanes after July 27, 1928 unless congress clips his wings, an exhibit procedure Senator Dill, author of the famous radio law, fought against the clause which terminates the federal radio commission's regulatory powers on that date and makes it a court of final judicial review over Hoover orders. Inasmuch as Hoover supporters constitute the majority of the board, its recess power is not much feared.

Special Grand Jury And Prosecutors in Jackson Graft Case

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 13.—Prosecutor Remy of Marion County announces that he will ask that special state prosecutors be appointed to handle the charges of D. C. Stephenson that the Ku Klux Klan corruptly controlled the politics of the state of Indiana, and that part of the graft money was given to Governor Ed Jackson to put him into office.

The state prosecutors suggested by Remy are John W. Holtzman and James A. Collins, and a special Grand Jury will be also requested.

The last grand jury action resulted in a perfunctory investigation, and a "white wash" for all the accused. It was ordered at the instance of some of the accused.

Stevenson continues to insist that he has complete documentary evidence. It has been ascertained that Governor Jackson did not include in his sworn statement of election funds the $1,500 check which Stephenson says was given by him to the governor, and which has been published to show what experts say is the governor's endorsement on the back.

Four more checks have been published in Indianapolis papers are claimed to have been issued by Stephenson to a Negro paper, the Indianapolis Ledger for Jackson publicity, at a time when the Klan was attacking negroes most vigorously.

BENCHLEY AVERS THAYER SAID HE 'WOULD GET THEM'

Sacco-Vanzetti Hearing Reveals Prejudice

BOSTON, July 13. — Robert C. Benchley, New York dramatic critic, was called before Gov. Fuller's advisory committee yesterday and substantiated the statements contained in his affidavit in which he charged that Webster Thayer, judge in the Sacco and Vanzetti trial made "prejudiced and biased" public remarks while the famous case was in progress.

Benchley was summoned by the defense to give details of the affidavit he had submitted, which told of a conversation with Loring Coes of Worcester. Benchley affirmed Coes told him of statements made by Thayer at the Worcester Golf Club, which showed that the judge was prejudiced in the case.

Promised to Get Them.

The affidavit read in part: "Mr. Coes said that Judge Thayer had referred to Sacco and Vanzetti as 'bolsheviki' who were trying to intimidate him, and said that he would get them good and proper."

Benchley was briefly cross examined by Dudley P. Ranney, representing the prosecution before the committee.

Albert H. Hamilton, firearms expert of Auburn, N. Y., was the first witness called yesterday, and spent some time with the committee behind closed doors. When he left he refused to make any statement.

And Still They Come.

After Benchley the commission interviewed Joseph Glancy, a newspaperman. He was in the commission room about five minutes telling of a conversation he had with Coes regarding the Benchley affidavit.

The next commission witness was Mrs. Lolla B. Rantoul who attended the trial as an unofficial observer for the Greater Boston Federation of Churches. She also wrote a statement concerning Judge Thayer in which she said that his attitude and private conversation was of a prejudiced nature.

American Council Says Mme. Borodin Released By Peking High Court

WASHINGTON, July 13. Madame Borodin, wife of the advisor to the Nationalist Government, at the time of its advance against the North has been ordered released by the Peking high court, F. L. Mayer, American consul advised the state department today. She was arrested some months ago, and charged with "treason" to Chang Tso-lin. There was never any evidence against her, but Chang's officers raided a neutral ship, the "Pamiat Lenina" flying the flag of the U. S. S. R. to capture her, and have held her prisoner until now.

Prosecutor Relates Police Chief Part In Killing Editor

CANTON, Ohio, July 12.—The trial of S. A. Lengel, who is accused of being part of a police and underworld conspiracy which resulted in the assassination of Don Mellett, Canton publisher, got under way today. Prosecutor Henry Harter in his opening statement accused Lengel, former police chief, of joining with Ben Rudner, Massillon bootlegger; Louis Mazer, Canton underworld leader; Floyd Streitenberger, then a Canton detective, and Pat McDermott, hired gunman in a plot to kill the publisher because of his editorial attacks on vice conditions and his exposure of the bribery of policemen by the crooks of the town.

Jump In Front of Train.

An unidentified woman, about 60 years old, jumped in front of a Sixth avenue "L" train yesterday at the Fiftieth street station and was instantly killed.

Trainmen and the wrecking crew spent half an hour taking the woman's body off the track, causing a tie-up in downtown service.

The woman had $2.75 and a key in a leather pocketbook, but no items of identification.

BIAS CHARGED IN CIVIL LIBERTIES' SACCO STATEMENT

Pointing out that the "investigation" of the smash-up of the Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration in Union Square last Thursday, conducted by a committee appointed by the American Civil Liberties Union was never actually conducted and that the "investigation committee" was headed by Norman Thomas, prominent socialist leader, the Workers (Communist) Party, New York district, requests that the Civil Liberties withdraw its unfair charges against the Workers (Communist) Party and appoint a new committee to conduct a genuine investigation of the affair.

Despite the fact that socialists had denied Ben Gold an opportunity of claiming the audience and had called in the police who broke up the demonstration, the statement of the "investigation committee," headed by Norman Thomas, socialist leader, accuses

CATTLE RAISERS VISITING CAL TO MAKE COMPLAINT

"Federal Government Run for Bankers"

RAPID CITY, S. D., July 13.—Grievances of the agricultural west against the capitalistic east are cropping up in such proximity to the summer White House as to embarrass President Coolidge.

"The federal government is being run for the benefit of the bankers of Wall Street as against the farmers and cattlemen of the west."

That, in effect, is the cry which is being raised here now that the first glamor of entertaining a president for the summer has subsided.

Paul E. Martin, president of an infant association of cattlemen, just organized in an effort to force the packers to "pay a fair price" for beef on the hoof, is the first representative of western discontent to openly tell the executive of this resentment.

Calling at the temporary executive offices to plead the cause of the cattle ranners, Martin called attention to what he considered a concrete instance of official Washington favoring the moneyed interest to the detriment of the people of the west. He referred to the efforts of the banks just following the close of the war in depooling for the liquidation of all cattle loans.

"Our information," he said, "was that the order came from Washington through the federal reserve system. It seems to us that things are operated for Wall Street to the exclusion of those who actually produce."

For Belonging to Peace Organization 2 YWCA Secretaries Lose Jobs

FORT WAYNE, Ind., July 13.—Because they were members of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, Ida Jones, general secretary of the Fort Wayne Young Womens Christian Association for the last nine years, and Pattie Ellis, industrial secretary, have been forced to resign their positions.

According to Bishop Paul Jones, secretary of the fellowship, who came here to investigate the case, the resignations were forced by a combination of "militarists, business interests and yellow journalism."

The trouble is the aftermath of a talk on world peace here last March. Following a remonstrance with Miss Jones for allowing the man to talk, the Fort Wayne afternoon newspaper began publishing news and editorial attacks on her and Miss Ellis. The board link with Moscow was brought up and became a part of the attack against the two women.

Drouhin Will Pilot Columbia Plane Back From Paris, He Says

PARIS, July 13.—Marcel Drouhin, French pilot, today declared that he intends to pilot the Bellanca plane Columbia from Paris to New York flight with Charles A. Levine as a passenger.

Drouhin denied there had been any split with Levine.

Drouhin is hard at work overhauling the Columbia.

State Police Sentenced For Terms Ranging From Two to Five Years in Jail

FLEMINGTON, N. Sentences range from five to two years each.

Third Degree Fails to Get Murder Confession

District Attorney Dodd, armed with a mass of circumstantial "evidence" appeared before the Kings County Grand Jury to ask for an indictment for the murders of Miss Sarah Elizabeth Brownell and Mrs. Alfred Bennett.

Altho the suspect, Ludwig Lee, was subjected to twenty-four hours of third degree torture the district attorney failed to get his "confession."

Dime-detherment mysteries are almost a common occurrence in New York and the police are jubilant now that they have found a suspect on which to pin all recent cases.

Lee murdered Miss Brownell for money, according to Dodd's theory and killed Mrs. Bennett Saturday night when she happened upon him disposing of the body.

PREPAIRING FOR I.R.T. STRIKE, SAY UNION LEADERS

"Yellow Dog" Contract, Fake Union, Issues

The American Federation of Labor today entered the dispute between the I. R. T. and part of its 12,975 employes with the result; it was said, that a strike vote now hinges on the outcome of a conference between workers and William Green, president of the federation.

The conference was to be held at the Hotel Continental with P. J. Shea, executive board member of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America, and James H. Coleman, organizer, representing the employes who are members of the association.

8,500 Workers Ready.

Although I. R. T. officials insist there is no danger of a strike, Coleman claims that approximately 8,500 men are ready to back the association in the event a walk-out is called. The I. R. T. claims that 11,709 men, or ninety-seven per cent, have signed the new working agreement. The percentage may be increased to ninety-nine per cent within a few days, according to Frank Hedley, president of the company.

Strike threats are based on the fact that the I. R. T. has issued new forms of individual contracts. Coleman claims the employes are being "bulldozed" into signing these contracts.

There is great dissatisfaction among the 10,500 Interborough Rapid Transit workers, much quiet talk of a strike is going on, the "yellow dog" contract the workers have been forced to sign has produced resentment that has been but slightly allayed by the restoration of the remaining 5 per cent of the 10 per cent wage slash made in 1921.

This is the result of a survey made by organizers who were active in the last strike and is as accurate as such a survey can be under the difficult conditions prevailing as a result of the I. R. T.'s spy system.

Union Work Progressing.

In addition to this the temporary court order restraining any and all persons from organizing the workers is anything but the company union renders all known organizers liable to immediate imprisonment.

In spite of this, encouraging reports are received at the headquarters of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes and it is stated by responsible members that steady and consistent organization work can build a union able to defeat the industrial feudalism of the I. R. T.

Additional dissatisfaction has arisen recently among the I. R. T. workers by reason of the fact that the new "yellow dog" contract was authorized by the so-called "Committee of Sixty-one" of the I. R. T. "brotherhood" without the rest of 10,500 workers being consulted. No meeting of the "brotherhood" was held and no referendum was taken.

Background of Situation.

A year ago this month the subway motormen attempted to lead a general walkout of the interborough workers. For a month they fought valiantly, their rank and file leaders organizing them into an independent union—the Consolidated Railroad Workers. Then they called on the Amalgamated Assn. to send in organizers.

Subway workers are especially sore now. They have heard their employers testify to the Transit Commission what big bonuses they gave themselves for breaking the strike. And now these employers are coercing the workers into signing the worst "yellow dog" contract which has yet appeared.

Since a recent supreme court decision nullified the yellow dog contract where no consideration is involved between the parties, the subway employers have devised new devilry. Without having their company union locals so much as vote on it, the company insists that the men sign a new agreement.

Insight Into Company Methods.

But here's the joker. Accompanying the contract are two books of rules in which dozens of causes for discharge are enumerated. Under one or another of these pretexts, the company can fire any or all of its 10,500 workers. The company even specifies that it can fire men when the force has to be cut because more labor saving devices have been adopted.

Company agents claim to be hot on the trail of workers who refuse to sign. They even advertise that those bucking the new agreement are reported every 10 minutes! Despite the spies, it is practically over half the workers of the Interborough Rapid Transit and other transit lines have joined the Amalgamated Assn.

port showed that Besco had done not too bad. There was a profit of something like $2,250,000, but that trifle would hardly permit of an increase on a five dollar a day wage rate with a working year of 160 days, according to John W. McLeod, Tory president of District No. 26, U. M. W. of A. John's policy was to have the miners agree now to sign up the present wage contract for another year, and he would try and induce Wolvin to give the lower paid men a few cents on the miserable day rate now paid them out of the unearned millions that Wolvin had collected during the year as a result of a Tory wage cut in this country and a Tory lock-out of the miners in the old country. At this convention the "sleepy giant" growled and turned it down by a vote of four to one. The day after Scott reported the press carried a statement from Roy Wolvin that the Dominion Steel Corporation had made a net profit of one and three-quarter million dollars. Coal had been sold to the steel works at Sydney for less than the cost of production and so piled up millions for Wolvin. All this the "giant" read and knew while in session in New Glasgow, but was unable to rise up and do battle for a share of the wealth that he had been tricked out of. The best that he could do was to prevent McLeod and the cries from him to him up now with a new wage contract and put that event off till a future convention which is to be called in January next for the purpose of drafting a new wage policy.

Fat, Flabby and Fifty

The mighty John L. Lewis had a personal representative at this convention in the person of Lewis' national Board Member from Frank Farrington's district, his guy's name is Dobbina, he is fat, flabby, fair and fifty. He could not talk very, well about Farrington selling out to the Peabody Coal Company at $25,000 per year, nor about the traitor, John L. Lewis, stealing the recent international election, however, the delegates had from over-eating and his wind was bad from over-drinking, and the Communists were bad and these three bad things constituted the three heads of his sermon, and between each sentence he would sandwich in the slogan of all fat boys: "God bless you, God speed you." The "giant" again growled at this piffle and passed a resolution demanding the International Executive Board to set up a special commission on which one-half of the members shall be appointed by John Brophy to recount the vote cast at the last International election, believing that Lewis stole the election from Brophy.

Let Communist Question Drop.

The constitution of District No. 26 provides for a general holiday on May 1 each year. John W. McLeod made a motion to cut May 1 out of the constitution, and substitute June 11 instead. June 11 is the date that Besco thugs murdered William Davis at New Waterford power plant and McLeod like the Tory trickster that he is tried to use the Davis case to cut out May Day. The vice-president was in the chair and had refused to accept a motion to divide the question and take a vote on each day separately.

This put the convention into a turmoil and the "giant" woke up again and threw the vice-president out of the chair and made both days a holiday in future by a vote of five to one. There was still the big question to come up of expelling the Communists. There were a few Communists at the convention as delegates and were in the forefront of every forward looking move during the week, after this spark it is practically over half the workers of the Interborough Rapid Transit and other transit lines have joined the Amalgamated Assn.

AmericanMineCongress Issues Questionnaires in New Propaganda Plot

WASHINGTON, (FP) July 13.—Another deluge of propaganda against the five-day week, public ownership and in favor of railroad consolidation and tax-shifting is foreseen in elaborate questionaires being propounded by the American Mining Congress. Although "500 selected representatives of various groups of economists, professional men and women and business interests" will constitute this "symposium of national thought on outstanding issues before the public," not one labor man may be lecinded in the list.

Bankers, manufacturers, wholesalers, business associations and railway executives are allotted 50 questionnaires to each group, but labor, if it is heard at all, will have to come under the "miscellaneous positions" class. Farmers rate a little higher than workers, as five of them will be heard from. Replies will be published in the Mining Congress Journal.

The Concert.

This is "Coney Island Stadium Week." Everybody must work energetically to make the Coney Island Stadium Concert a hundred per cent success. You must all remember that this concert is not only an entertainment to raise money, but must be an expression of solidarity of the New York workers with the striking furriers and arrested cloakmakers.

The McGrady-Wolf-Sigman-Schipiakoff clique would like nothing better than to see the concert a failure. Such an event would be the occasion of a grand celebration by them as a sign that the masses are deserting the Left.

The Stadium takes in 30,000 people. We must show that not only will the Stadium be packed but that 10,000 people will be turned back. Only then will the Coney Island Stadium concert be a success.

Sell tickets. See to it that all your friends and acquaintances come to the Concert. The Black Hundred must have no cause to rejoice. See to it that your Organization buys tickets, and that the money for same is immediately turned into the Defense Office. We must all stand as one.

Progressive Clubs Buys 50 Tickets.

The Asaritizer Young Progressive Club at its last meeting, decided to carry on an intensive campaign to help the Furriers strikers and arrested Cloakmakers. They also decided to buy $50.00 worth of tickets for the Coney Island Stadium Concert and that each member should buy at least one $10 Bond. $30 on account of bonds has already been forwarded to the Defense Office.

The Azarltzer Progressive Club followed the example of the other workers' organizations that have bought tickets for the Concert. Those clubs who have not yet responded are asked to do so at once. Every workers' organizations must buy tickets for their entire membership.

A metting of the united conference of Workers' Organizations was held on Friday evening, July 1st, where the question of supporting the Defense, was taken up. Rose Worthis and Sam Lipsin were present at this meeting. On an appeal of Lipzin $300 was immediately raised. A number of measures to help the Defense were adopted.

Cooperators to Raise Money.

A banquet was held at the Unity Cooperative House, 29th Street and Lexington Avenue, in honor of the arrested furrier pickets. Sam Lipzin present at the banquet made an appeal for the Defense. $189.70 was raised. This is not the first time the Unity Cooperators raised money for the Defense and they promise it shall not be the last.

Other Contributions.

The International Branch of the Workers Party in Bayonne, forwarded $5 and S. Freeman of Savannah, Georgia, sent $3, to the Defense.

Transit Hearing Is Attacked by Hylan As Political Stunt

Charging that "Untermyer's talk about municipalizing the subways for the city is a joke to fool the people" former Mayor Hylan continued his attacks on the transit commission's open and executive yesterday.

Both Untermyer and Hylan issued statements yesterday in which they both indulged in a great deal of personal recrimination.

Hylan's statement read in part: "Let the Transit Commission give the people service and stop advertising Mr. Untermyer. Let it stop playing politics and compel the companies to do their duty in accordance with the law and their contracts."

"Joke" Says Hylan.

"Mr. Untermyer's talk about the recapture and municipal operation of subways is a joke to fool the people. If he is for municipal operation of the subways and is sincere about the recapture, why was the law firm that he and his family are interested in against operating buses municipally?"

Untermyer said in part, "It has been my rule never to discuss for publication proceedings in which I concerned as counsel except in the court room. I shall adhere to that rule except to say that the scene was staged by Hylan in the hope of camouflaging his incredible ignorance of everything pertaining to transit."

Jersey Politicians in Scramble for Jobs

(Special To DAILY WORKER).

NEWARK, N. J., July 13.—A brazen example of how patriotic orders like the Junior Order of American Mechanics in New Jersey are exploited for private profit was bared with the attempt to remove Edwin T. Barclay of Englishtown as the State Council Secretary.

The charges against Barclay are that he attempted to run down Senator Edge, bred opposition against Stokes the senatorial aspirant and that he tried to extort $15,000 from State Senator Arthur Whitney when he was the Republican candidate for governor.

There is a split in the ranks of the G. O. P. There seem to be more aspirants for jobs than offices—subsequently the maneuver on the part of a faction of the G. O. P. in the Junior Order to dominate the organization for its own political purposes.

The charges of bribery, inefficiency are being taken up by an investigating committee headed by Arthur Barhart of Newark.

Steel Trust Strike Case Dismissed After Over Four Years

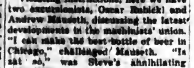
PITTSBURGH, July 15.—Indictments against eight defendants in the well known Pittsburgh Settlers Case, which was the result of wholesale "Red Raids" on May 1st, 1923, was finally quashed, it was announced several days ago. The defendants, who for more than four years were held under exorbitant high bail, of from five to fifteen thousand dollars are Max Jenkins, Tom Myerscough, Morris Pasternak, John Urban, A. Rosterus, George Katsiolis, A. Veytuik and J. Kovalsky. The indictments were squashed on the same grounds as the cases of Sadolkas and Mesny were recently quashed in the courts in Pittsburgh and Beaver respectively, namely that "the indictment does not contain any sufficient allegations to sustain a conviction under any of the counts."

Together with above defendants were also arrested Fred Merrick and Ed. Hornick. Merrick's case came up for trial in November 1925. He pleaded Nolle Condere and was given a suspended sentence of ten years. Ed Hornick was tried immediately after Herrick, was found guilty on two counts after a trial which lasted a whole week. A motion for a new trial was made by attorney Isaak Ferguson of Chicago, but up to date Judge Trainer, who tried the case rendered on decision on this motion.

The defense of all these cases were taken care of by the International Labor Defense thru attorneys Meredith Marshall, Isaac Ferguson and George Shaffer and it involved an expense of more than fifteen thousand dollars, not counting the numerous days lost by the defendants in jail and in courts. There are still outstanding bills which the defense committee has to pay on account of this case. Funds are also urgently needed to defend the Woodlawn Sedition Cases which resulted in a conviction in Beaver County Court. Friends are urged to send checks to the International Labor Defense, 937 Metcalfe Bldg., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Bricklayers Will Get $1.62½ an Hour

CLEVELAND, (FP) July 13.—Increase of wages from $1.50 to $1.62½ an hour has been won by Cleveland union bricklayers. The agreement was reached after months of negotiations covering 30 meetings. 200 members of the local elevator constructors union will receive wage boosts from $1.50 to $1.80 an hour, with a 1½ cent increase to $1.67 for helpers, as a result of the bricklayers raise. Their agreement calls for a wage rate equal to the average paid in the city's highest paid building trades.



Cleveland Federation Reelects.

CLEVELAND (FP) July 13.—All officers of the Cleveland Federation of Labor were reelected by acclamation. Harry McLaughlin is president and James F. Mullen secretary and business agent.

Violating instructions, here we have two executionists, Oscar Ewbicki and Andrew Mauseth, discussing the latest developments in the anthracite miners' union. "I can make the best bottle of beer in Chicago," challenged Mauseth. "Is dat so," was Steve's skeptical comeback.

The Snooping Sex.

Suspecting that not all the excursionists heeded Hammersmark's injunction against ultra-modern bathing suits, here are two members of the Young Workers League exploring the shady spots on Michigan City's waterfront.

Surprise Hinted On Big Chicago Hoosier Joy Ride

CHICAGO, Ill., July 13.—Hundreds of tickets have been sold for the excursion from here to Michigan City which is scheduled to take place on July 17th, leaving from the Goodrich docks on Municipal Pier at 9:30 A. M. and due to return at 7 P. M.

Several innovations are going to be tried on the boat by way of adding to the interest, whether is expressively warm discussions of all topics except The DAILY WORKER will be squelched mercilessly. No matter how the weather behaves, according to Sam Hammersmark, leader of the expedition, he will see to it that The DAILY WORKER Builders are organized in Chicago. That is the main purpose of the excursion.

"The DAILY WORKER is under fire from all sides," Sam declared and every militant worth his salt must rally to its defense. There is no better way of spending July 17th than in devising ways and means to guard The DAILY WORKER from the capitalist jackals that are howling for its life."

Tickets for the return trip on the boat can be had for the small sum of $2.00, but they must be bought and paid for in advance, else tardy excursionists may suffer inconvenience and disappointment while the DAILY WORKER will suffer both in addition to financial loss.

Map of Jerusalem, where the churches of three religions coin money out of pilgrims to the "holy places" within the walls. The diety failed to protect the "Katholicon," the great temple of the Crusaders over the reputed birthplace of Jesus Christ from having its dome cracked by an earthquake. More important is the fact that many poor persons were killed and injured in the crowded quarters of the city.

The Foundries of the North Caucasian Metallurgical Trust.

The foundries of the North Caucasian Metallurgical Trust have considerably reduced their cost of production during the last six months: the factory "Dvigatel" (motor works) reduced it by 25 per cent; the others from 5 to 6 per cent. At the same time the quality of the products has considerably improved, especially that of motors. The output as compared with the first half of last year has increased by 43 per cent. The productivity of labor has increased in all factories on an average of 33 per cent. The overhead expenses have been considerably reduced.

Extension of the South Metallurgical Foundries.

The machine construction committee recognized the necessity of expanding the Nikolaiv Shipyard and others. It has also been decided to put the former "Russud" Mill into operation.

It has been decided to give the following orders to the Nikolaievsk shipyard: the communistari for communications will order 600 large freight cisterns instead of the 150 originally contemplated. An order will also be given to the same enterprise for 600 20-tons freight cars. Apart from that the Glavmetal is expected to place bigger orders for boilers. Next year the shipyard will have to produce twice as many boilers as this year. Beginning with this year it will also increase its production of Diesel engines.

All these measures will enable the Nikolaievsk shipyard to increase its output 65 per cent over the program for this year.

The machine construction committee asked the government to ratify as soon as possible the five year program for naval transport. This program, according to the orders given by the oil syndicate to the machine trust, includes the construction of eight large oil tanks, seven medium and five small ones, a total of twenty. The program of the Sotvorgflot (Soviet Commercial Fleet) includes the construction of four coasting freight vessels of 2,500 tons capacity; eight coasting freight vessels of the same capacity; and six coal freighters with the capacity of 4,000 tons, a total of eighteen vessels. Thus the program of ship construction includes 38 different vessels.

A Town On A Marsh.

Not so very long ago there were in the place of the present huge buildings in Siastroi, small wretched peasant huts surrounded by marshes. Here was the small village "Nasok."

Later a railway branch was constructed connected with the Murmansk main line. This railway branch brought building materials and work started in full force.

The marshy locality which was to become the future combine was drained, the water was directed to a brook. A whole industrial town grew up in its place. A workers' residential district of 62 two-floor houses is ready. Half of them have already been occupied by the workers. The others are nearly finished. This year another 22 houses are being built. Every one of them consists of several flats. There is living accommodation for 2,000 people.

The construction of the main buildings of the combine is also rapidly progressing. A celluloid factory is under construction which will start operations next January. Paper mills will be built next year. The largest building of the celluloid factory is the boiling department, where the timber to make the celluloid will be boiled. The construction of this building is already almost completed. It is already under roof and only the finishing touches have to be put to it. There will be 6 huge boilers in the building and these are now on the way from Germany. Every one of the boilers will be able to boil 280 cubic metres of wood at a time. The wood will be boiled at a temperature of 120 degrees Celsius.

Apart from the boiling department a drying department is also being built. The repair shop, a saw mill and other buildings have already been completed. The groundwork for the construction of a power station with a capacity of 15,000 kilowatts has already been finished. The equipment for the station has already been ordered.

The full productivity capacity of the celluloid factory will be about 50,000 tons. This amount will be able fully to meet the demands of the paper industry of the northwestern district and it will then be unnecessary to import celluloid from abroad. The paper mills which will be built next year near the celluloid factory will produce 25,000 tons of newspaper daily.

abolition, or severe curtailment of 10,000-ton cruisers, while not desiring to be limited as to the total tonnage of smaller cruisers, is considered both by state and navy department representatives here as a vital blow aimed at the efficiency of the American navy.

American naval experts strongly insist that the need for 10,000-ton cruisers is imperative from the standpoint of national defense because of the tremendous distances between American naval bases; Britain, with her naval bases circling the globe, can get comfortably along with cruisers of considerably lesser tonnage.

Again Reject Proposals.

There was another conference of naval experts and state department representatives here this morning to examine the latest reports of the British proposal emanating from Geneva, the navy experts registered unyielding opposition to the division of the cruisers into tonnage classes.

The American position was restated again as in favor of a total tonnage of cruisers anywhere up to 750,000 or 400,000 tons at the outside, with each nation to build within those limits according to individual needs. In the case of the United States this would mean a number of 10,000-ton cruisers certainly up to parity with the British, and the construction of as many smaller cruisers as would be possible within the limits defined. In the case of Britain, she could build as many smaller cruisers to fit her needs as the tonnage limit would allow.

Upon this general thesis, it was stipulated indicated today, there will be no yielding at Geneva, and the course of the conference is admitted on all sides.

Wife Implicates "Boston Billy."

MINEOLA, N. Y., July 13.—Secrets of the Long Island million dollar jewel thieves ring, revealed by a woman claiming to be "Boston Billy" Williams' wife, spurred Nassau County detectives today in their search for a prominent political boss said to be the leader of the "Gem Syndicate."

She was questioned at length about the gang's activities and is said to have asserted willingly that Williams participated in the Jesse L. Livermore robbery at Kingspoint, L. I. She probably will appear before the Grand Jury in Mineola Friday.

Barbers Elect Delegates.

NEWARK, N. J., July 15.—At a meeting of the journeymen barbers affiliated with Local 877 of Newark held last night, two delegates were elected. They are Frank Loria, formerly of the Robert Treat Barber Shop, located downtown and Joe Canarelli. President Shultz declined in favor of Frank Loria. This young local, which emerged victorious in its strike of a few weeks ago has succeeded in making 80 to 90 per cent of the barber shops of Newark and vicinity as union. In due time it expects to make a 100 per cent union town for the bachers. Meanwhile all fellow workers are urged not to patronize barber shops that do not display a union sign.

Teamsters Fight For Union.

NEWARK, N. J., July 13. — The teamsters affiliated with Local 478 have been conducting a militant fight against the bosses' association who are out to break their union and their strike has suffered another blow from the court and Judge Backus.

The latest attempt on the part of the courts is to hold Fred Carlin the business agent of Local 478 or the Teamsters' Union Local 641 of the same International and Local 825 of the hoisting engineers in contempt of court for violating the modification of the injunction issued against the above defendants. The specific charge is that the union attempted to get two scabs to quit their jobs and go out on strike.

Realtors Mulct City in Property Deals, Says Berry

The city pays from three to five times the assessed valuation of property on land that it buys for public purposes. That is the charge made by Comptroller Charles W. Berry, in a communication to the Board of Estimate.

Recommending that an investigation be made of the fancy prices which the city has paid for land and that a change in the methods of acquiring city land be instituted, Comptroller Berry declares that either the city has been losing a great deal of money By assessing city land at ridiculously low figures, or it has paid exorbitant prices for land purchased.

Bakers Win Strike.

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (FP) July 15.—After 10 weeks of struggle Bakery Workers Local 171 won its strike against New Haven shops for union recognition, the 8-hour day and an increase of $5 a week. A net gain of 1 large shop is announced by organizer Chris Kerker.

All strikebreakers sneaked out of town on the signing of the union agreement.

Dutch Plane Crash.

PARIS, July 13.—Four American girls escaped injury when a Dutch plane, flying from Paris to Amsterdam, crashed near St. Omer, a Dutch passenger was injured slightly, but all others were unhurt and have entrained for Amsterdam.

HENRY FORD instigated the attacks on the Jews in the Dearborn Independent according to an article written for "The American Hebrew" by F. G. Pipp, of Detroit. Ford's first editor. Of course this is not news. But in view of the reams of rubbish that have been published about Ford's innocence of the anti-Semite campaign it has the merit of being convincingly authoritative. People are apt to wonder why such a clever fellow as Ford should indulge in such a costly futility but those who have witnessed prosperous business men and stately matrons, trying to climb bare walls on Sunday in a pentecostal orgy, would not be surprised at the wild exhibition of lunacy given by Ford for the past few years.

WHEN Barnum hit on the bright idea that at least one sucker was ushered into this world with every sixty ticks of the clock his fortune was as good as made. Evidently Harry Pflum never heard of Barnum. Else he has a rotten memory. Pflum is held in $25,000 bail for having abstracted the sum of $1.50 from the purse of Freda Qual. The fakir-haron who married fifty women and got in the vicinity of one million dollars from them for his pains gets a front page and his bail may not be more prohibitive than that in which the cheap poker Pflum is held. It does not always pay to carry too closely to the fringe of honesty.

Bolsheviki Expel Pilsudski Fiend From Dalmatia; Are Soundly Beaten

RAGUSA, Jugo Slavia, July 13.—Invading fascists from the Italian shore, who marched in uniform thru the streets here singing "Giovanezza," their provocative marching song, and making derogatory remarks about the non-Italian natives, came off second best in the clash which they thus precipitated.

Despite the fact that the fascisti were armed with their clubs and with revolvers, the Dalmatians with stones and fista broke up their demonstration and put many of them in the hospital. The police arrived in time to prevent anybody from being killed.

The occasion of the march was a celebration by the Italian "optimists" or those who have signified their desire to be Italian subjects rather than Jugo Slavs. Relations between Mussolini and Jugo Slavia are not improved at all by today's happenings.

Cleveland to Protest.

Cleveland workers are called upon to voice their protest against the threatened execution of Sacco and Vanzetti which is now set for August 10th. The International Labor Defense together with the Cleveland branch of the Boston Defense Committee are arranging a joint protest meeting which will be held on the Public Square, Friday evening, July 15th at 8 p. m.

The list of speakers includes Wm. F. Barnard, lecturer and writer; Mrs. Frye, liberal; I. Amter, Workers Party; Carl Hacker, secretary, I. L. D, and others. N. Fagin will preside. All Cleveland workers are urged to attend this meeting and help to make it a very large demonstration.

St. Louis Mass Meeting.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 13. — The United Committee for the Freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti here will stage a monster protest mass meeting and parade on July 17.

The Central Trades and Labor Union has endorsed this move and a record turn out is expected, as organizers say. Labor representatives and officials of various political organizations will speak in Jewish, German, Italian, Jugo-Slavic and English.

The parade will start at the corner of Tenth and Carr Sts. and march toward Columbia Square where the mass meeting will be held.

More than 3,000 Italian workers are pledged to attend in addition to the labor and political groups according to H. L. Goldberg and John Braun of the committee.

The Assault on Beacon Hill

Beacon Hill, Boston, is the home of the blue-blooded aristocracy of the Hub City, the haven of the New England bankers, stock brokers, shoe manufacturers, textile mill owners, machine manufacturers and the "leading" families of the millionaires of that section of the country.

On Beacon Hill stands also the Massachusetts State House, where Governor Fuller and his gang sit in smug satisfaction as the date for the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti approaches.

Since January 24, the date of the removal of the Daily Worker to the East, the sale of the paper on the Boston newsstands has increased from a paltry 40, to the present figure of 300.

This fact is most significant.

It indicates that there is growing in the very heart of the black regime of Massachusetts reaction, a growing army of militants, a growing army of workers who refuse to be hoodwinked by the capitalist press.

It indicates that there is mobilizing against the reactionary forces of the Pine Tree State, which today are among the most brutal and ruthless in the entire country, a determined and courageous battalion of Daily Worker shock troops, who will not cease the assaults on the regime of Beacon Hill, until the workers are finally in control of this fortress of reaction.

The Civil Liberties Union Has Mad a Serious Blunder.

The Civil Liberties Union, if it is to continue to carry out the tasks imposed upon it by the role it has chosen for itself, that of champion of the civil and constitutional privileges accorded theoretically to minority opinion in the United States, will have to make some important changes in its very hurried pronouncement upon and the methods used to reach a conclusion in regard to the unfortunate occurrences at the recent Union Square demonstration for Sacco and Vanzetti.

Contrasted with the punctilious manner in which the Civil Liberties Union acts in investigating the ordinary run of free speech cases involving the question of civil rights, the method employed in its "investigation" of the Union Square affair smacks of star chamber proceedings.

It is obvious to anyone even casually familiar with the facts that the only way in which civil rights became involved in the Union Square occurrences was by the action of the police in breaking up the demonstration.

Strange enough the investigation committee of the Civil Liberties Union makes no mention of this unescapable fact.

Likewise the committee fails, in its public statement, to mention another almost equally important fact, that the police action was procured by the right wing socialist party elements who were nominally in charge of the meeting which was composed largely of left wing workers and sympathizers.

Furthermore, by allowing Norman Thomas, a leader of the socialist party, to function as chairman of the committee of three on which there was no Communist or left wing representative, and by calling no spokesman of these two political tendencies to give their version of what took place, the Civil Liberties Union in this instance abandoned completely all pretense of impartiality and functioned as part of the organized opposition of these working class elements.

In other words the Civil Liberties Union abandoned in deeds the very principle which gives it its excuse for existence—the theory that there is more than one side to every question involving civil liberties and that all sides have at least the right to be heard.

The greatest mistake that the Civil Liberties Union made in this instance was to denounce a section of the working class under the guise of rendering an impartial report. In this respect it adopted a method of procedure which is usually outlawed even in capitalist courts—that of bringing in alleged acts of the accused which have nothing to do with the particular matter under investigation as evidence of guilt. We refer to the last paragraph of the Civil Liberties statement in which the irrelevant charge is made that the Workers Party has been responsible for breaking up four other open air meetings—a bald statement in support of which no evidence is advanced and which is quite obviously tacked on to the general statement in order to justify a decision reached without investigation.

We would like to ask the Civil Liberties Union a few questions:

(1) Did its committee establish the fact that thousands of workers in the meeting called upon Ben Gold to speak?

(2) Did the committee establish the fact that Gold was unable to escape from the crowd, that he was picked up and carried towards the speakers' platforms in a manner which he could not prevent?

(3) Did the committee try to ascertain what the result would have been had the right wing socialist chairman allowed Gold to speak instead of kicking this popular young leader in full view of thousands of workers?

(4) Does the committee take the position that Ben Gold, one of the most active supporters of Sacco and Vanzetti, should not have stayed away from the meeting?

(5) Did the committee establish the fact that the huge Union Square meeting was largely the result of agitation and organization work on the part of the left wing in the New York labor movement?

(6) Does the committee know that had it not been for the decisive stand taken by left wing organizations and the workers (Communist) Party that in all probability there would have been no national and international movement in their behalf?

(7) What is the position of the committee—the practice of chairmen of workers' demonstrations calling upon the police to settle a dispute, real or fancied, between two sections of the labor movement?

(8) Does the committee see any connection with the enlistment of police by right wing socialists in the Union Square demonstration and similar tactics employed by the right wing in the struggle in the needle trades?

(9) Since when has it been the practice of the Civil Liberties Union to select as chairman of an impartial investigating committee a leader of one of the two political parties involved in a dispute?

The Civil Liberties Union must give clear and unequivocal answers to these questions, repudiate the findings of the biased committee appointed and conduct a genuine investigation if it is really desirous of being regarded as an impartial agency devoted to obtaining the free exercise of civil liberties by all working class and liberal groups.

The Threat of Geneva

The game of bluff and braggadocio played at Geneva seems to be nearing an end. Nothing has happened to change the main line which the misnamed disarmament conference followed from the start—that of showing the widening breach between Great Britain and the United States.

Because of her bad financial and industrial condition and the existence of a powerful labor party which the left wing every so often prods into action, Great Britain has been at a disadvantage from the start. The United States, with immense financial resources, a still stable industry and a politically backward working class, has been able to answer all argument and threats much as a millionaire poker player answers a clerk who has ventured into a game for high stakes—by shoving in a huge stack of symbols of wealth which the opponent cannot hope to match.

"Empire" has been the catchword at the Geneva conference. British imperial ambitions versus American imperial ambitions. The heated discussions over the types and tonnage of cruisers alone is enough to, corroborate this statement for cruisers are especially the type of war vessel by which colonial and semi-colonial peoples are intimidated, their ports blockaded and bombarded and "protection" given to the swarm of greedy adventurers which precedes and follows the flag of empire.

"Defense of trade routes" is the phrase by which the race in cruiser building is justified but trade routes mean nothing unless there is at one end of them at least, a colonial nation from which tribute is wrung. Finally then, cruisers are instruments of aggression against the industrially undeveloped nations by whose conquest empires are built.

Enough has been said at Geneva already, the verbal and written interchanges between the British and American representatives so sharp, that in the United States the clever publicists of the imperialists have been furnished material for the huge navy which American imperialism intends to build.

In Great Britain also the evidences of growing friction with American imperialism will be used to good advantage by the imperialists to still the complaint against increasingly heavy taxation accompanied by diminishing income.

It should be noted also that in many of the debates the necessity has been stressed by the American representatives of imperialist needs in the Pacific. As a matter of fact, the struggle for the control of China and the Pacific area, where the interests of all three conference powers—Great Britain, American and Japan—come into the sharpest conflict, has been of tremendous influence in determining the line of the discussion.

It is quite plain from the most recent dispatches, that both British and American governments have been somewhat alarmed by the very rapid sharpening of the antagonism and have tried to counteract the effect among the masses.

The two great imperialist powers are not yet ready for war with one another but there can be no question that at the Geneva conference there has been disclosed clearly the two great enemies of the imperialist world, the two enemies who are already preparing the machinery for war which, unless prevented by the united action of the British and American working class, will drown both in their own blood.

Economics Blast Coolidge's Political Hopes

Despite the assurances to President Coolidge that he had little to fear from discontented farmers because the wheat crop was going to be a big one this year, the stock market in Chicago does not support that view. The railroad magnates who travelled from New York to the Black Hills by daylight in order that they might report on the condition of the farmers, saw but one side of the story—the rich fields of waving grain. But they ignored the other side—the fact that world production of wheat is to be much higher this year than for some years past.

Government reports available on the stock exchange suggested a much larger supply for the 1927-28 trade than anticipated, so prices on Tuesday took a sudden drop of from three and a half to four and one-eighth cents per bushel over Monday's closing prices. The only chance the farmers now have of obtaining a higher price for their wheat is the possibility of black rust destroying a large part of the growing crop. No matter what happens there is no prospect of prosperity for the farmers. Most of them will not even realize sufficient income to cover the actual cost of production and ever more agricultural land will fall under the control of the mortgage bankers.

In face of the economic conditions confronting them it is certain that the farmers will not fall for the palaver of the Coolidge boosters. But there is grave danger of their again being fooled into following the equally vicious and subservient politicians of the Lowden or Dawes calibre who are utilizing the misery of the farmers as a spring-board to political eminence.

So long as the bankers, railroads and the grain and elevator trusts are free to gouge the farmer to the limit there will be no lasting prosperity for him and the downward trend must continue because of inexorable economic conditions that are an integral part of capitalist production.

Without a party embodying the class demands of the workers and farmers both these basic productive groups will sink lower under the despotism of capitalism. The Coolidge administration, the republican party, and the democratic party are political defenders of the exploitation by the big capitalists of the workers and farmers and only political imbeciles can expect benefits from such a source.

Federal Judge Defends Vare Election Steal

In spite of the aggressiveness of Senator James A. Reed's committee to investigate the election steals in connection with the campaigns of last year, the administration is sufficiently resourceful to defend the notoriously corrupt republican political machines in Pennsylvania. The ballot boxes containing evidence of the wholesale frauds practiced by the political crook and grafter, William S. Vare, boss of the Philadelphia hooligans, and the equally low practices of the Mellon machine of Pittsburgh, were ordered placed at the disposal of the investigating committee. Upon refusal of the election commissioners to comply a court order was sought.

But a judge of the United States district court decides that the senate committee has no right to obtain possession through a federal court order of evidence proving that frauds were committed by a political swindler who wants to sit in that "august body." The man who came to the rescue of the Pennsylvania politicians, by refusing to grant a court order for the ballots, was a faithful republican who was appointed to the federal bench by President Taft in 1912. The learned judge insists that the senate alone in full session has the right to order the ballots produced. Incidentally the senate is not in session and before it reconvenes the legal time for holding the ballots will have expired and they will then be destroyed.

All this trickery ought to increase respect for the practices of democracy as exemplified by the real leaders of the Coolidge administration, the Mellon political machine and their playmates in the eminent Mr. Vare's machine.

DANGER AHEAD!

By T. LOAF.

THINGS are moving fast nowadays. Since the time we began writing these editorials significant events have been developing themselves in a manner which makes the most recent facts connected with the session of the League of Nations Council out of date.

Now important centers of the right of the imperialist powers for vantage positions, are set up in quick succession and are functioning simultaneously, necessitating constant and watchful attention of the working class as to their purposes and efforts. Hardly has the session of the League Council ended, than a new conference of imperialist powers began in the same city of Geneva, the so-called disarmament conference, the true meaning of which is the preparation for the coming bloody struggle between Great Britain and the United States for the supremacy on the seas in general and the control of the Pacific in particular.

WHILE this going on in Geneva, a good deal of the "unfinished business, of the League Council that is the question of "peace" and stabilization" in Europe and implicitly also the question of the planned imperialist attack upon the Soviet Union, are in a somewhat different form transferred to the city of New York, to the rooms of the Federal Reserve Building, where the heads of the central banks of Great Britain, France and Germany are confering with the head of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and some officials of the U. S. Federal Reserve Board as to the pressing financial difficulties and urgent monetary problems of the main European powers.

All of them are, to be sure, tied to the strings of the American treasury and the ensuing negotiations and possible loans, coupled with corresponding financial manipulations, aim at grabbing the biggest portion of the gold accumulation for the capitalist needs of each of these protesting countries.

Any change in the provisions of the Dawes plan would primarily affect France and would once more arouse the question of the Rhineland occupation as one of the ways to insure the payment of the tribute. This in its turn brings in Great Britain's part in the game, in trying to negotiate an agreement granting some comfort to Germany in exchange for Germany's concessions.

BUT the "price" of these concessions is well known. It is Germany's consent to the financial and diplomatic isolation of the Soviet Union as a prelude to a coming concerted attack upon the Soviet territory.

As the requisite of such attack, the main difficulties between the powers must—temporarily—be either "solved" or set aside. And this lends particular importance to the present negotiations of the above mentioned financial leaders.

THUS this time the question of the attack upon the Soviet Union is being directly put to the men responsible for the financial and consequently also the diplomatic course of the United States. The government of the United States will jointly with the American financiers be deciding now the question of a definite line-up for an anti-Soviet coalition and will no less than others be responsible for feeding all the counter-revolutionary plots and a military expedition against the Soviet Union.

THE Government of the United States will have to play now openly its cards in the anti-Soviet game; then, despite the utmost secrecy of these conversations and negotiations, their meaning and the role of the United States in the whole affair will rather sooner than later become altogether clear.

Not that the United States has not by various indirect acts and tokens shown already its actual position in the anti-Soviet plot. We shall try briefly to expose this hidden double-faced game that is absolutely reminiscent and worthy of the glorious epoiits of Wilson with his military expeditions to Siberia and Archangel on the one hand and the "friendly" Bullitt mission on the other.

SIDE by side with the bouts of the militarists in Geneva and the bickerings of the financiers in New York there are flaring up at single points flames of sharp antagonism, which at this moment of particular tenseness in the world situation are very ominous. While Britain's constant work against the Soviet Union is shown recently in the reported hostile machinations of Chang-Tso-lin with regard to the Chinese Eastern Railway, in renewed pressure in Afghanistan to neutralize the influence of the Soviet Union in the countries of the Near East, in sending the English light fleet into the Baltic waters, in instigating Finland's impudent notes in the feverish military preparations of Poland, and in many more secret moves and machinations there are new signs of tension between Italy and France which, combined with the internal situation in Italy lend to the recent friction an ugly aspect. Furthermore, the apparent failure of the Geneva "disarmament conference" adds a new phase to the whole international situation—Wed. July 13. .. ..

IN the light of such world situation the secret negotiations of the financial heads, conducted at present in the city of New York, assume a particularly great importance. Devoted on the face of it to the questions of the gold movement of the stabilization of the franc, of a French loan and new German borrowings and last but not least to the problems of the Dawes plan, these actually would tend to settle the question of the new ascension of Germany as an important imperialist power.

This brings back the question of Germany's relation to the Soviet Union and renews again the whole game between Great Britain, France and Germany that had been so suddenly broken up at Geneva—but this time with the direct participation of the United States.

IT must be noted that since the break-up of the session of the League Council Germany was granted the "privilege" of a seat in the League's Mandates Commission and on her part she submitted to one of the main demands of Poincare (and General Foch) with regard to the inspection of her eastern fortifications—this despite the vociferous protests of the German Nationalists against the new humiliation of the fatherland.

However, the seat of the Mandates Commission does by far not satisfy the colonial and other imperialist ambitions of Germany and consequently would be considered too small a reward for Germany's line-up against the Soviet Union.

On the other hand, in view of Germany's new strength, particularly as a result of the Anglo-Russian break, Poincare and his supporters are clearly bolding on to the idea of one of his demands, but will try to "sanctions" and will seemingly not be satisfied with Germany's assent to one of his demands, but will try to the claimed "pound of flesh."

AGAIN and again it becomes clear that it is Germany that holds the key to the whole European situation and to the question of the attack upon the Soviet Union.

We are brought in this manner to our original question. What was the attitude of imperialist Germany at the session of the League Council? The full understanding of the German imperialist diplomacy at that session necessitates the explanation of the new role of Germany in the so-called "concert of powers," that is of the present role of Germany in the imperialist world. This will throw also the necessary light upon the question why that memorable session of the League Council broke up in disorder.

"Speakeasy" Coming Here Early in August

Eric Blore, last seen here in "The Ghost Train," has been engaged by Joseph Santley for one of the leading roles in "Just Fancy," in which Santley is to make his debut as an actor-manager late in September. Other players for prominent parts are Frances Nevins, Charles Barron and Bernice Ackerman.

"The Mating Season," Wm. A. Grew's new farce will open at the Selwyn theatre next Monday night. The play is showing this week in Stamford and New London.

An open air performance of "The Circus Princess," will be given at the Woodmere Orphan Asylum, Woodmere, Long Island, on Sunday July 31st.

"Speakeasy," a new play by Edward Knobblock and George Rosener, will be presented by William B. Friedlander early in August. The cast includes: Jose Ruben, Dorothy Hall, Valarie Valaire, Arthur Vinton, Paul Guilfoyle, Kate Roemer, and Beatrice Lee.

Due to the death of John Drew, her uncle, Ethel Barrymore will not give her usual performance of "The Constant Wife," today in order to attend the funeral services to be held in Philadelphia.

Strike Wins Raise From Standard Oil And Sinclair Crew

CHICAGO, (FP) July 18.—The combination strike and lockout of the gas, filling station attendants and drivers in the Chicago area brought the Standard Oil Co., the Sinclair Refining Co. and other corporations to their knees with an agreement to raise the pay of the men. The strike against Sinclair was declared July 8th, followed by a lockout by the other companies and brought out over 2800 men.

The gasoline pumps were padlocked, police vacations and days off cancelled and a wild race by motorists over 4 counties ensued in the endeavor to have enough gas for the weekend spins. In less than 24 hours the men had won. They got 50 per cent of the raise they had demanded and a 2-year agreement.

Substantial Gain.

Station attendants, hitherto getting $140 a month will now get $145. Tank drivers hitherto getting $175 a month will now get $182.50. Vacations with pay were not granted. The attendants had asked $10 a month raise and the drivers had asked $12. They are members of the oil truckers union of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters & Chauffeurs whose president, Daniel Tobin, is treasurer of the American Federation of Labor.

This is said to be the first important strike of filling station employes and tank drivers in motor history.

Federal Trade Report Ignored by Film Head

Adolph Zuckor, president of the Paramount-Famous Players Corporation, announced yesterday that his company will defy the ordar of the Federal Trade Commission in which the movie trust is restrained from the practice of "block" bookings, by means of which independent exhibitors must buy up pictures in series in order to secure the Paramount film service.

In commenting on the fact that the five year investigation of the movie trust was ineffective Zucker said, "The commission's order does not attempt to interfere with the ownership and operation of the existing theatre holdings of the Paramount Corporation, nor with any additions thereto which may be made in the development and expansion of our business in the future."

CHARGE RED IN CIVIL LIBERTIES STATEMENT ON SACCO-VANZETTI DEMONSTRATION

the left wing of violating "the principles of free speech and assemblage."

The Workers (Communist) Party statement which denies the charges of the committee follows:

No Consultation With Left».

Director,
American Civil Liberties Union,
100 Fifth Ave.,
New York City.
Dear Sir:

In reference to the findings of the investigation committee that you have appointed for the purpose of investigating the breaking off of the Sacco Vanzetti demonstration at Union Square last Thursday we wish to say the following:

—We are surprised that your committee without any investigation, (altho it was an investigation committee) for we were not asked to furnish any information on the matter, practically charges the Workers Party with responsibility for breaking up the meeting, when your committee states that the meeting was broken up by "outside interference" and then "in connection herewith we should add that complaints have come to us that four other "open air meetings were broken up by alleged organized" left wing" or Workers Party groups.

No Reference to Police.

Your committee fails to mention even the fact that the socialist party chairman and arrangement committee in charge of the demonstration were directly responsible for breaking up the meeting by calling police to squelch the insistent demand on the part of large sections of the audience that Ben Gold speak. You also fail to offer any criticism of the police in this action.

The Workers Party, as well as the left wing, have been the most active in behalf of the campaign for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti since their imprisonment. The Workers Party and the left wing has placed the unity of the movement for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti above any differences on other questions when this issue was involved. When the Liberation Committee for Sacco and Vanzetti issued the call for the one-hour strike and the demonstrations we placed the unity of the movement for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti above all else for the moment and did everything possible to mobilize the working masses for the demonstration, in spite of the fact that this committee disregarded the feelings and sentiments of the masses and refused to allow the left wing to have any speakers or share officially in the demonstration.

Audience Wanted Gold.

The demand that Gold speak came as a spontaneous demand on the part of the masses assembled the moment Gold was recognized by the audience. What followed afterwards was the logical outcome of the policy followed by the socialists who were in the official chairmanship.

1.—Refusing the left wing speakers in spite of the fact that, based on the experience of the past few years it was evident that the great bulk of those who would come to demonstrate would have no sympathy for the right wing leaders who have been inactive for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti and who supported the left wing, the only force in the labor movement that carried on an active campaign for Sacco and Vanzetti.

2.—When it became clear that the masses insisted that Gold speak the socialist chairmen, Claessens and Weinberg placed their sarcoy selfish interests and pride above the movement for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti at the same time running the risk of creating a riot and possible bloodshed, refusing to allow Gold to speak and calling upon the police to break up the demonstration. Furthermore the plea of Gold that he be given an opportunity to tell the audience to be calm so that the demonstration might continue was denied him. The blame for the entire regrettable affair must be placed directly upon the socialist and right wing leaders.

Deny Socialist Charges.

As to your reference about other open air meetings being broken up by "alleged Workers Party groups" we wish to protest against such charges and we will demand that these charges be investigated. The Workers Party has never participated in or encouraged this and if it has occurred, we disclaim all responsibility.

Attack On Communists.

Your committee states that it is not in a position to investigate this legal responsibility, but deems it important to state the fundamentals of free speech. Your committee under the guise of stating the fundamentals of free speech has actually charged the Workers Party with the responsibility for the incident without an investigation and without as much as mentioning the role played by the socialists and the police. This to us seems contrary to the principles of the American Civil Liberties Union.

We ask that the Union Executive Committee repudiate the statement of the committee which is in contradiction to the statement made earlier by Mr. Hayes, which signifies that this statement was arrived at in the most important essentials by a vote of two to one and furthermore, since the chairman of the committee is a member of the socialist party, and since according to the committee no investigation was made, that the executive appoint a new committee to make a thoro investigation of the entire matter.

We are willing to cooperate with the committee elected in accord with this suggestion and do everything possible to establish the truth about the entire affair.

Yours truly,
JACK STACHEL,
Acting General Secretary, Workers (Communist) Party, New York District.

Civil Liberties Statement.

The press release issued by the Civil Libries Union, describing the results of its "investigation" follows:

Interference by one working-class group with meetings of another resulting in "confusion, panic or riot," is condemned by the American Civil Liberties Union in a statement issued today by its Executive Committee as a violation of free speech and assembly and an injury to the "whole cause of labor."

The statement was made in answer to requests of both right and left wing groups that the union investigate the disturbances at the Sacco-Vanzetti meeting at Union Square on July 7th. On this occasion several persons were injured in the rioting that followed the attempt of friends of Ben Gold, Communist leader, to place him on the speakers' platform.

Plea For "Civil Liberty."

"We, as a committee, are not concerned with the policy adopted in choosing or eliminating certain speakers or representatives of particular groups at any meeting," the committee states. "On this point opinions may differ. We are unanimous, however, in condemning outside interference with any meeting and in insisting that rights of those in control be recognized. Common sense and common humanity as well as respect for civil liberty requires scrupulous order on such occasions. To working-class groups there is or ought to be a further appeal. Interference by one working-class group with another's meetings, on whatever pretext, injures the whole cause of labor, strengthens its critics and creates a precedent against the granting of that meeting and assembly which all working class groups, irrespective of their opinions, demand for themselves."

Killed While Hanging Clothes.

While hanging clothes out on the washline through a rear kitchen window, Mrs. Catherine Cully, 36 of 728 Fifty-ninth Street, Brooklyn, lost her balance and fell from her apartment on the third floor, to the courtyard and was instantly killed.

STRIKE LOOMS ON I. R. T. AS WORKERS SPURN CONTRACTS

SPECIAL AND PROGRAM STRIKES — INJUNCTIONS THE YOUNG UNION FIRES LABOR SPY INFORMATION

Pickets were put on duty Tuesday morning, their work being to keep first the men already affiliated with the A. F. of L., and to make further inroads on the company union, according to J. H. Coleman, organizer for the Amalgamated.

The workers' union, in a statement issued, says that more than 50 per cent of the I. R. T. men have signed up.

Officials of the transit company refuse to say anything on the strike situation.

Strike Looms On.

The possibility of a strike of subway and elevated lines employes loomed today following announcement by organizers of the Amalgamated Union under the American Federation of Labor that definite action would be taken within 72 hours.

The strike threat followed reports that the Interborough Rapid Transit Company had sent to each of its employes an individual contract of employment stipulating that they must belong to the yellow company union.

Characterizing the "contracts" offered to them by the transit company as "a high-handed hit of hullidesing," the leaders of the subway union declared that a peaceful settlement is virtually impossible.

"We see clearly that this company will not deal honorably with our members and that we will have to give them what they are inviting — a fight," said J. H. Coleman, union organizer, in a statement issued following a meeting in the Continental Hotel.

"We have attempted to open negotiations with the company in a friendly spirit," declared P. J. Shea, general executive member of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Railway Employes, "but this contract move is a stab in the back."

The contract denounced by the subway workers is the famous yellow dog company union. The agreement is worded so that the workers agree not to join any union but the company organization. The consideration in the contract is two years continuous work.

In a statement to the press, Coleman says, "This document is the worst form of yellow dog contract that has come to light in this country. The men in the subways are being bullied into signing this agreement. The company wishes to get the work done and at once. So-called 'delegates' of the company union are forcing the men to sign up. They are warning employes that reports are being made by phone to the company office every two hours, giving the names of the men who refuse to sign. These men will be fired. Nothing could be more coercive."

Addressing the workers directly, the statement reads: "By all means refuse to sign. This contract business is a high-handed hit of bulidosing. The company has ignored even its puppet, the I. R. T. brotherhood. It is simply a company coup."

Restrain Merger of Jersey Power Barons

NEWARK, N. J., July 13.—With the consent of all parties interested the temporary injunction granted last month restraining the property merger of the Public Service Electric and Gas Company, with five subsidiary companies, was today continued until September 23, by Vice Chancellor Backes.

The application was made by William H. Speer, general counsel for the Public Service Electric and Gas Co., with the agreement of counsel for Outwater and Wells, and Roosevelt and Sons, two New York City brokerage concerns, opposing the merger.

Both sides agreed to file briefs at the earliest possible moment. The five subsidiary companies concerned in the proposed merger, are the Essex & Hudson Gas Co., Hudson County Gas Co., Paterson & Passaic Gas & Electric Co., New Brunswick Light and Power Co., and the Somerset Union & Middlesex Lighting Co.

Prepare For War.

In preparation for the coming war, two field artillery reserve regiments, the 576th and the 577th units were called to duty yesterday. James H. McRae, commandent of the Second Corps Area, and the officers will be directed to entrain Saturday for Fort Bragg, N. C.

Fifty-four business men are included in the list of officers. The two regiments will participate in maneuvres which are to last for two weeks, ending July 29.

10 PER CENT TAX TO BE CONTINUED IS FUR DECISION

In spite of the intense heat, Arlington Hall, 19 St. Marks Place, was crowded with hundreds of furriers last night who voted to continue the 10 per cent increase assessment and postpone the election of Joint Board officers for several weeks.

Altho Leader Shapiro, chairman of the meeting, pleaded that the assessment be reduced to 5 per cent, the overwhelming majority of the workers spoke and voted for its continuation at the present rate.

Ben Gold, manager of the Joint Board, gave a report of the strike. He denied that peace was near in the International, maintaining that the Jewish Daily Forward clique will not allow the destructive tactics of the right wing to come to an end.

Strike Fight All Workers.

Referring to the Forward group, Gold said that, "They are not only a menace to the furriers but also to the whole labor movement. The fact is that if it was not for the police department which is working hand in hand with the right wing, every Associated shop would today be empty.

"When the workers asked for their July raises the bosses told them to go to Gold for them.

"As you are aware, we are not close to Tammany Hall or Mayor Walker. We do not expect any sympathy from them. They are friends of Matthew Woll and the bosses. Altho it was agreed by the capitalist press to ignore the furriers' strike, the way we are conducting our fight forces them to give us publicity.

Accuses Woll.

"Matthew Woll is responsible for the loss of the pinmbers' and bakers' strikes. Other strikes are in a critical condition on account of the American Federation of Labor policy.

"Sigman claims he is sick and has left for a long vacation on his 'Coney Island.' It is true he is sick but it is a political sickness."

The spirit which keeps the Joint Board Furriers' Union a splendid fighting organization in spite of its enemies, and which ensures a victory for the workers and their union, is shown in the letter which came a few days ago from Comrade Mileaf, one of the fur workers in Welfare Island prison.

Mileaf is serving a six months' sentence following his frame-up and conviction by a right wing scab who claimed he was "threatened." Mileaf was also one of those framed-up on the Mineola case, because he is such a valuable union member; but his only regret is that he cannot be in the midst of the present strike.

He writes:

"Dear Comrade Shapiro.

"I received a letter from Comrade Herbert Schneider which made me feel good in one way, and very sore in the other. I refer to the money.

Wants To Help Strike.

"Gee, how I wish I conid be out for just two or three weeks, so I could do my share in this bitter strike; then I wouldn't care if I had to stay here twice the amount. It hurts me to hear how the strikers are being treated by those rotten, dirty skunks.

"Well, I am glad that the seven gangsters are locked up because this is the only place for them. Give my best regards to the workers. Tell them to keep up their good spirit and courage, so it won't be long when we will have the most honest and loyal union.

"I would like to hear from you at least once a week, but I realize that everybody in the union now is very busy. So just tell my father or my brother if you received all my letters that I wrote to you or Comrade Gold. I have nothing else to write just now, but will have plenty to tell you when I get out.

"I sure did learn a lot about the right wing union from some of the crooks in here. Some of the fellows don't like me because I don't want to do what a cloakmaker by the name of Sam Cohen did. I suppose you know what I mean and who I mean. That Sam Cohen was in here about two and a half weeks ago, so he told the fellows in here that I am doing time for nothing and that he is getting plenty from the right wing union, and so on.

"Well, I really can't write much about that fellow, but I will tell more when I will be out. I close this letter hoping that the workers succeed in this bitter strike. Regards to all.

"Your everlasting comrade,
"OSCAR MILEAF."

Globe Cafeteria Signs Agreement with Union; Ends Yellow Contract

The Globe Cafeteria, Irving Place and 14th St., that compelled its workers to sign a "yellow dog contract" several months ago has come to an agreement with the Amalgamated Food Workers' Union that it will in the future conduct its restaurant on a union basis.

In the presence of P. Pascal Cosgrove, organiser of the union, the boss tore up the contract. The cafeteria in the past was patronized by many radical workers who stopped going there when the contract was forced upon the workers.

RAILROADS MAINTAIN PROFITS BY SWEATING WORKERS

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press)

Getting more work out of fewer men has been the chief policy of the railroads in the wage investigations of the last 12 months in the Interstate Commerce Commission, which demanded a wage boost for April.

This speeding up underlies the making of profits along the route, breaking 1926 level.

The railroad wage bill for April 1927 amounted to $388,662,463, an increase of only 2.2 per cent over April 1926, when the total was $142,943,870. But the number of employes had been cut 24,940, having fallen to 1,768,471.

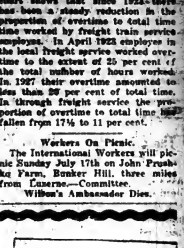
The average railroad wage for April of this year was $186.50 a month compared with $186.10 in April 1926. These figures cover all employes, including executives and officials. The average wage of the 1,532,507 workers employed on an hourly basis in April 1927 was $122.80 a month.

The shopmen continue to be the chief victims of the attempt of the railroads to make profits at the expense of wages, but the train and engine service men come in for a considerable share of the layoffs. Between March and April the carriers laid off 8160 shopmen and 6865 train and engine service employes. The April layoffs also included 1011 clerks and 1299 miscellaneous transportation department workers. On the other hand the maintenance of way department took on 45,158 additional workers.

Compared with April 1926 there were 29,486 fewer shopmen, 5677 fewer engineers, firemen, conductors and trainmen, 1435 fewer clerks and 2432 fewer transportation department employes. But the number of maintenance of way workers was up 12,924.

Railroad employment and payrolls month by month since April 1926 were:

Railroad Payrolls	Number of Employes	Total Wages
April 1926	1,763,411	$242,943,370
May	1,806,728	241,437,254
June	1,833,621	249,665,495
July	1,867,219	254,617,654
August	1,853,070	256,761,368
September	1,856,193	254,284,521
October	1,866,115	263,068,531
November	1,827,954	252,484,496
December	1,775,864	252,929,491
January 1927	1,724,243	244,565,829
February	1,720,520	228,171,570
March	1,730,661	249,955,580
April	1,768,471	243,852,463



The table shows that in spite of the promise of railroad executives to stabilize employment the fluctuation from peak employment in October to the lowest point in February involved laying off nearly 150,000 men. By their proposed flexible 8 to 10-hour day the executives are now working for changes in union rules to accomplish classification at the lowest payable employment level.

The month's report contains a short showing another way in which the railroads are profiting at the expense of the payroll. The chart shows that since 1922 there has been a steady reduction in the proportion of overtime to total time time worked by freight train service employes. In April 1922 employes in the local freight service worked overtime to the extent of 25 per cent of the total number of hours worked. In 1927 their overtime amounted to less than 20 per cent of total time. In through freight service the proportion of overtime to total time has fallen from 17½ to 11 per cent.

Professor Endorses Pioneers

By ESTHER BROOKS.

The Pioneers of America are beginning to come a more dignified sense of their own. It is not simply a children's movement in the narrower sense of the word, but a movement of workers—where the workers find relief from the artificial mood, permeated with bourgeois ideals, and are finally able to be united in a different atmosphere which is reminiscent of Communist society. What seems to encourage the Pioneers is the fact that progressive authorities are beginning to realize that the public school has failed in its duty to educate the children to make the "better builders of society," and that on the contrary, there must be something to counteract the bunk that is taught there.

Very recently Prof. Henry Flury, a teacher of science in a local high school, and who recently set the American Legion, Board of Education and the capitalist press a-blaring because of his true definition of Nationalism—before the local Progressive Club enthusiastically praised and sponsored the Pioneers of America and those of Washington in particular. Prof. Flury sees that the Pioneers are far from being converted by bourgeois propaganda in the schools and elsewhere, and that they will work with all their might in enlightening other children by bringing them into the Pioneers.

The Pioneers are the only worker children's organization that educates them in the way that they serve as a vanguard of the workers under the capitalist system and builds sound leaders of the next social order—and Prof. Flury realizes it and takes great pride as expressed in his speech. Especially is he glad to know of the Nationalist class which he recently visited for the above mentioned Pioneers of Washington. They are studying the "A B C of Communism" and Prof. Flury with a smile said, "Some of the children know more about Economics than some of our university students or professors," and he is not mistaken at that, considering the "anti-splitting" system of teaching in our schools.

Yes, and Prof. Flury sees that the capitalists will remain everything under the sun into their tools in order to shape and mold the youth after their own image, but we workers and students are not going to be misled by your teachings; we see a different society arising with different institutions that won't be marred with your propaganda and exploitation for your profits.

We cannot have "creative education," as Prof. Flury says, with capitalist heading and directing the institutions, because "creative education" consists of developing all the inherent qualities, which is not permissable under these circumstances. On the other hand, the children in the schools are filled like balloons with empty such as patriotism to the capitalist, respecting the flag under whose shield the worse outrages are committed, etc., etc.

Ancient Customs in Japan

By ANNA LOUISE STRONG.

TOKIO (FP).—Japan makes no claims to democracy. Many customs bring back vividly the atmosphere of feudalism. The massive Bank of Japan might have been set in any European city. But the tiny little office boys who pattered to meet us and took our cards, bowed low before us with an atmosphere of utter submission and reverence which startled me.

Later, during my interview, one of these small boys entered from time to time with a message on a salver; each time he waited with head and shoulders bowed forward in a deference so extreme that he seemed to be begging for some ultimate mercy on his soul.

Lovely Christians.

We talked last night with several Y. M. C. A. workers about young life in Japan. In spite of much modernism in the economic and financial spheres, nine-tenths of the marriages still take place in the ancient manner, by go-between and without courtship. There is no coeducation after the primary grades. The lot of the educated woman is lonly; even the average educated man prefers as wife the old style woman, comforting and trained to minister to every male need and comfort. He wants relaxation rather than companionship from women.

At a recent commencement of the Imperial University, Mr. Saito of the Y. M., in making an address, told the graduates that large numbers of parents of educated daughters had applied to him to act as go-betwen in finding responsible christian men as husbands.

"Some of you might like to come around to my house and see the photographs and descriptions," he added seriously. "Possibly you might become interested in some of them."

This is suggested to American Y. M. C. A. and institutional churches—the Rev. John Haynes Holmes please take notice. If the church considers marriage a sacrament, why not help organize the preliminaries. Surely a good go-between would be a good send to the maidens of New York. It might "attract young people" to the church, which is admittedly today a problem.

Many Babies.

We had taken the interurban from Yokohama up to Tokio, a 40-minute run. The trip was a strange combination of east and west. The interurban whizzed along from station to station through a construction job as modern and as noisily progressing as anything in New York. But in and out moved men and women clad in pearly cotton kimonos, clattering on wooden clogs across the pavements. Often the women had babies tied to their shoulders, gay scarlet, blue or yellow little bundles bound to their mother by a long scarf and clinging to her like a squirrel to a tree-trunk.

RAILROADS AID BOSSES IN WAR AGAINST MINERS' UNION; SOUTHERN SCAB MINES GAINING RAPIDLY

By LELAND OLDS (Federated Press).

How closely rail and coal interests are associated in the battle against the miners' union is revealed in recent announcements concerning freight rates on coal from southern fields to lake ports. Negotiations are apparently in progress to nullify the interstate commerce commission's recent reduction in rates on Pennsylvania and Ohio coal through voluntary reductions by roads hauling coal from Virginia, West Virginia and Kentucky mines.

The Norfolk & Western, itself a large owner of West Virginia coal lands, announced that effective Aug. 19 the rates on coal shipped to Lake Erie ports would be cut 10c a ton and that the Chesapeake & Ohio and Louisville & Nashville would make similar reductions. Later it announced that this reduction had been canceled. The New York Times says:

"This marks another step in the battle being waged by mine operators, railroads and the interstate commerce commission over the question of reducing freight rates on lake cargo coal, with the mine owners of western Pennsylvania and eastern Ohio the victors, at least temporarily."

The Times should have included the United Mine Workers in its list of participants in the battle. The fight started several years ago when the interstate commerce commission began favoring the entry of non-union West Virginia and Kentucky coal into northwestern markets normally supplied by the union mines of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. One of its decisions denied the request of Pennsylvania and Ohio operators for rate reductions. The commission's examiner had recommended such reductions in the interest of fair competition.

Big Operators Go Scab.

Recently the commission reversed this decision and permitted a reduction of 20c. a ton on lake cargo coal from western Pennsylvania and Ohio. The United Mine Workers, who had intervened on behalf of the operators, hailed the decision as a gain for the union but the biggest operators had already gone non-union. The commission intimated that carriers serving southern districts would not be justified in reducing lake cargo rates.

The Norfolk & Western canceled the proposed reduction in rates on southern coal immediately, following a meeting of officials of the non-union Pennsylvania mines which controls nearly a majority of its stock. This left the coal trade wondering whether the Pennsylvania had decided to allow the commission's setup to stand for a while or whether the proposed 10c cut was too small for the southern fields to retain their northern markets. A larger reduction in rates on southern coal may be contemplated.

Scab Mines Gain.

The change since 1920 in the balance of coal production between 4 northern and 4 southern states is shown in the following Wall Street Journal table:

Soft coal production	1920	1926	Increase
Alabama	16,249,000	22,356,000	37%
Kentucky	35,691,000	63,830,000	80%
Virginia	11,379,000	13,493,000	17%
West Virginia	89,871,000	147,209,000	63%
Total southern	153,190,000	246,888,000	60%
			Decrease
Illinois	88,728,000	69,700,000	22%
Indiana	29,350,000	22,839,800	34%
Ohio	45,878,000	29,150,000	36%
Pennsylvania	170,608,000	151,119,000	12%
Total northern	334,561,000	272,808,000	18%

While production in the 4 southern states has increased 60%, production in the 4 northern states has decreased 18%.

Against the War Danger

THE FUTURE WAR AND THE WORKING CLASS

By D. MARETZKY (Moscow.)

I. The Augmentation of Armaments and the Development of War Technics.

The imperialists are consciously heading for a new war. The finale of the first imperialist war was Versailles. But real peace was not concluded at Versailles nor could it have been, for the sole reason that from the hour of its birth it was only a new armed "peace". The feverish arming after the war is taking place quite openly; it is quite plain that militarism is more powerful at the present time than it was in pre-war days, and still there are pacifist fools and idiots who prate about disarmament and strive to see in the present reality tendencies towards peace on a bourgeois basis.

It might be well to mention a few facts and figures to illustrate how the imperialists are preparing the war and what kind of war it is they are heading en route.

The official military budgets in the most important states (France, Great Britain, Italy, German, the United States of North America, Japan) amounted in the year 1913 to 1400 million dollars, in the year 1926 they amounted to 2,195.5 million dollars, or increase of nearly 70 per cent. The respective figures for the following countries are as follows: France (1913) 285 and (1926) 396.8; Great Britain 450 and 605; Italy 80.5 and 182.5; Germany 345.8 and 1??.; United States 293.4 and 650.6; Japan 20 and 209.2. The changed relations of the budgets to another show an interesting feature: the economic hegemony of the United States in the world has brought with it the military hegemony.

War Power Increasing.

The present footing of the land forces is far in excess of pre-war dimensions. According to the data gathered by Comrade Woroschilyov for the Fourth Soviet Congress of the Soviet Union, the land forces of the four world powers (England, France, Italy and the United States of North America) total at the present time 1,821,000 against 1,410,000 men in 1913.

From year to year the naval forces of the imperialist states are also growing. The Washington agreement of 1922 by no means put an end to, nor even "curtailed", but only regulated, the construction of dreadnoughts. In addition, the agreement applied merely to battleships and aircraft carriers. The construction of cruisers, destroyers and submarines was not limited and has, in fact, developed greatly since 1922. The present tonnage of the battleships of the United States of North America aggregates 525,850 tons, of Great Britain 580,450; Japan 301,320; France 194,554; Italy 133,670.

The Aircraft Race.

As far as the building of aircraft carriers is concerned, it must be stated that Washington "curtailed" their construction in such a manner that the Powers will have to "work" very hard in order to reach the "norm" prescribed. The United States of North America has built 12,700 tons of aircraft carriers, while it is Washington's "task" to bring this tonnage up to 135,000; England has 67,290 tons, and according to Washington it should have 135,000; Japan has 9,500, while the agreement provides for an increase up to 81,000 tons; so far France and Italy do not possess any aircraft carriers; according to the Washington agreement they together may build 120,000 tons.

Ships of other types (submarines and others) are also being built at a similar tremendous pace, so that according to the existing programme for the decade 1922 to 1933 their strength will be increased in the case of the leading royal powers by several dozen per cent., and in the case of the backward powers by hundreds per cent.

Small Countries in Race.

The rate of increase in the air fleets is far and away greater than that of the navies. This is due to the progress made in aviation, to the circumstance that within the last few years the mass-production of aeroplanes has commenced and also to the attention which has been devoted to aviation by the "military science of the future". Just the few countries bordering on the Soviet Union — Finland, Esthonia, Poland, Roumania, Latvia and Lithuania — have four times as many warplanes as there were in the whole world in 1913. The total airfleet of the four most important countries has been strengthened more than 20-fold since 1913. (140 units and 3550 units.) Even in the last three years, 1923 to 1926, the numerical strength of the airfleet has been more than doubled.

An extended and previously unknown employment of aviation will be combined in the war of the future with an appalling use of chemicals.

A gas attack from the air, the dropping of deadly gases from aeroplanes — as far as possible unexpected (at night), and preferably in the industrial districts behind the enemy's front and in the largest quantities — will doubtlessly constitute the most horrible surprise of the imperialist war which is in course of preparation.

Increasing Use Of Gas.

It would be too exaggerated and fantastic to assume that the war of the future will be exclusively a gas war and that infantry and artillery will be abolished by the military science of the future. It is not for nothing that the imperialists are creating these tremendous land forces. It is not for nothing that they are doing everything to perfect longranges artillery with the utmost powers of destruction. But still there can be no doubt that the tendency of modern science of war is to make the war of the future a gas war. It is quite possible that in the war of the future the same leading roll will be given to gas-attack aeroplanes as was played by artillery in the 1914-18 war.

Will Poison Millions.

The experiences of the world war have already indicated this. The mass-production of gas began only towards the end of the war; and it is a significant fact that the United States, for instance, which entered the war later than the other belligerents, lost more than 70,000 of its total of dead and wounded (271,000) through gas poisoning. Altogether, more than half a million people were poisoned with gas during the last war.

U. S. Gas Most Deadly.

The intensity and extent of the use of gas in tha next world war will unquestionably be much greater. It suffices to say that the United States is already in a position to produce in one day 3000 tons of Yprit ("Gold Cross"), which in its poisonous and caustic effects was the most terrible of all the gases used in the war of 1914 to 1918. The ordinary gasmask is useless against Yprit, as also against Lewisite, which possesses the terrible properties of Yprit but in a more pronounced degree. Divingsuits might possibly serve as protection against gases of this kind, and consideration is being giving to the issuing of diving-sets for artillerymen during the next world slaughter. Such protection, however, unsuitable inasmuch as it would greatly hamper the mobility of the troops and diminish their fighting capacity.

Vast Secret Preparations.

The preparations for the gas-war are being made for the greater part in secret by the imperialists. But they are nevertheless being carried on incessantly, feverishly and persistently.

It is true that several resolutions concerning the inadmissibility of the production of poison gases and their use in future warfare have been adopted, but it is obvious that these resolutions are absolutely worthless while the fate of the nations lies in the hands of the imperialists.

The voice of profits is heard much more clearly by the imperialists than the piteous entreaties of the pacifist saints. Marx used to say that there was no crime to which a capitalist would not resort, even at the risk of his neck, if tempted by high profits. For what reason, therefore, should the imperialists feel compunction when their criminally prepared war threatens to become the seafold of the nations?

Vote for Death

The Rev. Lloyd Frey, above, pastor of the Liberty Baptist church, Harrisburg, Ill., and the Rev. Lawrence McNeely, Baptist minister of Marion, Ill., are members of a jury that voted a death sentence for Rado Millich, charged with the murder of Ward Jones, Birger gangster. The Rev. Frey was foreman of the jury, which voted also a 25-year sentence for Eural Gowan, 20. Both defendants were of opposition gangs. The Rev. Frey said he voted for death because "I felt it my duty before God."

Plumbers Helpers Show How Youth Can Fight

By M. H.

The strike of the plumbers' helpers, altho it did not result in a complete victory for these militant young workers, was not in vain. Before the formation of their organization, the average helper was unacquainted with the principles of trade unionism, and did not realize that he is the most exploited worker, in the building trades industry. However, things have changed since the strike, and we now find the helper seeing the situation in a far different light. He has slowly begun to realize that there is such a thing as a class struggle existing in the world today. Nothing has served to make this more clearer to him, than the bitter strike which he has gone through. He has seen the bosses also united into an organization, and presenting a united front against him and his fellow workers. Slowly but surely he has realized, that it is also necessary for the workers to present a united front in order to meet the combined attack of the bosses. He has learned what happens to workers when they try to protect their jobs by peaceful picketing. In many cases brutally beaten up by the police, and arrested on trumped up charges, and then either thrown into jail, or having an unjust fine imposed upon him, has proven to him that the police and our courts are nothing but tools of the capitalists, used by them to beat the workers into submission when they try to better their conditions.

In the recent strike of the plumbers, the helpers were more active than the plumbers themselves. For some unknown reason, and despite the fact that they had fourteen automobiles at their disposal, there was very little picketing carried on by the plumbers. It was the helpers, these young workers who for the first time in their lives were entering the labor movement, that succeeded in clearing job after job where scab plumbers were employed. Not only did they carry on an intensive picket campaign, but they took immediate steps to upkeep the morale of the membership. They organized a relief committee, which, with the co-operation of other organizations succeeded in opening a kitchen and feeding hundreds of strikers daily. This committee sent out delegates to various labor organizations appealing for financial aid also. It is to their credit that these young workers, who never delivered a public speech in their lives, standing before their older brothers and sisters, and aiding in their struggle. The response they received was very encouraging, and it also helped to teach them a good lesson in solidarity. In the course of the very striking, many false rumors were spread amongst the other workers regarding the conduct of the strike. In order to combat this and also to present their side of the story, the helpers put out a snappy newspaper, called the American Plumbers' Helpers. This paper has been widely distributed amongst the other building trades workers, and has helped greatly in presenting their case to these workers.

The struggle in the building trades is by no means over. The employers are determined to slash wages, increase the hours of labor, and establish a more perfect speed up system. All signs point to a bitter struggle in the future. The plumbers' helpers, because of the experience gained in the strike will play a very important role in the coming struggle. They conducted their strike like veterans, and have won the admiration and respect of the entire labor movement. No more are they looked upon as a bunch of kids, but are considered intelligent young workers, who understand their problems, and are prepared to solve these problems in the proper way. They are the vanguard, who will lead the building trades workers, in the struggle for human conditions and existence. It is they, who stand ready to save the struggle against the forces of reaction, and who will not stop fighting until they have established a decent standard of living, both for themselves and fellow workers as well.

Bronx Young Workers—You are invited to the hike arranged by our section, to Hunters Island for Sunday July 17. (Arrangements for a rich program have been made). There will be bathing, boating, a musical program and various games. We will start out from 1347 Boston Road @ A. M. sharp.

New Honolulu Flight

OAKLAND, Cal., July 13.—Ernie Smith, former air mail pilot and Emory Bronte, navigator, will hop off at 7 o'clock tomorrow morning in an attempt to fly to Honolulu, William H. Royle, flight manager, made it known today. Several trial flights, one of which was to Santa Monica, 400 miles away, have already been made.

Communist Aids Young Worker in School Task

How the literature of Communism is penetrating the schools and moulding the minds of studious young workers is indicated by the following letter received, relating how the monthly magazine "The Communist" served him in his school work:

"It is to be understood of course, that the material that I used in connection with my High School work, did not emanate from The Communist, but from other publications as well, among which were The DAILY WORKER, The Workers Monthly, and a very little bit, ever so little, from The New Masses.

"In school I happened to be one of the few who upheld the Soviet Union. I was pressed from all sides to bring proof of my convictions, especially since I maintained that production in the U.S.S.R. was as efficient, if not more efficiant, than under the Czar. The article which helped me clinch my point was "The Soviet Economy on the Ninth Anniversary." (Workers Monthly Jan. 1927 p. 101). In this article may be found the relationship between socialized co-operative and private industry in the U.S.S.R.

"Also in the same issue I used Bertram D. Wolfe's 'Towards Leninism,' as proof that the U. S. was not such a well stabilized capitalistic country as it seems to be on the surface. Both these instances came up in my class in elementary economics. Incidentally, we were using Thomas Nixon Carver's textbook in this course. It is not worth the paper it is printed on.

"In my course in American History, my Investors did a lot of work with his 'More about the First American Revolution,' same issue, and his 'Government Strikebreaker,' altho he does not know it.

"In the February issue of the same magazine, 'American Imperialism and the Fight For Pacific' by N. Manuilsky; and 'The Relation of the Workers Party to Religion' by Lenin came in handy in the above mentioned classes. The article by Lenin was discussed privately with my economic teacher.

"Since imperialism, social and economic reform, the U.S.S.R. and student suicides have been the predominant subjects for discussion in the various classes lately. It is not hard to see why I said: 'The Communist has been invaluable in my school work.'"

SPORT

The Sport Alliance again defeated the Detroit baseball team in the Press Picnic, July 3rd., 2 to 0 in favor the Detroit team. Before the game started both teams sang the International song and also to present their side of the story, the helpers put out a snappy newspaper, called the American Plumbers' Helpers. This paper has been widely distributed amongst the other building trades workers, and has helped greatly in presenting their case to these workers.

First half was 0-0. The second half both teams were determined to score. The Mansfield team resorted to their strength instead of skill while the Detroit players being outweighed by the Mansfield team had to rely on their skill in which the Detroit team mastered. The Mansfield team only twice had the Detroit Goalie in danger and he saved both of them.

Only fifteen minutes to play still 0-0. A clever pass by John Hay to Puziger registered the first goal. A few minutes later Puziger again got a neat pass from John Ghen and registered the second goal for the Detroit team. The Detroit team possessed the Mansfield team hard the remainder of the game but the Mansfield goalie refused to let any more go through.

The final score being 2-0 in favor Sport Alliance. About 300 spectators watched the game. The Detroit second team of the Sport Alliance also gave the Mansfield Second team a defeat, the score being 8-2 in favor of Detroit. This game was a one sided affair. The Detroit team being too strong for the Mansfield team.

Sept Nearing To Speak In Detroit.

On the 24th of July a picnic will be held at Woodland Grove (11 mile Road and Dequindre) under the joint auspices of the Young Workers (Communist) League and The South Slavic Workers Progressive club. The internationally known writer and lecturer, Scott Nearing will speak on China and Rnsaia. Also there will be Chinese, Hundu, South Slavic and Youth Speakers.

The committee has also arranged a very good sport program and many interesting side attractions including a rifle range.

Everyone out to hear Scott Nearing and have a good time!

THIS is the land of opportunity! An ex-peddler, who came to this country from Germany in 1885, has just sold a $10,000,000 business. This is what he deserves for having started at the bottom and worked his way up. Sacco and Vanzetti, also immigrants, are sitting in a Charlestown death cell. They did not start at the bottom to work their own individual ways to the top, but they started with the bottom dog and tried to raise their standard of living at the expense of the top dog. One of the two was a fish-peddler, but his business never got to be worth $10,000,000.

IT depends on what opportunity one grasps whether he goes to jail or moves into a mansion. Harry Sinclair and Edward L. Doheny, were not born with gold spoons between their gums. They worked their way up and incidentally flirted with a jail cell. But they are not in jail tho they defrauded their own government out of millions of dollars. They are enjoying the breezes on cool verandas on those sweltering days and perhaps listening to that pleasant tinkle in a glass that a famous poet considered the most melodious of sounds to the human ear.

WILLIAM GREEN, president of the A. F. of L. thinks this is a land of opportunity. He told it to the longshoremen who are assembled in convention here in New York to listen to their officers and sundry visitors tell them what great fellows they are, as long as they don't make any trouble for said officers and visitors and for the employers. Green thinks a Labor Party is alright in Europe, but we do not need it here. In the United States the best policy is the hoary one of "reward your friends and punish your enemies." Come to think of it, it is surprising that Green admits the American workers have any enemies in America. Perhaps he is referring to the Communists and progressives and not to the capitalists.

FIFTY SEVEN per cent of discharged soldiers return to the army according to statistics given out by the Army Information Service. This phenomenon is not difficult of explanation. By the time the discharged soldier has drowned his regret for a mispent life in as much needled beer as his savings can purchase he hasn't enough left to buy a job in an employment agency, or if he has, he is rendered useless for any kind of remunerative activity except going thru a jerking performance in obedience to the staccato bark of a superior officer.

LONG live the Geneva naval parley! It has contributed more to the gaiety of nations than Calvin Coolidge among the worms, cowboys and boy preachers of the Black Hills of South Dakota. The great powers have not been able to decide how much their cruisers should weigh on the keel or how many should be a reasonable allowance for each peaceloving nation. But Wiriston Churchill, the British fascist chancellor, is optimistic. He believes that "armaments can be kept within reasonable limits if the nations make only moderate use of their freedom." Here is a chance for the eccentric population of England to have a good laugh unless the horses in that deur land are as lacking in a sense of humor as the aristocracy.

CHURCHILL indulged in one of his weekly tirades against the Soviet Union a few days ago. Evidently trying to take the sting out of the verbal war in Geneva between the British and American delegates, Churchill rubbed a little ointment in the Yankee wounds into which the British sea dogs had been pushing salt since the naval conference started. The republic of the United States was informed by the British chancellor is rich and powerful compared to the republic of the U.S.S.R. This kind of claptrap is also with poor grace from the representative of an empire that is going rapidly on the bum. The once-proud and solvent John Bull, is now degenerating into an international dead beat and under the necessity of passing the hat to raise the wind" as they say in John Bull's other island."

INCIDENTALLY Churchill's words are children of the wish. The U. S. S. R. is progressing economically with giant strides. Even the bourgeois associated press representative in Moscow tells us that the government revenues this year is approximately one billion rubles more than last year. Another news item that might interest the bibbling chancellor is the action of the Lanarkshire textile interests in granting a $10,000,000

We Can't Defend Our Paper Without Your Support

We have received today a statement of the legal fees and expenses involved in the defense of The DAILY WORKER, thus far. To date these expenses amount to over One Thousand Dollars. These are the expenses which have been incurred in spite of the fact that the case has only gone through the lower courts. This is the situation in spite of the splendid support given to us by the International Labor Defense.

Now we are facing a far more difficult period. We are facing the complicated and expensive proceedings in the Federal Courts. Masses of court records must be printed. Experts must be employed. A whole staff of legal assistants is necessary for such an important case.

Your sympathy is not enough. Unless we have your energetic and steady financial support, we cannot win our case. Again the stream of contributions is flowing in as a response to the last and heaviest attack against us. Preparations are being made for sale of the GUARD THE DAILY WORKER FUND Certificates, which are being sent out tomorrow. Legal experts, who are sympathetic with our fight assure us that we can win our case, in spite of the power of the attack against us. But we can only win, if you are with us, and if you supply the funds for the fight.

SACCO INQUIRY HALTED; FULLER REVIEWS TROOPS

Two Workers Swelter In Charlestown Prison

BOSTON, July 14.—Governor Fuller thinks that a military review is of more importance than the case of Sacco and Vanzetti, facing death on August 10.

This was evidenced yesterday when the Massachusetts chief executive called a halt to the inquiry proceedings which have been going on for the past few weeks and decided to leave Boston for Camp Devens to inspect the 26th Division Massachusetts National Guard.

The governor, who is stopping at Rye during the hot weather, called at his office for but a few minutes yesterday and left almost immediately for the camp.

While the two workers were sweltering in the Charlestown prison yesterday anxiously awaiting the outcome of the inquiry, the governor spent the day pleasantly reviewing his crack troops.

Prove Prejudice.

During the past week there have been no developments of a sensational character. The witnesses called were mostly the signers of the affidavits which charged that Judge Webster Thayer made prejudiced remarks in public during the process of the famous trial.

The last witnesses heard thus far were three firearm experts, James H. Burns, J. Henry Fitzgerald and Albert H. Hamilton, who testified that the bullet which killed Alessandro Beradelli could not have been fired from Sacco's Colt revolver.

Vanzetti Not In Car.

At the last hearing Mrs. Carrie Facchini told the advisory committee and the governor that she had an opportunity to see all the men involved in the Bridgewater crime and they were all young and clean shaven, and that Vanzetti, who is heavily moustached, was not among them.

Vincent Brini of Plymouth also appeared, accompanied by his daughter, who acted as interpreter, to support Vanzetti's alibi for the day of the Bridgewater crime. Brini's son, Beltrano, also testified to the same effect.

Thayer Secretive.

Judge Thayer, who testified the day before yesterday, came to the State House and entered the committee room only a minute or two after Prof. James P. Richardson had been ushered from the committee's presence. An effort was made to prevent the two men from meeting, for Richardson was the author of a letter to Gov. Fuller denouncing Judge Thayer for prejudiced talk about the two condemned workers while staying at the Hanover Inn sometime in 1924.

BOSTON, July 14.—Before leaving for Camp Devens yesterday Gov. Fuller spent a few minutes talking to Mrs. Lois B. Rantoul of the Federation of Churches of Greater Boston. The governor left shortly after ten o'clock.

Mayor Fails to Knock Man Off.

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 14.—Awaiting a decision on his injunction restraining Mayor Schwab from removing him from his lofty perch atop the Andrews building here, Alvin "shipwreck" Kelly, seeking the flagpole sitting championship of the world, sat through a severe thunderstorm early today.

Menace Hanging Judge.

JOLIET, Ill., July 14.—Three men broke into the home here today of Judge Frederick A. Hill, who imposed sentence upon the three desperate convicted murderers sentenced to hang tomorrow for the murder of Deputy Warden Peter M. Klein. They were driven away.

Negro, Who Refused to Sell Land at Nominal Price, Brutally Beaten

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 14.—Because he refused to sell his land for a price far below its market value, Arthur Hitt, Negro dirt farmer, was beaten within an inch of his life and frightened into disposing of his land.

Hitt was taken from his home, tied to a tree and savagely whipped. Fearing that he might be murdered, he sold his land for $900, far less than it was worth, three days after the beating.

U. S. WONT FIX FLOOD LEVEES IF FARMER IS POOR

Ruined Sections Open To New Spring Deluge

CONCORDIA, La., July 14.—Thousands of poor farmers in this eastern flood region of Louisiana are returning to their homes as the flood waters gradually recede from them. They are comparitively lucky, these farmers, for there are many sections of this state still immersed below a great lake of Mississippi water.

But with the final departure from the refugee camps, the farmer and his family feel again fresh injuries to their already nearly hopeless financial condition. Their houses are for the most part uninhabitable, covered with a foot or so of slime, and rotting and collapsing, even where the force of the current has not demolished them.

Their chance to raise any crop this year in the waterlogged, slush that is all that remains of their land, is slight, and wherever the crops do begin to grow, the cut worms and other pests must perforce concentrate and are putting an end to any chance that the residents might recoup part of their losses by a late harvest.

Nor is this the worse. In five great gashes the Mississippi levee lies cut, and these gaps will not be rebuilt, say the government officials, until the farmers raise at least a quarter of the cost. Not a single farmer can raise often a penny of this tax, and will have to live or starve on such charity as he can get until a crop grows next year. But that will never be if the levees break are not repaired, because of the normal spring floods. Some of the inhabitants here believe it is already too late to save the three parishes of Tensas, Concordia and Catahoula from another flood, anyway, and are too despondent to even try to plant anything.

The rills, hollows and holes are everywhere full of stinking drainage water, foul with decayed animal and vegetable matter. Swarms of mosquitoes are everywhere, malaria and yellow fever may descend upon the land like a plague any day.

ITALIAN BLACK SHIRTS MOURN IRISH MUSSOLINI

O'Higgins' Funeral Made Imperialist Show

DUBLIN, July 14.—One of the most significant features of the demonstration at the funeral of Kevin O'Higgins, Free State minister of justice and of foreign affairs, and called the "Irish Mussolini" was the presence of a contingent of Italian fascists who marched, blackshirted and with militaristic bearing behind the slain man's body.

Conspicuous also were veterans of the world war who wore medals and other decorations won for service in behalf of the British Empire. The funeral was turned into an imperialist demonstration.

Only bad flying weather prevented the notorious die-hard Earl Birkenhead from flying to Dublin from London for the funeral. The earl and the entire British cabinet attended the services in a Loudon cathedral at which mass for the soul of the Free State minister's soul was celebrated.

No clue to the identity of those who inflicted the death penalty on O'Higgins has yet been secured and there is considerable doubt that the police will succeed in getting evidence on those who shot the lace minister of justice and foreign affairs.

The reason is that O'Higgins outdid the worst of the British rulers in his ferocity against Irish nationalists who refused to bend the knee to the imperialist Free State government. His execution of 77 young Irishmen marked him for vengeance and it is believed that it would be almost impossible to find a jury that would convict defendants charged with the shooting, so bitter is the feeling of the masses against the dead manKiller.

People Breathe Easier.

Foreign correspondents are sending out stories giving a falsified view of the reaction to O'Higgins's death. Instead of the general feeling of regret represented in those stories there is evident a feeling of relief, that such a monster no longer threatens the lives of the militant nationalists.

Among the ten arrested on suspicion is George Plunkett, son of Count Plunkett, who received his title from the pope. All denied guilt.

Innocent of Shooting.

O'Higgins ordered the execution of Rory O'Connor and Liam Mellowes as a reprisal following the shooting of two Free State deputies in the streets of Dublin. As O'Connor and Mellowes were in prison at the time it was quite impossible for them to have had anything to do with the shooting.

The late minister of justice introduced the infamous treason bill prescribing five years imprisonment for failure to disclose knowledge of designs against the Free State.

When a court of appeals order granted writs of habeas corpus for two republican prisoners, which would set a precedent for 12,000 others, O'Higgins had the Dail pass a "public safety" bill that blocked the release of the interned men for several months longer.

Stayed Up to Hear Shot.

Capitalist correspondents have sent out a story that O'Higgins collapsed when he heard the shots that killed his former friend Rory O'Connor. On the contrary he stayed up all night so that he would be certain that the execution took place. After O'Connor's death it was discovered that he left all his possessions to O'Higgins.

O'Higgins was an ardent admirer of the die-hard section of the British cabinet, particularly Birkenhead and Churchill. He called the former "Ireland's best friend."

TREASURY READY TO RESTORE ITS GERMAN BOOTY

Alien Property Must Go Back to Aid Dawes Plan

WASHINGTON, July 14.—Return of alien property to German owners should be the first consideration of the new congress meeting in December, and the treasury will support for early passage the house bill which failed in the senate last session, acting secretary of the Treasury Mills announced today.

"If, as seems likely, most of this property is owned in Germany it should be returned, and the return of these millions would facilitate the operation of the Dawes plan during the next few years," Mills said. "This would have an important effect on the general economic situation in Europe."

The house bill would involve a settlement of about $100,000,000 to the German shipowners.

The control of alien property has been during two administratiuos a source of terrific scandals. These have evan reached the courts as during the recent trials of Daugherty and associates on charges of graft for their custody of German property.

Lowden Building Up Farmer Sentiment to Defeat Coolidge

MADISON, Wis., July 14.—While President Coolidge cavorts about in his ornate chaps and makes a spectacle of himself flshing for trout with worms, in the hope of attracting the sympathy of the western farmer and stockman, his most pronounced rival in the republican party, ex-Governor Lowden of Illinois, is getting in some more realistic work.

Lowden is crystallizing opposition that is plentiful around here against Coolidge for his brutal way of defeating, vetoing and generally disappointing the farmers' hopes for farm relief thru the republican party. He addressed the members of the legislature here yesterday and talked on the problems of farmers, making an attack on the middlemen Lowden, himself a bankor, did not deal with the high rates of interest, and refused to talk on the McNary-Haugen bill, which Coolidge vetoed.

Returning to his Illinois home, Lowden received a delegation which told him that a thousand voters of Montana wanted him to run for president. As is usual in such cases, the presidential candidate expressed surprise at the last, and modestly refused to promise anything.

Engdahl Addresses Big Cleveland Meeting On War Danger, Saturday

CLEVELAND, July 14. — J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, recently returned from the Soviet Union will speak at the Public Square, Saturday, 7 p. m. on the war danger. The meeting is under the auspices of the Workers (Communist) Party.

On Sunday afternoon Engdahl will speak in Buffalo.

JACKSON ADMITS TAKING DRAGON'S CHECK FOR $2,500

Will Punish Stephenson For His Confession

INDIANAPOLIS, July 14.—Governor Ed Jackson has finally yielded to the incessant bombardment of publicity waged against him, and has admitted receiving one check for $2,500 from Grand Dragon D. C. Stephenson of the Ku Klux Klan "for election expenses."

Stephenson, giving up hope of being pardoned by his old friend the governor, of a murder charge on which he was convicted, has notified Prosecutor William H. Remy of Marion County that he has documentary evidence of widespread graft in the highest offices of the state government, and can also prove that the actual governing power has been for a long time the K. K. K.

When the facsimile of the first check appeared in the press, Jackson shut up like a clam, and refused to issue any statement at all. Since then the Indianapolis Times, which started the exposure has published photographs of thirty-one additional checks given by the klan or at least by its grand dragon, for election expenses and, so Stephenson says, to procure favors from Jackson and his associates in office. The documentary evidence shows that Stephenson bought up preachers, editors, women and men politicians and stump speakers of all sorts to elect Jackson.

A bitter feud is on between Jackson and Remy, the prosecutor. Jackson in admitting the passing to him of Stephenson's check, excuses himself by saying that it was in payment of "a very valuable horse." He also insists that now he will never grant a pardon to Stephenson, no matter what happens.

PLENARY MEET FAILS TO REVIVE GENEVA CORPSE

Washington Ready to Bury the Thing

GENEVA, July 14.—Representatives of the three powers attending the naval conference are awaiting instructions from their respective governments since the failure of today's plenary session to bring any nearer the break in the deadlock that has gripped the affair from its very inception.

The main conflict that cannot be solved is over the question of cruiser tonnage—with Britain trying to outmanoeuver the United States and force an agreement that will make her again mistress of the sea in order adequately to strike to defend her fair flung empire. The United States, on the other hand, strives to weaken British still more and demands guns so large that they can blow British armed merchant ships off the seas in case of hostilities.

For a time it was thought that minor questions could be taken up and solved as a sem blance of success realized, but each class of naval boat taken up revealed anew the general world-wide antagonism and the inability to agree on anything.

As usual the British chief, W. C. Bridgeman and the head of the American delegation, Hugh Gibson, try to put on bold fronts and proclaim the fiction that the conference is progressing.

Everyone knows that this is pure myth.

All the delegates would like to be relieved of further stage-play for the benefit of the newspaper reporters and the constituents of the governments represented, but do not know how to let go of the thing.

Washington Admits Failure.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—Government officials are now pretty well convinced that the Geneva naval conversations at Geneva are utterly useless. The deadlock cannot be broken and nothing remains of the thing except to instruct Gibson and Jacobly be sent to the American delegation and a motion will be made to adjourn and refer to the regular diplomatic corps the further consideration of the matter. This is a device to enable the delegates to Geneva officially to leave the corpse of the thing where it is. It has been dead for some time and it cannot remain in a certain stage of decomposition, but must get steadily worse, so the sooner it is buried, the better.

HANKOW ARMIES MOVE TO SMASH CHIANG KAI-SHEK

Three Columns Driving Against Nanking

WUHAN (Hankow), July 14.—Three armies are ready for a drive on Nanking and Chiang Kai-shek in whose forces there is widespread disaffection according to reports reaching here.

One of the Wuhan armies, headed by General Chiang Fai Kue, is the best disciplined and equipped of all the revolutionary divisions, the Iron Army which lead the victorious march of the liberation movement northward from Canton a year ago.

Boycott Hurts Chiang.

The anti-Japanese boycott is mobilizing great masses of workers, students and peasants whose strikes and demonstrations Chiang Kai-shek dare not suppress since such a move would align him with Japan and further weaken his government with the population.

Then Nanking government in order to meet its military budget has ordered a substantial increase in taxes which is alienating both the foreign businessmen and the Chinese traders and manufactrurers which formed Chiang's principal base of support.

The general impression here and in other Chinese centers, among the foreign population, is that the Wuhan government is showing unexpected strength while Nanking is weakening. If Chiang armies are defeated in the first clash with the Wuhan forces observers predict either his speedy collapse or a new alignment with Wuhan dominating the alliance.

LABOR DELEGATES FIX SOVIET UNION REPLY TO GREEN

Scorn Secrecy Charges; Stress Publicity

A denial that there had been the slightest attempt at "secrecy" in the appeal for funds issued by the Trade Union Delegation which will leave for the Soviet Union the latter part of this month, was made yesterday by spokesmen for the delegation.

"President Green," said one of the delegation," tries in his statement to the press to create the impression that we made all our preparations in secret. As a matter of fact the whole question of the delegation, its composition and purposes, was discussed publicly at the last convention of the American Federation of Labor. There has been continual publicity sent out by our secretary, Albert Coyle, editor of the Locomotive Engineers Journal, and the press has dealt with the matter at length."

To Make Public Report.

"We have not sent our appeal out to the general labor movement because the delegation is unofficial and we did not wish to add to the friction engendered by the hostility of President Green and Vice President Woll to the delegation and its entirely legitimate purpose which is to gather and lay before the American people the important facts relative to the Soviet Union, its form of government and the opinion of the delegation as to the proper relationships between the Soviet Union and the United States."

Senator Borah, it is learned, will use the report which the Trade Union delegation will compile when it returns, as additional material in the investigation he is making of the policy pursued by the state department toward the Soviet Union.

Composition of Delegation.

The entire personnel of the delegation has not yet been fixed but those mentioned as taking an active part in its formation are:

William Johnston, former president of the International Association of Machinists, William Mitch, secretary of the Indiana district of the United Mine Workers, E. J. Manion of the Railway Telegraphers, Tim Healy, of the Firemen and Oilers, Timothy Shea of the Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, Phil Ziegler, editor of the Railway Clerk, Frank Palmer, editor of the Colorado Labor Advocate, Albert Coyle and L. E. Sheppard, president of the Railway Conductors, chairman of the delegation.

John Brophy, former president of District 2, U. M. W. A., and head of the "Save the Union" ticket in the last election, has been mentioned as an additional member of the delegation but has not yet accepted.

Wm. Jett Lauck, economist for a number of labor organizations, Jerome Davis, and Frank P. Walsh, nationally known labor attorney, will also accompany the delegation.

The response to the appeal for the needed funds has been satisfactory, members of the delegation stated.

Nut Law Barring 'Dog' And Pop Passes Board

SCARSDALE, N. Y., July 11.—Scarsdale high school athletes yesterday cogitated that they will no longer be able to treat on soda pop and "hot dogs" as the result of a village ordinance passed by the Scarsdale board of trustees.

The ordinance prohibits the operation of frankfurter, peanut and refreshment stands within the village limits. Mrs. Ruth Johnson, the only woman member of the board, who introduced the ordinance, said she was working in conjunction with Clinton Leonard, physical training director and athletic coach of the high school.

Chamber of Commerce Man Says Must Recognize USSR

MOSCOW, July 11.—Clarence de Knight, Washington attorney representing the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce, in a speech as a banquet here last night expressed a strong hope that the United States would soon give full diplomatic recognition to the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. The speech was made at a banquet attended by American business men and two Yale professors, Jerome Davis and George F. Counts. All are on a tour of study and business in the Soviet Union.

Jersey Traction Kings Fighting for Monopoly

JERSEY CITY, N. J., June 14.—The Public Service Corporation thru its subsidiary the Public Service Transportation Co. and its attorney, William H. Speer, announced that it would fight the franchise turned over to the Central Avenue Bus Co. by the Jersey City commissioners.

The action of Mayor Hague and the Jersey City commissioners does not meet with the drive and the approval of the Public Service Corporation which is out to gain 100 per cent control of Bus and Street Car Service in the state of New Jersey. It has a great deal of influence over the State Public Utilities Commission.

This corporation thru the republican party which controls the state legislature and all the important committees of the state dominates the entire state. The action of the state legislature in removing the paving costs from the corporation saves it hundreds of thousands of dollars. The attempts to monopolise the transportation of passengers and increase the fares of bus rides, and street car rides is only part of their conspiracy to rob the public of millions of dollars for their own purposes.

Charged With Theft as Wife and Child Starve

When Lester Betterly appeared before Magistrate Short in the Bridge Plaza court yesterday in answer to a charge of theft, he told the judge that the only food he, his wife Edith and baby infant daughter, Dora, had had for the past three weeks had been milk and a few buns.

Betterly showed plainly the effect of starvation and his wife was on the verge of collapsing in court. He was employed as a deckhand on an excursion steamer but was unemployed for the last two weeks.

The police said they found six pawn tickets in his possession when he was arrested.

The judge said that it was not in his power to show clemency and held Betterly without bail for the grand jury.

Wilbur andWork Divide Up Naval Oil Reserves Patronage; Leases Back

WASHINGTON, July 14.—Virtually complete control of naval oil reserves and all leases will return officially to the navy department on August 1, under an agreement reached today between Secretary of Navy Wilbur and Secretary of Interior Work.

This agreement provides that full control of the reserves shall be vested in navy inspectors, thus restoring the status that existed prior to the executive order of President Harding which transferred control to the interior department. President Coolidge, following the Supreme Court's decision attacking the validity of President Harding's act, revoked the executive order.

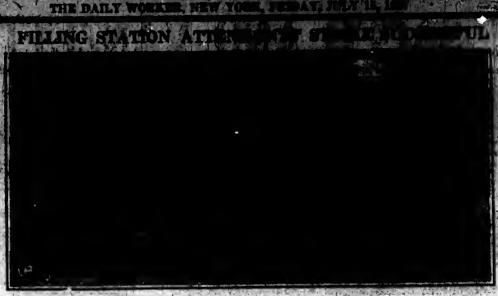
The oil scandal and the subsequent prosecution of the principals resulted from leases made in the reserves by ex-Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall.

Arrest Tim Buck for Telling Ford's Workers About Trip to Russia

TORONTO, July 1.—(By Mail)—Tim Buck was arrested in Ford City, while addressing an open air meeting on a vacant lot adjoining the new Ukrainian Labor Temple. Comrade Buck has recently returned from Russia, and was describing his trip to an enthusiastic audience.

Buck's demand for the reason for his arrest was met with bullying and insults from the police, and it was found that the Desk Sergeant had received orders not to grant bail.

A delegation to the Mayor, Gillsardy," who was elected on his "friend of the working class" slogan, was greeted with vague hints about crushing out this red stuff and references to higher authorities.



After keeping Buck in the lock-up all night among bed-bugs and drunks, he was released on the astonishingly low bail of $25.00, after the total refusal of bail the night before.

The 4,000 Ford production workers, who have been working three days a week, have now been laid off for an indefinite period. They are beginning to fell the pinch, and the "friend of the working class" isn't taking any chances on their hearing anything about this Russian stuff.

Flogging Verdict Soon.

TOCCOA, Ga., July 14.—The jury in the trial of Elmer Clark, charged with the flogging of Mrs. Analey Bowers and her 15-year-old son, Lloyd, was expected to bring in a verdict soon. Three more people remain to be tried for the flogging.

STATE McANDREW MUST GO BECAUSE OF SCHOOL GRAFT

Chicago Superintendent Viciously Anti-Labor

Superintendent William McAndrew of the Chicago School Board is charged with helping to rob the board's funds at the rate of one million a year. This interesting fact was brot to light by the new president of the board, J. Lewis Coath. McAndrew must go before September 1st is the demand of Coath.

Coath says the money was filched from the board's treasury thru a graft arrangement which enables crooked officials to roll up "nice little piles" when holding office. It was paid to middlemen who got school contracts to resell to companies and these middlemen in turn make a rebate to the officials for the favor.

Always Against Labor.

This closes another chapter in the history of the struggles of the Chicago teachers with the open shop bosses who make up the personnel of the school board. It was these representatives of big business in Chicago who imported McAndrew from New York to break the teachers' union.

Fought Union.

As soon as he took office he began a campaign for the abolition of any organized activity conducted by the teachers. He carried on a ruthless fight against the teachers' councils, a form of shop meetings held weekly by the organized teachers. He finally succeeded in abolishing them. He seized the teachers' right to hold bulletins in the school buildings announcing their union meetings, he threw many teachers out of work by crowding the classrooms, he fought for a cut in teacher's wages and an increase in wages of principles and older teachers thus employing the old game of creating divisions among workers.

He installed the system of secret markings of examination papers for teachers which was useful for discrimination against aggressive and militant teachers. He docked their wages if they were laid off with illness.

It is interesting to note that the systematic attack which he conducted against the teachers were made under the pretense of saving money.

Filth, Negligence in Kings County Hospital Bared by Ex-Patients

Exposing the careless and unhygienic manner in which the Kings County Hospital, Brooklyn, is conducted, twelve former patients testified before Commissioner of Accounts Higgins yesterday that they were given dirty linen.

That complaints of patients about illness and requests for water were completely disregarded was also revealed by the witnesses.

Inquiry To Be Made Into Detention of 38 Chinese Seamen

Congressman La Guardia has written to Secretary of Labor Davis and demanded an immediate investigation into the detention of the thirty-eight Chinese seamen who are being held incommunicado on Ellis Island following an alleged mutiny on the Holland-American liner the Rotterdam a few weeks ago.

The seamen were hired at $6 per week at Rotterdam during a strike and were promised entry into the United States on their arrival here by Capt. Peter Van Der Heusen. They were not informed that a strike was in progress, according to Michael Murphy of the International Seamen's Club at 26 South St.

On the trip across the men were forced to endure revolting living conditions. They were fed on an uninterrupted diet of rice and wormy dried fruit and housed in filthy, damp quarters.

Captain Lies to Crew.

On their arrival in Hoboken, Van Der Heusen told them that they could not go ashore as it was contrary to the immigration laws. The Chinese workers, infuriated at the deception which was practiced upon them, forced their way to the street.

They were arrested and sent to Ellis Island where they are now being held incommunicado, according to their counsel, Hugo Pollack, who said that all efforts on his part to interview his clients have been frustrated by the island officials.

In La Guardia's letter to Davis he urges that the investigation be directed especially to discover if the steamship companies are in conspiracy to unlawfully obtain admission of Chinese into the United States and are holding out promises to Chinese workers that such entry can be made.

General Says 50,000 Marines Needed to Beat the Nicaraguans

General Rafael de Nogales, a professional soldier of Venezuelan nationality hit of wide experience throughout Spanish America has arrived in New York and states that American dollar diplomacy is arousing a storm of resentment all over the southern republics. Both sides in the Nicaraguan conflict, he says, know that American bankers headed by Brown Bros. are responsible for the Diaz regime in Nicaragua and the American intervention there.

Nogales stated that he had visited the army of General Sandino, which consisted of about a thousand well armed patriots opposing U. S. rule and that altho so few in number, they would be able to resist the invaders unless at least 10,000 troops were sent against them because of the nature of the country and the sympathy of the population.

WM. GREEN TELLS LONGSHOREMEN TO VOTE OLD PARTY

Matty Woll Selects His Friend Ryan as Pres.

Addressing the 29th annual convention of the Longshoremen's union at Beethoven Hall, 210 Fifth St., yesterday morning, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor used an opportunity to take a slam at working class political action.

He asserted "trade unions in Europe have participated in politics for many years so now we find people in America who think we should do likewise.

"To this I object. It might be all right for other countries but we here in the United States should continue our policy of rewarding our friends and punishing our enemies."

Plays to the Galleries.

As almost one third of the 200 delegates at the convention are Negroes, Green said that "the American Federation of Labor welcomes into its ranks all workers irrespective of their color, creed or politics. All workers no matter on what they disagree, are eligible to join the American trade union movement."

Matthew Woll, president of the Union Life Insurance Company addressed the convention and urged the assembled delegates to instruct the officers to be elected by the convention to give it their utmost support.

Ryan Next President.

Referring to Joseph P. Ryan, vice-president of the union and president of the New York Central Trades and Labor Council, Woll said that "we have fought shoulder to shoulder during the last two years to rid the local trade unions of the Communists.

According to rumors, Ryan is slated to be elected president of the union when the convention closes Saturday. It has been meeting every morning since Monday when the first session was held.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Another Nungesser Rumor.

CHICOUTIMI, Que., July 14.—Unverified reports that Nungesser and Coli, ill-fated French aviators who launched a Paris-to-New York non-stop flight recently and since have not been heard from, had been found, were revived here today by two Indians.

They came into Chicoutimi with a story that they had seen a wrecked airplane and had even touched it with their fingers in a dense bush near here.

Sleep In Automobiles.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., July 14.—Hundreds of persons from New York spent the night in parked autobiles on the road from Valhalla to Yorktown in an attempt to escape the sweltering heat, police reported today.

The road is high and there is always a fair breeze. No attempt was made by the police to interfere with the outdoor sleeping parties.

Cops Shoot Into Car.

When the automobile in which Thomas Moran and his wife were riding in did not stop immediately at the command of police yesterday it was chased by the cops who shot into the car as they went along.

Mrs. Moran was wounded in the back during the period of the chase. It was discovered when the two of them were placed under arrest.

KOSLOFF TO LEAD BALLET AT CONEY ISLAND BENEFIT

Alexander Kosloff, Metropolitan Opera House star, appearing with his famous ballet in Al Borodine's "Prince Igor" will feature the Coney Island Stadium Concert which will be held Saturday for the benefit of left wing cloakmakers, dressmakers and furriers.

Kosloff, who is the master of one of the largest studios in The city, entered the Ballet School maintained by the Russian Government at Moscow when he was 10 years old. At the age of 17 he graduated with high honors, the youngest pupil ever to attain such a distinction.

As a teacher of dancing Alexis Kosloff has had spectacular success. Many stage productions have been arranged by him, among them, the Wanderer, Chu Chin Chow, The Passing Show, Miss Simplicity, Sinbad, Peter Pan, The Love Song, Le Coq D'Or, Sunny and others. John Barrymore, Julia Arthur, Marion Davies, Alice Brady, Ann Pennington, Corinne Griffith, etc, have at various times studied under his direction.

New York Symphony

Erno Rapee who is going to conduct the New York Symphony Orchestra of 100 at the Coney Island Stadium, Saturday night, was a well known concert pianist before he took up orchestral conducting.

From conductor Rapee turned to motion picture presentation, taking over the William Fox Theatre in Philadelphia. He conducted a special concert of the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra in 1925 and later returned to his native city of Budapest, where he directed numerous concerts.

In addition to the unique program, Ben Gold, manager of the Furriers Joint Board will report on the Furriers situation. The lawyers of the Minoola trial will also address the vast gathering.

Tickets are $1 for general admission and $2 for reserved seats.

Wall Street Still Gets World's Gold Supply

WASHINGTON, July 14.—For the first six months of this year, the United States had a favorable balance of trade of $240,758,000, compared to an unfavorable balance last year of $93,000,000, the commerce department announced today.

Exports for the period totaled $2,368,000,000, a gain of $161,831,000. Imports were $2,127,090,000, a decrease of $174,000,000.

LEFT WING UNIONISM

By DAVID J. SAPOSS

of Brookwood Labor College

AMONG academic people writing about labor problems David J. Saposs has become closer than anyone else to the practical problems of various forces that are at work in the labor movement at the present time. He has worked with Professor Commons for many years. He has investigated labor disputes, studied labor's needs, and has written extensively on outstanding labor events.

Left Wing Unionism represents a historical study of the origin and development of left wing movements among the trade unions. "Starting from syndicalism, revolutionism, dual unionism, revolutionary and opportunistic radicalism, in their numerous manifestations among the socialists, Anarchists, I. W. W.'s and Communists are the themes of this book. No worker active in the labor movement could afford to be without this book, which is full of documentary material and its charters a very useful reference volume.

The Seamen's Journal wrote of it: "Saposs has written a book about 'Left Wing Unionism.' The book presents a fair and unbiased account of a question that is usually dismissed without much consideration from the mind of the conservative labor official because it makes him see red."

William Z. Foster says of this book: "Every militant trade unionist should own a copy of Saposs' 'Left Wing Unionism.' Follow this advice and secure a copy of the book."

ENGDAHL URGES AMERICAN WORKERS HAVE DEFENSE WEEK AGAINST BOSSES

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)
PITTSBURGH, Pa., (By Mail)—"This week is defense week throut the Union of Soviet Republics, but it should also be made a 'Defense Week' by workers here in the United States," declared J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, in speaking on "The New War Danger" at the Labor Lyceum here.

"For the new war being planned against the Soviet Union is not only an attack on the First Workers' Republic," said Engdahl. "It is also an attack on the working class in this country. Any defeat suffered by the workers of the Soviet Union is a defeat also administered to the workers of this country, because such a defeat will only strengthen American exploiting interests at home in their oppression of labor here."

Engdahl urged greater activity in the trade unions, and among the workers generally, to overcome the prejudice against the Soviet Union being spread, not only by the capitalist press, but by the reactionary labor officialdom within the ranks of the workers.

Engdahl declared that much prejudice could be neutralize by pointing out the achievements of the Russian workers and peasants during the ten years that they had been in power.

"Industry everywhere throuout the Soviet Union is showing a greater production than ever before," said Engdahl, who has just returned from the Soviet Union. "Agriculture is witnessing a phenomenal development."

"Much material is being published in The DAILY WORKER from day to day, giving facts and figures," continued Engdahl. "This should be spread as widely as possible, in fact, one of the best supports of the Soviet Union today is a powerful and growing press of the working class in this country."

TEXTILE WORKERS AT CHESTER, PA., RECEIVE MESSAGE FROM TEXTILE WORKERS OF U. S. S. R.

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)
CHESTER, Pa., (By Mail).—"One of the most encouraging mbsages that the textile workers of the United States can send to the textile Workers of the Soviet Union is that they are organizing and building a powerful union of their industry in this country," said J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, in addressing a group of textile workers here.

This city, next to Philadelphia, is the largest textile renter in the state, but the workers are not organized. As a result they are victimized by their employers, as has already been pointed out in an article in The DAILY WORKER by Pat Devine.

Engdahl told of his visit to the Soviet textile center at Ozerov, to the south of Moscow, where the Russian textile workers showed a great desire to develop closer contacts with the textile workers of this country. He said they had been greatly interested by the Passaic textile strike.

Engdahl told how the Russian textile industry was being developed successfully by the workers themselves, pointing out that this should be an example and an inspiration to the workers in all countries in their struggles against their oppressors.

Heat Wave Tides Poincare Cabinet Over Till Autumn

PARIS, July 14.—The Poincare Gévernment has literally "weathered" the crisis precipitated in the Chamber over the question of an increase in the wages of Government employees. The vacation period is about to open and the statesmen of France are champing to get away from the sweltering capital to cooler climes.

M. Poincare took the bit in his teeth and defied the opposition to vote him down. He received in vote of confidence 317 to 260—and the Government adjourned till October.

It is freely prophesied in the Chamber that the present cabinet will not hold out very long after the commencement of the Fall session.

?? Sail for Visit to Soviet Union on World Tourist Trip

Thirty-two men and women sailed on the Swedish-American liner "Grinsholm" this morning for a week's visit to the Soviet Union.

After arriving at Leningrad the party will go by rail to Moscow, where it will visit the factories, worker' homes, workers' rest rooms, schools and colleges. Trips to neighboring cities and villages, including a visit to the mammoth electric power station at Volkhov-Stroi, are included in the itinerary.

Ample time will be given the tourists to witness the theatrical renaissance of the Soviet Union. The tourists will be given an opportunity to attend the concerts, movies and plays which make Moscow, what Lee Simonson, director of the New York Theatre Guilds, calls the theatrical capital of the world.

The entire trip will last six weeks. Those sailing were:

Miss Fannie Horowitz, New York City; Miss Bessie Kielik, New York City; Miss Anna Zweilon, New York City; Mr. Herman Pinsker, Philadelphia, Pa.; Mr. Nathan Shield, New York City; Mr. Ephraim Soshen, New York City; Mr. and Mrs. Morris Paperno, Brooklyn, N. Italian Cannon Practice Brings French Protest

LONDON, July 14. The Matin reports, says Reuter, that the mayor of Lansiehourg (Savoie) has protested to the Italian Consul at Chambery against Italian artillery practice, which, he states, is being carried out in violation of the treaty of annexation of 1861, on Mont Cenis, near the Franco-Italian frontier.

In consequence of the shooting, it is declared, a number of persons on the French side have been compelled to leave the chalets and camp out, in spite of the snow, at a height of about 6,000 feet.

CAL AND KELLOGG BLESS RED HUNTS OF PATRIOTEERS

That President Coolidge has blessed the Red-hitting campaign of the Daughters of the American Revolution is the statement made by Mrs. Alfred Brousseau, president-general of that organization, in an open letter to Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt.

The open letter of Mrs. Brousseau is a reply to Mrs. Catt's criticism of the D. A. R. pamphlet entitled "The Common Enemy," in which Communism, socialism and liberalism are lumped together as a "world revolutionary movement which proposes to destroy civilization and christianity." Mrs. Catt referred to the patrioteers conducting the "red hunts" as interesting cases for a psychologist.

Announcing that the D. A. R. would continue its campaign against radical and liberal organizations, Mrs. Brousseau says, "We have the approval of too many leaders of thought in the United States including President Coolidge and Secretary Kellogg."

The Political Situation in France

By MICHEL HOLLAY.

PARIS, (By Mail)—For several weeks past Franre's home politics have been subjected to violent oscillations. In the second half of 1926 the fall of the franc caused the rupture of the left Bloc. When their leaders, Herriot and Painleve entered Poincare's Ministry of "National Unity," the Radical Socialists veered to the Right. At the Congress of Lyons the Socialist Party also diverted its policy to the pillar of bourgeois society. And while Poincare, the saviour of the franc, overwhelmed the French people with new taxes amounting to thousands of millions, Painleve, the Radical Minister of War submitted his imperialistic project of armaments, Herriot, the Freemason and Radical Minister of Instruction, fraternised with the bishops, and the Socialists unanimously voted for the mobilization law of the "Socialist" Paul Boncour.

The "national unity of all constitutional forces" had become a fart. It was to be strengthened against Communism in France as the first and essential step towards opposing the Soviet Union. Barthou, Minister of Justice, initiated an elaborately worked-out case of espionage against the revolutionary workers, which, however, rested on far too weak a basis. Sarraut, Minister of the Interior, with the blood of Gastfet in his veins, started a furious persecution of the Communists. The entire press, from the Royalist "Action Francaise" to the "Socialist" "Populaire," is set on attacking Communism and the Soviet Union.

Only one factor was neglected in preparing this wholesale reactionary plan, but it was the most important factor, the French working class. Poincare's cruelly oppressive financial schedule, the warlike mobilization and military armament plans of the Socialist Paul Boncour and the Radical War Minister Painleve, the simultaneous offensive of the capitalists against the workers' wages, the rise in the cost of living, and the wage-agitation against the Soviet Union now threaten to ruin the ambitious programme of the bourgeoisie.

The supplementary elections, a true barometer of home politics, point to this. In the almost exclusively rural department of Ardre, the slogan which was supported by one and all from the Fascist Lafont to the Socialist Renaudel, was as follows: "All against one." All patriots, good Republicans, against the Communists, those traitors and enemies of civilization!" The Communist candidate was not elected. But the result in itself amounts to a great victory of the Communists in their fight against economic and political reaction, in their struggle for peace. The 9000 Communist voters of 1926 increased in the first election campaign to 15,-600. In the second campaign, the Communist candidate united 25,000 votes. The "National Bloc" won by a majority of only 3000 votes. That cannot be called a victory. The reaction is well aware of the fact, for the outcry against the Communist danger has become all the louder and culminates in the demand for the "British panacea," the rupture of diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union.

On the same Sunday two further elections also took place. At Jory, a suburb of Paris, the Communist mayor had been compelled to quit his office. For the sake of ensuring an election on a broader basis, two other Communist town-councillors likewise abdicated. The candidature put up was the sailor Dumouhn at one time condemned to four years' arrest for anti-militarist propaganda on board the warship "Courbet" during the Moroccan war. The outcome of the election was a splendid victory for the Communists and for tha amnesty. Of 7828 registered votes, 4258 fall to the share of the Communist list. In comparison with the elections of 1925, the Communist gained 700 votes, while the National Bloc lost 2000 and the Left Bloc 200.

At the elections in a relatively bourgeois district of Paris, the so-called "Grandes Carrieres," the Communists doubled their number of votes (advancing from 1798 in 1925 to 3288), while the Socialists lost half their former total (registering 4304 instead of 8324) and the National Bloc maintained the level of 5544.

What is the purport of these returns? Though no general conclusions can be gained from these few individual elections, they yet speak unmistakably of a vigorous process of radicalization among the French working population as also of the rally of the French bourgeoisie around the standard of reaction.

They show the tendency of the population of France to collect around two opposite poles, the bourgeois and the Communist and the tendency towards gradual dissolution on the democracy. These elections have caused the greatest consternation part of the parties of the Left Bloc, the parties of bourgeois in the Radical-Socialist and Socialist parties. If these two parties desire to save their present Parliamentary position, they will again have to form a Left Bloc for the general Parliamentary elections which are to come off in the spring of 1928. But this, can only be possible, if the French Socialists veer still more to the Right. For even now the "Quotidien," the official organ of the Radical Party, has formulated its conditions to the Socialists.

"If an alliance with the Communists is automatically prescribed (as the Communist candidate is placed as in connection with elections at which the head of the parties of the Left), any grouping of the Democratic forces is out of the question."

A further possibility, which depends on the attitude of the Radicals is that this critical situation of the old Left Bloc parties may endanger the Poincare Ministry. Already various indications of crisis are apparent, chief among them the fact that the Parliament has refused the plan so energetically defended by Poincare of handing over the match monopoly to the Swedish match trust.

Meanwhile the reactionary course of the Poincare government is being further pursued. The arrest on May 1st of Monmousseau, General Secretary of the Unitarian Trade Unions, has recently been followed by that of comrade Pierre Semard, General Secretary of the Communist Party of France, who was quite illegally taken to prison on his return to Paris from the last meeting of the E. C. C. I., although the police had no due authority to arrest him.

In direct contrast to this violent political persecution of the revolutionary workers, we may witness the comedy which the French authorities (Aline Daudet), the leader of the Royalists, to play with them. This Royalist, condemned to six month's imprisonment for libel, defied the police by entrenching himself behind wire entanglements in the house of the "Action Francaise" with several hundred Royalists to defend him. That the police prefect should finally have come in person to conduct him in a private car to the prison with the promise of every facility and a speedy release for this non-political delinquent, while at the same time our comrades are treated so brutally that three anarchists have for the last 20 days been on hunger-strike to enforce their release is highly-charartteristic of the inrreasingly reactionary directives of the Poincare government.

Drujelovsky Executed As Anti-Soviet Spy; Forged Papers for U.S.

MOSCOW, July 14.—Serguis Drujelovsky, who was sentenced to death on Tuesday on the charge of espionage and the fabrication and forgery of documents against the Soviet Union, has been executed.

Drujelovsky's trial brought out evidence of his forgery of documents purporting to show Communist propaganda in the United States at the time of Senator Borah's campaign for the recognition of Soviet Russia, which were instrumental in turning the tide of public opinion against recognition.

Secretary Kellogg has refused to comment on the revelation of the nature of the documents used by the State Department as a basis for refusal of recognition. No denial has been made, official or otherwise.

Report Mme. Klepikoff.

BERLIN, July 14.—It is reported here that Mme. Klepikoff, accused of aiding her husband, Commandes Klepikoff, formerly of the Baltic Fleet, who was recently executed for espionage on behalf of Great Britain, has been sentenced to death by a court-martial at Kronstadt.

Klepikoff had confessed to giving a report to the British Intelligence Agent in Finland, containing information on the condition of the Soviet armed forces, particularly the navy.

Mme. Klepikoff, according to the report, had been sentenced to three years' imprisonment for complicity, but on the failure of the Supreme Court to confirm this sentence, she was brought before a court-martial for trial.

Total Quake Victims Number 1,000; Arab Towns Suffer Most

JERUSALEM, Palestine, July 14. Compared with the last severe earthquake of ninety years ago, when Tiberias and Safed were destroyed and 5,000 persons perished, Monday's disaster in Trans-Jordania and Palestine is greater, because it was more widespread, although the actual loss of life is smaller.

The modernly-built towns, with concrete structures, suffered comparatively little, hence the casualties were more or less confined to the primitive Arab villages, where the tiny clay huts were crumpled in the first shock, burying the hapless occupants.

The Hebrew University in Jerusalem is among the greatest sufferers, the destruction of the laboratories and the resulting interruption of the work of scientific research being conservatively appraised at a loss of $50,000.

Avert Epidemic.

Scientists working in the laboratories were also trapped when the doors slammed to. These men jumped through the windows, burying test-tubs filled with cholera, dysentary and typhoid bacteria, thus preventing the deadly tubes from being smashed and possibly averting an epidemic of disease.

Religious edifices suffered especially, a shocking thing in this predominantly religious community. The Dome of the Rock, the Chapel of the Ascension, the Basilica in Bethlahem, the Armenian Church in Jarusalem, David's Tower and the Church Missionary Society School were all badly damaged.

MOSCOW, July 14.—Mme. Klepikoff, who admitted that she had cooperated with her husband in spying for the British secret service, has been sentenced to death by a court-martial at Kronstadt.

TORY TRADE HIT; SOVIET INDUSTRY BOOMING RAPIDLY

U.S. Firm Gets Right to Develop USSR Oil

BERLIN, July 14.—While Great Britain is suffering heavy losses as the result of the Soviet Union boycott, the USSR is having amazing success in securing credits and machinery from other capitalist powers—particularly the United States and Germany and Czechoslovakia.

On the heels of the agreement between the Soviet Union and the Standard and Vacuum Oil Companies, comes the announcement that contracts calling for an outlay of $15,000,000 for the development of coal mines in the Donets and Moscow basins have been concluded by the Soviet concessions committee and an American firm, Stuart, James and Cooke of New York.

Tories Hit Hard.

Great Britain, which depended on the Soviet Union for much of its raw material, has been hard hit by the Soviet boycott, while the USSR is importing machinery from Germany and Czechoslovakia.

That American bankers may extend a huge industrial credit, totalling over $100,000,000, to the Soviet Union is an opinion widely entertained here. A representative of Dillon, Read & Co. is said to have met Tchicherin and Rakovsky at secret meetings laid here in June.

Reports from Moscow state that American business men who have gone to the Soviet Union from the Chamber of Commerce Conference of Stockholm are showing an increased interest in Soviet trade and industry.

FORECAST BENITO WILL FALL THRU ECONOMIC SMASH

WASHINGTON, July 14.—Mussolini's regime may be cut to shreds between the twn blades of high prices and low wages, arcording to reports received by the department of commerce from its agents in various parts of Italy. Snatches of these dispatches, published in Commerce Reports, reveal the hectic flush of Italian prosperity against an ashen background of the lowest wages and highest prices in Europe.

Italian labor, in fact, is the cheapest skilled labor in the world, according to a commercial attache who reports that Italian shipbuilding firms have taken contracts from under the noses of British and Japanese builders. As a result the Fascist regime is building up a large surplus of commodities for export trade, the workers at home being unable through low pay to buy back more than a fraction of what they have produced.

Fake Prosperity.

With Italian trade booming in the Balkans and along the Mediterranean, department of commerce agents report a prosperity built on heavy credit advances from the United States and on the forced no-strike labor of Italian workers. But from anti-Fascist sources in Washington even the claims of prosperity are denied. Fiat Automobile Co. has reduced its working force from 21,000 to 10,000; cotton and woolen mills are working three days a week; iron trades and marhhe shop works have cut their staffs by 25 per rent; more than 30 per cent of the printers are out of work.

Wages, according to the International Labor Office at Geneva, are the lowest in Europe, being 45 per cent of the British and 25 per cent of the American. But prices are higher than in the United States. Recent wage cuts of 10 per cent have brought more misery, despite the announced cut in prices, which proved to be paper reductions only.

Revolt Smouldering.

On the prime question, how long before the Italian workers revolt, anti-Fascists are uncertain. So complete has been the suppression of civil rights that it is impossible to guage dissatisfaction without being on the spot, and so effective is the Mussolini espionage system that thousands have been sent to the lonely islands off Sicily for fearing to express their opinions, for further inquiry into Independent trade unions and for taking part in strikes.

Wants New Loan.

Another raid on the American money market may be made by Mussolini this fall, it is admitted by the Bureau of Regional Surveys. Herbert Hoover's own confidential foreign information service. The bureau has been following carefully the Duce's perilous financial tightrope walking with the lira and have concluded that the energy given Italian industry by the $260,000,000 poured into it by Wall Street has about been spent.

America, in the role of subsidizer for European dictatorships, is the hope of Mussolini. If Wall Street will express its sympathy for Fascism by pouring millions more into Italy, Mussolini can hold on to his scepter for a while.

Red Scouts

The Red Army behind the drive for Five Thousand New Readers for the Daily Worker, is enlisting the support of divisions of young Red Scouts in all parts of the country.

The Pioneers, who constitute the the scouting section of the Daily Worker Army, will do much to make the drive against the enemy successful.

With their active help, with the aid of their energy and enthusiasm, the drive will go over the top.

The attractive prizes which are being offered to new readers, the camera, and the book offers, make it a simple matter for these young militants to secure new readers.

Through distributions at factory gates, through sales of the Daily Worker at lunch and closing hour, through canvasses of the working class residential districts, the Red Scouts will push forward the drive against the army of capitalism.

We expect the youngest members of the Daily Worker Red Army to distinguish themselves by their energy and audacity in the drive to win Five Thousand New Readers for the Daily Worker.

The Issue of Farm Relief in American Politics

Farm relief dogs the heels of President Coolidge. In the last week it has become clear that the foremost issue of domestic politics in the coming presidential campaign will be farm relief. The McNary-Haugen bill will serve as the instrument by which the attitude of candidates toward this issue will be tested.

Political observers admit that the McNary-Haugen bill will come before the next session of congress and that it will be passed by both houses. Coolidge, on the eve of his campaign, will be forced again to declare himself in terms that cannot be misunderstood—something all capitalist politicians, and Coolidge especially, hate to do.

From the agricultural sections comes news of the rising tide of revolt. Lowden of Illinois, the gentleman-farmer-banker, who is the chief rival of Coolidge at present, is making hay while the sun shines these hot July days. Mo..tana and Wisconsin republicans seem to look favorably upon his candidacy and two states at this early date are not to be sneered at. The Coolidge vacation has been ruined.

Banking on good crops to allay discontent, Coolidge confronts a period of falling prices for farm products and the inevitable contradiction between huge crops and the ruin of those who raise them.

The advocacy of a high tariff on farm products no longer fools the farmers. They know at last that it is not competition at home that is causing trouble but competition in international markets—law cost wheat from other countries displaces American grain which is no longer grown of immense areas of free land.

Mortgages have long ago sunk the homestead and the interest charges must be paid out of the crops. Monopoly prices prevail for practically every commodity the farmer buys, the railroads gouge him to the limit.

The persistence with which the farm relief issue continues to vex the old party politicians is proof that it arises by reason of a basic internal weakness in American capitalism—the contradiction between the most highly developed and centralized industry in the world and a backward agricultural system.

The "independent farmer" is a myth. He has become the slave of the capitalist class which he visualizes as Wall Street. Unlike the industrial worker the farmer rarely sees the overlord. He has all the trappings of the freeborn yeoman but he is a serf.

But because of the indirect form by which his slavery is perpetuated the farmer finds it hard to realize it.

The farmers' only ally is the working class. More specifically he will find his strongest support in the organized labor movement. The capitalist class and the middle class act in his behalf occasionally only to make his continued betrayal easier.

But just as the professional farmer decoys of the capitalist parties deceive the farmer, so do the reactionary trade union leaders fool the workers. They attempt to keep both groups aligned with the political parties of their class enemies.

As long as the struggle over the question of farm relief stays within the confines of the capitalist parties, the farmers are doomed to defeat—disgraceful defeat because it occurs without a real struggle being waged.

There is no more important task before the left wing in the labor movement and progressive farmer organizations than the waging of a militant joint struggle against the capitalist parties and the agents of these parties in the ranks of the farmers and workers.

Coolidge is exposed as an enemy of the farmers but the most dangerous enemies are those that advise the farmers and workers, as did President Green of the A. F. of L. at the present convention of the International Longshoremen's Association, to stay within the capitalist parties.

Joint action of workers and farmers for a labor party is the reply that must be made to the continued suppression of the American masses.

Another International Conference.

Another international conference is to be held at Lausanne, Switzerland, beginning August 3rd. This Lausanne conference will not deal with petroleum but will be an effort to pour oil on the troubled waters of protestant christianity. Representatives from 14 countries and all leading protestant denominations will be present. They call the affair a conference on "faith and order."

Seven of the forty-one speakers will represent the religionists of the United States. During the world war they tried to outdo each other in accusations of frightfulness against the Germans; they solemnly and piously assured their congregations that the inabitants of those countries comprising the central powers belonged to a lower order and could not be considered as part of the human race. Their fellow-protestants in Germany and Austria repaid the compliment. Each group appealed to the same god to scourge from the face of the earth their enemies. Now that almost a decade separates us from the world war these identical worthies follow meekly the footsteps of their various masters and hold a world conference of their own.

Like all other mercenaries of capitalism the priests and preachers, like the social-democrats, establish international relations when their masters, the bourgeoisie, are at peace with each other, and at the first blast of the trumpets of war they retire to their respective countries and proceed to mutually berate each other and prove that since the beginning of time their masters' enemies were doomed to perish before the righteous christian wrath of the forces of liberty, democracy and civilization. Their function in society is to try to lead, like sheep to the slaughter, the masses they are paid to influence.

How any intelligent worker can endure the disgusting and dirty sermonizing of these liveried lackeys of capitalism after comparing their performances during the war with their present hypocritical professions is beyond us.

The Little Nations and the War Policy of British Imperialism

By R. SMERAL.

Capitalistic Great Britain is at present engaged in a desperate fight to retain its position of power. It was a vanguard of European capitalism in the historic period of its prime. It is now passing through an acute phase of the process of decline and decay of the capitalist system. The British bourgeoisie is now conscious where the greatest enemy of capitalism is.

The rage of British capitalism against the Soviet Union, the preparation for a new large-scale war is not a mere accidently and temporary phenomenon. Far a number of years capitalistic Great Britain will play in world politics the role of the principal active power of international Reaction, the centre of systematic organisation of the world counter-revolution, the enemy of the Soviet Union and of the instigator of a fresh conflagration of war. In order to prevent this crime, the proletariat and the speed of the world revolution must rise in singleness of purpose.

It is the old tradition of the foreign and military policy of the British bourgeoisie not to pursue its ends with its own means, but at the cost of foreign property and with the help of foreign blood. Ever since the Napoleonic ware capitalistic Great Britain has always concentrated its attention chiefly upon that country which it regarded as next to itself in point of power and consequently as its greatest opponent. Against this country it has then constantly sought by means of hypocritical slogans to incite as many other countries as possible to join in the fight. As far as possible it has held itself in reserve, saving its strength for the moment to come when the world should be divided and preparing to violate and break the instruments of its policy. One could only expect that the British bourgeoisie would try at the present time to employ these tactics against the Soviet Union.

All the steps taken by British diplomacy indicate that one of the means upon which capitalistic Great Britain is reckoning on the vassalage of the little States of the Balkans, of Central Europe and on the Baltic. Will these countries enter the service of this crime? The bourgeoisie of the little States is naturally capable and prepared, against payment, to allow the population to die for foreign interests. But the toiling masses are beginning to grasp the consequences of British policy and, under the influence of class-conscious workers, will not allow themselves to be led into the wanton adventure of a new war. The true interests of their countries militate against it.

This is not a question of the class interests of the proletariat. It is clear and natural that these are completely opposed to the policy of British imperialism. But what have the little nations as such to expect in the perspective of the policy of capitalistic Great Britain? The important strata of the population of the little States the national consideration, the consideration of national independence plays a part.

The British capitalists would gladly erect in the Soviet Union in place of the Soviet regime the Czarist, nationalistic regime of big landowners, generals and capitalists. Great Britain is compelled to hamper the industrial development of the little States in the Balkans, in Central Europe and in Eastern Europe and to force them down to the lowest rank of agrarian countries, in order that they may not be industrial competitors but markets and colonies.

The distant perspective of British policy are, however, much more dangerous for the little countries. If British capitalism really succeed in destroying the industry of the little States and turning these countries into dependent colonial markets, a further thought will of necessity develop in the minds of London millionaires: Has this colonial territory not too many frontiers, inconveniencing our salesmen on their rounds? Nations of the size of the peasant question. The counter revolutionary solution signifies the rulership of landed proprietors, the loss of the national independence of the little nations and countries.

This would mean the reinstating of the rule of the knout, of the most brutal reactionary regime of White Terror and finally the restoration of the old "codes of justice", ending in revival of monarchism. The bloody, barbarian system of government which, with the help of Great Britain is raging in Hungary and Bulgaria, would then "unite" the whole of Eastern Europe and Central Europe.

The words uttered at the World-Economic Conference in Geneva on May 7th by the editor of the British "Economist", Layton, were not the outcome of imagination:

"On account of the fact that many small States have been formed in Central Europe, the customs frontiers have been extended by 11,000 kilometers as compared with conditions before the war. From the economic standpoint those little States are an anachronism."

The course of history can not be revised! Just as after the Great French revolution a reversion from bourgeois society to feudalism was impossible, now, after the World War, after October, in the historic period of the decline of capitalism, social counter-revolution, which would destroy the productive power and the political and cultural life of the whole of humanity, cannot possibly succeed. If the British bourgeoisie is nevertheless compelled to unite its fate with the fate of the world counter-revolution, this is only a proof that it is condemned — in a state of perplexity, in the process of a truly desperate fight to retain the position of power it has so long enjoyed, and forced to enter upon a path of adventure.

The criminal intent will not succeed. But in order to restrain the criminal arm, a great development of power, the greatest activity and the fights of the masses are necessary. The impudent provocation of the British imperialists must mobilise in every country of the world the proletarians and all those who are oppressed.

SAVE JULY 23RD AND 24TH FOR DAILY WORKER CARNIVAL AND FAIR AT PLEASANT BAY PARK

Hey! Hoy! we are all set for the event of the season. Offers of support from hitherto unknown sources are coming into the office of The DAILY WORKER for the Grand Carnival and Fair to be held at Pleasant Bay Park, Bronx, on Saturday and Sunday, July 23rd and 24th.

Electricians have volunteered to do the electrical work. The International Labor Defense, Working Class Housewives, Co-operatives, Trade Unions, Workers Party Units, etc., etc., are all bending their energy to the task of making this Carnival the biggest thing yet attempted. The Oriental workers who are putting up such a good fight to secure their own emancipation are showing they value The DAILY WORKER as their champion in America by having a real 100% Oriental Booth. Pause for a moment. The Orient: what pictures that brings to one's mind. The reality will be seen at the Carnival.

VAUDEVILLE DE LUXE.

Something really outstanding has been secured for the Vaudevilla show on Sunday evening. DORSHA! Why comment? You all knuw just what that means. Violinists, singers, acrobats, elocutionists, comedians have signified their willingness to attend. Negotiations are afoot for securing that wonderful musical act, MATESEVICH. Full details of vaudeville program will be published later.

SPORTS.

A soccer game between the Red Star Sports Club and the All Scots will be a feature. A splendid group of baseball players (whose names are being kept secret for club reasons) will show how America's national sport should be played. The Finnish workers are supplying a real gymnastic display. Competive tug-of-war will also be a feature.

DANCING.

Of course there will be dancing. A huge dance floor, capable of holding 800 couples, is being built. A first class orchestra will be on hand. The Dance Revel will start at 4 P. M. and finish at 1 P. M. Saturday. On Sunday, dancing will start at 2 P. M. and carry on till 7 P. M. Many novelty dances will be shown and everybody will have a never-to-be-forgotten time.

SIDE SHOWS.

All the fun of the Fair will be on hand. A miniature Coney Island is assured. Keep the week-end clear for a real live time. Come and bring your friends. Altogether for the Big $10,000.00 DAILY WORKER Carnival. It's up to you. COME ALL.

PARTY CALLS UPON MEMBERS AND SYMPATHIZERS TO BE AT CONEY ISLAND STADIUM

PARTY CALLS UPON MEMBERS AND SYMPATHIZERS TO BE AT CONEY ISLAND STADIUM

To all members of the Workers (Communist) Party, Young Workers (Communist) League, Sympathetic organization and sympathizers; to all militant workers in New York:

The District Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party of New York calls upon all its members and members of the Young Workers League, all its sympathetic organizations and all militant workers in this city, to attend the concert at the Coney Island Stadium Saturday evening, July 16th, under the auspices of the Furriers and Cloakmakers Relief Committee.

In the struggle in the needle trades against the employers and against the right wing bureaucracy which is in alliance with the employers, for the preservation of the standards won by the workers through long years of struggle, many workers have been put in jails and their families are today in great need. The struggle will go on until the workers will win their just demands and rid the needle trades of the right wing betrayers. A large amount of ammunition is needed in this struggle. The families of the jailed must be fed and taken care of and the victims of capitalist justice and the right wing betrayers must be defended. The concert on Saturday is for the purpose of providing the families of the prisoners with relief and it is the duty of every worker to help raise money for this cause.

We Call upon all workers not to leave for vacations or go to the camps before Sunday and to attend this concert and help make it a moral as well as a financial success.

credit to the Soviet Union textile monopoly. And also the many big deals that have been recently consummated between representatives of the Soviet Union and American interests. The United States may hate the workers republic just as religiously as does the decadent aristocracy of Great Britain, but hating a luxury our capitalists do not feel like hugging at the expense of business.

THERE is a terrible ruction in angling ranks those days and strange to say, that peaceful president of ours is the unwitting cause of it all. We have already commented on the factional rumpus Calvin's partiality towards the crawling worm has caused in the higher circles of the G.O.P. Vice-president Dawes prized himself at the head of the embattled fishers who scorn the trout that sullies his luscious lips with the lowly worm. In fact, as outstanding an authority on lower forms of life, as James Reed of Missouri, emphatically declares that only an imbecilic trout would take in a worm. To add insult to injury the thrifty chief executive cuts his worm in two, thus robbing his victims of their rightful heritage.

THE fight has now assumed national proportions. A worm fin by the name of Shaw, nettled by the aspersions cast upon our president by Illinois democrat foes, decided to defy worm-bait over the radio. But he was balked. The president of the Isaak Walton educational society, who is opposed to a third term for Coolidge, feared that Shaw would disrupt the fly caucus in the G.O.P. and win the majority of them for the worms. Shaw was unable to put his stuff on the air. In the language of pugilism the worm is crawling under the ropes. It's the fly's round.

Nine Negroes Lynched In Year, Survey Shows

TUSKEGEE, Ala., July 14.—Nine Negroes were lynched in the first six months of 1927, according to the Department of Records and Research at the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute.

Miasissippi accounted for 4 of the lynchings; Arkansas, 2; Louisiana, 1; Missouri, 1; Texas, 1.

The total number of lynchings equalled the figures for the first half of 1925-26.

PLASTERERS AND BRICKLAYERS IN UNION STRUGGLE

W. Green Attempts to End Fight

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor who arrived here Wednesday declared that he would attempt to settle the jurisdictional dispute between the bricklayers and the plasterers unions which has broken out anew. Plasterers are going on strike wherever cement masons affiliated with the bricklayers' union are at work.

It is believed that if the fight between the two unions continues almost 30,000 workers will be affected in this city as well as thousands more throughout the country.

The present outbreak is centered about local 32 of the Bricklayers Union that consists of cement masons. The Plasterers union has for a long time objected to cement workers joining the bricklayers union, having a local for cement workers in this city. A constant struggle between the two international unions for the cement workers has been carried on.

At a conference held between the two internationals in 1921 the territory of both unions was decided and according to the agreement neither side would enter the territory of the other for members. Infraction of the agreement was subsequently charged by both organizations and the 1924 building boom in Florida brot the matter to a crisis. Strikes spread throughout the entire state that lasted for many months.

An arbitration committee was appointed last year with Elihu Root as chairman. The decision was that all charters for locals issued by both international unions in violation of the 1911 agreement be abrogated and that provisions for the exchange of working cards be lived up to.

At a meeting held March 2nd of this year the plasterers agreed to withdraw their charters in 31 cities and the bricklayers to withdraw charters in five cities.

Both are now charging breach of faith. The plasterers claim that the bricklayers did not carry out their part of the agreement. The bricklayers assert that the plasters did not keep faith an refused to receive the exchange cards offered to the New York plasterers local by out of town plasterers in the bricklayers organization. The reply of the plasterers is that they refused exchange cards only to those men who reported to subterfuge by going over to New Jersey, taking out membership cards in the bricklayers union and then returning to New York with the cards.

FUR WORKERS WHO ARE ATTACKED BY THUGS ARRESTED

Held for Assault While Rights Are Not

While picketing in front of 148 W. Twenty-ninth street Wednesday morning, Philip Gistzman, a fur worker, was attacked by three right wing thugs—Harry Rider, Jacob Gross and Jerry Larson. Henry Goldberg, another picket who was nearby, came to Goldberg's assistance and helped him beat off his assailants.

Seeing that the gangsters were getting the worse of it, members of the Industrial Squad appeared upon the scene and placed the five of them under arrest.

Felonious Assault Charge.

The two strikers were released on $1,500 bail each charged with felonious assault while the three right wingers were released in the custody of their lawyer on disorderly conduct charges. The arresting officer refused to hold the gangsters on assault charges altho they had first attacked the workers.

Little Augie's Gang.

The trial of Meyer Friedman and Ben Cohen, the two killers who attacked Aaron Gross so severely that he almost died a month ago was postponed yesterday until August 4. When waiting for the opening of court Friedman and Cohen were seen talking to "Little Augie," well known east side gang leader. This confirms the suspicion of many workers that they are members of his gang.

In dismissing the case against the thirteen workers Magistrate Brodsky said that he "would not find from the testimony of the policemen that the strikers were making any noise or in any way molesting" the scabs.

Brodsky further said that tho fur workers could continue to picket as they have a right to do so in their struggle to change their working conditions.

"I was observing the picket line when some of these workers were arrested," continued Magistrate Brodsky, "and in my opinion none of them were violating the law. I am going to have it entered on the court records so other magistrates who may try similar cases can use my experience as a criterion."

I. A. OF M. JOURNAL SOFT PEDALS ON B. & O. WILLARD

By V. G.

A few days ago I forwarded to The DAILY WORKER an article on the report of the Daily Worker which urged a shorter day for railroad workers. I pointed out that the action of the railway executives was in line with the action of employers against workers generally, and was not at all surprising. Furthermore, that the name of Dan Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railway, was attached to the report as chairman of the committee that submitted the report after a 5 years investigation of the problem of "stabilizing employment." The again was not surprising to those who know the workings of the B. & O. plan of "worker-employer co-operation."

But the Union Officials?

To admit that Willard endorsed the report, means a mortal blow to the Baltimore and Ohio Plan. An attack on the 8-hour day, when the trend is toward more general extension of the 8-hour day, and when many unions have established the 40-hour week. Is a move that is hostile toward organized labor, a move aimed to introduce open shop conditions in union shops.

The International Association of Machinists is the organization which is a party to the B. & O. Plan, and employs Captain Beyer, efficiency expert, to put over the plan. It has officially boosted this plan, substituting it for the old method of struggling for better conditions and striking whenever necessary. Officials of the I. A. of M. have said: "The time for strike is over."

More and more, the organization is being turned into a weak, pleading thing, relying on the good will of employers. Not only was the B. & O. plan introduced on several railroads, but was also introduced in a manufacturing shop in Chicago; business agents saying that if it worked there, it would be extended to other shops.

A Death Blow.

The action of the president of the Baltimore and Ohio Plan is a death blow to the worker-employer co-operation plan. If Willard could join hands with the die hard railway executives in a drive on the 8-hour day, it proves that there is no difference between him and them, and that all his fine speeches about good will and co-operation are so much bunk. It proves that labor can only defend itself by struggle. Willard used the I. A. of M. thru his plan of co-operation, to boost his railroad from a poor financial standing to a flourishing condition; and once there is a struggle, he is ready to tell the union to go to hell. We do not become indignant over Willard's action; we expected it. But what of those union leaders who because of their aversion to struggle, drove the I. A. of M. membership into this plan? They consciously or unconsciously played the game of the employers. They will have a hard time explaining the action of Willard to the membership.

The "Journal" Mediates.

The attitude of the executives cannot yet time to before the Machinists' Journal went to press. The main editorial deals with this report, under the caption "Nothing Doing," in which editor Hewitt asserts that the committee's day will not be surrendered. To be sure, Hewitt is "confident" that "the committee's suggestion will find little favor and be given less consideration except on credit-destroying, penny union domination." Instead of having the union make preparations for a struggle to maintain the 8-hour day, to strengthen the union thru a unamalgamation, to overthrow the false conception of worker-employer co-operation, Hewitt and the official family minimize the danger, and attempt to lull the membership to sleep.

Concerning Willard's action, ignorance is feigned. The editorial states: "Whether or not Daniel Willard, President of the B. & O. and Chairman of the special Committee, endorsed the Committee's suggestion that an 'elastic' day be considered, we do not know."

Willard's prominence as the B. & O. Plan advocate, if he differed with the committee, made absolutely necessary a minority report by him on this question.

But we have more than this. "Labor" in its issue dated July 2nd, quotes Willard as saying that the union men in rush times would work extra hours, but he says nothing about time and half for overtime. This means ten hours during rush periods without overtime, and "Labor" is correct when it says that this means the institution of the ten-hour day. Of course, in making the above statements, Willard "denied that there is any intention to force extra hours on the men." But "Labor" charges definitely that this is "a move to abolish the standard 8-hour day, repeal the Adamson law, inaugurate a ten-hour day in the railroad industry and cut wages."

Admits He Supported Report.

In making this justification for the report, Willard admits that he was in favor of the report. The I. A. of M. officialdom can either accept Willard's hypocritical justification; chide him mildly while defending his honesty in the matter; or condemn his stand, show up his insincerity in the B. & O. plan, and decide to throw over the B. & O. Plan and build the organization through a militant struggle.

The I. A. of M. must face the issue. It must make a decision. It cannot maintain silence. The Machinists' Journal must declare itself on Willard's attitude. Silence can only mean betrayal of the interests of the machinists. A strong protest from the I. A. of M. lodges all over the country will compel the Grand Lodge officials to declare their stand on Willard's action.

FASCIST SPIES IN CONSPIRACY PLOT WITH U.S. AGENTS

Evidence of Plan to Start New Red Raids

That secret service agents of the Fascist government are operating in this country with the full knowledge and approval of the United States department of justice was the charge hurled Wednesday when Italian noblemen and notorious local fascists met at a fascist rendezvous to discuss ways and means for exterminating all anti-Mussolini activities here.

Conspiracy.

Sufficient evidence has been uncovered to establish the fact that there is a widespread conspiracy to either assassinate or imprison all prominent anti-fascists.

The tactics of department of justice operatives are reminiscent of the arrests of radicals in 1919 and particularly of the case of Salsedo who "jumped" from the fourteenth story of a downtown office building where he was held for "questioning" by secret service men.

At the meeting it became known that the two fascists who were killed on Memorial Day, Carisi and Amoroso, were high officials in a machine operating on an international scale with the avowed purpose of spying on and reporting all anti-fascist movements to the Italian government.

$1,000 Bail.

Five anti-fascists are being held as "material witnesses" without bail to the killing of the two apples. Two other well known fighters of fascism, Mario Tresca and Luigi Quintillano, editors of Il Mazzello, were released yesterday on $1,000 cash bail on framed charges of "violating" the so-called Sullivan law.

The offices of Il Martello and Il Nuova Mondo, Italian labor papers were raided late Monday afternoon and fourteen workers were arrested without warrants by U. S. and Italian secret service agents and taken to the Elizabridge police station for third degree "questioning" regarding the death of the Italian spies.

At fascist headquarters here it was maintained that the two fascist spies were "working men" but it soon declared that they received state funerals when their bodies were taken to Italy.

Were High Officials.

Even before the bodies left this country Nobile Giacomo di Martino, the Italian ambassador in Washington, left pressing state business and came here for the funeral. All this supports the statements made that the men were persons of high rank in the Duce of Fascist government.

Dispatches from Naples, where the bodies were taken from the ship, mentioned that rich silver coffins were used in transporting the bodies to the burial grounds.

Buried in State.

The reports from Italy told of the arrival in a small Sicilian village of the body of a certain Luigi Lajsendola in a resplendent silver coffin. High officials who accompanied the coffin from Rome told the villagers that Lamendola, who was a prominent fascist officer, had been stabbed to death in New York on May 30, just as he was about to board a vessel for Italy.

Before the bodies were shipped to Italy for state burial, August Turati, general secretary of the fascists in Rome cabled the tribute of his organization to the Bronx fascist body to which the spies were attached, for service.

Noblemen Deplore.

The meeting of fascist noblemen and party workers was held at 35 West 45th street and was attended by Italian consul general Emilio Axcrio, Commander Riccardo Bertolli, Count Ignacio T. de Revel, Prince Sigismonde Chigi and others.

The noblemen praised the American secret service agents for their cooperation with the Italian spies and deplored the growth of anti-fascist sentiment in this country.

I. L. D. Condemns Arrests.

"The capitalist government is tireless in its attacks on the workers of this country. It has its eye especially on the militants of the working class knowing that these fighters are not afraid to defend the interests of the working class.

"We protest and condemn the action of the Department of Justice in raiding the two Italian anti-fascist offices and arresting eleven workers.

Framed "Evidence."

"Monday's raids and the claim of the police, that they found two revolvers in the Il Martello office, is another serious frame up. It is aimed to everybody that these workers had nothing to do with the killing of the two fascisti last Memorial Day. The only crime they are guilty of is being true to the interests of the workers and fighting against fascism.

"Spies of the fascist government of Italy swarm thru the Italian population in America. During recent months the department of labor, acting in cooperation with this vermin, and on information furnished by them, has been arresting many of the Italian refugees on deportation warrants. Many Italian workers have already been deported to Italy.

"Only recently, Enea Sormenti, one of the outstanding leaders of the anti-fascist movement in the United States, was arrested at the direct instigation of the fascist ambassador, and was deported from the United States. Many other Italian refugees are on trial now for deportation.

"The International Labor Defense pledges its full-hearted support in the defense of this frame-up case, and of any other cases where workers are persecuted for being true to the labor movement.

Boy Froze to Death, Mother Charges in County Hospital Quiz

Because the testimony was of such a shocking nature, Commissioner of Accounts James A. Higgins heard witnesses in executive session yesterday on inhuman conditions as they exist in the Kings County Hospital.

The Brooklyn hospital affair will likely lead to investigations into other city hospitals and public institutions, Mayor Walker, however, is afraid of this, and has ordered Higgins not to make public the nature of the testimony as "widespread publicity given to statements by laymen might lead the public to jump at false conclusions."

The mayor's orders were the result of testimony given the day before yesterday, by two women, Mrs. Anna Felz and Mrs. Sarah Starke.

At the public hearing Mrs. Starke said that her fourteen-year-old son, Paul, was virtually frozen to death on the porch of the Kings County Hospital when taken to the institution suffering from scarlet fever.

Mrs. Felz stated that she had gone to the Brooklyn hospital suffering from sciatic rheumatism and had been discriminated against because she was a Jewess. She insisted that she had been neglected by two christian interns.

Dr. Mortimar Jones, the superintendent of the hospital, admitted under examination that the hospital was badly administered at night. It was pointed out, prompted by Walker, that orders for supplies and additional help were ignored by Bird S. Coler, commissioner of public welfare.

In view of the fact that Walker has been trying to get rid of Coler ever since the mayor took office, yesterday's hearing showed plainly that the mayor is using the hearing for political purposes.

BOSS REFUSES TO ALLOW INJUNCTION JUDGE ARBITRATE

By CARL HAESSLER.

CHICAGO, (FP) July 11.—The limit in arrogance and stupidity of employers was attained in Chicago, it is believed in labor circles, when the Chicago Flexible Shaft Co. declined to accept an unasal arbitration offer in the strike of metal polishers and grinders that has been on since the beginning of May.

The refusal was arrogant because the offer came from a judge who had already done the company a considerable favor and it was stupid because the judge is the notorious injunction king, Denis Sullivan of the superior court. Sullivan's favor was his usual gift to employers in labor disputes, an ironclad injunction forbidding not only picketing but bringing the struggle in any kind, friendly as well as hostile, by the union upon the strikebreakers. The judge specifically forbade the calling of the spithet scab, that function is of the modern temporary kind that continues in force until otherwise ordered. Sullivan is the judge who ruled the Illinois injunction limitation statute unconstitutional.

Viewed Facts.

After issuing the writ he thought it advisable to look into the facts of the dispute. He found that the Chicago Flexible Shaft Co., alone of 60 union shops, had failed to raise the scale of metal polishers from $1 an hour to $1.10 and that 32 expert grinders, comb pointers and polishers had walked out to put the shop on the same wage basis as its competitors. He found that the company manufactures sherpshearing equipment under the brands of Cooper, Stewart and Stewart-Arthens and also Sunbeam electric razors and clippers, all of which have been placed on the unfair list by organized labor with due notice to the unions in Australia and Argentina where much of the sheep shearing tools is in use.

Sullivan then offered to act as arbitrator in the case. The union, Local 6 of the metal polishers, accepted. After some hesitation and conference with the National Trades Association, which is directing the fight on the union, the company refused. Other employers who knew from long experience that they could trust Denis Sullivan, on or off the bench thought the Flexible people had gone mad—or else that the man must have an unimpeachable case.

The judge is now expected to grant a change of venue which will make possible a resumption of picketing by the union. The company offers to take back is few of the men at the old rate, which means that it wants the experienced unionists to break in scabs who will ultimately undertut them out of their jobs.

UNITED STATES ONE OF MOST BACKWARD NATIONS FROM CO-OPERATIVE VIEWPOINT, REPORT SHOWS

By LELAND OLDS (Fed. Press).

The United States appears as one of the most backward nations when measured by the co-operative test, according to a review of co-operation as a world movement issued by the U. S. department of labor. So it seems a bit ironical that this great movement for human liberation celebrates international co-operative day on or about July 4 each year.

The department's figures, obtained from 35 countries, show more than 500,000 co-operative societies, and in 29 of the 35 countries a combined membership of more than 44,590,000 persons. These figures are recognized as incomplete.

Many Societies.

The co-operative movement includes credit, agricultural, consumer, insurance and housing societies. Consumer co-operation is the biggest factor in the movement, although agricultural producer co-operation is growing. The department says:

"The consumer branch of the movement has spread practically throughout the world. Figures presented here cover more than 50,000 such societies in 22 countries, some 27,000,000 members, and yearly sales exceeding $5,500,000,000. Both wholesale and manufacturing operations are carried on to a greater or less extent by the consumer co-operative movements in nearly all countries in which any considerable progress has been made. The wholesale business in 1925 of the wholesale societies of 21 countries aggregated more than $600,000,000 and the value of goods produced by 10 of these in the same year more than $200,000,000."

Large Membership.

The memberships and yearly sales of local consumer societies in 20 countries, chiefly as of 1925 and 1926, were:

Consumer co-operation	Member-ship	Yearly sales
Argentina	118,945	$146,109,145
Australia	86,116	26,801,253
Austria	350,000	*
Belgium	270,189	19,298,782
Czechosiovakia	759,635	48,090,034
Denmark	387,700	*
Finland	379,518	59,169,598
France	1,967,932	25,518,206
Germany	3,282,211	146,882,830
Great Britain	4,910,983	886,527,373
Hungary	370,549	16,812,520
Japan	*	64,606,932
Netherlands	146,341	*
Norway	109,531	24,196,193
Poland	906,800	*
Sweden	815,985	69,549,598
Switzerland	383,280	83,348,252
Russia	11,401,706	3,553,500,000
Ukrania	1,597,000	219,484,435
United States	837,000	179,739,800

* Not available.

The percent of the population supplied through consumer co-operative societies, according to the report, varies from 1% in Argentina up to 45% in England. The figures for other leading countries are Denmark 40%, Finland 40%, Hungary 40%, Switzerland 35%, France 30%, Russia 30%, Belgium 30%, Germany 30%, Sweden 30% and the United States only 1.8%. The department admits that these figures, in the majority of cases, are too low.

The inclusion of other types of co-operation adds considerably to the number of co-operators particularly in Denmark, India, Russia and the United States. The combined totals for these countries are Denmark 585,000 co-operators; India 2,268,972; Russia 19,139,623 and the United States 2,613,230.

Above is a picture of the Mount of Olives, one of the "holy places" famous in Bible story. Its sacredness was no help to those who inhabit it, for an earthquake killed a considerable number of poor people there who were relying on the protection of god.

ON THE REMOVAL OF SACCO AND VANZETTI TO CHARLESTOWN PRISON, JULY 1, 1927.

What new and deeper infamy is this?
And still what hideous and loathsome power above defenseless heads could stoop and hiss
Such vile command upon a dismal hour.

To Charleston death-house, dark and comfortless,
They go to wait the striking of their doom—
A place whose horrors we can hardly guess,
A dungeon hole of heavy air and gloom.

Vanzetti, knowing all the blackest hell
Within such hearts, has said that this would be
A thing our wildest dreads did not foretell!
With all the world demanding they be free.

O Massachusetts! In our righteous scorn
Our eyes are turned upon you! Spare the worst!
Set free these guiltless men, lest those unborn
Forever hold your name a thing accursed!

MY FIRST JOB IN A BIG FACTORY

By LEA GITTLEMAN.
(Worker Correspondent.

An advertisement in a Philadelphia newspaper read as follows:

'Wanted Experienced finisher on silk dresses steady work and good pay.'

The first thing that attracted my attention in the shop was a cardboard sign posted on the walls. It read: THIS IS AN OPEN SHOP OPERATING ON THE AMERICAN PLAN.

The foreman arrived, asked me a number of questions and I was given a job.

Before long I became acquainted with Rosie. She told me that she had been working there for a long time and I asked her what "Open Shop" means.

She replied, "this shop was once a union shop, but during the last general strike in the ladies garment industry the boss broke his agreement with the union and since then he put up that sign."

"Would you join the union again? I asked her.

"I would, if we were organized so that we really benefitted by the union," she replied.

From that time on we became close friends. We discussed shop problems and current events. One lunch hour I took out my "Young Worker" and began reading it while Rosie was occupied reading a "True Story" magazine. "Gee, but that paper you are reading looks highbrow. It must be some Holshevfki paper, because it is full of stuff about strikes," was Rosie's comment.

Later on when I learned that I could trust her, I talked to her about the Young Workers League. I asked her if she would like to read the Young Worker.

"I am glad to see that you trust me," she said. "I will read it thru and I will try to understand it." And now Rosie is a close sympathizer of the League,

In the shop one meets different types of workers and learns how to approach them.

The Farmer Swings His Scythe Amidst the Old Order Found in Germany

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

NOTE—This is another article by J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, on his return journey from Moscow to New York. He has already written of the journey from Moscow to the western border of the Soviet Union, then thru Poland over the Warsaw route. In this article he continues from the Polish-German border to Berlin.

It isn't often that one is awakened at six o'clock in the morning by a husky looking individual in a military uniform with the demand, "How much money have you got?"

But that happened not only to me, but to all the other passengers on our Paris-bound express as we reached Stentsch, the western border town of Poland, before we cross over into Germany.

As for myself, I made a hasty and conservative estimate of my liquid capital, translated into American currency, but this only aroused this specimen of Polish soldiery to the additional question, "Let me see?" He was talking German, which seems to be the most international of all the languages in Europe.

When I revealed some Soviet roubles and American dollars, Pilsudski's gendarme merely grunted, took another look thru our baggage, slammed the door to our sleeping compartment and disappeared.

The Dance of the Zloty.

One could almost feel, however, the Polish zloty dancing on the point of a bayonet. Every precaution is being taken against the exportation of Polish money. The zloty is having the time of its life, like the German mark and the French franc in the days not far gone.

This is being written in Pittsburgh, from notes taken en route. The Pittsburgh Post reports that yesterday the zloty was quoted at a little more than 11 cents. It is supposed to be worth about 19 cents at par. Wall Street is seeking to give the Polish zloty an injection of about 60,000,000 American dollars to bring it up to that point. The question is whether Pilsudski will not be forced to spend all of this money and more on military expenditures, leaving the zloty just as weak as ever.

I had no horde of zlotys, however, and I was permitted, therefore, to leave Poland without interference.

The Germans Look Us Over.

Dr. W. DeVrient, who was sharing the sleeping compartment with me, turned out the light, it was still dark, and insisted on going back to sleep again. But that is a luxury not to be enjoyed for long. Soon there was another thumping at our door. German soldiers this time. We had crossed the border set by the Versailles Peace Conference between the two capitalist republics—Germany and Poland.

One German official, who rattled a bigger sword than any seen in the possession of similar officials under the late "kaiser bill," demanded our passports.

Another got very busy. He not only examined our baggage, but he also searched under the mattresses of our berths and into every other spot under suspicion, including a thoro survey of the washroom. I don't know exactly what he was looking for, but cigars, cigarettes and tobacco are everywhere contraband, subject to a high tariff. These soldiers certainly were taking pains to see that we did not cheat the Von Hindenburg government out of a few marks. But again they found nothing.

The Scythe in Germany.

It was not long after dawn when we passed thru far-reaching hay meadows. There was a lone farm worker, already busy thus early in the morning, swinging his scythe in perfect rhythm. It is the sickle with the hammer that forms the emblem of the Union of Soviet Republics. There are those who scoff at the sickle and scythe as castaway instruments of agriculture. But I couldn't help feel that there surely is some bond of interest between this German farmer, who so lustily swings his scythe in the long grass, where it is no doubt too moist to use a mower, and the Russian peasant, who has joined with the urban worker in putting the likeness of sickle upon the banner of their revolution. The German Communist Party has won considerable influence among the German farmers, having developed a considerable literature for the workers on the land. I found au extensive volume in Germany, that had aroused great interest, on the development of agriculture in China and the contribution of the Chinese farmers to the present revolutionary movement in that country.

The Old Order Still Lives.

So we came to Frankfurt am Oder, at eight o'clock in the morning for a stop of two minutes, which is not to be confused with Frankfurt on the Main. I did not get an opportunity to investigate which Frankfurt gave its name to what is better known in the United States as a Coney Island Red Hot, or a "Hot Dog," to be even more brief.

But here he was, the frankfurter man, on the train platform of the railroad station of Frankfurt am Oder. He wheeled his frankfurt wagon alongside the train shouting out his red hots for the benefit of those who would like to have a "hot dog" for breakfast.

But it was this frankfurter man, at eight o'clock in the morning, that interested me. He might have been serving a state dinner to the dethroned kaiser, over in Doorn, Holland, he was so immaculately outfitted in evening clothes of jet black, white shirt with a stiff front fully revealed by a low cut vest, across which glistened a gold watch chain. Black, carefully polished shoes, black tie, an early-morning shave and hair carefully combed. The change was great, but the old order still lived. I reflected a little on the care-free Russian waiters, in the restaurants in Moscow, as well as on the diner that was a part of our train that carried us to the border, these waiters in the Soviet Union comfortable in their Russian blouses, not bothered with coats, and certainly not with stiff, starched shirts and collars.

Dr. DeVrient put in an appearance. Strange name, you say, for one coming out of Russia. To be sure, DeVrient dates his ancestry back thru the centuries to the French Huguenots. His ancestors escaped the Massacre of St. Bartholomew's Eve on August 24, 1572, when tens of thousands of these Protestants were ordered slain during the reign of the Catholic king, Charles IX. DeVrient's ancestors fled to Germany where, however, their part in the German Revolution of 1848 forced them to quit the country. Instead of coming to America, as many of the "48ers" did, they went to Russia. Now DeVrient is back in Germany as a representative of the new social order within the Soviet Union, to take part in a scientific congress. He left the train at the Friedrichstrasse Bahnhof in Berlin. I continued on to Paris.

Against the War Danger

THE FUTURE WAR AND THE WORKING CLASS

By D. MARETZKY (Moscow)

Experience during the war of 1914 to 1918 showed that this was not only a fight between the armies on the battlefields, in the trenches, on the sea and under the sea and in the air, but also a grandiose competitive war of the belligerent industries. The economy of the belligerent states was transformed into war economy suitably organized by the imperialistic dictatorship. This economic management of the war (the organising of provisioning, of transport, the militarization of the whole of economy) was a matter of supreme importance. The conducting of the war was secured by the iron contact of the front and the base, whereby the previous conception of the relationship between the "front" and "the interior" was greatly modified by the experience of the world war.

Industrial Type of War.

It is clear that the big imperialist war of the future must be a war of still more pronouncedly industrial type. The future war is a war of machines in the double sense of the word. It is possible that in the future, warfare will be still more mechanical than it was in the last war. The motor will play a prominent role in this war. It will also be a war of machines in the sense that even the possibility of carrying on the war will be determined by the increasing production of mechanical means of destruction, as also by the increasing output of means of production (building of machines and benches, etc.), destined for the manufacture of means of destruction. The industrial centres are the chief forges of the imperialist war; they are the industrial slaughter benches. The magnitude and the capacity of the industrial centres are the best guarantee for military success.

In this connection we can appreciate the strategic tendencies created by the theriate of the front: to occupy the industrial centres of the enemy, if they are not too far distant from the front, but if they are well inside the country, to cripple them by gas attacks from the air and to destroy the centres of the war industry, the big metallurgical works, machine factories, etc.

Workers and Soldiers.

The decisive "productive" power of the future war of high "industrial tension" is the working class. The workers in factory and workshops are of just as much importance from the standpoint of high strategy as fighters in the battles of the future as the soldiers, or, in any case, of no less importance. The experiences from 1914-1918 compelled the army staffs of the belligerent countries to draw soldiers back home again from the front, many hundred thousand qualified workers being thus returned to the factories and works.

The toughness of the workers, the possibility of increasing the productivity of labor even under poorer living conditions among the workers, even under the regime of "war-famine"—all these are necessary premises of war.

Most Discipline Labor.

While they are feverishly arming energetically developing war technics and transforming war industry into the leading branch of the whole of industry, the imperialists are at the same time eagerly piling up the "variable" capital of the future imperialistic war. The imperialists are fully conscious that a war without the participation of the millions, without will to war on the part of the immense masses of the worker and peasant population, without the "strictest discipline of the masses" at the "front" and "at home" is impossible.

This is the reason for the strenuous endeavor towards an appropriate mental mobilization, which is at present being carried on by the imperialists; hence the general militarization of the population, including women and the youth introduced by the imperialists. Hence the draconic war laws of the "newest" French type (Paul Boncour's law); hence simultaneously with the maintaining of a standing army the systematic preparation and training of many-million-strong reserves of men for the future war. Hence the widely camouflaged organizing of a preliminary ideal disarmament of the masses, the militarizing of the humanizing of the idea of "defense of home and country," etc. The specific treatment of sport in the various imperialist states, the creation of sports organizations of a semi-military character under fascist leadership, etc.

The working class will be the decisive mass-power of the future war. Without the "will" of the working class the imperialists will not be in a position to carry on a big war.

The question, whether the second cycle of the imperialist wars will be brought about or not, whether or not the magnates of finance-capital will succeed in dragging humanity once more to the shambles and proceeding with the mass production of corpses, that depends most decidedly upon the attitude of the working class, which alone is in a position to avert war or, in case it should break out, to convert it into a civil war. The supreme historical responsibility, therefore, lies with the proletarian vanguards of the individual countries as also with the vanguard of the proletariat, with the whole Leninist Communist International.

BOOKS

THE HISTORY OF ORGANIZED SLAUGHTER.

EVOLUTION OF WAR, by Emanuel Kanter. Published by Chas. H. Kerr & Co. Price $1.00.

A new book by the author of "The Amazons," that brilliant little monograph so full of stimulating suggestions, is bound to be an important episode in the progress of mankind. Tho the subject in "The Evolution of War" is not quite as original as that of "The Amazons" it is better documentized by reference and quotation. In fact, the multiplicity of footnotes, references and values entirely in addition to the rest of the work; and make it a good introduction to late English language literature on anthropology; all one has to do is follow back the references.

Kanter's summary of all the most credible material thus covered is not new, but is a compact restatement of the Marxian theory of the evolution of war, correlated to steps in the evolution of tools of production, property and the class state; it must be especially useful in workers' classes, study groups, etc.

Kanter masses the testimony of many authorities to show that savages do not go to war in the sense in which we mean war today. The popular impression that savages are constantly looking for heads or scalps, Kanter shows is not correct. Such battles as savages undertake are usually ceremonial and relatively bloodless, allowing for occasions when they turn and fight like cornered rats against civilized aggression.

In the period of barbarism, booty raids, and cattle raids, then in early civilization, piracy, slave raids and tribute raids, mark an approach, an evolution of organized slaughter, more nearly like that of present days.

Then comes civilization as the period of the slave, feudal and capitalist states, and the final culmination in world wars fought for markets and raw materials, the greatest and most wasteful wars ever known.

The weakest part of the book is some too sweeping generalization (perhaps inevitable in so short a writing—123 small pages), as in the apparently crowded and hurried analysis near the end of the motives and results of war in the state founded on slavery, and the transition to these of the wars of a state based on feudal tenure, together with the assumption that everywhere slave economy gave way to feudal economy and feudal economy to capitalistic, in that order. This was the evolution of southern Europe, which so long led European development, and therefore has attracted most attention from Marxians, but the time has come to be a little more explicit about African and Asiatic and north European feudalisms of which the first two preceded the slavery of Greece and Rome and about the evolution of China, northern and eastern Europe, all countries where great land masses caused a different type of exploitation from that of the Greek, Italian and Semitic city states.

Another fault is one for which Kanter can not be blamed, and is really inherent in the capitalist system. The Marxian author is for economic reasons confined practically to research, and not allowed original investigation. And research has its real limitations. You get a lot of fun out of going over Goldenweiser, say, or some other anti-evolutionist in anthropology, and extracting from your opponent's own writings the facts that will demolish his theory. But you know all along that these hostile investigators will, when possible, probably conceal or overlook a number of interesting facts which would build you an even stronger case. Even a man like Rivers, very likely honest, admits that he has many times simply overlooked evidence in favor of anthropological theories which he did not consider valid at the time—(Psychology and Ethnology. Ch. Ethuological Analysis of Culture) and this general human trait is probably responsible for the loss of much valuable material.

Still more, an observer not trained in authropology, such as a missionary or a trader, will probably overlook altogether or disregard as merely evidences of the eccentric sins of the unbaptised, most valuable examples of passing phases of primitive culture.

I do not know what is to be done about this now.

Here we probably can not finance anthropological expeditions that will not be corrupted by what Kanter calls the "sterile" school of Boas and Goldenweiser, expenditures that will recognize avidence in favor of the materialistic conception of history.

But if anybody can persuade Kanter, with his valuable background, to become a sailor or a placer miner, he will do a service to science. Even if he turned missionary for a time to get in contact with the original

—VERN SMITH.

THE NEW MASSES.

The "New Masses" for July starts with a cover drawing of two rather sex-sick looking dames emerging Aphrodite-like out of what we take to be the big, boundless ocean, and wind up with the last cover with Van advertisement of the "New Masses" Book Service. In between are some rattling good cartoons. Bill Gropper's "The Cock-eyed World" is the whole twenty-five cents worth in itself. Gropper's touch is unmistakable, and you never have to look for the signature to know whether a drawing is his or not. "Penny Arcade" is another gem. Anyone who couldn't laugh at a "Nordic Reverse" must belong to the Ku Klux Klan—or be Henry Ford himself. In fact all the cartoons are good this month.

Michael Gold in "Buffalo Bill And The Messiah" leads off with another chapter of his East Side memoirs. Gold is a realistic writer. The Jewish quarter of the East Side, with its queer, pitiful characters, its terribly exploited and poverty-stricken inhabitants, are made to live and breathe on the printed page. One must get the magazine and read Gold's article for himself.

"Karl Marx Anticipated Freud" is well written; it is interesting, as nearly all of Max Eastman's articles are; hut one is tempted to query, "What of it?" If it be true, as Eastman himself states, that Engel's declared that whole Marxian theory of history as a discovery of "the simple fact, heretofore concealed under ideological overgrowths, that men have first of all to eat and drink and live and clothe themselves," then it follows that two-thirds—to be cautiously conservative—of the complexes which worry Freudians have been causes, by a maladjustment of this first necessity, and can be cured by the ushering in of Communism. Viewed in this fashion, Marx not only anticipated Freud, he seems to have made Freudians unnecessary. What the jimes demand seems to be more and better revolutionary Communists. I am open to correction, of course.

"Vignettes of the Flood," by Walter White, tells some terrible things about the government's treatment of the Negroes down south and should be widely read. "British Fascism Strikes Home," by W. N. Ewer; "England Runs Amuck," by Scott Nearing; "Below The Battle," by Michael Webb, are all splendid reading. Then there is, of course, "The Class War Is Still On," one of the most interesting features of the magazine. One feels like congratulating the editors for having printed so many worthwhile things in one issue.

The reviews, in the main, are good. There is a feeling that Genevieve Taggard is striving for verbal effects at times and that lucidity suffers in consequence. Nonetheless, she says a great many striking truths in an original manner, which is doubtless a godsend, a gift, an acquirement envied by humbler scribes.

The poetry—well, "Migratory Workers," by Charles Olaf Olsen, is a cracker-jack. It sounds like the real thing; and it flows. Adler's "Beats Me, Mighty" and "Exterior" are clever; only we are tempted to imitate Kipling's devil and whisper. Kreymborg gets away with some glorified daggerel that packs all the punch of "Penny Arcade" into hectic words. Sara Bard Field—we used to like reading her very much. Possibly her poem deserves more praise than this reviewer can crank up at this time. To wind up, they are all worth reading. The writer of this confesses to being a poor critic of anything, thereby saving divers other critics from pointing out the fact. His only aim is to get the "New Masses" read—as it deserves to be—by all readers of The DAILY WORKER.

EDITOR'S NOTES

By ALEX BITTELMAN

A RACE for armaments, chiefly between the United States and England, such is the up-to-date result of the three power "limitation of armaments" conference in Geneva. By the time these lines appear in print, the conference may be all over, but its consequences will be felt throughout the world. And the reason for this is that the Geneva gathering opened up a new phase in the relations between the imperialists of England and America—the phase of open struggle for the mastery of the seas and hence for the mastery of the world.

This situation was not created by Geneva, of course. The conference merely served as the occasion, whether intended so by its organizers or not, to bring forth into bold relief what was inherent in the present world situation. This is, namely, the fact that American imperialism has come to take the place of British imperialism as the world dominating power and that the American imperialists are now beginning openly to prepare themselves for a show-down by force of arms if necessary.

The Geneva conference has given us a forecast of the coming world imperialist war.

At the same time the machinations of British imperialism to effect a joint military attack upon the Chinese revolution and upon the Soviet Union are continuing unabated. The English conservatives have NOT given up hope of crystallizing an Imperialist united front against the main revolutionary forces of today—the Soviet Union and the Chinese Revolution. Hence, it would be a fatal mistake to assume that the sharpening of the struggle between the United States and England precludes all possibility for their united actiog against Russia and China.

This possibility still exists. It presents the most menacing feature of the present world situation considered from the point of view of the workers, the farmers, and the poorer sections of the middle classes. The danger is still present of England, America, Japan, France, Italy and possibly Germany uniting their forces, in one way or another, for a common attack upon the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union and for a large scale war upon the Nationalist liberation movement of China. This danger must be guarded against most vigilantly by an intensified mobilization of all anti-war and anti-imperialist forces in the United States.

July Days In Russia Ten Years Ago

By H. M. WICKS

IN NOVEMBER the proletariat of the world will celebrate the tenth anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution in Russia—ten years of rule of the workers and peasants government.

But ten years ago now, in the dark days of the July reaction, when the revolution was at its lowest ebb and the danger was gravest of a successful consolidation of the forces of reaction, only the most clearsighted could avoid succumbing to the illusion that the outcome of the tremendous upheaval that sent the czar into exile could be nothing other than a bourgeois government.

The political adventurers, constitutional democrats, menasheviks and social revolutionaries whom history placed at the helm of the new government in Russia had tried, time after time, to turn the elementary movement of the revolution into distinctly capitalist class channels. These attempts evoked determined resistance on the part of the class conscious proletariat of Petrograd (now Leningrad). There was never, from the beginning of the revolution, any question regarding the proletarian character of the masses in that great center of industry.

When blood flowed in the streets in July ten years ago the so-called legally constituted government was the coalition of May 6th, which had been formed after Milukoff, first minister of foreign affairs, had promised the allies to continue the war until many of the czarist objectives, including the capture of Constantinople, were realized. The crisis created by this announcement forced the fall of the Milukoff-Lvov cabinet and the creation of the coalition government.

Behind this official government there stood another authority, the Councils of Workers and Soldiers (Soviets), which did not then have at its disposal the state power, but which unquestionably had the support of the vast majority of the population and was directly supported by the armed workers and soldiers. Owing to the pressure of the masses who had achieved the overthrow of the czar the Soviets, even while under Menshevik control, were forced to take sharp issue with these "statesmen" of the provisional government, that tried sometimes openly and sometimes by devious ways, to continue the imperialist war on the side of the allies.

Such dual authority could only be of the most temporary nature and could never characterize a whole epoch in the development of revolution. Either the coalition government had to fall before the Soviets, or the Soviets had to sink to the condition of mere adjuncts to the bourgoisie, to be used for a time to cloak their treachery to the workers and then gradually wither away before the consolidated power of the political lackeys of capitalism.
